The Appeal of a Churchman to the Ku Klux Klan

Substance of a Sermon Preached in the First Presbyterian Church, Okmulgee, Oklahoma, by George S. Fulcher, D.D.

We are part of a nation the greatest that God's sun has shone upon. Few there be included our more than 100,000,000 citizens who are not passionate lovers of America. Few are there who, in their heart of hearts, do not thrill when they sing, "My Country 'Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Liberty." However hot the passions of our people, whatever the bitterness engendered in our party struggles, on sane second thought we do not want to do anything which will stain our patriotism or strike at the genius of our institutions. It is to that sane second thought that I appeal today.

Noah Webster said: "Patriotism is the passion which aims to serve one's country either in defending it fro invasion, or protecting its rights and maintaining its law and institutions in vigor and purity." Another has said, "He is the truest patriot who loves and promotes peace, both public and private." The great world war proved our patriotism in the face of the foreign foe. The hour is near at hand when we shall declare to all the world and for all time whether we have equal patriotism in meeting our internal problems.

President Coolidge has said, "The constitution of the United States is the final refuge of every right that is enjoyed by any American citizen. So long as it is observed those rights will be secured. Whenever it falls into disrespect or disrepute, the end of orderly organized government as we have known it for more than 125 years will be at hand. The constitution represents a government of law. There is only one other kind of authority, and that is a government of force. Americans must make their choice between these two. One signifies justice and liberty; the other tyranny and oppression. To live under the American constitution is the greatest political privilege that was ever accorded to the human race."

Your love for America will not be best shown in frenzied protestations of affection, but in a dedication of yourself to the conservation of our national heritage. Citizens, you must see to it that you refrain from all action or advice which suggests the interruption or the evasion of law, or the interruption of the normal or emergency processes of government. You must refrain from all efforts to capture the control of the machinery of government by any group within the boundary of America, for that group's selfish purpose.

If this nation goes down, to be buried by the driving sands of time as are Tyre and Babylon, Nineveh, Athens, Rome, it will be written for coming civilization to read and ponder: "In the hour of supreme opportunity; in her youth; in the presence of a world that hoped in her beyond all others, America destroyed herself." I hear the quiet voice of President Lincoln speaking: "If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finish. As a nation of free men we must live through all time or die by suicide."

Lawlessness or Patriotism?

For some years thoughtful statesmen in America have viewed with growing alarm the determination of groups and organizations to annul the laws. In many quarters a mob mind has been produced. Sane thought on national affairs has given way to hysteria. We are victims of the propagandist. The shoutings of labor demagogues, of capitalistic demagogues, or demagogues in religious and social institutions, have thrown us into panic. Let me quote from an editorial from a national Republican weekly, of July 1, 1922: "Lawlessness in a republic like ours, where laws are the handiwork of the people acting through their duly chosen representatives, is treason—treason not only to statutory and constitutional law, but to all that America stands for. Those who engage in mob demonstrations trample upon institutions which are the hope of humanity for liberty and progress. The man who apologizes for or condones such lawlessness is lacking in loyalty to the fundamental principals of Americanism."

This at least you will admit, that since your organization has come into the life of the nation, there has been a ferment—a growing bitterness—a shadow of fear, which has darkened with the passing of the days. In your organization you claim a number of million men. A great many of these without doubt are church men. These church men cannot easily forget the ideals of life set forth in the teaching of the meek and lowly Jesus who died for all men on the cross. I am appealing to you church men who are members of the Ku Klux Klan upon the basis of your love to Christ and loyalty to this government. Is your love for your commonwealth and nation equal to the love of those from which Colonel Simmons borrowed his modern order?

The Original Ku Klux.

The original Ku Klux Klan began in 1866, and was started by a few young men organizing a club for entertainment. Early in 1867 the order took upon itself "to subserve public welfare, to suppress lawlessness, and protect property." Men acting with honest purpose were soon to find that they were acting in a most dangerous way. There was a cause for this activity. In the South was a large, disorderly element of negroes unto whom freedom had been given. They were led by white men of the basest type. They were armed. They executed the most violent threats against the person of those whose sole crime had been that they had been in the Confederate army. At Nashville, in May, 1867, Klan Dens met to guard against impending dangers. An organization almost identical with that which now exists was formulated. These Klansmen set forth this declaration of purpose: "We recognize our relations to the United States government; the supremacy of the constitution; the constitutional laws thereof; and the union of states thereunder." The membership of the Klan rose to 550,000. In spite of the declaration of purpose bad men came in. Grave outrages were committed by bands of disguised men who were members of the Klan. By 1869, the Klan had changed from a band of law-loving, law-abiding men into a body of desperate men, convulsing the country and setting at defiance the mandates of both state and federal governments. One of the leaders of the original Klan testified that by 1870 all the good and brave men had abandoned it in disgust. In 1869, late in the month of February, the Grand Wizard issued a proclamation officially disbanding the Klan afte March 1, 1869.

Let me emphasize the meaning which underlies this narrative of history. This early Klan found that by its very existence it was fostering lawlessness. The use of masks and disguises made possible overt acts of crime by both klansmen and non-klansmen. And those Southern leaders—let us say it to their lasting glory—with the hurt of a great defeat, and the deeper bitterness of a heartless reconstruction period, demolished the klan.

This they did, because they loved the state for which they fought, and the nation which they fought better than an institution which they had founded, when they discovered this institution to be inherently lawless. This they did, because of their American faith in law an order. This they did, because they found that they could not be both Americans and klansmen. I appeal to you, the Christian citizens of America, to hold the institution to which you have so recently given your allegiance to the same rigid tests to which the Southern klansman subjected the original orde

Ku Klux Klan — 1923. I General.

NEW YORK CITY HERALD
NOVEMBER 11 1923

Where, the Ku Klux Klan Stands To-day in the Nation's Life and Politics

Strong in Only a Handful of States and Has Fallen Away to Nothing in Illinois and Others Where It Started With Crash—Its Political Influence, Hard to Fathom, Is Believed to Be Much Overrated

A SURVEY of the country conducted by correspondents of THE NEW YORK HERALD shows conclusively that the Ku Klux Klan generally is losing its hold on the popular imagination, but is tightening its hold in isolated rural sections of the South and a few States in the mid-West.

In thirty-six States the Ku Klux or otherwise. The public attitude between amusement at the gullibility anti-racial propaganda. The singular feature of the Klan hysteria is that it is promiscuously scattered throughout the country and is not centered in any one group of contiguous States.

For instance, it is active in Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana and Texas in the South; but is not an important factor in North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina.

In Indiana it has assumed proportions that are not duplicated in the surrounding group of States except Ohio. From the Canadian border to South Carolina the Klan has not met encouragement in any of the Atlantic seaboard States. In Missouri and Kansas it does not figure as prominently as it does in Oklahoma. In only one or two isolated spots between Indiana and Oregon, in fact, does the Klan cut any figure at all.

It is a negligible factor in Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, California and Nevada. Various explanations of this phenomena are advanced, but few of them appear to be based on the same general causes.

Sentiment Against Klan In Large New York Cities

In New York State the "Invisible Empire" finds lodgment only in widely separated spots. In the City of New York both in numbers and political influence, it is negligible. It is almost impossible to secure even an approximate estimate of the number of adherents to the Klan among the six millions of citizens of the metropolis of the western world.

In New York city, and also in other centers like Buffalo, Syracuse and Rochester, public sentiment is unmistakably hostile to the program and pretensions of the Klan. In eastern Long Island and the western part of the State, Klans which claim a membership of from 200 to 1,000 flourish in an environment unfriendly to its self-proclaimed purposes, and a good many of the members are subjected to ridicule or openly condemned.

The State Legislature, responding to the overwhelming sentiment against the Klan, administered a decisive blow to the secret organization by passing the Walker bill, which prohibits masks and other secret forms, and the State government successfully appealed to the courts for a revocation of the charter obtained by the Klan so that masks and other devices intended to conceal the identity of its adherents cannot now be used in the State.

Further than this, Protestant ministers whose support was obtained for the Klan creed, which was designed to propagate and encourage Americanism, have deserted it in large numbers because of disclosures showing that its chief purpose was to foment prejudice against racial and religious groups, notably those of Jewish and African origin and adherents of the Roman Catholic faith.

Politically, the Ku Klux Klan means very little in New York. In certain sections it has supported individual candidates with little or no success. In Long Island an avowed Klansman invited popular support, but was decisively beaten.

Losing Steadily in Illinois After an Amazing Advance

In Illinois the Klan is steadily losing ground. At first it spread with amazing rapidity, but during the last year has lost two-thirds of its original membership. At its peak there were twenty-two Klaverns in the State with a membership of 150,000, of which 54,000 were in Chicago. The present membership is estimated at 75,000 for the State and 10,000 in the city.

The Klan made a fight against Judge Dever, Roman Catholic candidate for Mayor of Chicago and he was elected by 100,000. Four out of twenty candidates for the Board of Aldermen won nominations on a Klan program, but these were snowed under in the election. The best informed men in Illinois State and in Chicago unite in the view that the Klan hysteria has run its course, that it will not cut much of a figure in the Presidential and State elections next year.

The Klan is also losing in Oregon, but is still active in trying to stimulate interest in the general election next year. Two years ago the Klan succeeded in electing a candidate for Governor, or at least claimed to have done so. Gov. Pierce, the beneficiary of their support, practically repudiated it. Every Master Mason in the State has withdrawn from the Klan. Disclosures showing that leaders of the Klan are more concerned in getting offices for themselves and their friends than in propagating the patriotic pretensions of the organization, have done much to discredit the organization.

The organization is kept up, however, and its leaders make no secret of their intent to take a hand in coming political events. An achievement for which the Klan claims the credit has alienated a great deal of the popular support. This was the passage by the Klan amounts to very little politically of adherents and condemnation of its Legislature, under Klan coercion, of a bill closing all private schools, but manifestly directed at the parochial institutions maintained by the Catholic Church.

In Missouri the membership of the Klan is uncertain. It is admittedly strong in rural sections. A year ago the claim was made by supporters of the Klan that there were 100,000 members of it in the State. The present estimates, which appear to be reliable, show this has been cut in half. The strength of the Klan in the rural sections is generally credited to anti-Catholic propaganda.

The Klan is still very strong in Indiana, and the leaders of both political parties are greatly disturbed over the aggressive attitude assumed by its promoters. Leaders of the secret organization who staged some of the largest demonstrations held in the country make no secret of their determination to control both parties next year. The Klan propaganda is openly conducted. One weekly newspaper supported by the Klan and engaged in the dissemination of its program has a larger circulation than any daily in the State.

Political leaders in both parties who have secretly sought the support of the Klan do not hesitate to credit it with a greater degree of influence than popular judgment seems to justify.

The election in Ohio last Tuesday supplied a case in point. Columns were printed throughout the country of the great Klan victory in Youngstown, and yesterday a great parade of the robed Knights was scheduled for that city. Now in Youngstown, while it is true that the Mayor-elect had the indorsement of the Klan it is equally true that a Roman Catholic running for a judgeship defeated a Klan candidate, and in doing so received more votes than the Mayor-elect. Another point to be noted about Klan candidates is that the Klan has been known to take all the credit in elections where it played very little part, perhaps only as much as secretly indorsing a candidate.

Secret Bidding for Help In Senate Fight in Alabama

In Alabama, Democratic politicians seeking the nomination for the Senate and State offices next year are secretly bidding for Klan support. Senator Heflin, who is ambitious to hold on to his seat, is regarded as being extremely friendly to the Klan.

In some of the rural sections of the country, floggings and other criminal acts have been employed to coerce hostile public sentiment. In a general sense, however, leaders of political, commercial and educational thought in the State, assert that Alabama is not in the control of the Ku Klux Klan, and that interest in its activities is steadily decreasing.

In Arkansas the Ku Klux Klan is supposed to have more than 200 Klaverns with a membership of from 100 to 10,000. In Little Rock every Protestant minister is claimed by Klan leaders to be a member of the organization. It is in the rural sections of the State, however, that the Klan is most powerful. It has adopted the slogan of "no politics in the Klan, but the Klan in politics." Rival candidates for political honors secretly solicit the support of the organization.

In Texas the Klan is said to be gaining recruits. Impartial judges credit it with a membership of 150,000. The Klan seems to find most favor in the large cities, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Beaumont, Waco. Paradoxically, San Antonio and El Paso are overwhelmingly against the Klan. An anti-Klan Mayor was recently elected in San Antonio by a large majority.

The Klan leaders claim to control sixty-five city and town governments. Yet in the last general election not a single avowed candidate won. The Klan controlled the last Democratic State convention, but Gov. Neff and Senator-elect Mayfield, claimed by the Klan, repudiated it after their election. The Klan spirit in Texas is directly aimed at Catholics rather than Jews, but the best judgment of reliable authorities is that it will not cut as much figure in coming political contests as the leaders assert.

From THE NEW YORK HERALD correspondents' detailed report of Klan activities follow:

NEW YORK.

Any estimate of the numerical strength of the Ku Klux Klan in New York State must of necessity be subject to attack. The Klan is vague about it. In Binghamton, the home of Edward H. Smith, Grand Dragon or chief officer for the State, the figure for the State is set at 75,000. In Albany, Klansmen having failed to confer with Binghamton, say there are about 50,000 of them in the State. Up in Niagara county, a supposed stronghold, the guess is 30,000.

Taking all the guesses of the Klansmen themselves and striking an average you have in the neighborhood of 50,000—probably a too generous figure.

Broome county, of which Binghamton is the metropolis, seems to have provided the most fertile soil for Klan seed. The best guess has it that in Binghamton alone there are about 4,000 citizens of the Invisible Empire. In Broome county the Klan boasts of six or seven thousand.

The Klan has looked upon Long Island with envious eyes. It has won recruits in Nassau county—how many is hard to say. But it has really established itself in Suffolk, where it has set up its own candidate for the Assembly against John G. Peck, who voted for the Walker law aimed at the Klan's head. Arthur H. Myers of Ronkonkoma, who says that he isn't a Klansman, was nominated by petition by the Klan. There were 2,100 names on the Myers petition and Myers said last Sunday that if he had the Klan support he was "as good as elected." But he wasn't. Peck defeating him handily.

NEW JERSEY.

The Ku Klux Klan in New Jersey is negligible. It is much weaker than one would be led to believe by the amount of noise made by Klans scattered in some of the interior counties It is estimated that there are 40,000 members, and the political influence of these groups has been confined to contests for unimportant local offices.

The leaders of the two major political parties apparently attach little importance to the demands and threats of Klansmen. The hooded knights appear to find considerable satisfaction in attracting attention to themselves by staging night meetings, well advertised, in isolated sections of the State.

The few political moves actually made by Klansmen have been in the way of gestures, and have rarely been accompanied or followed by actual commitment. Some of the Klansmen have asserted that their order was responsible for the defeat of Senator Frelinghuysen by Gov. Edwards last year.

Gov. Silzer has openly attacked the Klan in speeches before local bodies of Knights of Columbus and various Jewish societies. The Governor was opposed by the Klan last year and won by 90,000 majority. The Klan is incorporated in the State, with offices at Elizabeth. Up to date the Legislature and State government have ignored it.

According to reliable authority the Klan has been losing membership recently, the most notable recession being that of Russell F. Trimble, former Klan Keagle, who quit last month and charged that the recruiting staff of the Klan was only interested in the $4 commission paid for each member.

ILLINOIS.

There was a time when the "invisible empire" spread through Illinois with amazing rapidity, when it seemed inevitable that the Klan was to become a powerful factor in the civic and social life of the State and its principal city. Then, because of internal friction, united opposition on the part of the press and the pulpit, not to speak of actual physical demonstrations against it, the Klan waned until now it is an innocuous thing.

At the peak of its power there were approximately 54,000 Klansmen in Chicago and 150,000 in the State. Now in Chicago it has dwindled to 10,000 and to approximately 82,000 in the State. Of this number, according to some reports, 41 per cent. are delinquents in the matter of dues. In 1922, the Klan's big year, there were twenty-two Klaverns in Chicago. Now there are less than a dozen, and only four of these are active.

The attitude of Chicago toward the Klan has been expressed time after time in many different ways. Early this year the City Council by unanimous vote pledged itself to exclude members of the organization from the service of the city.

The Baptist Ministers' Conference passed a resolution urging that the members of the Baptist church have "no fellowship with those who work in disguise and darkness." The resolution charged further that the Klan is responsible for much of the present day unrest.

This action was seconded by the Rock River Conference of the Methodist church.

OREGON.

Although still a potent factor in the politics of Oregon, the Ku Klux Klan is losing ground. It will attempt to rally in the Senatorial campaign next year. The Klan had a membership of about 6,000 in Portland January 1, 1923. It has lost 2,600 members since that date. The up-State membership at its height did not exceed 4,000 members. Nearly half of this membership has been lost since January 1. Every Master Mason of Oregon has withdrawn from the Klan. The hooded organization held a powerful membership among the Masons a year ago.

The decline in the Klan's strength can be attributed to the following reasons:

1. Its leaders showed no political sincerity. They have played the game simply for the political and other benefits they derived.

2. They supported men for office who were without qualification and who would play the game of the Klan leaders regardless of merit.

3. Many who joined the "white sheet brigade" did so with honest intentions. Upon discovering that their convictions had been capitalized for the benefit of the unscrupulous they withdrew. One of the outstanding lights in withdrawals was that of the Rev. R. H. Sawyer, formerly head lecturer for the organization in the Northwest.

The Klan was at zenith last November, when it succeeded in electing Gov. Walter M. Pierce, a Democrat. It was aided by the farmers, who have been in a deplorable state as a result of low prices received for their products and high prices paid for the things they need.

The cardinal principles of the Klan in Oregon have been anti-Catholic, anti-Jew and anti-foreign born. Oregon for a number of years has been agitated by anti-Catholic sentiment. Especially was this true in Portland. Hence the Klan became a remarkable crystallizer of anti-Catholic forces.

The Klan intends to have a candidate in both the Republican and Democratic camps at the Oregon election a year from this November if it is able to do so. Mayor George Baker of Portland and K. K. Kubli, the latter Speaker of the Oregon House of Representatives, have both bid for the Klan support. These two will be Republican candidates in the Oregon primaries.

Senator Charles L. McNary will be Republican candidate for reelection. The Klan has repeatedly tried to obtain an audience with him on the subject. It would like to have McNary for its candidate, for he seems to have the best chance of winning the election. McNary does not want the support of the Klan.

MISSOURI.

From Klan circles information on membership is not obtainable. One in position to know said "it would not exceed 100,000.". The same authority declined to say how far below that figure the Klan strength in the State might fall.

Several months ago there were unofficial reports the organization had more than 400,000. That figure probably was not excessive at that time. In Jackson county, in which Kansas City is, there have been Klan meetings with an attendance estimated from 10,000 to 15,000.

Rural districts outside Kansas City once showed special interest in the organization. Meetings in Kansas City proper were held in Convention Hall and in the big downtown churches. Recent reports are that Klan activity is noticeable in several different rural counties of the State. The nearest political test of its strength was last November in Jackson county, when a defeated candidate for Circuit Judge openly credited with Klan support polled approximately 19,000 votes. Since differences in the national organization arose, the present strength both locally and out in the State is difficult to judge.

Many of the members under the old organization are yet credited with affiliation, while others are said to have withdrawn. The Klan appears to have little or no control in city or county government locally.

INDIANA.

Regardless of successes or mistakes of either the Democratic or Republican parties in Indiana between now and the time for the primaries next May, the minds of those actively playing politics in the State, from the State chairman down to the precinct committeemen, will be burdened with the specter of the Ku Klux Klan.

Klan leaders are confident their candidates will sweep all opposition aside at the next election. They speak of election when, in fact, the real test of strength will come in the primaries. The Ku Klux Klan will have a candidate for virtually every office in the State in both parties in the primary election. The plan of action is well worked out, from all indications. One candidate likely will be selected for particular office in each party. He, of course, will be known to the Klan members.

In case the opposition is marked and his nomination is doubtful other Klan members, unknown to the general public, will be pushed into the field for the same office. These latter candidates will use anti-Klan propaganda and assist in splitting up the opposition vote. The more opposition the greater number of Klan candidates sailing under the colors of the opposition.

If the Klan in Indiana votes solidly it can elect any candidate for State office. Mr. Harding carried Indiana by approximately 185,000, the largest plurality ever accorded a candidate. The State generally is much more evenly divided politically than this. If any candidate for State office gets 50,000 plurality it is considered rather remarkable. With a potential voting strength even conservatively of 300,000 the Klan is cause for worry on the part of politicians.

Each party has its full share of the burden in Klan membership. The membership in Indianapolis is placed at 25,000. The remainder is scattered over the State, either in rural centers or in the smaller cities. Such cities as Fort Wayne, South Bend, Gary and Evansville have not taken strongly to the Klan. While Indiana is conceded by the Klan officials to be one of their strongest States, law violations have been very few.

OHIO.

There is no doubt that Klan membership in Ohio runs into the scores of thousands. Statements have put it above 500,000, but there are of course no exact figures. Yet it is safe to say that Texas and Indiana do not contain any more Knights of the Invisible Empire than does the Buckeye State. The Klan's part in the municipal elections on Tuesday throughout the State got much publicity. And yet here as in other States the real influence of the organization at the polls is an open question. There have been numerous vice raids, parades and street brawls, but nothing serious enough to attract nationwide attention to the Klan's activities. The Fiery Cross of Ohio is on sale throughout the State and recruits are steadily being gained until only a few of the larger cities including Cleveland and Cincinnati are now without influential and menacing Klaverns. There has been no effort by the Catholics and Jews to organize against the Klan, the opinion seeming to be that it is but a passing terror that soon will spend its force.

ALABAMA.

Persistent efforts by organizers, propaganda by lecturers and political influence have brought about a strong organization of the Ku Klux Klan in Alabama, though keen politicians assert that this strength has not reached a commanding position. In spots throughout the State the Klan is in position to control. In Birmingham and Jefferson county, the imperial city and county of Alabama, the organization wields a powerful influence.

In the meantime politics are warming up in Alabama in several directions. The election of a United States Senator next year is the overshadowing event at the present time and Senator J. Thomas Heflin is seeking reelection. While no other candidate has come out as yet, John Bankhead, son of the late Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama, and B. B. Comer, former Governor and for a short while United States Senator, are mentioned. That Senator Heflin stands well in Klan circles is a whisper, but nothing outward is observed at this time.

Alabama has not been stirred to any great extent by floggings. In Birmingham and Jefferson county and in one or two instances at Jasper, in Walker county, floggings have taken place, none lately. But to one case was there more than ordinary attention given and that was when Dr. J. W. Dowling, city and county health officer of Birmingham-Jefferson county, was lured from his home, taken up the road some distance and unmercifully whipped. Dr. Dowling had been very active in promulgating health laws, and especially milk or dairy laws, and this is said to have brought about much enmity. Several months later several arrests were made, and it was shown that persons identified with local Klan bodies had been concerned in this and other abuses.

ARKANSAS.

Only one man has been uncovered as a leader of the K. K. K. in Arkansas, James A. Comer, a prominent local attorney, who is reputed to hold a high position in the State and national organizations, as well as the local Klan. The membership in Little Rock is said to include practically every Protestant minister in the city.

The Klan membership in Arkansas is widely disseminated, and it is apparently thriving in the rural communities as well as the urban centers. Farmers and planters in the more populous counties are reported to be active members of the organization. It is impossible to ascertain the number of members in the State because of the rapid growth, but from the best information obtainable there are not fewer than 50,000.

There have been few flagrant violations of the law chargeable to the Ku Klux Klan.

TEXAS.

The Klan in Texas is slowly but steadily gaining recruits. A conservative estimate places the membership at 110,000. Klan organs claim a membership of 150,000. William Simmons in an address delivered at Austin this summer placed the number at close to 110,000.

Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Beaumont, Waco and Austin are strong Klan centers. Seventy per cent. of Klan strength is found in cities of more than 30,000 population. Rural members are concentrated in the eastern and southwestern sections of the State.

TWO KU KLUX KLANS

Daughter of One of the Founders of the Original Denounces Appropriation of Its Name and Its Traditions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Doubtless all of us not infected with the Ku Klux Klan bacillus deplore the eruption of lawlessness manifested in varying degrees of intensity in every State of the Union, but only those who understand conditions subsequent to the War of Secession can realize how inept and misleading is the name "Ku Klux Klan" assumed by those stricken with the prevalent malady.

Neither in personnel, motives nor activities is there any resemblance between the original Klan and their self-designated namesakes, prancing, like Don Quixotes on Rosinante hobbies.

What could be more preposterous than these fly-by-nights, shrouded in white and mystery, attempting to reform politics and society by a coat of tar and feathers? Or what more grotesquely puerile than the solemn farce staged in church, where masked and hooded klansmen, "devoutly kneeling," call on God and the congregation to attest their oath that exclusively pure and patriotic motives inspire their outrages against Catholic, Jew, foreigner—anybody, white, yellow or black who is so perverse as to have been born beyond the confines of this "Sweet Land of Liberty," so criminal as to be persona non grata to the freak empire, or so heretical as not to worship what the "flaming cross" signifies in their scheme of lawless bigotry? How often has the cross become a fetich in the cult of hatred and the ritual of crime and folly?

The "goblin" masquerade of klansmen is now "the outward, visible sign" of half-baked reformers and well-meaning fanatics, but it is rapidly becoming the vestment of unscrupulous politicians and the disguise of criminals.

Such are the minds enacting mystery plays tonight—such the childish, pestiferous, often vicious, activities of an invisible oligarchy that filches the name and counterfeits the regalia under which defeated heroes of the Confederacy formed a cordon around their homes during the saturnalia called in bitter irony the "Reconstruction Period."

"War is hell," but peace for the vanquished is often a more acute phase of hell.

The terms of official peace, accorded at Appomattox, were fair and honorable, but the psychology of victory reduced them to a magnanimous gesture. "To the victor belong the spoils," is a fundamental creed of conquerors, and, despite pledges, there was a way to exploit the South—to a nation intoxicated with military success all things are possible.

Africans automatically emancipated by the surrender outnumbered the white population in the seceding States, and overnight the economic structure, strained to the breaking point by war, collapsed. But the industrial system, though greatly impaired, was not at first destroyed, for freed men generally remained on the plantations, performing work voluntarily for wages. Since paid labor, according to political economy, is less expensive than labor performed by slaves, there was reason to hope for gradual readjustment and return to normalcy, but the fire of experience soon demonstrated such hope was only "fool's gold."

When war ended, predatory hordes of camp followers and mercenaries—post-war braves—swooped down upon the defenseless South. Here, these knights of adventure, derisively called "carpet-baggers" pooled interests with Southern renegades, avid to share with invaders the spoils of their native land. For them was invented the sobriquet, "scallawag"—an exclusive brand of infamy!

Drunk with moonshine of perfidious promises, instigated to deeds of violence by vicious propaganda, the negro inevitably became the cat's paw, or rather the tiger's claw, in the ruthless scheme of ravaging the South. To accomplish this with impunity, license must be stamped with an official seal—if red with blood it were the more impressive.

"No gift of vision," concerning which there is today so much cant and so little manifestation, was needed to preperceive that the negro vote was the lever by which the entire social and civil edifice could be overturned and a fake Government established to legalize tyranny, violence and corruption. There were boundless possibilities.

At Washington profiteers and demagogues were playing the game of high finance and political ambition on a national scale. In this gamble the negro vote would be the joker—indeed, it was the crux of the whole situation after Lee's surrender had left the South defenseless, save for the guarantee of the nation's good faith, given in all sincerity by Grant. But on the negro vote enterprising "patriots" and "philanthropists" could vault over this high hurdle and ride to wealth and power.

The ballot, suddenly thrust into the hands of negroes, totally disqualified for citizenship, proved a fatal gift—a Pandora's box from which swarmed all the evils that can afflict society. Today, sixty years later, the entire nation is still shadowed by that gigantic outrage to reason—that "hocus pocus" of "liberty, equality, fraternity" by which the negro was converted into a political asset and a tool for wrecking the South.

In this land of liberty the dragon, slavery, has not been destroyed, his victims, white and black, toil in factories and mines, on railroads and farms, from ocean to ocean. Only the few are free, and they are not happy.

Negroes, prompted by white conspirators, enacted the part assigned to them with calculated results. Illiterate Africans in executive and judicial offices burlesqued and disgraced civil government. According to program, Federal troops were rushed to the South to enforce negro rule—to compel submission to kangaroo courts. Tragedy moved on to the climax. Scalawag, carpetbagger, negro, could now bait with impunity, disarmed, disfranchised heroes of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville, enmeshed in legal chicanery, and ringed by Federal bayonets.

When resistance seemed impossible, the courage, fortitude and resourcefulness that had sustained the Confederate soldier for four years against overwhelming odds now came to the rescue. He was still the captain of his soul and in defense of home. Invictus!

From this night of tyranny and license emerged the Ku Klux Klan. The manhood of the South threw off the stranglehold of Northern adventurers, Southern traitors and their black myrmidons.

Robe, hood and mask are indelibly stamped on Southern history—hieroglyphic records of a time when night and secrecy were the only refuge from persecution; an appeal to puerile superstition, which had its source in African jungles, the only defense of homes. Sacred writings truly are these symbols to us, children of Confederate veterans!

Only sons and daughters of these heroic men at bay can resent, as I do, this travesty on the sombre tragedy of the past.

The Ku Klux Klan tonight is in no sense a recrudescence or an offspring of the original. That organization, having achieved its mission, and knowing that the secrecy under which it was forced to act was being used to cloak crimes (perpetrated by men not affiliated with the Klan), officially dissolved, declaring the Ku Klux Klan disbanded forever.

In justice to our fathers who grappled with and overcame conditions insufferable as were ever inflicted upon a heroic people to goad them into hopeless resistance, I denounce the ignorance, or malice, that confounds the two organizations. The first was a tragic necessity, the second a useless, if not criminal absurdity, and may become a menace to every citizen—a force illogical, despotic, an imperium in imperio, more to be dreaded than foreign foes!

However, it is imperative that we recognize the truth that all lawless organizations are not only the manifestation of evil in themselves but a protest, however foolishly expressed, against evils in government and society—rank growth spontaneously budding from "something rotten in the State."

NANNIE NUTT HOLT.

Daughter of Captain L. M. Nutt of Shreveport, La., who was a member of the original Ku Klux Klan.

Gen. Gordon and the Klan.

A citizen of Williamson County remarked recently, apropos of the Ku Klux Klan meeting, that his father had told him that he had seen the official order, issued many years ago by General George W. Gordon, then the highest [illegible] in Tennessee of the organization, disbanding it, its purposes having been attained.

It seems that General Gordon was visiting his kinsman in Williamson County, and while there prepared this order and showed it to him before it was [illegible] various branches of the state.

General Gordon was a citizen of Memphis. He was [illegible] superintendent of public instruction in Shelby County, and later representative in Congress. He was a conspicuous figure in the armies of the Confederacy in the west. At the battle of Franklin, when its star was fading, he led his troops against federal breastworks with impetuous charges that threatened to overcome a barrier really invincible to the exposed batallions in gray. Gordon commanded a brigade, and actually pierced the blue line, but the supporting troops fell like leaves under the withering fire, and he was captured. He had penetrated the federal line, however, to a point further advanced, it is said, than any other Confederate officer.

The writer heard General Gordon, speaking at the unveiling of the Confederate monument on the public square in Franklin, describing the advance of the Confederates on the federal breastworks across the pike near the famous cotton gin of tragic memory, that when his troops got close up "the bullets were buzzing about my ears so thick that I felt I could wave my handkerchief and almost fill it with them."

The above article appeared in the Nashville Banner of Sunday last, contributed by George Armistead. In the latter years of his life General Gordon represented the Tenth congressional district, and at that time Hardeman County was a part of the district. During the campaign he came to Bolivar and called upon the editor of the Bulletin. We will never forget what he said about the Ku Klux Klan. A mob of infuriated people had then recently committed some horrible crime, which he condemned in unmeasured terms. Then he became reminiscent and recited an interesting story to the writer. Immediately folowing the Civil War, he said, conditions in the south were such that honorable men were forced to band themselves together in order to protect their homes and their families and to secure justice. The white peoples of the south were disfranchised and the negro was allowed the ballot. Carpet-baggers from the north and camp-followers ran rough-shod over the rights of the people. Their methods were so unjust, so disgraceful and so repulsive that the good citizens determined to assert themselves. An organization was formed known as the Ku Klux Klan. General Gordon wrote the ritual for the klan, which was first organized at Pulaski, Tenn. Its membership comprised many of the best citizens of the south. They accomplished a wonderful work, restoring order out of chaos. But when law was established and the courts began to function, General Gordon stated to us that he withdrew from the organization and recommended its disbandment, there being no further necessity for its existence.—The Bolivar Bulletin, June 8, 1923.

LETTERS TO NEGROES STIR KLAN CHIEFS

Warnings Signed "K. K. K." Are Branded as "Fakes."

Klan Must Come Unmasked to Get Consideration, Says New Jersey's Governor.

Vigorous efforts to run down persons who are using the name of the Ku Klux Klan to frighten negroes in the South to the industrial centers of the North, will be instituted at once, J. O. Wood, of Atlanta, Ga., editor of the Searchlight, official Klan publication, has announced.

"Reports from all over Georgia tell how negroes have received letters of warning signed 'K. K. K.' in red ink," Wood said. "Labor agents also have chalked the letters, 'K. K. K.' on negro cabins. We want the negroes to report these attempts at intimidation to the Imperial headquarters here or local Klan chapters and we will investigate to bring these persons to justice."

Fifteen members of the Kloncilium from various parts of the United States attended the meeting of the Imperial Kloncilium, or executive board of the Ku Kluz Klan, held in Atlanta.

Klan Must Unmask for Plea.

After stating that he had not received a copy of a letter the Ku Klux Klan had broadcast to State, county and city officials of New Jersey, Governor Silzer said:

"It is not my intention to honor anonymous communications. If the Ku Klux leaders will appear in person with their masks off and show a real grievance, they will receive consideration and action."

Colonel Swarzkopf of the State Police, who has been watching the doings of the Klan in towns and cities of New Jersey, is said to have received one of the letters protesting against the breaking up of several meetings in northern New Jersey by "organized mobs."

The Klan letters, signed by the "Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Realm of New Jersey," protested against the "mob rule" allowed in Somerset, Middiesex and Monmouth counties.

Klan Chapters in Texas Rebel.

Revolution of national Klan methods or secession of the Texas chapters is forecast in a resolution passed by the San Antonio organization of the invisible empire, according to announcement made today by George W. Keeling, kleagle for the State.

No money will be sent to Atlanta and no orders will be taken from the Imperial Wizard until demands of Texas Klansmen are complied with, according to Keeling.

The resolution calls for the democratization of the Klan, elimination of its military character and reduction of per capita taxes on the membership.

Passes Anti-mask Bill.

By a vote of 26 to 1, the Illinois Senate passed the bill which imposes severe penalties for persons who violate the law while hooded, masked, or robed. The bill has already passed the house and now goes to Governor Small for consideration.

The one vote against the bill was cast by Senator Dunlap (Rep. Champaign), who insisted that one section of the bill gave an opportunity to harass hooded persons who might not be disturbing the peace.

Governor Blaine of Wisconsin signed the Price bill, which places an additional penalty on persons who commit crimes while masked to conceal their identity.

PLANS FOR MOVING IMPERIAL PALACE OF KLAN MOOTED

Asheville, N. C., June 26.—Plans for moving the imperial palace of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from Atlanta to Asheville, will be considered at the imperial council meeting July 16, it was reported here today. Grand dragons of the order from every state in the union will be present for the session. It is understood that a prominent resident of Asheville, who is affiliated with the klan, has offered to donate property for the erection of the palace in Asheville.

While those affiliated with the organization here are silent on the plans this information was obtained on what was declared to be good authority.

"It's a good joke," declared H. K. Ramsey, imperial kligrapp of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Tuesday night, upon being informed of the reported proposal to remove the imperial palace to Asheville. He further stated that he had heard nothing of the proposed change.

POSTPONE ACTION ON SUIT OF KLAN ASKING RECEIVER

ATLANTA, Ga., June 23.—Hearing of the petition for a receiver for the Ku Klux Klan, filed by David M. Rittenhouse of Philadelphia and others a few weeks ago today was set for June 29 by Judge John B. Humphreys in Fulton superior court. The suit against William J. Simmons, emperor of the klan, to enjoin him from further organization of the Knights of Kamelia, filed yesterday by the Ku Klux Klan, was not reached and goes over for a week or so.

The suit filed by Mr. Rittenhouse and his associates charged gross mismanagement of the klan's funds by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, and his staff. It also charged that Evans, together with William J. Simmons, emperor, had turned the klan into a personal machine for the enrichment and personal aggrandizement of themselves and alleged that the organization was breaking up through threats of "some of the realms" to secede and establish independent organizations.

In addition to Imperial Wizard Evans the defendants named included all the members of the imperial kloncilium named last April, together with certain employes at the imperial palace headquarters of the order in this city.

Klan Receivership Suit Is Postponed

Indefinite postponement of the suit of C. D. Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and other klansmen, for a receivership for the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan on their charges that the administration of H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, has squandered and misused klan funds amounting to nearly $750,000, was ordered by Judge John B. Humphries in Fulton Superior Court Friday.

The order was made upon motion by W. S. Coburn, representing Rittenhouse and his associates. Mr. Coburn said his case was not completely made out for trial, and asked postponement. Members of the firm of Etheridge, Sams & Etheridge, attorneys for the klan, urged immediate trial, saying they were ready for the issue and sought relief for the temporary order restraining officials of the klan from paying out klan funds without court authority. Postponement was granted, however, with the indication that the issue will not be heard for probably two months, as the vacation of judges is to start shortly.

BRITISH EXPERT DENOUNCES KU KLUX

Masked Men Are "Destitute of Moral Courage" Says Sir Basil Thompson

(N. A. A. C. P. Press Service)

New York, June 14.—Sir Basil Thompson, former director of the criminal investigation department of Great Britain's detective center, Scotland Yard, warns of the danger of the Ku Klux Klan, in an interview.

"The new Klan professes to wage war against modern social evil," said Sir Basil, "but in reality it fosters animosity against the Roman Catholics, the Jews and the colored people. It can do no possible good, and it may do much harm.

"Its use of the mask opens the door to the adoption of disguise by violent criminals who will not be slow to copy the form of the Klansman's mask when they have old scores to settle.

"Some unthinking people have likened the movement to the Italian Fascist movement, but the Fascist works openly and scorns the use of masks. The Klansman's defense for the mask, or rather the defense of those with whom I have talked, is that some people are shy of joining a movement, however much they approve of its objects, if they have to come out into the open. One would have thought that recruits so destitute of moral courage were scarcely worth enrolling.

"I venture the suggestion, which I make without any disrespect to the Klan, that without the masks there would be no recruits."

Klan Strongly Opposes Harding World Court Plan

FORT WORTH, June 30.—The declaration that the Ku Klux Klan is strongly against President Harding's plan for a World Court or any other form of alliance with foreign nations was made here today by Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans.

In Ohio, the President's home state, more than 300,000 voters are members of the Ku Klux Klan, Dr. Evans said. He asserted the total membership of the organization had reached more than a million and that there were more Klansmen north of the Mason and Dixon line than in the South.

Asked whether the Klan as a whole would endorse publicly any man for the Presidency, Dr. Evans replied it would not.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923 II. General.

MAP SHOWING THE POSITION OF THE STATES IN RELATION TO KLAN

New York City Herald 11-11-23

Fort Worth is admittedly in the control of Klansmen. In its effort to control county government the Klan has been even more successful than in municipalities. A very conservative estimate of the number of county governments dominated by the Klan is sixty-five, or more than one-fourth of the counties in the State.

San Antonio and El Paso are anti-Klan centers. The order has little influence in El Paso, but is gaining a foothold in San Antonio. The American Forum, one of the most militant of the Klan publications of the country, is published in San Antonio. Just at present the Klan there is fighting Mayor John Tobin, who was elected by a decisive majority over his Klan opponent.

In the general election held last September not a single avowed Klan candidate was elected to a State office. Gov. Pat Neff was indorsed by the Klan and was credited with being a sympathizer with the organization. Earle Mayfield, elected to the United States Senate, was heralded as a Klansman and made no seeming efforts to deny reported Klan affiliations until after his election. Klan candidates for State Treasurer, Lieutenant Governor and Superintendent of Public Instruction were defeated.

Innumerable floggings have been traced to Klan members in this State. One of the most notorious of recent date was the severe beating given an Amarillo victim. Sheriff Les Whitaker of Potter county is now under indictment for conspiracy in the flogging. It is charged that the sheriff, a member of the Klan, turned the victim over to the floggers. Two years ago Peeler Clayton, an avowed enemy of the Klan who had intimated he might try to break up a meeting of the Austin Klan, was killed as he approached the meeting hall of the Klan. The responsibility for the killing has never been fixed.

OKLAHOMA.

The spectacular fight that Gov. J. C. Walton has made upon the Ku Klux Klan as an organization in Oklahoma no doubt has caused a considerable increase in its membership. This is admitted by administration leaders and by the Governor himself. Klan officials are claiming that the membership now exceeds 100,000 whereas two months ago 75,000 was claimed. Reports from at least two counties are to the effect that the Klan organization had disbanded before the Governor declared war upon the organization, and that they have been revived with larger memberships than formerly. At the same time Klan organizers have invaded many communities that before had not been visited.

A second outstanding fact of the Walton "war" is that a far greater number of Protestants have openly declared their hostility to the Klan and that hostility is more openly expressed and openly active than the Catholic and Hebrew hostility. It is a curious fact that a new bond of sympathy exists between anti-Klan Protestants and Catholics; a fact that many liberal minded people believe portends a new era of religious tolerance in the State.

There is no doubt that the Legislature, now in extraordinary session will pass a bill directed against the Klan that will meet approval of all tolerant people and of a great majority of Klansmen themselves.

Anti-Catholic literature has flooded the State during the last few weeks. This undoubtedly was sponsored by the Klan, with individual members supplying the names and addresses of sympathizers. In the State no daily or weekly newspapers of consequence support or encourage the Klan. On the contrary, nearly all the dailies are avowed enemies of the organization.

In many communities of the State it has been popular personally and politically to belong to the Klan. Two Democratic candidates for Governor last year were members. In some counties, for instance Oklahoma county, a majority of the county officials are Klansmen.

Representative men of the State say they foresee an era of peace, harmony and religious tolerance growing out of the situation that has held Oklahoma up to the world as a lawless State in the grip and control of an invisible empire. They say it with figures. For illustration, a business man points out that while there may be 150,000 Klansmen and their wives in Oklahoma and 100,000 adult Catholics and Jews, there is a greater number than this, possibly 400,000 adult Protestants, who have no hand in the fight and little or no religious prejudices, and he believes that this greater body will take control in the name of tolerance, peace and prosperity.

EARLE B. MAYFIELD

H. W. EVANS

Mayfield, elected to the United States Senate from Texas, faces a contest for his seat t being charged that the Klan spent much money in his behalf. Hiram W. Evans, Im erial Wizard, and before that a dentist in Dallas, is having a difficult time with the opposi tion headed by "Emperor" Simmons, especially since the Klan murder in Atlanta.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923.

General.

WRITTEN BY A WHITE MAN.

The enemies of the Ku Klux Klan would have us believe that the Klan means harm to the negro. They would have us believe that the colored man is in great danger from the men who have raised him. However silly this may be it is an actual fact that they are telling the negro that very thing.

The writer of this article was raised in the south, sired by a man who followed the immortal Forrest in the civil war; raised in the center of the colored belt, and he has never been able to locate the real white man who would willfully harm a colored man in any respect. The white man claims this as his country and we pity the sap-head who dares to deny that claim. This being the white man's country the said white man is going to rule it or know the reason why. This does not mean however that the white man is going to shoot the negro or harm a hair of his head. But it does mean that the negro will never rule the white man. I am one who believes in white supremacy in every sense of the word, I believe the white man the superior of the colored man, mentally, morally and physically, I am one who believes when a white man consorts with a negro woman that the colored woman is a white winged angel as compared to that white man; I believe that when a white man plays cards, shoots craps or drinks shinney with a negro, he lowers himself far beneath the social status of the negro; I am one who believes that when some lecheraous lousy lout claiming to be a white man, invades the home of a law-abiding negro and seduces his daughters, that he ought to be lambasted until he would have to eat his meals from off the mantle piece; I believe that no man can be a real true American, or a real true Christian who holds to the dogma of social equality between the white and the colored races. When a white man begins to talk social equality between the races he ought to be bored for the hollow horn or put in a straight jacket. It is not so bad for an ignorant negro to talk that way for he knows no better. But when a white man does it he is responsible and should be dealt with accordingly.

I would not raise a finger to harm a negro or the negro race; I would grant him the same right I have, to make a living for his family and educate his children, the right to serve God as he wants to, but when he tries to poke his kinky head into my parlor on an equal basis socially then and there that nigger is going to get a reception that will awaken his ancestors in Africa. I believe that any church that teaches or practices social equality of the two races is not thoroughly American, and if any church persists in teaching it and practicing it they will sooner or latter bring down on themselves a catactlism that will wipe that church from off the face of the earth.

A WHITE MAN.

I don't know the gentleman's name, or address, who wrote the above letter to the Protestant Standard. I wish I did—for he is a man, after my own heart. He need not have signed, "A White Man," to his letter. I could tell that he was 100 per cent white (with all that the words imply) by reading the letter. For years and years, I have been writing the identical sentiments expressed therein—and his letter might easily have been mistaken for many such articles, as I use to print in K. Lamity's Harpoon. At any rate, I love him like a brother—and would be mighty glad to know his name and address.—EDITOR.

White American Womanhood Must Be Protected

K. Lamity Advocates A Sterilization Law

After all these long weary years of waiting, there has at last appeared a flash of daylight in the East—for sensible men have finally recognized, that something must be done in America and done at once—in order to protect the WHITE AMERICAN WOMEN IN THIS COUNTRY, FROM THE HANDS OF THE BEAST.

You seldom pick up a newspaper without being shocked with one or more glaring head-lines, which read about as follows:—

"A WHITE WOMAN ATTACKED BY A NEGRO BRUTE. HORRIBLY MUTILATED AND NOT EXPECTED TO RECOVER. HUNDREDS OF ANGRY MEN ON THE TRAIL. IF CAUGHT, A HANGING OR BURNING IS IMMINENT UNLESS THE OFFICERS GET THERE FIRST."

How often have you read such a head-line, and shuddered, while reading the particulars of the beastly attack? And while the guilty wretch is invariably captured, and punished,—legally, or illegally,—what effect has such swift and certain punishment had, so far as ending such horrible conditions, are concerned?

Nothing has been accomplished—so far as putting an end to such outrages is concerned. You shoot, hang, burn, or imprison these vicious and lecherous beasts today, and tommorrow the papers tell the same old tale.

Then, what's the use?

If law—or mob law—neither have the slightest effect, what remedy do you purpose? Is there any punishment known to mortal men, sufficient to put a stop to such brutal attacks upon the wives, mothers, and daughters of imperial America?

Years ago, the writer suggested another plan and his proposition was hooted to the skies. No one would even listen to such a proposition even though it was far less brutal than hanging or burning. The proposition was to emasculate the lecherous animal as soon as he was caught. We wanted the beast desexed, even before he was sent to the gallows, or the penitentiary. A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush—but you are not really sure you can keep it in hand—until you clip its wings.

The writer advocated this law, under the firm conviction, that it would come nearer throwing a permanent fright into the hearts of such cattle, than all the other methods of punishment combined. We still think so, and are delighted to know that our lawmakers are seriously considering the passage of the identical law, which the writer, got cussed out for proposing, years ago. There is one thing certain—the damnable creature, masquerading under the name of "Man," who commits such a crime, and falls into the hands of the law suggested—will certainly be a harmless bird forever after, and sing tenor the balance of his miserable life. A press dispatch from Austin says:—

"Members of the special eleemosynary reformatory committee of the House, which has been inspecting the various insane hospitals, have reached the conclusion that there is an imperative necessity for the enactment of sterilization laws in Texas, according to Representative C. E. Beasley, chairman of the committee. The number of insane and feeble minded persons in Texas is increasing faster than the State has been able to provide for, and unless something is done to prevent the propagation of this class of persons, this condition will present an ever—increasing problem, Mr. Beasley said.

"Texas maintains and operates ten eleemosynary institutions for the purpose of taking care of the State's defective citizens. Three of this number belong in the class of educational institutions rather than eleemosynary institutions. The other seven exercise a greater or less degree of restraint over the inmates and are in reality hospitals for mental defectives operated and maintained with a view of protecting and treating the inmates and at the same time protecting society.

"In January of this year these seven institutions had the following number of inmates on their respective rolls, to-wit:

"State Colony for Feeble Minded, 254 inmates; East Texas Hospital for Insane, 718 inmates; Southwestern Insane Asylum, 2,266 inmates; North Texas Hospital for Insane, 2,146 inmates; State Lunatic Asylum, 1,920 inmates; Northwestern Texas Insane Asylum, 308 inmates; State Epileptic Colony, 722 inmates, making a total of 8,334 persons confined in these institutions. It should be remembered that all of these are mental defectives, except in the case of the State Epileptic Colony, and the majority of those in this institutions are more or less feeble minded. At the present time there are more than 400 insane persons confined in various county jails over the State for whom there is no room in the State hospitals for insane. The superintendent for the State Colony for Feeble Minded has now on file 300 applicants for admission to that institution which cannot now be taken care of there.

"From the records and family histories of inmates on file in the offices of the superintendents of the various insane hospitals and the State Colony for Feeble Minded, it is evident that more than sixty-five per cent of the inmates inherited their mental defects.

"Sterilization was first advocated in America 50 years ago by Dr. Gideon Linceum, before the Texas State Legislature, as a substitute for the death penalty. The ridicule which marked the reception of his suggestion then has given place to serious study and investigation.

"At last a law was enacted in the State of Indiana in 1907, providing for the sterilization of confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles and rapists. Since that time other States have followed suit and among them are Iowa, New Jersey, California, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Connecticut, New York, Utah, Nebraska, Michigan, North Dakota and Washington, and possibly other States."

The safety of American womanhood demands that such a law be passed and rigidly enforced, and the legislature that enacts such a statue, will be inmortalized.

We have all the idiots, and lecherous beasts we need in this country. Pass a law, for the immediate sterilization of every confirmed criminal, idiots, imbeciles, and especially rapists. If such a law is passed it may not immediately stop crime—but it will stop the breed—to a certainty, and fasten a permanent scare into minds of these lecherous and murderous brutes.

DO YOU OBJECT TO THESE PRINCIPLES?

The tenets of the Christian religion.
White Supremacy.
Closer relationship between American Capital, and American Labor.
Protection of our Pure Womanhood.
Preventing of Mob violence, and Lynchings.
Preventing unwarranted Strikes, by foreign labor Agitators.
Prevention of fires, and destruction of property by lawless elements.
The limitation of Foreign Immigration.
Closer relationship of Pure Americanism.
The upholding of the Constitution of these United States.
The Sovereignty of our State Rights.
The separation of Church and State.
Freedom of Speech and Press.
The much needed Local Reform.

The above, is the creed of the Ku Klux Klan. If you don't like it, you have the right to fight it. What chance you will ever have to destroy the above principles, may not be at all promising—yet if you oppose them, get out in the open, and bawl your objections to the house-tops.

A great struggle is now in progress in this country, to not only oppose, but absolutely destroy the principles set forth in the above declaration. Opposition to our religion, is the big kick in the long line of objections, and closely followed by our contention for White Men ruling America, and the next is the demand that Church and State shall be forever separated.

Another very serious objection by these chronic objectors, is the limitation to the vast hordes of undesirable crooks and worthless scum of European gutters, that has been dumped into America year after year—squat in back alleys of our larger cities—and menace civilization by their dirty presence. America already has a surplus of that kind of cattle, and wants no more of them. They have been a liability, instead of an asset, and you never find them failing to vote, or ever voting right. They can be bought by the bunch—like carrots—and no one but a crook, ever buys votes.

Every 100 per cent American in this country should clip the above creed from this paper, paste it on the head of his bed, and after saying his prayers, should repeat this pure American creed, and promise the Lord he will never rest, until this grand country, which God gave the Protestants, is fovever free from the dangers that now confronts American White Men.

Causes of Impending Split.

To find the causes for the impending war that threatens to split Mr. Harding's party in Indiana an inquisitive person would have to go back almost to the civil war. The immediate causes for the rupture which is engaging the attention and participation of republican leaders at the moment have to do with the ambition of Senator "Jim" Watson to control the organization of the state which doesn't want to be controlled and promote his aspirations under certain contingencies for the presidential nomination of his party.

It is the contention of Mr. Watson's critics that in opposing the renomination of Harry S. New for the senate and betraying Albert Jeremiah Beveridge in the election last fall, Mr. Watson really builded a Frankenstein and not an organization. From present indications the Frankenstein will destroy Mr. Watson's organization, depose him from the role of boss and make him unacceptable as the candidacy of the presidency even if Mr. Harding should get out of his way. 5-20-23

As long as Mr. Harding stays in the race neither Mr. Watson or anybody else can win the support of the party in Indiana. To add to Mr. Watson's troubles the Ku Klux Klan has come along and is displaying a tendency to dictate terms and policies. Estimates as to the number of Kluxers in Indiana vary. Some of these estimates place the number as high as 400,000; 75 per cent of which is declared to be naturally republican.

Afraid of Influence.

The professional leaders of both parties while not attempting to explain the phenomena which resulted in the propagation of Klux propaganda in Indiana despite the fact that all its neighbors are against it are manifestly afraid of its influence. This holds true of the democratic as well as the republican party. The leaders of both manifest the greatest caution in expressing opinions about the klan.

In common with members of that race in other states those in Indiana reflect deep concern and apprehension over the potentialities of the expanding influence of the klan in Indiana politics. The democratic leaders privately express the opinion that its activities may drive into their party a substantial percentage of the colored voters and increase their chances for adding to recently acquired advantages which includes a United States senator and three additional members of congress.

By adroit manipulation and understanding of racial psychology the democratic leaders have succeeded in forging a tie between the republican organization and the leaders of the klan. One conspicuous achievement in this respect was the revelation that Lyons, republican state chairman, selected by Mr. Watson was a full-fledged member of the secret organization. The fact that he resigned from the organization after this disclosure did not save him from the wrath of republicans opposed to the klan and the democrats who while not openly attacking it struck directly through him at Mr. Watson, his boss.

The result of this situation prompted an immediate demand for the reorganization of the party. Another effect was to sever the partnership between Mr. Watson and Governor McCray that gave the former control over state patronage which in Indiana as elsewhere, is not to be overlooked. Postmaster General New and Mr. Beveridge did not hesitate to point out to the governor the undesirable effect on his administration of such an arrangement.

Induced to Discard Bill.

Mr. Beveridge is credited with having induced the governor to discard a bill favored by Mr. Watson for the aboilition of the presidential preference primary which compels the successful candidate to secure a majority of all the votes cast. Mr. Watson's motive in desiring the repeal the presidential preferential primary law was made obvious to the governor by Mr. Beveridge, it is said. The repeal of it would give Mr. Watson the control of the delegates to the next national convention.

In the contest three years ago General Leonard Wood secured a plurality over Hiram Johnson, Governor Louden and Mr. Harding respectively. But he did not secure a majority and the delegation divided, ultimately going to Mr. Harding. Even if all things were equal Mr. Watson certainly could not win a majority of the republican votes over anybody, at least that is the belief of both republican and democratic leaders.

Another development of the combination between Mr. Watson and Governor McCray that has not helped the former is the legislative program favored by the governor. Increased taxation, excess of government costs over revenues angered the farmers and pleased the republican critics of Mr. Watson and, of course, the democrats.

The one popular undertaking credited to Mr. Watson was his correct reading of the attitude of Indiana republicans regarding President Harding's suggestion that the United States become a member of the high court of international justice which was set up by the league of nations. The decision of the state regarding the league in the last presidential contest was naturally interpreted as hostile to the league itself.

Majority Approve Wilson.

The result was close enough to justify the Democrats in asserting that in an even contest the majority of the voters in the state would have approve of the Wilson formula. Mr. Harding's plurality over Mr. Cox's 85,006 fell far below the ratio in other states. This democratic contention may be true but it does not mean that the majority of voters would agree to adherence to the international court and Mr. Watson's opposition to it is generally accepted as reflecting correct understanding on the point.

Interest in the international court plan however is mainly academic. The democrats have seized upon it to harry the republicans. Mr. Ralston, the new democratic senator who is certain to receive the support of his state for president, will support the league of nations, and is said to look with favor upon the international court plan because of its acceptance of the league of nation's theory.

Mr. Ralston, former Senator Taggert, State Chairman Chambers, O'Brien and other democrat leaders of the state perceive the advantage of keeping the international court theory before the people in order to irritate the opposition. Mr. Beveridge, who is likely to figure in the next presidential contest under certain contingencies connected with Mr. Harding's plans, has expressed the opinion that in a showdown Indiana would vote its disapproval of both the league and the court projects, but the republican leaders also agree that even Mr. Watson's correct appraisement of state sentiment regarding the high court idea will not save him and his organization from defeat.

Klan Strong In State.

The influence of the klan is unquestionably strong in almost every section of Indiana. One reason for this is the candor of its leaders in legally organizing and publicly exploiting its wares. The klan secured a charter in 1920. It has demonstrated its power in several instances, and in such a way as to leave no doubt of the degree of its influences in dictating political results. It has openly espoused the cause of candidates acceptable to it. In one case it contributed 25,000 more votes to a candidate favored by it than were received by his associates on the same ticket.

The klan holds public parades in some of the large towns and indulges in its weird incantatics in corn fields and under the sycamores along the Wabash. If the klan as an organization has adopted a program to govern its future activities the fact is not known to political leaders. They are guessing about it as much as the uninitiated of disinterested. The methods pursued by the klan in the past suggest impulse in political ventures rather than deliberate plotting. It is this independence of action which makes the leaders of both parties careful about treading on the corns of the klansmen appearing under their hoods.

Prohibition Not Real Issue.

The prohibition problem is really not an issue at all among the republicans. The conviction of the republican mayor and 54 other officials and citizens of Gary, the steel town, seems to have had the effect of driving the republicans of wet tendencies to the dry column. The democratic leaders appear to be less apprehensive over the liquor than their opponents.

Whether the wet element of the democratic party will be strong enough to line up the party back of New York, Maryland and Massachusetts in advocating the repeal of the Volstead act is a moot question. The chances are that it will not. Senator Ralston is dry, the ku klux is dry and the majority of the farmers of the state are not even moist. The loudest demand for the modification of the Volstead law naturally comes from German, Polish, Italian and other substantial foreign units in the industrial centers notably those in the steel and bituminous coal sections of the state.

The leaders of both parties in Indiana agree that the voters generally do not reflect sympathy with radical ventures of the sort which finds expression in other parts of the country. They attribute loss of interest in socialistic proposals to the marked improvement in business conditions.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923. Illinois.

BREAKING INTO THE CHURCH

METHODIST MINISTERS in session at the Rock River conference for more than two hours spiritedly discussed the Ku Klux Klan, which means that among the number there were some in full accord with the objects and purposes of the hooded gangsters or actually members of the organization. According to reports, the Rev. John M. Williamson, former commissioner of law enforcement in Chicago, and the Rev. S. H. Wirsching, pastor at Belvidere, led the Klux forces.

THE PEOPLE of Chicago have had occasion many times before to express their opinion of the qualifications for leadership—in or out of the church—of Rev. Williamson, and the utterances credited to him in this particular instance surprise no one familiar with the gentleman's methods. The divine from the small town who succeeded in getting "mentioned" in the city press at a cost that may prove far in excess of his wildest imagiantion perhaps feels elated over the fact that he is moving in big political company; but do politicians and church folks make good bedfellows?

HERE ARE SOME of the "high spots" in the debate at the conference: "Whatever may be your theories about the supremacy of the white race practically you are for it." This Christianlike utterance emanated from our former commissioner of law enforcement. President Marshall opined: "The Ku Klux Klan exists because public officials have failed to do their duty. If you condemn the Klan you are condemning some of the noblest men in this country and among them many of your own ministers."

REV. WIRSCHING told them: "Some of you know that Masonry, of which many of you are members, has been unjustly accused and condemned; you resent the charges because you know better from experience. Act in the same way towards the Klan." Said Dr. Tuttle: "The Knights of Columbus have done certain things we do not like; therefore organize the Ku Klux Klan. This is the doctrine of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. To fight fire with fire is to produce a conflagration. If the Knights of Columbus need defeating the way to defeat them is by lifting up higher the standards of living and ideals. I condemn the Ku Klux as profoundly un-Christian. We can't settle the supremacy of the white race by resolutions. That race will be supreme, whatever its color, which follows Jesus Christ to the limit of its ability."

"WE MAY NOT KNOW all about the Klan," said the Rev. A. M. Pennewell of Evanston, "but we do know that a group of the Ku Klux Klan has come here to the church since this conference session began and threatened that we would suffer if we spoke out against it. The Klan is anti-Jew and as such would not only exclude such philanthropists as Julius Rosenwlad, but would exclude Jesus Christ Himself, who was a Jew." The pity of it all is that men of the cloth—men who pose as our spiritual leaders—should stray so far from His divine teachings. There is nothing more loathsome than a hypocrite, a wolf in sheep's clothing. Better that we live like heathens than follow the trail blazed by so-called Christians who spend their time sowing seeds of discontent and hatred among the different groups that inhabit the earth.

The K. K. K., The American Negro And Americanism

DANVILLE ILL. NEWS
OCTOBER 27, 1923

(By Rev. H. D. Martin, Colored)

To All Americans:

After listening to an address delivered by a Rev. Veral Blair, of Indiana, at the armory, Sept. 8, 1923, I feel it my duty as a minister of the gospel and an humble leader of my people to set forth the position of the negro people in the United States, lest we be misunderstood by the white people of the community, state and country through the K. K. K. representatives now touring and speaking against us everywhere. Mr. Blair claimed that the klan is not anti-negro, anti-Jew, anti-Roman, anti-foreigner, nor anti anything. Those were beautiful sentences and high sounding platitudes. And had they been true they would have formed a basis for a great speech. But nothing great can be built upon false premises. The body of the speech was wholly contradictory to the assertion that the klan is not anti. The fact is the klan is not only anti-negro, anti-Jew, anti Roman, anti-Catholic, and tnti-foreigner, but it is unrelentingly hostile to and unceasingly bitter against them. To my mind it is ridiculous that men would assume the position of arraying neighbors against neighbors, friend against friend, group against group, religion against religion, and citizen against citigen. It seems more ridiculous that men would organize to destroy religious tolerance, political tranquility and inter-racial good will. And the most ridiculous phase of it all is that preachers of the gospel of Christ would abandon that most lofty position to decend to the depths of sowing hatred in the hearts of their fellows.

In this writing I shall not attempt to defend the Jew, the Catholic, or the foreigner. They are able to defend themselves. I am writing in defense of the negro group of American citizens who have more to suffer from attacks of the K. K. K. than any other group on whom its guns are trained.

The speaker further said, that the klan is not against the negro but insists that the white blood and that of the black man shall never mix. I ask are not these bloods mixed already? That they are profusely mixed are the outstanding facts. And they will not down. And who did that mixing? Was it the black men or was it white men? Of the great number of mulattoes in the south, who are their fathers? Are they not all white men? Of course they are—almost without exceptions. And how was it effected? By the superior force of the white man. With his hounds, guns, whips, and weapons, offensive and defensive, with the whole machinery in his hand, he held colored man in deadly fear, and meanwhile forced colored girls and women to submit to his brutal lusts. The men cowed, the women had no redress. Should they defend themselves they might be killed by their assailants, who would not be punished according to the law by any Southern court. Many of our women defended their virtue and womanhood to the last, many of them lost their lives in defending their honor. Thousands of our men lost their lives at the hands of white men for no other cause than that of protecting their women and girls from attacks of white men. I thank God for the millions of our women who never bowed their knees to those libertine gods of the south. Too, I thank God for those white men who never used their power to abuse colored women. For under no condition was a colored person allowed to resist a white person.

On a smaller scale this condition exists in the south still. I now refer you to one case of recent date: Miss Marie Armstead, of Louisina told a heard rending story in Judge David's court, Chicago, Ill., Sept. 22, 1923. Miss Armstead had been seduced and held slavery in Louisiana for several years by one Joseph Graciano, an Italian Southern fruit grower. Several times she attempted to escape from her captor, but he as often frustrated her plans. Once he shot her three times and carried her back to his home. At another time she fled to New Orleans, but he sent his wife who returned the girl to the Graciano home again. Finally Miss Armstead escaped and went to Chicago to live with her aunt, but Graciano, with counsel, went to Chicago to have that poor helpless girl returned to concubinage and slavery. A thousand such cases, no doubt could be discovered in the south today. Again I ask who is doing the mixing? White men or colored men? Mr. Speaker, stop them from forcing colored women and there will be little or no mixing of the blood of the races. Colored men are content to live within the social realm of their own women, and the same is true of our women.

We do not seek what the klan and others call "social equality." We do not seek to participate in your social functions. But we do ask and demand every right of an American citizen. We do not ask for pity, but for fair and just dealings and untrammeled opportunity to develop just as white Americans have.

We have no organization in this country seeking inter-marriage or amalgamation of the races. Nor do we bar other groups from our secret fraternities because of race, religion or place of birth. Such a course would be un-Christian, un-American and sinful.

We need no man, or group of men, to lecture us on Americanism. And especially such as take the law into their own hands. We need none to dictate to us where we may live, or where we may not live. We are citizens of the United States, and will decide that for ourselves. We are one hundred percent, we have never conspired against this government, nor assassinated its presidents. But we have defended its flag to the death in five wars on a hundred battle fields, only to return home to be denied the protection of the flg we had so ably and loyally defended. Nevertheless, should the necessity arise and the government call in order "that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the eath" we will answer twelve million strong.

Recapitutation

Is it not better to preach the Fatherhood and the Brotherhood of Man" than to organize one group of our citizens for maltreatment of other groups, because of racial identity, religious tenets, or place of birth? Is it not better to preach the spirit of Jesus Christ than to sow seeds of hatred? Is is not better that blood of the races mix legitimately than illegitimately? Is not marriage preferable to illicit cohabitation? To the above questions, those who wish to dominate the colored race and force its women will answer negatively, but the decent and upright citizens of the country will answer affirmatively.

With love for all and hatred for none, I humbly invite you to study the true position of the colored people in the United States of America.

The Rev. Martin W. Twing Calls for Ban on Conflict and "Invisible Empire."

10-16-23

Urgent need of enlarging and intensifying the Christian Americanization work of the denomination into a constructive program chiefly to help abolish war, eliminate the "invisible empire," further prohibition enforcement and reduce inter-racial conflict was exhorted to-day by the Rev. Martin W. Twing, of Alton, Ill., president of the Illinois Baptist state convention, in his annual address at Oak Park.

The speaker grouped the objectives of the convention under two heads. In the first were included those of an unvarying character such as development and fostering the work of the denomination. A second group of objectives was described as including those which vary with conditions in the world. It was to these that the speaker devoted chief attention.

Lawlessness Under "Americanism."

"An insidious and widespread form of lawlessness of to-day is that which proclaims itself the embodiment of a superior grade of Americanism, patriotism and morality," Mr. Twing asserted. "The evil of this organization consists in the fact that it proclaims itself an 'invisible empire' and arrogates to itself functions which are prerogatives of the state alone.

"The result is that individuals suffer penalties not awarded by legal authority and the tendency is to engender and intensify race and religious prejudices highly detrimental to any attempts to apply principles of Christian citizenship. Light and liberty and Christian character are not the products of methods of darkness, of oppression and of hatred. Better methods must be found."

Mr. Twing declared that those who love peace and believe in the might of right must proclaim their conviction that there need be no more war and that that which has been gained in the enactment of prohibition "must be guarded with unyielding vigilance."

Deplores "Wet" Propaganda.

"Propaganda of the most insidious sort and of unmeasured volume is being disseminated through every available channel for the purpose of nullifying the victory which was gained at so great pains," he said with reference to the latter topic. "It is no time for the friends of prohibition to think they can rest and take their ease. We must defend what we have gained. The widespread disregard for law is a matter of concern for the church as well as the state."

CONNECTION WITH KLAN ADMITTED BY MACON ORGANIZER

Trial of Dentist Charged With Leading Flogging Bands Begun; Whipped Man Identifies Defendant

SOUGHT TO HAVE CASE DROPPED, SAYS OFFICER

Prosecutor Claims He Offered to Take Band on One at a Time

9-12-23

MACON, GA., Sept. 11.—Admission of his connection with the Ku Klux Klan was made late today by J. P. Durkee, organizer for the order in Macon, on the stand here while testifying in the trial of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough charged with rioting in connection with the flogging of B. F. Mills in January last year. Durkee was yesterday arrested on a rioting charge in connection with the case.

Montgomery Alabama

Durkee said he came to Macon first in June 1922, and had office space with Dr. Yarbrough and said he obtained a letter from him. He identified two letters, one addressed to the "K. K. K." and the other to Dr. Yarbrough. He declared he showed these letters to M. O. Dunning chief of staff of the klan of Georgia and then turned them over to the sheriff.

Claims Letters Burned.

Defense objected to the question if there were a large pile of letters, the solicitor saying he sought to show many letters were burned by Dr. Yarbrough, after the flowing inquiry begun, but withdrew them.

"When you received these letters what did you do with them," the witness was asked.

"I read many of them or scanned then and turned them over to Dr. Yarbrough."

Durkee followed Mills, who testified that Yarbrough was a member of the gang that flogged him. At one point in his testimony he said he went to see a postal clerk named Middlebrooks "regarding who mailed the letter to the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta." He testified that Durkee had represented himself to be a detective after he, Mills, had written a letter to the governor in Atlanta following his flogging. This letter, the state contends, never reached Governor Hardwick.

Wanted Case Dropped.

H. R. Perryman, a Ku Klux Klan detective, testified his business in Macon was investigation of whippings. He came here three weeks ago and said he saw Dr. Yarbrough on the day after he arrived and Dr. Yarbrough told him he knew nothing about the whippings. The second time he saw Dr. Yarbrough was on August 30, last, when the dentist came to his room. He said Dr. Yarbrough asked what headway had been made and that he (Perryman) told him "it looks pretty bad for some of the boys."

"He then asked me if it wasn't possible for me to find some reasonable excuse and leave town. I told him I couldn't do that."

H. F. Mills, chiropaedist, the first witness testifed that about 8:30 p. m. on the night of January 13, 1922 the telephone in his home rang and he He went to College and Appleton avenues to meet a car. As he reached the received a message calling him out him on a call. As he reached the corner, a small car drove up and he and his 12 year old son who was with him, got into the car. There were two men in the car, he testified but later a third man got into the car, and all were driven to a point on the Columbus road.

Recognizes Car.

On the way out, he said, he saw a car which later he recognized as Dr. Yarbrough's car.

Asked to tell what happened Mills said that a tall man in the car hit him on the head with a pistol and told him to hold up his hands. Mr. Mills said he did not put up his hands and was struck again.

Soon after this the party came up to a car standing beside the road, he testified. He said Dr. Yarbrough took him out of the car. He said that J. E. Bloodworth and another man held his arms while another man whipped him. He said there were five or six men in the party. All wore masks, he said, and he told them he could whip any individual in the crowd if he would unmask.

After he had been flogged, he was warned to be still until all left. Mills said that a few minutes later hes aw the men disrobing, near one of the cars and that he recognized Dr. Yarbrough and J. E. Bloodworth. He said he saw Dr. Yarbrough pass in front of one of the cars which had the lights on.

Mills was asked what happened to his business between January and November 1922. The defense objected and Solicitor Moore said that he proposed to show a conspiracy against Mills lasting over a period of Mills Mills lasting of a period of months, to connect Dr. Yarbrough, as he put it, with everything that happened to this witness while he lived in Macon." Judge Gunn overruled the defense objection.

Mills then stated that later a man came to his office and represented himself as a detective from Governor Hardwick's office and offered to aid in running down the floggers.

Mills testified that he wrote a letter to Governor Hardwick, but never received an answer.

Asked if he called Governor Hardwick on the telephone after he failed to receive a reply, Mills answered: "Yes."

Letter Is Identified.

A letter that Mr. Mills said was the one he wrote to Governor Hardwick was shown to him and identified but was not read. Mills said attorney Sinclair wrote the letter for him and he mailed it in a box in the Bibb Building.

He said that a few days later he was called upon by a man who said he was from Governor Hardwick's office, giving his name as Payne. At this point the solicitor asked: "have you seen this man since?"

"Yes", Mills replied. "I saw him yesterday."

"Who is he?"

"His name is Durkee, I believe."

J. P. Durkee, organizer for the Ku Klux Klan in Macon, was arrested yesterday on a charge of rioting and assault in connection with the attack on Mills.

Mills said he asked the man who called on him for his credentials. The man, he said, showed him a badge under his coat.

"What happened to you after you talked to Durkee or Payne?" the witness was asked.

"On the next Thursday or Friday I was taken out again," was the reply.

At this point the direct examination was closed.

Cross Examined.

Attorney Ross for the defense opened the cross examination by asking Mr. Mills about the letter he had identified.

Asked by the defense how the men who flogged him were dressed, Mr. Mills said they wore long black robes and masks.

"Were the men who took you out of the car masked?" Mr. Ross asked.

"Yes," replied Mills.

"Was the tall man in the car with you masked?"

"No."

Mills said he went to Barnesville, Ga., the next day to see a Postal Clerk.

Gives Name of Clerk.

Pressed for the name of this clerk, Mills asked Judge Gunn:

"Do I have to tell his name?"

"Yes, go ahead and tell it," the Judge replied.

"Well it was Middlebrooks," Mills said.

MORE DIXONS WANTED.

The attack upon the Georgia Training School for Boys near Milledgeville by an unmasked mob of midnight riders was a most atrocious crime, for it not only menaced the safety of a hundred wards of the state enlisted there, but the terrorizing could have resulted in most serious riot and bloodshed.

That the mob demanded the delivery of a negro man and woman employed there, for the administration of a thrashing only, does not relieve the heinousness of the offense, nor does it suggest any lessening of the efforts to bring the guilty parties to justice.

Georgia has been subjected to more bad advertising by the terrorizing methods of irresponsible groups of so-called "regulators" than the constructive actions of its overwhelming majority of upstanding, law-abiding citizens can overcome in a generation, and there is no rhyme or reason in temporizing with this element.

Atlanta Ga. 8-10-23

Governor Walker is to be commended for acting promptly in calling upon Sheriff Terry, of Baldwin, to suppress any further attempt to storm this institution at all costs, and from reports the officer and a squad of deputies are on the job prepared not only to repel any unfriendly trespass upon the state property but to protect the two negroes at the points of rifles.

In this particular case no offense is named against the two negroes sought, and no warrants for their arrest have been issued to indicate any alleged violations of law. This makes the situation even more reprehensible, and more acutely demanding the arrests of the terrorists.

Atlanta Ga.

"Night riders" who seek to "regulate" community matters, whether of a racial or any other nature, by mob violence, are the most dangerous and dreaded of criminals, for they not only terrorize the people generally, but strike at the fundamentals of government and the protection of society by orderly processes of law.

Such terrorists need just such examples of resistance as that recently displayed by Sheriff Merritt Dixon, of Chatham county, when he stood off a mob of would-be lynchers, in protecting the life a prisoner of his charged with capital offense. For the honor of the state and the integrity of its laws he threw himself between the mob and his prisoner and told the terrorists that he would uphold the law if it meant the sacrificing of his own life. It was a brave, courageous thing to do, but the only course of a patriotic officer who put duty before self.

The mob did not take the prisoner, and as an illustration of the utter uselessness of mob violence in this day of orderly court procedure, the prisoner has since been tried, adjudged guilty and hanged for his crime. Society was avenged, and the honor of the state maintained.

The same kind of spirit should be shown in Baldwin and everywhere else where the threatening force of the mob shows itself.

Civil Trials Set Aside While the Court Prepares to Judge Flogging Evidence.

9-19-23

By International News Service.

MACON, Ga., Sept. 18.—All civil cases scheduled to come up in the municipal court here next Monday have been set aside and preparations today were under way to complete the hearing of flogging cases, according to an announcement made by the court clerk, Charles Smith.

This will mark the closing chapter of Macon flogging trials, it was said, although none of the court authorities were willing to give an estimate of the time it will take to complete all of the hearings.

The following cases are scheduled to be called:

S. R. Hudson, violating motor vehicle law, assault and battery, and being intoxicated on a public highway. C. R. Hudson, intoxicated on public highway. J. C. Hudson, intoxicated on public highway. S. R. Hudson, assault and battery, two cases. J. C. Hudson, assault and battery, two cases. J. F. Alexander carrying firearms, pointing a weapon at another, asasult and battery. W. F. Delamar, rioting and assault and battery. C. A. Yarbrough, assault and battery. J. E. Patrick, assault and battery and rioting. J. E. Bloodworth, assault and battery. C. A. Parbrough, pointing a weapon at another, rioting. J. P. Durkee, rioting and assault and battery.

Judge Will Gun refused to say which of the many cases will be called first. Each of the men held for more than one charge will be forced to face trial for every one, it was said

Investigation of Conference of Klansmen at Abandoned House Near Milledgeville, Ga., Will be Followed by Warrants, is Statement of Officers; Officer Promises Information

MACON, GA., Sept. 7.—Communications connecting Macon and Milledgeville members of the Ku Klux Klan with two invasions of the state training school for boys last month for the purpose of kidnapping two negro attendants have been obtained in an investigation of a conference of Klansmen at an abandoned house ten miles from here last Monday, county authorities announced here late today.

County authorities announced that warrants would be taken out immediately for several additional men in connection with flogging cases here. Roy W. Moore, city court solicitor, said he expected that more than half a dozen men would be arrested.

The nature of the information obtained by the officers at work on the case was not disclosed by the authorities, further than the alleged establishment of a connecting link in the activities of members of the Klan, it was said.

Montgomery Ala

M. O. Dunning, chief of staff of the Georgia Ku Klux Klan, notified county authorities here he was on his way from Milledgeville to Macon with information that may be of value to the investigators. He is scheduled to arrive here tonight.

Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, whom police say is a local Klan official and who has been charged with being "the whipping boss of Macon," and six other men are scheduled to go on trial here next week in connection with flogging cases.

Solicitor Moore said tongiht the state "had an inexhaustible supply of testimony which will be presented at the trials of the accused men."

Lengthy conferences were held by court officials and special investigators all producing information for the state in the prosecution of these cases, Mr. Moore announced.

The solicitor declared investigators at work on the Klan angle of the floggings uncovered information at the meeting in the abandoned house last Monday, which he said is alleged to connect the Macon flogging cases with the invasion of the state training school for boys.

New Arrests Expected

Five more arrests, possibly more, continued Mr. Moore, will be made tomorrow. Accusations have been made out in some of the cases, he added.

Important witnesses for the state came in tonight, the solicitor said, and the arrests scheduled for tonight were held up until conference with these witnesses may be completed. In addition to the new arrests more charges are to be made against some of those under arrest.

Involves Klan

In concluding his statement, Mr. Moore confirmed the statement made last night by Charles H. Garrett, solicitor general, that members of the local Klan are deeply involved in flogings, and that there was "organized activity" in the flogging operations.

The raids made on the state training school for boys followed the removal of J. J. Nolan, farm foreman of the instiution by Mrs. Orian Manson, superintendent.

The raiders demanded Tom and Mary Thomas, negro attendans and whipped Jim Douglas, negro, in an effort to locate the two. One negro inmate committed suicide during the raiding, it was said.

Machine guns were installed at the institution to prevent further raiding and they are still in service. Meanwhile the arrest of Nolan was made and his case is still pending.

Rhodes McPhail Charges Letter of Macon Man to Governor Asking Protection ~~Was~~ Waylaid in Mails

SAYS REPRESENTATIVE IN CITY AS CAMOUFLAGE

9/11/23

MACON, GA., Sept. 10.—Charges that a personal report on the second flogging of R. F. Mills, who was whipped on January 13 and November 4, 1922, was made to imperial headuarters of the Ku Klux Klan by a representative of the Macon klan, are made in statements issued by Rhodes McPhail, said formerly to have been connected with the klan as a publicity writer, which will be published by the Macon Telegraph here tomorrow morning.

It also is charged by the former klansman that letters written by Mills to Governor Hardwick, asking for protection never reached the governor.

Mr. McPhail is quoted as charging that M. O. Dunning, chief of staff for the realm of Georgia, who is here with two klan detectives, openly working with county officials in running down the floggers, "is in Macon as chief spokesman for H. W. Evans, present imperial wizard of the klan," and to "save the klan's hide."

Deserves Sympathy.

"I don't know anything about several of the more recent floggings in Macon, but I do know that R. F. Mills deserves every assistance for obtaining justice that the courts can possibly give him," the article quotes Mr. McPhail as saying, "his case was one of the most atrocious I ever heard of."

"Mills was flogged for the second time by the Klan one night in November, 1922. The next morning a representative of he Macon klan came to Atlanta to report the incident to headquarters. He had evidently handled the matter pretty well because the usual denial of responsibility or knowledge of the matter was issued and the usual reward for apprehension of the floggers was offered.

"It seemed that Mills' life had been made so miserable since his first flogging that he had his lawyer write Governor Hardwick an appeal for protection. A few days later a stranger called on him, and said he was from the governor's office and assured him he would be protected. It was a night or two after this that Mills was given the second flogging. He then communicated with Governor Hardwick by telephone and was told by the chief executive that he had never heard of his case until that moment and that no representative from his office had been sent to see him."

Mr. McPhail in his statement charges that the letter disappeared before it reached the state house mail sack. "My informant," says the statement, "at this juncture highly commended two mail distributing clerks and one inspector for their 'faithfulness'."

The article then goes on to state that Mills was flogged after Dr. W. H. Evans became imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan and charges that Dr. Evans "achieved fame among Texas floggers when he was head of the Dallas klan."

Charges Denied.

Mr. McPhail is not now connected with the Ku Klux Klan.

Mr. Dunning, when asked about the McPhail charges, branded them as "false," and asserted that McPhail was "sore about being fired." He declared that the charges were made merely to "muddy the water."

J. F. ALEXANDER HELD IN JAIL WITHOUT BOND

9-1-23

Effort Is Made to Obtain Bond for Three Hudson Brothers Held on Flogging Charge.

Macon, Ga., August 31.—Ollie M. Perry, flogged by a gang of unmasked men on the night of August 5, walked into a little fruit stand on Cotton avenue and positively identified the proprietor, J. F. Alexander, as one of the men who kidnaped him.

Three warrants, charging Alexander with pointing a pistol at another, flogging and with carrying a pistol concealed and without a license, were immediately issued in municipal court, and served on the accused man.

Alexander tonight is being held in the Bibb county jail without bond. Deputies said that Alexander's only remark, some time after his arrest, was "you've got the wrong man."

Perry told the sheriff and his deputies after the whipping that there was one man in the party he would be able to identify if he ever saw him again. Perry's eyes met Alexander's eyes in the fruit stand today. Not a word passed between them, but to Sheriff Hicks, a few minutes later, Perry said:

"There's the man."

According to Perry's story, as told by the sheriff, Alexander headed the gang that rushed into his store on August 9, Alexander covering him with a pistol, while another man handcuffed him. Perry then was dragged to the door where a sack was thrust over his head and he was hauled away in an automobile and whipped almost to death.

Important developments are expected during the night, it was indicated by the activities of deputies following the arrest.

Efforts were being made to obtain bond for the three Hudsons also held in connection with floggings.

BELL BOY WHIPPED

Accused Of Serving As Hotel Clerk

Becaused they claimed he was serving in the capacity of a clerk at the Phoenix Hotel, Waycross, Ga., John Carter, 22, a bellman, was taken from his home by three men who claimed they were members of the Ku Klux Klan, thrown into a waiting automobile and carried about fifteen miles in to the country, where they beat him almost into insensibility.

It seems that Carter, who is from Fort Wayne, Ind., and a very intelligent young man, had been working at the hotel for about five months as bellman. The hotel management, observing his unusual intelligence in matters pertaining to office work, allowed Carter to serve both as bellman and clerk after the white clerk left every night. This, apparently, was displeasing to some of the patrons of the hotel and they decided to get rid of Carter and he was thus dragged out of his house Monday night about 11 o'clock by the three white-robed men and seriously man-handled.

Before the party reached the scene on the road where they were to show Carter how "white men treat a Negro who served in the capacity of a white man," they beat him with their fists and blackjacks. Upon arrival at the fifteen mile post, they took the young man out of the car, beat him, tied his hands and feet together and then gathered some branches and prepared to make ready for a fire in which they threatened to burn him. He begged not to be burnt and upon his promise to leave Waycross they decided not to apply the match to him, warning him never again to take a "white man's job." They jumped into their machine and left the young man in the woods. He managed to get back to Waycross and left on the first train. His head bears several scars from the blackjacks which the three men used on him and his body is covered with whelps from the sticks. Another indisputable reason why so many Negroes are leaving the South.

KAMELIA HOLDS PUBLIC MEETING

Colonel Simmons Tells Audience of 1,500 That Organization Has More Than 20,000 Members.

Between 20,000 and 30,000 American women have already entered the ranks of the Kamelia, the organization for American women founded less than two months ago, declared Colonel William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, in his address Sunday afternoon to an audience of 1,500 persons at the auditorium.

The throng gathered to participate in a memorial service sponsored by Emma C. Sanson court of the Kamelia of Atlanta in honor of the confederate heroine for whom the local court is named.

Similar to Klan.

In his address Colonel Simmons explained the motives that prompted the formation of the Kamelia and declared that its mission and principles are similar to those of the Ku Klux Klan.

He emphasized the fact that the Kamelia is not an auxiliary of the klan, declaring that the womanhood of America has come to play such an important part in the nation's affairs that they deserve an organization of their own. There is no official connection between the Kamelia and the klan, he said, but stated that the Kamelia will operate as a companion order to the klan.

Twelve members of the local court attended the services garbed in white robes and hoods. The robes bore a large red "K."

Miss Grace Jones, former president of the White American Protestant Study club, of Oklahoma, which constituted the nucleus of the Kamelia, was introduced to the audience as the "reina" of the Kamelia.

Made Nucleus of Order.

Miss Jones reviewed the activities of the Oklahoma organization. She said that when the members heard that the Kamelia had been formally launched by Colonel Simmons, the organization voted to enter the latter body, and later was accepted and recognized by Colonel Simmons as the nucleus on which the national order is being built.

Dr. W. E. Thompson, former United States commissioner to the Balkans, presided. After the audience sang America and had been led in prayer by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd of the Ku Klux Klan, Dr. Thompson paid a brief tribute to Emma Sanson, recounting the incident in which she was the heroine.

According to history, it was stated, the cavalrymen of General Nathan B. Forrest were in dire peril when the young woman, who lived near Gadsden, Ala., acted as guide to the horsemen until they were out of danger.

Later, Dr. Ridley, in an address on the klan and the Kamelia, eulogized the women of the confederacy and praised them for their conduct during the reconstruction period.

Judge H. T. Knight, a native Georgian who has resided in Oklahoma for some time, was presented by Dr. Thompson as the executive secretary of the Kamelia. He spoke briefly, predicting that the Kamelia will meet with phenomenal success in its undertakings. He said that he has returned to make his permanent residence in Georgia.

KLAN AUTHORITY PLACED IN BODY

Executive Council of Klan Is Supreme, Rules Judge E. D. Thomas at the Hearing.

Placing executive authority in the imperial kloncilium, or executive council of 17 members, Judge E. D. Thomas, in Fulton superior court, Monday signed an order of settlement agreed upon between the parties, in the recent Knights of the Ku Klux Klan litigation.

The court held that H. W. Evans, the imperial wizard, is the chief executive of the organization, but that his acts are subservient to a two-thirds vote of the kloncilium.

Simmons Is Head.

William Joseph Simmons, founder of the organization, is legally its emperor, and as such will receive a salary of $1,000 per month for the remainder of his life, it was decreed.

In consideration of the remuneration, Colonel Simmons will transfer title to all copyrights held by him, on rituals, names, parapernalia, etc., to the order, the court held.

Those are the principal stipulations in the agreement reached by the litigants, which Monday became the order of the court. The terms are said to be satisfactory to all parties concerned.

The order of settlement was prepared by attorneys representing both sides in the recent controversy over control of the Ku Klux Klan. Colonel Simmons was represented by the law firm of Little, Powe, Smith & Goldstein, and Attorneys Ben H. Sullivan and J. V. Poole. Acting for Imperial Wizard Evans were the law firm of Etheridge, Sams & Etheridge, the law firm of Branch & Howard, and the law firm of Randolph & Parker.

Original Charter Upheld.

It was held that the original charter granted in 1916 by Fulton superior court, is the supreme law of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and that no lawful amendment has been made to it. Next in authority is the constitution and by-laws adopted by the klonvocation in 1922, except insofar as the constitution is inconsistent with the charter, the court held.

SIMMONS ASSAILS IMPERIAL WIZARD OF KU KLUX KLAN

Gives Out Statement Attacking Him for Alleged Interference With the Growth of the Kamelia.

Colonel William J. Simmons, founder and emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and founder of the Kamelia, a woman's organization, in a statement given out Saturday night, charged that Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, received more than $100,000 in fees within a period of six months.

Colonel Simmons' charge was made following a series of reports that klan leaders in Arkansas are assailing the Kamelia, undertaking to arrest growth of the order in that state. J. A. Comer, the present grand dragon of the realm of Arkansas, and Dr. Evans have been in collusion to discredit the Kamelia and to establish under their supervision an organization of American women under similar conditions, Colonel Simmons claims, according to reports he has received from that state.

Evans Out of City.

Dr. Evans could not be located Saturday night for a statement. It was said at his home that he was out of the city on an indefinite visit. Paul S. Etheredge, imperial klonsel for the klan and a member of the kloncilium, or inner governing body of the order, when shown a copy of the statement by Colonel Simmons, branded all of the charges as false.

"The charge has been made through the press of the country," said Colonel Simmons, "that leaders of the Kamelia are 'fee grabbers,' and are seeking profits for their own purses. This charge comes with poor grace from Hiram Wesley Evans and J. A. Comer. To my knowledge, the only men who have sought to subvert the order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to the purpose of enriching themselves are Evans and his associates, with whom he has divided fees which should have gone into the organization's treasury.

"A recent audit made by Ernst & Ernst will show that Evans, during a period of six months, received in fees a sum of money largely in excess of $100,000, and that this money was deposited to his personal credit and devoted to his own use.

$15,000 a Year Salary.

"During this period he was receiving, as imperial wizard, $15,000 per annum in salary, and was charging to the order every solitary item of his living expenses, including house rent, grocery bills, light and fuel bills and automobile maintenance.

Colonel Simmons continues his charges, not confining them to alleged practices of members of the klan in Arkansas, but taking in Illinois, as follows:

"In addition to the foregoing, there is abundant evidence to establish beyond the shadow of a doubt that Evans was splitting fees with his personal representative in the state of Illinois, who holds a position similar to that of Comer in Arkansas.

"Evans and Comer have no more right to interfere with the orderly development of the Kamelia than they have the right to interfere with the orderly processes of a woman's missionary society or with the Order of the Eastern Star. As officers of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, they are explicitly prohibited by contract and decree of court from either favoring or opposing a women's organization of any description. Neither of them would dare issue edicts in violation of contract and in contempt of court, if he were within the jurisdiction of the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia."

Simmons' Statement.

Colonel Simmons' statement follows:

"Information has come to me through the public press as well as by telegraphic and telephonic communications that conspicuous klan leaders in the state of Arkansas are assailing the Kamelia undertaking to arrest the growth of the order in that state. J. A. Comer for the time being grand dragon for the realm of Arkansas, and H. W. Evans, in the meantime imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, are represented as being in collusion to discredit the Kamelia and to establish under their supervision and control an organization of American women.

"The charge has been made and disseminated through the press that the leaders in the Kamelia are "fee grabbers" and are seeking their own personal ends and profits. This charge comes with poor grace from Hiram Wesley Evans and his confederate, J. A. Comer. To my knowledge, the only men who have sought to subvert the order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to the purpose of enriching themselves is Evans and his associates with whom he has divided fees coming through the regular channels of the order and which fees should have gone to the treasury of the order.

"A recent audit of Ernst & Ernst will show that Hiram Wesley Evans during a period of six months received in fees a sum of money largely in excess of one hundred thousand dollars and that this sum of money was deposited to his personal credit and appropriated to his own use. During this period he was receiving as imperial wizard, $15,000 per year in salary and was charging to the order every solitary item of his living expenses, including house rent, grocery bills, light and fuel bills and automobile upkeep and gas.

"In addition to the foregoing, there is abundant evidence to establish beyond the shadow of a doubt that Evans was splitting the fees with his personal representatives in the state of Illinois, who holds and occupies official position similar to that of J. A. Comer in Arkansas.

No Right to Interfere.

"Evans and Comer have no more right to interfere with the orderly development of the Kamelia than they have the right to interfere with the orderly processes of a woman's missionary society or with the Order of the Eastern Star. They, as officers of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, are explicitly inhibited by contract and by court decree from either favoring or opposing a woman's organization of any description whatsoever. Neither of them would dare issue edicts in violation of contract and in contempt of court if he were within the jurisdiction of the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia.

"The Kamelia cut athwart the plans of Evans and his confederates to establish by themselves and for themselves a woman's organization to be exploited as they have exploited the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. This order of patriotic American women, founded by myself is thoroughly safeguarded. There is no man and no combination of men who can use the organization for selfish, sordid or ulterior purposes. The foundation of the order was accomplished just 24 hours before Evans and his associates had planned to project a woman's organization under their domination. It is high time in the interest of all parties concerned for the passion and the chagrin of the disappointed promoters to subside.

"The Kamelia is a patriotic, benevolent order, composed of white, native-born American women of the Protestant faith. They are dedicating themselves to the preservation of Americanism and consecrating themselves to the tenets of Christianity. To assail them is to attack the principles embodied in the constitution of the United States and the precepts of service of sacrifice enunciated by Jesus Christ.

"Vehement and designing men are as impotent before this mighty movement of American women as are 'sand fiddlers' before the rush and sweep of the ocean's mighty tide.

"To the devoted women of the nation I wish to say that from Kansas, Missouri, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Maryland, Delaware, New York, New Jersey, Maine and even from Arkansas, applications for membership in the order of Kamelia are coming so rapidly that our field forces are at present inadequate to receive them. Within a short space of time, the order in its independence and unrelated with any kindred organization and undeterred by any hostile combination will be established in every state in the union and shall become the most powerful organization for the preservation of American institutions and American ideals on the American continent.

"WILLIAM JOSEPH SIMMONS,
"El Magus, the Kamelia."

Etheridge Makes Answer.

Paul S. Etheredge, chief attorney for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a member of the Imperial Kloncilium or governing board of the order, and a member of the board of arbitration which recently framed the agreement under which the court order ending litigation in klan matters was based upon being acquainted with the details of the statement issued by W. J. Simmons, said:

"The charges made by Colonel Simmons in his statement are absolutely false from beginning to end.

"However, in the light of the doings, actions and utterances of Colonel Simmons and his friends, including W. E. Thompson, during the past six weeks, nothing that the colonel could say or do would occasion any great amount of surprise to those who are in a position to know the facts.

"I do not consider that this matter is worthy of being dignified by discussion in further detail."

REV. ROY E. DAVIS, KU KLUX LEADER, OPENS REVIVAL

Fitzgerald, Ga., June 3.—(Special.) Rev. Roy E. Davis opened revival meetings at Kennedy Memorial Baptist church here today. He is president of the Farmers' Union of Georgia and the leader of the klan activities in Lowndes county, which are attracting just now the entire state's attention. He is accompanied here by J. M. McDonald, who was recently the object of a personal encounter with aldosta citizens. The revival services are to continue the entire week, and have been extensively advertised throughout this county.

SUPERIOR COURT TAKES CONTROL OF AFFAIRS AND FUNDS OF KU KLUX

June 9 Set for Hearing Motion on Appointment of Receiver; Petition Charges Gross Mismanagement of Moneys of Order by Imperial Wizard and His Associates

ATLANTA, GA., May 31.—The Fulton county superior court today assumed temporary control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan ordered temporary distributance of the expenditure of its funds and set June 9 to hear a motion for the appointment of a receiver for the order.

Atlanta Constitution 5-31-23

This action followed filing of a petition by David M. Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and others alleged gross mismanagement of the klan's funds by Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans and his associates, charged that he and Emporer Joseph Simmons had turned the klan into a "personal machine for the enrichment and personal aggrandizement" of themselves, and declared that the organization was breaking up through threats of "some of the realms" to secede and establish independent orders.

The petition alleged also that Imperial Wizard Evans had called a meeting in Washington, D. C., tomorrow and Saturday "of his personal henchmen throughout the invisible empire. It was charged that Dr. Evans and others intended to spend between $100,000 and $150,000 of the klan's funds to pay the expenses of the Washington meeting. They were temporarily enjoined from such expenditure by order of the court.

The employes of the Imperial Place, as the general headquarters of the klan on Peachtree road in this city is called, said on being informed of the suit that all of the imperial officers were in Washington. Imperial Wizard Evans, Emporer Simmons and other high officials of the klan were said to have departed for Washington before the court action began.

The imperial kloncilium appointed by Imperial Wizard Evans in April were named defendants in the petition for a receiver, together with certain employes of the imperial palace.. One of the members of the kloncilium, according to the petition, is Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor who is to carve the Confederate memorial on the face of Stone Mountain. The membership of this body, the petition stated are, H. W. Evans, William Joseph Simmons, Fred L. Savage, H. E. Ramsey, H. C. Montgomery, Brown Harwood, Gutzon Borglum, P. S. Ethridge, E. H. Sullivan, N. B. Forrest, C. A. Ridley, all of Atlanta; T. J. Shirley, of Birmingham; A. Booth, New Orleans; D. C. Stephenson, Columbus, Ohio; Charles J. Orbison of Indianapolis; J. A. Comer, Little Rock; Henry A. Grady, Clinton, N. C.; and Debarr of Oklahoma City, Okla. These with Tom Akers, T. J. McKinnon and N. N. Furney of Atlanta, constituted the defendants.

The action was brought by David M. Rittenhouse, Frank D. Collins, Robert A. Bradshaw, William Goudie, R. Oaks and B. F. Graham of Philadelphia; John Jefferies, New York; G. H. Lewis, J. D. Norris and John D. McDonald of Little Rock; F. C. Dugan, George C. Alley and George Perry of Chattanooga, Tenn.; R. O. Dunning, Columbia, S. C.; M. O. Dunning of Sanford, Fla.; Lee Rogers, Charleston, S. C., and T. C. Smith of Atlanta. They described themselves as members in good standing of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, "and occupy in law as such toward said corporation the relation of stock holders."

There are one million, five hundred thousand members of the klan, with branches in every state in the union, the petition stated, adding that the supreme legislative body of the "invisible empire" is known as the Klonvocation, composed of the imperial officers, grand dragons, great titans and such other delegates as may be selected to represent the provinces and klans.

The supreme judicial body, it was stated, is the imperial kloncilium. It was further stated that the receipts of the order in November, 1922, over and above the cost of propaganda was one million dollars a year, in addition to which each chartered klan pays annually a per capita tax on each of its members of $1.80 which aggregated for the year of 1922 the sum of nine hundred thousand dollars. They declared these funds were in addition to the property and paraphernalia including among other things flags, banners, uniforms, costumes, literature, jewelry, newspapers and newspaper plants and other items of real and personal property "of great value."

In the month of November last, the petition said, H. W. Evans and William Joseph Simmons "together with other confederates, conceived and put "into operation a scheme to pervert said corporation from its original and worthy and laudable design and purpose into a personal machine for the enrichment and personal aggrandizement of said defendants. In pursant of said scheme they pretended and attempted, without authority, to change radically the constitution and laws of said corporation. They created, without authority from any source, and in violation of the fundamental law of said corporation, as contained in its character, an additional office to be known as emperor of the invisible empire, in which office the said William Joseph Simmons was illegally installed, and the said H. W. Evans was placed in the position of imperial wizard. Said Evans and Simmons were not even duly elected to the said offices, in accordance with the laws providing for the election of officers of said corporation, in that they were nt selected by secret ballot, as required by the laws of said corporation.

KLAN IS GRANTED PERMIT TO PARADE BY MACON COUNCIL

Macon, Ga., May 30.—City council last night overruled the protests of Mayor Luther Williams and granted permission to the local Ku Klux Klan to parade through the streets of Macon, June 19.

Atlanta Constitution 5-31-23

The mayor objected on the ground that he did not believe in masked men appearing on the streets. The petition as granted will allow the organization to parade in full regalia.

Afterwards they will stage a ceremonial at Central City park.

BORGLUM A KLUXER AND YET A CATHOLIC

Kloncilium Member Lined Klan Up for Memorial.

Atlanta Constitution

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 29.—Some official of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan looked in 'Whose Who in America' today and discovered that Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor who carving a Confederate memorial on Stone Mountain, near here, is a member of the Catholic Church.

Inasmuch as Borglum served for months as a member of the imperial kloncilium, or governing body of the klan, the discovery started a real racket, both within the klan and on the outside.

Ku Klux officials said they were surprised and mortified to learn that a Catholic had been a member of their inner circles. It was officially announced that Borglum did not stand for re-election to the kloncilium at the last election, although he has continued to take an active part in Ku Klux activities and has succeeded in lining up the klan almost solidly behind the memorial project, on which two millions dollars will be raised and expended partly at his discretion.

Memphis Press

Prominent Atlanta Catholics expressed the belief that Borglum would be quickly excommunicated, unless he has already been dropped from the church or has voluntarily retired. Borglum is in Stamford, Conn., on a visit and interesting developments are expected on his return here next week.

Aug. 30-1923

Sponsors of the memorial fear that klan opposition to the project will develop as a result of the discovery and the impression is general that the Catholics and the kluxers will make it hot for Borglum when he returns.

The sculptors last important work in the klan was during the recent breach between William Joseph Simmons, emperor, and Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard. He served on a board of arbiters which sought to compose the differences between the leaders of the rival factions.

While Klux officials are scurrying about trying to see what steps to take in the situation Atlanta generally is taking the revelation as a good joke on the klan.

"Cop" Finds Liquor in Car of Former Pastor, He Declares.

New Orleans,

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 17.—The Rev. Caleb Ridley, known as the imperial kludd of the Ku Klux Klan, and former pastor of an Atlanta church, was arrested here late today by the police on a charge of being drunk and operating an automobile. The arrest was made by Motorcycle Officer Shumate, who said that in the machine driven by Dr. Ridley were two small bottles of whisky.

In police station Dr. Ridley stated he had driven out into the country when he was accosted by a man who offered to give him some whisky. He said he accepted the whisky and before starting to town he took a drink. 10-18-23

Officer Shumate, who made the arrest, said he saw the automobile zigzagging down Peach Tree street, one of the main thoroughfares, and stopped it, and finding Dr. Ridley apparently under the influence of liquor arrested him. Dr. Ridley, the officer said, admitted having more liquor in the automobile and produced two small bottles.

White Man A Born Leader, Says Simmons

Pittsburgh Courier

10-20-23

ATLANTA, Oct. 18.—(By A. N. P.)—Roscoe Conklin Simmons, the noted orator, admitted here in a speech last week that the white man was the natural ledaer in the world today and advised the colored people to fall in line and help him to glory in that leadership. "Your duty rests in keeping the white man in the lead," he declared to the large audience of colored and white people, who had gathered to hear the speech. Ex-Governor Hugh M. Dorsey said the speech was the greatest he had ever heard fall from the lips of a colored man.

A combined choir of 200 voices recruited from the colored churches furnished music for the meeting, which was held for the benefit of Big Bethel A. M. E. Church, which was destroyed by fire last spring. It was one of the largest gatherings seen in Atlanta this year.

White Man Loses Job Leads Gang To Destroy State Institution.

The Times-Star

(Preston News Service)

MILLEDGEVILLE, GA., Aug. 17—Following two raids on the Georgia Training School by masked bands Governor Walker has ordered guards placed at the institution here. It is said that the raiders were seeking Thomas Thomas and his wife, who are in charge of the Negro department of the institution. It is said that the masked marauders could not find Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and finally they came across a Negro said to be a brother of Thomas and severely whipped him.

According to Mrs. Orain Manson, superintendent of the institution, said that one of the leaders of the raiding party was a former employee of the school. She also said that she could see no reason why there should exist any reason to molest Mr. and Mrs. Thomas or any of the other Negro attendants. All of the Negroes connected with the institution are loved and respected by all the inmates, both white and colored.

QUICK VERDICT IN FLOGGING EXPECTED

Dr. Yarbrough Makes Statement to Jury and Testimony Ends.

Atlanta Georgian

MACON, Ga., Oct. 23.—Defense for Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, on trial for the second time on charges of rioting in connection with the flogging of W. O. Barnett, closed its case at 3:30 this afternoon and the defendant read a short statement in which he said that he was a member of the Ku-Klux Klan and in which he denied having any part in the alleged whippings which have taken place in Macon in the past two years. 10-23-23

Solicitor Roy Moore began the argument for the state at 4 o'clock, and will speak for 45 minutes. He was followed by W. A. McCelan for the defence. McCellan was followed by John P. Ross, chief counsell for the defense, and the Solicitor spoke last for the state. Each side was allowed one and a halh hours.

The jury was charged about 6:30.

The state rested its case shortly before noon, and the defense began calling character witnesses in an effort to impeach the testimony of Barnett, principal witness for the prosecution and alleged victim of the whipping gang.

No startling evidence was revealed Monday. Barnett told how he was taken out and whipped, and that he recognized Dr. Yarbrough as the leader of the flogging gang. His story was identical with the one he gave on the stand in the September trial of Yarbrough.

On one occasion Monday John P. Ross, chief counsel for the defendant, got Barnett to make statements as to the date he was whipped, and conflicts were noted in some of the evidence. Barnett later retracted these statements, saying that he was not positive as to the date.

Small crowds attended the afternoon session Monday, while few people were in the court room at the beginning of the second day's proceedings. Yarbrough continues to appear confident that he will be acquitted.

Announcement was made by Judge Will Gunn to the effect that the trial of J. F. Alexander, under $6,000 bond on charges of rioting in connection with flogging episodes of the past ten months, will be carried over to the December term of court.

Judge Gunn stated that he had tried to get Judge Holmes Johnson, of Gray, to president, but Judge Johnson is away on a vacation. The Alexander case was to come up this week, but had to be postponed on account of Judge Gunn, who is a distant relative of Alexander, being unable to obtain another judge to preside over the trial.

Klan Wizard Shocked by Coburn Tragedy—Says Order Is Solid as Stone Mountain.

11-17-23

The first public utterance by Dr. Hiram W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Ku-Klux Klan, since the slaying a week ago Monday of Capt. W. S. Coburn, Klan attorney, by Philip Fox, editor of a Ku-Klux Klan publication, was made to newspapermen at the Imperial Palace in Peachtree Road Tuesday. Following is the text of the statement:

"I was shocked to learn of the death of Captain Coburn while in New York.

"Immediately upon completing my speaking engagements already announced, I hastened to Atlanta.

"I am not in possession of the facts which brought about the tragedy.

"The request for a peace warrant against me was promptly dismissed by Judge Hathcock upon my voluntary appearance in his court this morning.

"No basis of fact for its issuance was sponsored by the complainant.

"Colonel Simmons' statement that the Klan is 'on the rocks' could only mean that it is resting spiritually on the 'rock of ages' in all that that implies and financially upon the 'rock of solidity,' as solid as Stone Mountain."

NO MARTIAL LAW IN MACON REQUESTED

The Montgomery Ala. Advertiser 8-20-23

Adjutant General of Georgia Asks Governor Not to Act on Floggings

MACON, GA., Aug. 19.—Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, after a conference with local police authorities, the sheriff and General H. D. Russell, commander of the Georgia National guard, left for Atlanta late today, and will recommen for Governor Walker that there be no martial law in Macon at this time, growing out of flogging conditions.

Adjutant General was ordered to Macon last night by the governor after police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers and J. B. Hartley, a World war veteran, reported to the police he had been flogged by a gang of men. The Hartley flogging was the last of about a score of whippings reported to the police during the last ten days.

No arrests were reported in Hartley case today. Rewards totaling $2,100 have been offered by the state and county for the arrest and conviction of the "floggers," and appeals will be made this week to all civic clubs in Macon to increase the rewards.

The adjutant general said he would issue a statement on the Macon mob situation after he reported to the governor. City and county officers in conference late today decided to round up all automobiles not bearing state license tags. Kidnapers' automobiles have borne no tags.

Appeals were made to citizens to report all kidnapings promptly. More secret work will be done in both departments, it was stated, to combat the secret activities of the kidnaping gangs.

The only event of the day that brought out the "police anti-flogging" squad was an attempt to hold up and rob a United States mail truck between the terminal station and the postoffice.

The police squad was organized recently to work exclusively on flogging cases.

Governor Walker declared here early tonight he was in communication with Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, who had been sent to Macon to investigate flogging cases for the purpose, if necessary of declaring martial law there. The military commander reported the situation quiet in Macon and that he did not believe at this time martial law is not needed, the governor said.

MACON, GA., Aug. 19.—The first gang of alleged kidnapers and floggers which have been terrorizing Macon for the last six months was captured tonight by Sheriff officers. Three white men, brothers, S. R. Hudson, C. F. Hudson and J. C. Hudson, were taken to jail tonight after they had been captured, officers said, while in the act of flogging two negroese.

The capture of the trio is said to be due to the daring work of a negro, Emory Roberts, whom the gang tried to pull from an automobile for the purpose of whipping.

Another negro was whipepd by the same gang a few minutes before, it was stated.

When one of the men jumped onto the running board of the negro's automobile and commanded him to stop, the negro stepped on the gas and left the two brothers at the road side. The white man in the car whistled for his brothers to join him, but before they could do so the big automobile was plunged into an embankment.

Persons passing the scene in other cars phoned the sheriff's office and immediately twenty men were rushing to the scene in automobiles and motorcycles. The whole city and county anti-flogging squad was on the way.

Three miles out from the city the sheriff's force claim to have come upon the members of the gang, struggling with the negro. Farther back on the same road was an untagged seven-passenger automobile, in which the brothers were said to have used. Still further back was a coupe which also is said to have been used by the same gang.

There may have been others in the whipping party of tonight. The authorities are still investigating.

In the tonneau of the larger car the sheriff's deputies found three leather masks and one cloth mask. Another mask was said to have been worn by one of the Hudsons as he jumped onto the running board of the negro's machine.

There was a piece of heavy felt, which was wet, and which the sheriff's deputies said was for use as a gag.

There also was a small sledge hammer and several revolvers.

The sheriff's force reported that the Hudsons had given them considerable trouble in recent years.

It was the opinion of the sheriff's office that the Hudsons were not attached to any organized flogging band, but were operating on their own hook.

Because of the past record of the Hudsons, it was learned at the sheriff's office an hour after the arrests, an investigation is being made to determine if they are paid gangsters, receiving a certain amount of money for each flogging.

Sheriff Hicks stated that revolvers which the negro said the man had, apparently were thrown away during the excitement. The deputies are hunting with flash lights for the guns.

KLAN LOSING POWER IN ITS BIRTHPLACE

Georgia Is No Longer a "100 Per Cent." Training Ground for Kleagles.

ATLANTA NOW ANTI-KLAN

Citizens Assert That Not More Than 10,000 in the City District Are Klansmen.

BUT INFLUENCE IS STRONG

Hooded Brotherhood Is Still to Be Reckoned With in State Political Affairs.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 17.—Georgia—the State in which the present-day Ku Klux Klan was born, the State known to Klandom as "the training ground of Kleagles," the State in which the hooded organization developed the program of propaganda and expansion that has resulted in the great growth of the Klan in States west of the Mississippi—is, strange to say, no longer a "100 per cent." State. In fact, it is doubtful if there ever was a day in the last three years when a majority of the voters of Georgia were members of, or in sympathy with, the masked order.

Atlanta, the seat of the "Imperial Palace," those who know Atlanta say, today is an anti-Klan city, so far as voting goes. It is probable that in the entire Atlanta district there are not more than 10,000 Klansmen, and that is [illegible] to be a generous estimate, for those [illegible] Klan [illegible] ship if the hooded brothers would stand up and be counted, would not exceed 5,000. In the entire State no person with whom THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has talked has placed the voting strength of the Klan at more than 100,000, and when all the Democrats in Georgia go to the polls they number more than 300,000.

The power of the Klan therefore is to be found in its present ability to swing elections via the balance of power route.

In Atlanta they know more about the Klan and the way it works than do the people in any other city in the country. It was here first, and it is still here. Here the Klan has fought its legal battles, and here it is preparing to fight more of them. In other words, as a distinguished citizen expressed it, "it has been our misfortune to be the tub in which the Klan has, from the beginning, washed most of its dirty linen."

Awaiting Trial of Philip Fox.

Just now the city is on tiptoe awaiting the disclosures which it is expected will follow the trial of Philip Fox, former publicity manager of the Kloncilium, for the murder of W. S. Coburn, who was the legal adviser of the Simmons faction in the masked organization.

The Klan has spread into other States and has attained its present great membership, they say in Atlanta, mainly as the result of ill-advised anti-Klan propaganda. The only way to head off the movement, these people add, is to tell the naked truth about it, and nothing else, and then go to the polls and defeat it. The one dish the Klan cannot digest is a political defeat, as is shown by the cries one sees in the Klan organs regarding what happened in Memphis last week, when the Klan municipal ticket was overwhelmed by a majority of more than 3,000 votes.

The first definite indication Atlanta had that the Klan movement was on the wane was several months ago, when a young man named Ellis, who was backed by the Klan, decided to be a Judge, and missed connection by between 2,000 and 3,000 votes.

That the Klan has been able to make its influence count in the political affairs of Georgia is conceded on all sides. Clifford Walker, Governor of the State, defeated Thomas W. Hardwick last year largely as a result of the support of the Ku Klux machine, and the present Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court, R. B. Russell, also was backed by the masked voters.

Both the Governor and the Chief Justice attended a conference last Tuesday at which H. W. Evans, the Imperial Wizard, Nathan B. Forrest, the Grand Dragon of Georgia, and Ben H. Sullivan, counsel for the Wizard, were among those present. The meeting, it is stated, was called to discuss tax reform legislation. As the story goes, the Governor wanted the support of the Klan members of the Legislature for his tax program.

Governor Walker's Attitude.

Governor Walker, following the publication of the story, denied it was a Klan meeting. He explained that he understood that among those present were some who did not owe allegiance to the "Peachtree Street throne." He was asked if he addressed the meeting as a Klansman or as Governor of Georgia. He replied that what he said was said as Chief Executive of the State.

The friendship of the Governor for the Klan is a matter of common knowledge in Atlanta. One of his closest advisers is General Forrest, the Dragon of the realm of Georgia. And what is true of Governor Walker is true of several other State officers, among them N. H. Ballard, Superintendent of Education, and J. J. Brown, the head of the Agricultural Department. All are in the "Friendly Enemy" class. The Legislature, while it includes a strong Klan personnel, is not in the control of the masked machine.

As in other States of the Eastern South, the Klan in Georgia is strong in spots and weak in others. For instance, Macon is generally conceded to be a Klan stronghold, while Savannah, the second city of the State, is just as strong the other way. Indications are that in the rural communities the Klan is today in the minority. Its strength in Georgia is in certain cities and towns. It still holds the balance of power, and unless the opposition votes as a unit, as does the Klan, the odds again will be in favor of a Ku Klux victory in 1924.

Waning Power Conceded.

The fact that the Klan is not the power in its birth State that it is in a dozen other States is conceded in the last issue of The Searchlight, the official organ of the Georgia organization, and a mouthpiece of the Kloncilium.

"On the face of it," says The Searchlight, "it would appear that Georgia, being the home of Klankraft from the beginning, would have led all the realms of the invisible empire in point of numbers and efficiency. But though Georgia is the birthplace of Klankraft, it has been cradled elsewhere and drawn on its place of birth for material in spirit and experience for support while it grew and prospered in other fields."

The same issue of The Searchlight prints the text of a speech the Imperial Wizard made at a meeting of Grand Dragons held in Asheville, N. C., some weeks ago. In that talk he told the Dragons that the Klan was functioning everywhere as a unit and his message to them was to "pass the word down the line for co-ordination."

As do the State organizations, the national headquarters here denies at every opportunity that the Klan is in politics, but it does not take much investigation to prove the error of this contention.

The Klan in Politics.

The Klan is very much in politics and Atlanta knows it. The "Imperial Palace" is about the best informed place in the country, so far as politics is concerned, particularly in such States as Indiana, Texas, Ohio and Oklahoma, where the "invisible horde" has managed to get a stronghold or is able to hold the balance of power.

Here in Georgia the Klan appears to be on the McAdoo bandwagon. One of the principal McAdoo missionaries is a prominent Atlanta lawyer who has figured as counsel for the Imperial Palace" crowd in certain lawsuits. This man, it is asserted, has engineered several conferences at which the wheels were set in motion to secure the Georgia delegation for the former Secretary of the Treasury.

A final word regarding the Klan situation in Georgia involves the future headquarters of the Kloncilium. The Wizard and his staff officers deny that a transfer of the Imperial Palace to Indianapolis is being considered, but the report persists, and in responsible quarters, too; that the evacuation of Atlanta is under consideration and that Indianapolis probably will be the new capital of the "Invisible Empire." It is said on high authority that the Kloncilium will not be swamped with protests from the citizens of Atlanta if the change is made. Atlanta is "tired" of the publicity she has had in the last few years due to the location on Peachtree Street of the Imperial Palace and of Klancrest, as the private palace of the Wizard is called.

In a nutshell, the Georgia Klan situation appears to size up as follows: The Klan probably controls one-third of the votes of the State; as matters now stand, it certainly has the balance of power, and nowhere is the Klan working harder than here in Georgia. The Kloncilium is fully alive to the fact that the collapse of the organization in the State of its birth would mean a loss of prestige from which it would be hard to recover.

ALEXANDER FOUND GUILTY AT MACON IN FLOGGING CASE

Convicted of Assault and Battery in Connection With Whippings Past Several Months; King Put Under Bond

MACON, GA., Dec. 6.—J. F. Alexander was found guilty of assault and battery in connection with a series of flogging cases covering a period of several months, by a jury in city court at 8 o'clock tonight. The jury recommended him to the mercy of the court.

The jury retired on the case at 3:35 o'clock this afternoon and at 5:30 o'clock asked for a recharge on the question of punishment. The jury deliberated only a short time after the recharge.

Judge Holmes Johnson announced that he would sentence Alexander at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The specific charge against Alexander was assault and battery upon Ollie M. Perry, which occurred on August 9 of this year. Perry, according to evidence introduced at the trial was beaten over the back until the skin was worn off.

Klan Hand Charged In Macon Election

MACON, Ga., Oct. 25.—Charging that "a klan, or an invisible empire," is making an effort to defeat the increase of salary for the judge of City Court in the election Thursday, Dr. C. C. Harrold, at the Kiwanis Club luncheon Wednesday at the Hotel Dempsey, urged every member of the organization to go to the polls to vote.

The election discussion was brought up by General Walter A. Harris, who said it is the duty of every citizen to vote on the issue.

Bibb County voters will go to the polls Thursday to vote on the increase in salaries of the City Court and the Municipal Court judges.

The increase in the salaries of the two judges was brought up in the General Assembly and the matter was compromised by leaving it to a vote of the people of the county.

Alleged Klux[illegible] Black Robe[illegible] During Flogg[illegible] Letter Mailed to Gov. Hardwick Intercepted Flogged Man Tells Story.

(By the Associated Press.)

MACON, Ga., Sept. 11.—Evidence intended to show that Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, on trial in city court here on the charge of rioting in connection with whipping of R. F. Mills, a chiropodist, had knowledge of letters written by persons seeking to have other persons punished for various offenses featured today's session of the trial.

In one instance a state witness, an employe in Dr. Yarbrough's office, told of reading a letter in which a mother a day or two before her son was flogged expressed a wish that something could be done to her son.

Employes of the Ku Klux Klan also testified regarding letters and other matters designed to connect Dr. Yarbrough, who has been called the "whipping boss" of Macon, with the series of floggings that have been going on in Macon and Bibb County for approximately two years and which for several weeks had the city and county in a turmoil.

It also was charged during the day's testimony that J. P. Durkee, organizer of the Ku Klux Klan in Macon, visited the prosecuting witness in the case and pretended that he was an officer sent by Gov. Thomas W. Hardwick to aid in running down the men who had flogged Mills.

Five witnesses testified today, the state announced the names of 54 witnesses at the opening of the case this morning, including the names of former Gov. Thomas W. Hardwick, while the defense announced the names of more than 100. Indications tonight were that this case, the first of seven charges against Dr. Yarbrough, would last three or four days at least.

Flogged Man Testifies.

R. F. Mills, twice victim of the Macon floggers, was the first witness called by the state, he told how he was called from his home on Jan. 13, 1922, and how when he got into an automobile he supposed friends had come to meet him. He was taken to a certain point, placed flat on the ground and held there by two men while another man flogged him. He said there were five or six men in the gang and that they were dressed in black robes with white caps and masks.

Mills testified that although he had been warned that he would be killed if he did not keep his face to the ground, he had turned it in such a way that he saw several men disrobing near an automobile and that he saw Dr. Yarbrough walk into the lights of the machine. His story was not shaken on cross examination.

Mills created a stir in court when he was being questioned about a letter he wrote to Gov. Hardwick asking for protection. He had testified that a day or two after the letter was written on Oct. 31, 1922, a man who gave his name as Payne called on him and said he was from Gov. Hardwick. He said that the man on being asked for his credentials showed a badge.

"Have you seen this man since," he was asked by Solicitor Roy W. Moore.

"Yes," he replied, "I saw him yesterday."

"Who is he?"

"His name is Durkee, I believe."

Now Free on Bond.

J. P. Durkee, organizer for the Ku Klux Klan in Macon, was arrested last night in connection with the Mills case and is now free on $5,000 bond.

Mills testified that a few days after this man called on him he was again taken out and whipped. He has since left Macon.

The defense several times during the day sought to get into evidence matters reflecting on Mills' past actions or character, but each time Judge Gunn sustained state objections.

Mills on cross-examination was asked particularly about his actions after he was flogged. He was asked if he did not tell someone that his uncle did the whipping.

"I'll admit that he wrote the letter," Mills replied. This letter was one that was read to Mills at the time he was first flogged.

Asked if he did not threaten to kill his uncle, he said that he did not make any such threat, but that he gave "give him 10 days in which to admit it."

On redirect examination this afternoon Solicitor Moore asked Mills to state his reason for going to Barnesville, Ga. He replied that he had gone there to see a man then working in the postoffice to try to find out if he could tell him who mailed "that letter" to the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta.

Durkee on the Stand.

After Mills was excused J. P. Durkee was called to the stand. Durkee was asked by the state if he had been arrested in connection with the case and stated that he had been. He then identified letters which he said he had obtained from Dr. Yarbrough or from a desk in Dr. Yarbrough's office. One letter was addressed to Dr. Yarbrough personally and the other was addressed to the Ku Klux Klan.

Durkee testified that many letters were received by him and that he read some of them and others he merely scanned and that he gave them to Dr. Yarbrough. On cross examination he was asked whether or not Dr. Yarbrough read the letters and he said that he knew the dentist read some, but he did not know whether he read all of them. He said that the letters identified by him had been shown to M. O. Dunning, chief of staff of the Ku Klux Klan for the realm of Georgia, and that he then turned them over to Sheriff Hicks.

Deputy Sheriff J. Lane Mullally, who arrested Dr. Yarbrough, H. L. Perryman and J. E. Simpson, the latter two Ku Klux Klan investigators, testified regarding actions of Dr. Yarbrough.

Miss Elizabeth Culpepper, the final witness of the day, testified that she had been an assistant in Dr. Yarbrough's office for three years. She told of a letter being received by Dr. Yarbrough from a Mrs. Perry and of its being given to her to read.

"Who gave you the letter to read," she was asked. Before she could reply, however, the defense objected and the objection was sustained because the proper ground work had not been laid by the state.

Asked if she had seen the letter since she read it, she replied "no," She added that she handed the letter to Dr. Yarbrough after reading it.

Asked What She Would Do.

"Did Dr. Yarbrough make any comments about the letter?" she was asked.

"He asked me what I would do in such a case," she replied.

"What did you tell him?"

"I told him I did not know, it was pitiful."

She then was asked what was in the letter and said that it was from a Mrs. Perry, who expressed a wish that something might be done to her son, Ollie M. Perry, and saying that she had no husband and that the son had been selling whisky.

Miss Culpepper then was asked "Do you know Mrs. Lynwood Bright."

"I've seen her but don't know her," she replied.

"State if one the day before Lynwood Bright was whipped Mrs Bright didn't spend the afternoon in Dr. Yarbrough's office," Solicitor Moore told the witness.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Did she have dental work done?"

"No, she just came up to see him."

"I have seen him in Dr. Yarbrough's office."

"Did you see him there often?"

"Yes, we did some dental work for him."

"Did he come into the office when you were not doing dental work for him?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever see J. D. Patrick there?"

"Yes, several times."

All Under Arrest.

She also testified that she had seen J. E. Bloodworth, J. F. Alexander and Attorney Goodrum in the office a number of times. Most of these men, she said, had dental work done by Dr. Yarbrough but they made some trips to the office when they were not having work done. All of the men named, except Attorney Goodrum, who is one of the defense attorneys in the trial of Dr. Yarbrough are under arrest on various charges.

"How long would they stay there," she was asked.

"I don't know," was the reply.

"Who did they talk to?"

"Dr. Yarbrough."

"What is your usual hour of leaving the office?"

"Seven o'clock."

"Were they often there when you left?"

"I don't remember, sometimes there was somebody in the reception room but I don't know who was there."

Miss Culpepper was asked how many rooms Dr. Yarbrough has in his office and stated there were two dental offices and a private room. She said Dr. Yarbrough received the men named in the private room.

Had Many Patients.

On cross examination she was asked about the business of Dr. Yarbrough and testified that he waited on from 20 to 40 patients a day and often had engagements booked for all evening. She also was asked if she did not know a drive for members was being conducted by the Ku Klux Klan and replied that she did not know this.

In connection with the presence of Mrs. Bright in Dr. Yarbrough's office the defense asked her if she did not know that Dr. Yarbrough signed a bond for Mrs. Bright and that she had come to the office to thank him for it. She said she had heard that that was the reason for the visit. Miss Culpepper also was aked about Dr. Yarbrough's reputation and declared that it was good.

Mills Tells Story.

R. F. Mills, a chiropodist, the first witness, testified that about 8:30 p.m. the night of Jan. 13, 1922, the telephone in his home rang and he received a message calling him out. He went to College and Appleton Avenue, to meet a car that was to take him on a call. As he reached the corner a small car drove up and he and his 12-year-old son, who was with him, got into the car. There were two men in the car, he testified, but later a third man go into the car and all were driven to a point on the Columbus road.

On the way out he said he saw a car which later he recognized as Dr Yarbrough's car.

Asked to tell what happened, Mr Mills said that a tall man in the car hit him on the head with a pistol and told him to hold up his hands. Mr. Mills said he did not put up his hands and was struck again.

Soon after the party came up to a car standing beside the road, he testified. He said Dr. Yarbrough took him out of the car. He said that J. E. Bloodworth and another man held his arms while another man whipped him. He said there were five or six men in the party. All wore masks, he said, and he told them he could whip any individual in the crowd if he would unmask.

Recognized Yarbrough.

After he had been flogged he was warned to be still until all had left. Mills said that a few minutes later he saw the men disrobing near one of the cars and that he recognized Dr Yarbrough and J. E. Bloodworth. He said he saw Dr. Yarbrough pass in front of one of the cars which had the lights on Mills cars.

Solicitor Moore said that he proposed to show a conspiracy against Mills lasting over a period of months and to connect Dr. Yarbrough, as he put it, "with everything that happened to this witness while he lived in Macon."

Mills then asserted that later a man came to his office and represented himself as a detective from Gov. Hardwick's office and offered to aid "in running down the floggers."

Mills testified that he wrote a letter to Governor Hardwick but never received an answer.

Asked if he called Governor Hardwick on the telephone after he failed to receive a reply, Mills answered:

"Yes."

Letter to Gov. Hardwick.

A letter that Mr. Mills said was the one he wrote to Gov. Hardwick was shown to him and identified but was not read. Mills said Attorney Sinclair wrote the letter for him and he mailed it in a box in the Bibb Building.

He said that a few days later he was called upon by a man who said he was from Gov. Hardwick's office, giving his name as Payne. At this point the solicitor asked:

"Have you seen this man since "

"Yes," Mills replied. "I saw him yesterday."

"Who is he?"

"His name is Durkee, I believe."

J. P. Durkee, organizer of the Ku-Klux Klan in Macon, was arrested yesterday on a charge of rioting and assault in connection with the attack on Mills.

Mills said he asked the man who called on him for his credentials. The man, he said, showed him a badge under his coat.

"What happened to you after you talked to Durkee, or Payne?" the witness was asked.

"On the next Thursday or Friday I was taken out again," was the reply.

At this point the direct examination was closed.

Attorney Ross for the defense opened the cross-examination by asking Mr. Mills about the letter ne had identified.

Asked by the defense how the men who flogged him were dressed, Mr. Mills said that they wore long black robes and masks.

"Were the men who took you out of the car masked?" asked Mr. Foss.

"Yes," replied Mills.

"Was the tall man in the car with you masked?"

"No."

The jury selected was composed of 12 men who swore under oath in court that they were not members of the Ku Klux Klan and that they never had made application for membership. The question was propounded to each talesman over the objections of defense attorneys. A total of 23 talesmen were examined.

The Jury.

The jury as selected follows:

W. B. Abbott, tinner; M. W. Jackson, merchant; W. C. Butler, merchant; G. W. Schaefer, railroad man; J. P. Edwards, merchant; R. F. Johnson, railroad man; F. T. Abel, merchant; G. P. Humble, cotton mill worker; James W. Johnson, Jr., bookkeeper; J. F. Strozier, merchant; A. A. Josey, car inspector, and J. E. Sandifur, carpenter.

Effort of the attorneys for the defense to bar Sheriff Hicks from having charge of the jury was overruled by Judge Gunn, the lawyers alleging the sheriff had taken an active part in the prosecution of the case. Solicitor Moore in reply said the state was prepared to prove that the attorneys for the defense were also partisan and at least some of them are members of the Ku Klux Klan.

DECLARES KU KLUX STANDS FOR ORDER

Final Arguments Slated for Today—Character Witnesses on Stand in Thursday Session.

Macon, Ga., September 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—A general denial of all charges made against him prefaced by the statement that he disapproved flogging and all forms of lawlessness, was made in city court late today by Dr. C. A. Yarbrough on trial charged with rioting in connection with the flogging twice last year of R. F. Mills, former Macon chiropodist and barber. The defendant took the stand as the last witness for the defense and was not sworn, reading his statement from prepared notes.

Dr. Yarbrough, who is accused of having been the leader in a number of the floggings that have been going on in Macon for nearly two years and that for a time threw the city and county into a turmoil, admitted that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. He declared that the klan stood for law and order and that it did not stand for flogging.

Immediately after Dr. Yarbrough's statement was concluded, the defense rested. The state then was permitted to reopen its case and three anonymous letters which the state alleges were written on a typewriter in the office of Dr. Yarbrough and which were excluded yesterday were introduced. A letter admittedly written on Dr. Yarbrough's typewriter was not introduced and will not go to the jury. A. H. Delaney, a typewriter expert, testified that in his opinion the three anonymous letters and the letter admittedly written on the dentist's typewriter were written on the same machine.

Rebuttal Witnesses.

The state introduced a number of rebuttal witnesses before court adjourned to counteract testimony of defense witnesses regarding the character and reputation of state witnesses. At 6:20 o'clock, when the court adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning, the state still was introducing rebuttal witnesses. Solicitor Roy W. Moore, however, said that he expected the jury to get the case before court closed tomorrow.

The Mills flogging case, which is the first of seven charges against the Macon dentist, will be the only one of the flogging cases put on trial this week. Judge Will Gann, of city court, this morning excused witnesses in all other cases until next Monday morning and excused all jurors except those engaged in this case from further attendance on this term of court.

Asked About Klan.

Today's session was taken up almost entirely with introduction of character witnesses either to prove the good character of the defendant or to prove bad character for the prosecution's witnesses. A number of the defense witnesses either admitted that they were members of the Ku Klux Klan, that they had made application, that they had been "affiliated" with the organization or said in response to questions designed to establish their connection that "they would prefer not to answer."

The defense, which yesterday called a number of barbers to attack the character of R. F. Mills, called a number of other barbers as well as witnesses from Barnesville, Ga., where Mills formerly lived, to attack his character. They also called witnesses to attack the credibility of W. W. Arnold, R. A. Hartley and W. O. Barnett, all of whom have charged Dr. Yarbrough with having aided in flogging them.

Tells of Early Life.

In his statement this afternoon Dr. Yarbrough told in detail of his life on a small farm in Randolph county, Alabama, where his parents raised nine children. He told of the hardships of the little farm and how his parents sent their children to the country school as much as possible. He declared that he had been taught to leave cards, liquor and bad companions alone and how he married at the age of 23, rented a farm and the next year bought it. Later he carried mail and after a time sold out and went to Oklahoma to farm. His wife's health failed there, he said, and he sold out and entered dental college. Graduating from dental college as president of his class, he said he came to Macon in 1912, "broke and in debt." The first few years, he said, had come hard, but he had worked and built up his practice until today it was second to none in Macon.

He declared that he had worked for the betterment of the city and community.

Member of the Klan.

"I am a member of the Ku Klux Klan," he said, and continued with an explanation of what he said the klan was. He declared that on the rolls of the Macon klan were teachers, doctors and lawyers.

Explaining a letter written by R. F. Mills to former Governor T. W. Hardwick and alleged to have been mailed in Macon but intercepted before it reached the governor, Dr. Yarbrough said that the letter produced in court had been handed to him with the explanation that it was a copy of a letter written by Mills. He did not remember who gave it to him but said that he handed it to J. P. Durkee, Ku Klux Klan organizer.

Dr. Yarbrough said that Mrs. Lynwood Bright made two or three visits to his office "one of them," he said, "was to thank me for securing an attorney for her in this city. And the second was to thank me for going on her bond when she was served with a bail trover."

Liquor Sales Cited.

Explaining a statement he is said to have made to Deputy Sheriff J. Lane Mullally when arrested he said that articles in the newspapers, a speech made by Charlie Hall before the Kiwanis club in which he said a prominent dentist was the whipping boss and the fact that some of his friends came to him and said the Hall statement referred to him caused him to make the statement.

Regarding a conversation with W. C. Quarterbaum the defendant said that during the visit he and Rev. H. H. Connell made to Quarterbaum's house it was said that a good deal of liquor was being sold in Pellevue and that section of Macon. "I told Mr. Quarterbaum," he said, "in the presence of Mr. Connell, that I had a friend on the sheriff's force and that whenever such things occurred if he would phone Mr. Connell he would get in touch with me and we would have these things looked after. A short time after that Mr. Marshall phoned me and said he had phoned the sheriff's office and there was something wrong and I told him to phone Sheriff Hicks at his home. I have reported several cases to the sheriff's office in that community and have got splendid results from the sheriff's force.

The defendant denied ever having seen R. F. Mills until the day he saw him in court and also said that he did not know W. O. Barnett and R. A. Hartley whom he is accused of having aided in flogging. He said that he knew W. W. Arnold but had always been friendly with him.

Sweeping Denial.

In conclusion he spoke of his family and a daughter he said would enter Bessie Tift college this fall and denied that he had ever had a hand in any floggings.

In conclusion the defendant said: "I want to make a complete denial of the whole thing, don't know anything about it; and from the stand I have always taken for law and order and if for no other reason, I couldn't afford to take a chance on that kind of thing when I have a family of five children and my wife to support. My oldest daughter is eighteen and she will enter Bessie Tift next month.

"I know nothing about it. This is the truth, so help me God."

Dr. J. H. Heard, a member of the county commisison, called by the defense as a character witness for Dr. Yarbrough when cross-examined by the state, told of a visit to Dr. Yarbrough and J. P. Durkee had made to him seeking information mentioned in an anonymous letter about a man named Fielder. Dr. Heard said he told the two klansmen that he thought Fielder, whose mother was a relative, ought to be nearly whipped to death and driven out of the country. He said that the klansmen said that was not their policy and that later legal proceedings were started and Mrs. Fielder's estate taken out of the hands of her son. Asked what had become of the son Dr. Heard said he had "picked up another man's wife and left the country." He said he had spoken to a number of other persons about the same matter he discussed with the klansmen.

Rebuttal Introduced.

A. B. Sheffield, a dental supply house worker, testifying that he regarded W. W. Arnold's character as bad, admitted that he had made application for membership in the Ku Klux Klan. W. R. Holmes, owner of a dental supply house; W. W. Harnett, a contractor, and W. J. Yarborough testified at the afternoon session that Dr. Yarbrough's reputation was good. They supported the testimony of a large number of witnesses heard at the morning session.

In rebuttal the state introduced O. E. Layfield, a patrolman, who assailed the character of G. T. Roberts, who had testified against the reputation of W. W. Arnold; G. E. Buchanan, merchant, and C. F. Giddings, banker, of Americus, who testified that the character of W. O. Barnett had always been considered good in his former home; Dr. J. A. Corry, J. E. Bush, a druggist; Mayor W. T. Summers, C. H. Willis and T. C. Tyus, all of Barnesville, Ga., who testified that the reputation of R. F. Mills always had been good.

P. F. Brock, an attorney, of Macon, and a member of the Civitan club testified that the general reputation of Dr. Yarbrough was bad in Macon. He based his statement, he said, on common reports about town during recent works that Dr. Yarbrough was the "brains" behind the organization of floggers.

Editor on Stand.

W. T. Anderson, editor of the Macon Telegraph, who was the first rebuttal witness called by the state was asked regarding the reputaiton of W. W. Arnold, which he said was good, in so far as he could observe. He testified that he did not know Dr. Yarbrough personally but that the defendant's general reputaion was bad. Questioned by the defense about whether or not he was prejudiced against Dr. Yarbrough, the editor asserted that he was not prejudiced against him. He was asked about a first page editorial assailing the floggers recently published in the Telegraph and denied that he had mentioned any man or profession in the editorial in question.

C. F. Calhoun, an automobile supply dealer testifying about the character of W. W. Arnold said that it was good. On cross examination he said he had had complaints but they were the kind that often came to him. He mentioned the fact that the suspicion that money had not been turned in for supplies had been reported to him and that one man had reported that he suspected Arnold. Attorney Ross for the defense pushed this line of questioning and finally Mr. Calhoun said "we'd have the same complaints about you if you worked for us."

Attorney Answers Hotly.

"No you wouldn't. Not about me," said the attorney.

"Yes, about anybody."

"Is that your opinion of me?" the attorney asked.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, you can come down," the attorney retorted hotly.

Mr. Calhoun was questioned also about when W. W. Arnold told him about being flogged and also the date on which Arnold said the whipping occurred.

Attorneys for both sides, tonight agreed that each side should be allowed two and a half hours for argument.

SEEK REDUCTIONS OF "FLOGGING" BONDS

The Constitution

Macon, Ga., August 24.—Lawyers for S. R. Hudson, J. C. Hudson and C. F. Hudson, arrested Sunday by sheriff's deputies as "floggers," will make application before Judge Will Gunn in city court tomorrow morning for a reduction of the bonds. Sheriff Hicks is demanding $5,000 bond in each case. 8-25-23

There have been no additional floggings since Sunday night, but the sheriff said that he is investigating the whipping of George Ross nearly three weeks ago, which had never been officially reported to him.

Ross, the sheriff said, was carried into the woods and whipped at night. When he did not return home next morning, the sheriff said he had been informed the same automobiles that carried him away returned to the scene of the whipping, found Ross still there, and picking him up carried him home.

According to the sheriff, Ross has refused to give any information concerning the affair.

"If people will cooperate we will put an end to all this," said the sheriff. "We must have information upon which to work."

WHITE MAN LOSES JOB; LEADS GANG TO DESTROY STATE INSTITUTION.

The Washington

(Preston News Service.)

Milledgeville, Ga., Aug. 15.—Following two raids on the Georgia Training School by masked bands, Governor Walker has ordered guards placed at the institution here. It is said that the raiders were seeking Thomas Thomas and his wife, who are in charge of the Negro department of the institution. It is said that the masked marauders could not find Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and finally they came across a Negro said to be a brother of Thomas and severely whipped him.

According to Mrs. Orain Manson, superintendent of the institution, said that one of the leaders of the raiding party was a former employee of the school. She also said that she could see no other reason why there should exist any reason to molest Mr. and Mrs. Thomas or any of the other Negro attendants. All of the Negroes connected with the institution are loved and respected by all the inmates, both white and colored.

YARBROUGH CASE GOES TO JURORS AT NOON TODAY

Atlanta Constitution

Final Arguments Start. Rebuttal Testimony Occupies Friday—Many Placed on Stand.

9-15-23

WITNESS DESCRIBES WHIPPING STRAP

Neighbors of Barnett Testify He Mistreated Mate, But She Denies Such Allegations.

Macon, Ga., September 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—The jury will get the case of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough charged with being implicated in the flogging of R. F. Mills here last year, at noon tomorrow. City Judge Will Gunn, at 6 o'clock tonight adjourned court until 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

Arguments in the case were started late this afternoon and when court adjourned the solicitor, Roy W. Moore, had talked fifty minutes and Attorney W. A. McClellan, associate counsel for the defense had spoken one and one half hours. Each side is to have two and one half hours, leaving half of the arguments for tomorrow.

Rebuttal Is Heard.

Taking of rebuttal testimony continued early today in the trial. W. W. Noyes, an accountant, was the first witness and testified that he had known W. O. Bennett, one of the state's witnesses, 20 years and that his reputation was good. He knew Barnett when both lived in Americus.

Jennings Adams, president of the Adams cotton mill, also testified to the good character of Barnett. The defense cross questioned both witnesses regarding their opinion of a man who would mistreat his family.

J. Clay Murphy, real estate man, testified to the good character of R. F. Mills. Charles McDraerty, barber, called to testify for Mills, and was asked by the defense about his religion. He said he was a Roman Catholic and a third degree Knight of Columbus. Attorney Ross, for the defense, attempted to question him about the Knights of Columbus, but was halted by Judge Gunn.

Mrs. Sarah B. Darling, Griffin, Ga., daughter of W. O. Barnett, who had been subpoenaed as a witness, was always home nights during her mother's last illness. The defense had intimated by questions throughout that Bennett had mistreated his family, whipped his wife while ill and refused to pay funeral expenses. Mrs. Darling declared that he did not mistreat his family in any way and that he made funeral arrangements. She said he was at home every night during his wife's last illness.

Tells of Conversation.

The witness then told about the conversation with Attorney Ross in which he asked her what her testimony would be, and when she told him he told her he would not call her. Later he came to the Lanier hotel, paid her $2 a day for each day she had been here for the trial, four cents a mile mileage and urged her to leave early the next morning.

She also told of a visit to Ross' office a year ago with her sister. At that time, she said Ross had stated that "Barnett would be a good man for the Ku Klux Klan." She said her sister gave her her father's home and business address.

She was closely cross questioned by Attorney Ross about the conversations over the telephone.

9-15-23

J. A. McDaniel testified as to Bennett's character and Dr. G. T. Miller, Barnett's physician, was called. Dr. Miller told how solicitous Barnett was of his wife during her last illness. He then told how on February 17, 1923, he treated him for bruises on his wrists. These bruises, it was claimed, were caused by floggers placing handcuffs on Barnett. He said he had a letter written on Dr. Yarbrough's typewriter. This letter was one used by the state for comparison with anonymous letters received by Barnett and Police Lieutenant Griffin.

Whipping Stand Figures.

Judge Gunn asked the witness why he had the letter for comparison with the anonymous letter received by Barnett. He then was excused.

George Schelling, a shoe repairer, was called and asked if Carl Pilcher, a defense witness, did not bring a whipping strap to him to be repaired. The defense objected but was overruled and the witness replied:

"I don't know whether it was a whipping strap or not."

"Describe the strap."

"It was about three inches wide and 24 to 30 inches long."

"What did you do with the strap?"

"I cut the end into two or three parts at one end an punched several holes in it."

All questions and answers except the statement that Pilcher brought the strap were ruled out on objection of the defense, but Attorney Ross for the defense, again brought it all out again on cross examination.

The state then rested.

Testimony Stricken.

On resuming the session after a brief recess Judge Gunn on his own motion had stricken from the record all testimony by George Schelling relating to a whipping strap being brought to his shop.

Mrs. C. G. Wilson, W. G. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Yann and Mrs. C. F. Robinson, former neighbors of W. O. Barnett, testified to alleged mistreatment of his wife and daughters. Ma. and Mrs. R. C. Spear, of Americus, Ga., also a former neighbor of the Barnetts in that city was called for the same purpose.

John P. Ross, chief counsel for the defense, took the stand to testify regarding a visit W. O. Barnett's daughter made to his office. He said the younger daughter told him Barnett was cruel to his family. He said he was taking the stand because of testimony given today by Mrs. Sarah B. Darling of Griffin, daughter of Barnett, who denied that her father mistreated or neglected his family.

Klan Mentioned.

He said that incidentally the Ku Klux Klan was mentioned. He said he told them he knew no members of the klan and that the matter should be handled legally but that if there ever was a case for the Ku Klux Klan this was one.

Attorney Ross denied on cross examination that he had taken down Barnett's address. Asked if he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, he answered "yes," explaining that he joined the order on July 4, 1923. He asserted he was not a member at the time Barnett's daughters visited his office.

The defense moved to rule out the anonymous letters introduced by the state and all other evidence not directly connected with the whipping of Mills. The motion was overruled.

The defense then closed.

Cruelty Is Alleged.

The defense discovered that Miss Margaret Barnett who had been mentioned in previous testimony, was in the courthouse. Attorney Ross asked to be permitted or reopen the case and call the witness. This was allowed. She admitted that she went to see the attorney about her father. She admitted telling the attorney her father struck her mother while they lived in Americus. She admitted telling the attorney that her father was cruel to her.

D. W. McCoy, an attorney who has an office near one formerly occupied by R. F. Mills, was called to testify but was taken off the stand and Mills called and asked if he ever talked to McCoy about being whipped. He said he did and McCoy was recalled.

Prior to calling McCoy Attorney Ross asked that the defense be allowed to keep its case open until after lunch but Judge Gunn declared he wanted to finish evidence before lunch.

McCoy said Mills told him he had been unable to identify any of the floggers.

Asked if he had not seen a memorandum which was shown him he said.

"I did not."

"As his attorney, didn't you advise him about this?"

"I did not."

Refuses to Answer.

"What are you trembling about?"

"What did you ask me such question for?" McCoy asked.

"Are you a klansman?"

"I don't care to answer that."

"Did you ever sign one of these blanks?" he was asked by the solicitor.

"I don't care to answer."

Solicitor Moore insisted that the witness reply and Judge Gunn ordered him to do so and he answered "I am."

Responding to a question by Attorney Ross he said he joined the klan last July 4.

Court then recessed until 3 p. m. as the defense counsel insisted they had another witness they wanted to see.

Defense Closes.

The defense at the opening of the afternoon session handed to Judge Gunn a series of charges they sought him to lay before the jury. Miss Ruth McCrary, an employe of the middle Georgia sanitarium, was called to testify as to when Miss Margaret Barnett started attending the nursing school which was May 16, 1921. Chief Defense Counsel John T. Ross then took the stand and explained and declared that Miss Barnett's visit to his office was prior to that time.

The defense at 3:05 announced it had closed its case.

R. F. Mills was recalled and asked if he had conferred with Walter Miller regarding who had whipped him on January 13, 1922. An objection to the testimony was raised by the defense and Mills was not allowed to answer.

W. O. Barnett, recalled, denied that he ever had beaten his wife or failed to provide for his family.

Dr. Stephen Wright, a druggist, testified that he saw Dr. Yarbrough and W. O. Barnett in his store. Dr. Yarbrough was at the soda fountain and Barnett was in the rear of the store and walked to the front while Dr. Yarbrough was there. Barnett on Wednesday testified that the first time he ever saw the man who led his floggers was in Wright's drug store. The state then closed its case and immediately Solicitor Moore began to address the jury.

THE WHIPPING HYENAS

The Savannah News

Saturday and Sunday newspapers in the east and central west, reaching Atlanta Monday, had the news stories of mob violence in Georgia spread all over their front pages.

And so it is in all of the thousands of daily newspapers, large and small in every state of the American union and even abroad—for mob rule in Georgia has gotten to be even an international scandal. 8-23-23

The Saturday newspapers carried the lynching of two Negroes in one day, one in Bleckley county and another in Houston county. The Sunday newspapers carried further stories of the floggings in and around Macon, which have reached such stages of terrorizing that the whole nation is talking of and the newspapers of other sections are editorializing on the "Georgia disgrace."

The truth about the whole lamentable situation is that it is the truth that hurts. Savannah News

There is no error in the news dispatches that the courts and constituted authorities in Bleckley county were defied by a mob of around 50 armed and disguised men, traveling in automobiles from which the license tags had been detached, and that the jail was entered and a prisoner, awaiting an orderly trial according to the laws of Georgia, taken therefrom and "hanged and riddled with bullets."

There is no error in the news dispatches that a Negro was taken from officers in Houston county, almost at the same hour, "by a mob of about seventy-five men," and hanged and riddled.

Both of these men, whether guilty or not guilty of the crimes charged, were in the custody of constituted authorities and when kidnaped and murdered, thereby destroying any extenuating plea of possible escape from legal justice.

There was no error in the news dispatches of Sunday telling of the further barbaric escapades of the human hyenas at Macon who have terrorized that community for months with indiscriminate floggings, administered to both white and black, without any apparent charges of wrongdoing against the victims, but were illustrations of bloodthirsty inhumanities under the very night-lights of one of the most refined and cultured cities in the south.

It is the truth that hurts. It is the truth that is making Georgia today the most publicly abused and censured state in the American union—holding her up to the ridicule of nation-wide public opinion, and disgracing her in the estimation of /ght-thinking people throughout the world.

And yet, while such is the misfortune of having an element, however small, of human beasts in any community to disturb and upset the peace and serenity of upright, law-abiding citizens, the further truth is that the overwhelming majority of the people of Georgia, in every section rural and urban, are as militantly opposed to mob violence and night riding as is the most sedate apostle of law among the puritan critics.

All the more lamentable that any situation shall exist in Georgia by which a few irresponsibles, as compared to the entire citizenship, shall be permitted to defile the whole in public appraisement, like the one drop of impurity may destroy the value of the full vessel of liquid.

It is a grievous condition and it must be stopped.

That the measure of a people's greatness is their respect for law is an axiom as old as the civilization that is founded upon law and the integrity of constituted government.

Governor Walker is to be commended for his firm pronouncement that every resource of the state would be employed to stamp these hyenas from the face of Georgia, and in the undertaking he should have the undivided cooperation of right-thinking, upstanding men and women of the state.

Georgians are too good a people as a whole—too law-abiding and patriotic—to have this mob stigma hanging like a cloud of hate over their heads. The material welfare of Georgia is too great an issue, too valuable to the prosperity and contentment of our people and our prosperity, to have it thus harassed and obstructed by minority elements of moral degenerates who, like skunks, befoul the atmosphere of every community in which they reside.

Civilization founded upon the religion of Christ and made secure by the sacrifices of our fathers, is too priceless a possession to have it menaced and threatened by men, who make the law a mockery and judiciary the debris of government wreckage.

The conscience of Georgia must become aroused, militantly aroused, in rebellion against such ach-enemies of our government, and of the honor and integrity of our people.

If it is necessary to call into service a volunteer army to stamp such marauders out of Georgia a solid phalanx of determined Georgians will fall into a line that will reach from the Blue Ridge to the Atlantic.

It is civilization against barbarism. Which shall rule in Georgia?—Atlanta Constitution

Alleged Victims Accuse Yarbrough — Stories of Whippings Are Given on Witness Stand.

9-13-23

STATE RESTS CASE LATE IN AFTERNOON

Women Tell of Letters Written to Ku Klux. Sharp Clashes Feature Second Day's Hearing.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Macon, Ga., September 12.—The prosecution late today rested its case in the trial of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, Macon dentist, charged with rioting in connection with floggings in Macon during the past two years, and the defense began its effort to break down the credibility of the witnesses offered by the state. When court adjourned at 5:55 o'clock tonight the defense had placed on the witness stand eight witnesses, two of whom attacked the credibility of W. W. Arnold and five the reputation of R. F. Mills, who is the prosecuting witness in the case on trial. The eighth witness was put on the stand to testify regarding the reputation of Mills but stated that he could not say whether it was good or bad.

Three Call Him Flogger.

Today's trial was marked by introduction of testimony by three alleged victims of the floggers, all of whom identified Dr. Yarbrough as having been in crowds that "took them out." Two women also identified letters they had written, one addressed to the "K. K. K." and the other to "the Ku Klux Klan, Macon, Ga." These letters, however, were not admitted in evidence when offered just before the state closed its case.

When court adjourned at 5:55 o'clock until 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, there were slight prospects that the case might reach the jury tomorrow night. Defense attorneys said that they doubted wherner or not the trial would be finished tomorrow, while Solicitor Roy W. Moore said he hoped to be able to give it to the jury before adjournment tomorrow.

Letters Not Seen.

Julian McCurry secretary to Thomas W. Hardwick when the latter was governor of Georgia, testified that he had never seen a letter R. F. Mills, the prosecuting witness, claims to have written to the governor and mailed, asking for protection from floggers. This letter is alleged to have been intercepted before it reached the governor's office. In response to cross-examination Mr. McCurry said that sometimes Miss Myrtle White opened letters in the governor's office and that sometimes, in his absence, letters were received and answered that he personally did not see.

Police Lieutenant G. R. Griffin of the Macon police department identified two anonymous letters he had received and following him A. H. Dlaney, typewriter expert, was recalled but was not allowed to testify because the state had failed to show the letters to the defense prior to the trial. All of his previous testimony to the effect that a letter written on a typewriter belonging to Dr. Yarbrough and an anonymous letter received by W. O. Barnett, one of the floggers' victims, had been written on the same machine also was ruled out for the same reason.

Tells of Attack

W. W. Arnolds, a garage worker, followed Lieutenant Griffin on the witness stand. He testified that he was whipped on May 8, 1922, by a crowd of men among them Dr. Yarbrough. He said he knew Dr. Yarbrough well as the dentist had done work for both him and his wife and he had worked on tires on Dr. Yarbrough's car.

Arnold told how he was lured from the garage where he was employed, seized, handcuffed and thrown into a car which he said he believed belonged to Dr. Yarbrough. He then was taken to Ocmulgee park where he was struck several times while laying prone on the ground. He testified that he told no one about being flogged until several months later because the floggers had "dared me to tell it" and that "flogging was not as much looked down upon here as it is now." This latter expression was ruled out by the judge.

Arnold was closely questioned on cross examination on his connection with Dr. Yarbrough. He told of having work done by the dentist and the defense brought out that he had talked to the dentist a number of times since the flogging and paid up all of his account. The witness said that the reason given him by the floggers for whipping him was that he was making only about $80 a month and that he could not afford to eat at restaurants and must carry his lunch thereafter. He said that after he had been flogged they told him that he also was accused of running with women and selling liquor. He denied that this was true.

Tells of Visit.

Dr. J. M. Hartley, uncle of R. A. Hartley, who testified this morning that he had once been taken out by floggers and given a talking to and that on another occasion he had been struck four times with a strap, told of a visit he made to the office of Dr. Yarbrough. He said that he told Dr. Yarbrough that if he would cure his nephews, R. A. and J. S. Hartley of their penchant for causing trouble he would be glad to have them whipped but said that Dr. Yarbrough did not make any comment.

R. F. Mills, the prosecuting witness, was recalled and asked a number of minor questions. W. W. Arnold also was recalled and identified J. R. Roberts as the man he had first told about being flogged.

The state then closed its case but immediately reopened it to introduce in evidence letters which had been mentioned previously in the case and identified. The letter R. F. Mills says he wrote to Governor Hardwick was admitted over the objection of the defense but a letter written by Miss Ora Goodin and identified by her today was not allowed to be introduced.

The defense also attempted to have ruled out evidence of W. W. Arnold, R. A. Hartley and W. O. Barnett, but failed.

Defense Witness.

J. R. Roberts was the first defense witness called. He denied that W. W. Arnold ever had told him that he had been flogged and asserted that he would not believe Arnold under oath. John A. McCann, an automobile accessory dealer, for whom Arnold formerly worked, testified that the first he ever knew of Arnold being whipped was when he saw it in the newspapers recently and that he would not believe the witness under oath. He declared he knew Dr. Yarbrough and considered his character good.

On cross examination Mr. McCann was asked, "haven't you heard it rumored here for months that Dr. Yarbrough was the whipping boss of Macon?"

"No. I saw something in the papers that a prominent dentist was reported to be," he replied.

"What did you think of it?"

"I gave it little thought."

"Are you a member of the Ku Klux Klan."

"No, sir."

The witness was then excused.

Questions Overruled.

W. W. Doles, a barber, was called by the defense in an effort to impeach the testimony of R. F. Mills and declared his reputation was bad. After a series of questions he was asked by the state if the reason he did not like Mills was not because the prosecuting witness had discharged him at one time. Doles denied this and then the defense attempted to ask a number of questions regarding his reasons for believing Mills' character was bad but Judge Gunn overruled them pending search for authorities on which to base such questions. Carl Pilcher, another barber, testified that Mills' character was bad and just before leaving the witness stand Solicitor Moore asked him.

"You're the man who took a whipping strap over to George Schelling's to be fixed aren't you?"

"No," Pilcher replied.

W. G. Avon, another barber, was introduced by the defense to testify regarding Mills' character but on being questioned by the defense he said he could testify only to hear-say and that he had heard things about him "both ways."

Refuses to Answer.

W. O. Poynter and E. T. Burnett, two more barbers, testified that things that they had heard about Mills caused them to believe his reputation was bad as did W. H. Jackson, a sixth barber. All of the defense witnesses were asked by the prosecutor whether or not they were members of the Ku Klux Klan and all answered "no" except Jacskson. When the question was asked Jackson, he sat silent for perhaps thirty seconds.

"Don't you want to answer," the solicitor asked.

"I prefer not to," the witness replied.

He was then excused.

Mills, the prosecuting witness against Dr. Yarbrough in the case now being tried, former owned barbershops in Macon and later was a chiropodist. He was flogged twice and after the second flogging moved to Hapeville.

The defense still had a large number of character witnesses to introduce, while the state still has a number of rebuttal witnesses to be heard, attorneys stated tonight.

MACON FLOGGING SITUATION QUIET

The Constitution

Macon, Ga., August 22.—Sheriff J. R. Hicks declared tonight that there had been no change in the flogging situation here in the past twenty-four hours. There have been no floggings reported since the arrest of the three Hudson brothers.

The Hudsons are negotiating with W. A. McClellan and former Judge John P. Ross, the latter in Atlanta today, as counsel, but will make no selection until tomorrow.

As soon as a lawyer is obtained a commitment hearing probably will be demanded, with a view of obtaining bail for the three men.

GANG SENTENCE FOR ALEXANDER

Macon, Ga., December 7.—J. Frank Alexander, Macon grocer, found guilty last night by a jury in the city court of assault and battery as the result of a flogging given Ollie M. Perry, a storekeeper, on the night of August 9, 1923, was sentenced this morning by Judge Holmes Johnson to serve six months on the chaingang, five months of which sentence he can be relieved of by paying a fine of $500 and costs of court. Alexander received the sentence without comment. His attorneys immediately gave notice of a motion for a new trial and Judge Johnson fixed Alexander's bond at $2,500.

Atlanta Georgian 12-8-23

Alexander went on trial in the city court last Wednesday morning and the trial continued until yesterday afternoon, going to the jury shortly before 4 o'clock. The jury was out nearly four hours before returning a verdict of guilty with recommendations of mercy.

Alexander has several other charges resting against him which grew out of the flogging of Perry. He will be tried on these charges after. He was charged in this trial with heading a band of men who seized Perry at the latter's store and carried him to the woods and gave him a severe flogging. Perry exhibited his back to the jury which still showed effects of the lashing he received.

Extension of Trials.

The arrest of Martin T. King, city foreman of construction for the Western Union Telegraph company, late yesterday on a warrant charging assault and battery and rioting in connection with the alleged flogging of Willie B. Bullock last July, caused court officials here to predict today a further extension of the already lengthy series of trials which have resulted from alleged flogging operations in this section of Georgia.

Bullock and his wife operate a small store on the outskirts of the city. In the information upon which the warrant was issued, Bullock alleged that a number of men posing as revenue offices entered his store, handcuffed him, took him in an automobile to a secluded spot and flogged him. Bullock said he was given instructions to leave the city and went to Miami, Fla. He did not return, he said, until after the first arrest was made in connection with the series of flogging cases.

Following his return to Macon, Bullock alleged, he was attacked on the street and stabbed in the neck. He placed the responsibility for the alleged stabbing on the "flogging gang."

King, a nephew of Chief of Police Martin Thompson, denied the charges and was released on $5,000 bond.

Klux vs. Klux

The trial of a high ranking klansman for the murder of another klansman is under way in Atlanta, capital of the "Invisible Empire." The crime involved was sensational. Its inspiration has been more or less convincingly traced to the more or less frankly admitted feud between rival klan leaders and their factions. Perhaps it is for this reason that visible and constitutional government has been suffered to take up, unhindered, the task of administering justice under the terms and forms of the written law. That feature of the Atlanta case is rendered worthy of note by its sharp contrast with report of lawless conduct toward which the klan directs its holiest hatred and against which it forges and launches its sharpest bolts.

Atlanta Georgian 12-8-23

Without attempting to prejudice the case we may with all propriety comment upon certain of its developed features that bear upon klan psychology and klan philosophy. The plea of delusional or emotional insanity has been filed by the defense. Witnesses summoned by it from Texas have testified the accused was subject to delusions and to fits of despondency during which "he was liable to do anything." One of them characterized these spells as "periodical insanity." A mind slightly off-balance might readily enough be influenced by the "Invisible Empire's" peculiar propaganda. But many readers will wonder why a person subject, according to his friends and associates, to "delusions" or to periodic insanity should be elevated to a high place in the "Invisible Realm," placed in charge of its "publicity"—seemingly a delicate and important task requiring balanced as well as brilliant mental powers. This revealed choice of instruments throws a new and interesting light, it may be, upon the psychology of the klan leadership.

Atlanta dispatches quote the prosecuting attorney as charging that the accused "was on a three-day drunk just prior to the murder"; that he had been arrested for alleged misconduct in a hotel.

Should the charge be substantiated by legal proof, it must be counted another mystifying revelation. For the "Invisible Empire's" noblest boast is that of its reverence for law. And one of the most persuasive pleas in its behalf runs to the effect that it wars upon bootleggers and justifies its existence by suppressing these evil-doers and their evil associates. Yet here is a klansman of his standing in the invisible orders, entrusted by its supreme officers with most responsible tasks, who is not only on trial for murder but is formally accused in open court of participating in those lesser forms of lawless conduct toward which the klan directs its holiest hatred and against which it forges and launches its sharpest bolts.

If these things surprise those earnest seekers after truth and light who have not been initiated into the klan mysteries, how much more must they perplex and shock well-meaning subjects of the "Invisible Empire" who enlisted in all good faith for its "holy war" against the very evildoing which, according to solemn indictment and the open charge of the prosecuting officer, a klansman of high rank, a member of the inner circle standing close to the invisible throne, has been guilty of!

KLAN CHAPLAIN ILL.

Drunk Charges Against Postponed on Doctor's Certificate.

Atlanta, Oct. 23.—The case of the Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, chaplain of the Ku Klux Klan, arrested here last week on charges of drunk and operating an automobile, which has twice been postponed, was put off again today until November 6, when called in police court. Ridley was not present due to "physical inability," according to his attorneys, who presented a physician's statement he is in a "precarious condition, both mentally and physically."

PROMINENT KLAN LAWYER SHOT TO DEATH IN OFFICE

Coburn Killed by Man Said to be Publicity Agent of Evans Faction; Fox, Alleged Slayer, Held Without Bail

Montgomery Advertiser

NEWSPAPER EDITOR CHARGED WITH MURDER

Report From Texas Says Fox Once Worked There and is From Alabama

11-6-23

ATLANTA, GA., Nov. 5—Philip E. Fox, publicity man for the Ku Klux Klan, late today shot and killed W. S. Coburn, Atlanta attorney and counsel for the faction fighting Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans and other officers of the order. Fox is held at police headquarters without bond under charge of murder.

Coburn was shot five times, and toppled over dead in his chair. The bullets were said to have been fired from the doorway of Coburn's office by Fox. The latter was arrested and taken to the police station.

Fox is said to have gone to the office of Coburn on the ninth floor of the Atlanta Trust Company building this afternoon to talk over Klan matters and was told by Coburn to come back later as he had several clients waiting.

Then, according to versions of the trouble, Fox returned, opened the door of Coburn's office and commenced firing. Three of the bullets are said to have struck Coburn in the head, while another lodged in his stomach.

Attorney Makes Arrest

Fox then went down to the fourth floor, it was said, where he was arrested by Attorney Spence, counsel for Chief of Police Beavers, who took him at once to the station house.

As attorney for W. J. Simmons, emperor of the Klan, Coburn filed suit in Fulton county court today asking for an injunction to prevent the organization of the women of the Ku Klux Klan.

Mrs. W. A. Holbrook, stenographer for Coburn, said that Fox came to the office and wanted to talk to Coburn about the Klan case in which Coburn is representing what is called the insurgent element.

When taken in custody Fox is quoted as saying:

"I am sorry to have had to do it, but I am glad he is dead. He was planning to ruin me, and I had just as soon be hung as hurt. What I did has no connection with the Ku Klux Klan. Coburn had threatened to ruin me and to publish affidavits affecting my character that were untrue."

Slayer Is Publicity Man.

W. T. Rogers, an employe in the office of Coburn, said that Fox is a publicity man for the klan and the editor of the Knight Hawk. He told the police that Coburn was talking over the telephone late this afternoon when Fox came to the office and asked to speak to Coburn, saying to Rogers:

"I am through with it all, and I am going home tonight."

Rogers said he wrote a note to Coburn saying: "talk to him," indicating Fox. On the same scrap of paper, Rogers said, Coburn wrote this reply: "I will, you wait outside."

The employes said he went into an adjoining room and shortly five pistol shots rang out. Rogers declared he saw Fox come out of Coburn's office door and throw a pistol back into the office. He said Fox ran down the steps to the next floor, Rogers following. There, he added, Attorneys Nat and George Spence stopped Fox and held him until he, Rogers, came up.

Dr. Fred B. Johnson, of San Antonia Texas, who is visiting at the home of W. J. Simmons, emperor of the klan told the police that Fox came to Simmons' home last night.

FOX KNOWN IN TEXAS.

DALLAS, TEXAS, Nov. 5.—Phillip E. Fox, reported in a dispatch from Atlanta, Ga., this evening to have shot and killed W. S. Coburn, Atlanta attorney, was formerly managing editor of the Dallas, Texas, Times Herald. He is believed here to have been born in Alabama.

This spring Mr. Fox resigned to take up some publicity work. He went to Washington.

GOV. WALKER DISHONORS HIS OFFICE AND BRINGS RIDICULE ON HIS STATE.

Atlanta Georgian

When it was announced that Clifford Walker, chief executive of the state of Georgia, had dined with the heads of the infamous masked klan, and had appealed to these klansmen to help him solve the problems of the state, there were many persons who were incredulous. They knew that Clifford Walker, in order to obtain the governorship, had stultified himself by joining the Ku Kluk Klan—an act by which he made himself subservient to the Emperors, Wizards, Kloklaks, Klabees and Kludds, and subscribed at the same time to the klan's code: Racial Prejudice, Religious Intolerance and Private Vengeance. 11-23-23

But, there were few Georgians who dreamed that the governor of this commonwealth would dishonor his office and bring ridicule on his state by attending a dinner at the bidding of klan officials; or that when once at the dinner he would put the problems of the people before the representatives of a super-government which is seeking to undermine the constituted authorities. Indeed, so surprised at this situation was a reporter of the Atlanta Constitution that he asked Gov. Walker:

"Did you speak as a klansman in making your appeal?"

Let the Constitution be quoted again:

"The governor said that he did not, but simply as the governor of the state, calling upon citizens of the state for their support on a matter vital to the state's welfare."

There you have a perfect picture of the spineless, futile individual who is now the governor of Georgia. There you have a demonstration also of the power of the klan, the existence of which remains yet undiscovered by the newspapers of Atlanta. And now you understand why Simmons, the discarded founder of the original masked gang, fought so hard to prevent Evans from throwing him out of the imperial headquarters.

Not only money was at stal when Simmons denounced Evan as "a liar, a thief and a blackmailer." Far below the surface was a bigger fight—the battle for the control of the governor of Georgia and, through the governor, the control of the state. It is small wonder, then, that Simmons fought on bitterly, that Evans retorted in kind. With such a stake, a slaying or two is less than nothing. So with "Coburn murdered" (to quote Simmons) it is not surprising that the discarded emperor called for a bodyguard.

Perhaps a great many Georgians do not take the klan seriously—do not realize how deep the roots of this miserable organization have struck in state, county and local politics. If this masked order did not possess a powerful influence, is it likely that a chief justice of the supreme court would smudge his ermine by attending a dinner at the bidding of a klan dragon? That is what Richard B. Russell did. His craving for office led him to attend, and mingle with those who sneer at the authority he represents.

What, too, of the presence of N. H. Ballard, state superintendent of schools, who holds an elective office—an office for which courage and intelligence are assumed to be prerequisites. We cannot see M. L. Brittain, former state superintendent of schools, attending a meeting given under Klan auspices. As for J. J. Brown, state commissioner of agriculture, and G. H. Howard, judge of the Fulton superior court—well, Brown and Howard have never claimed to be anything except politicians.

But the governor of Georgia—a klansman and a klan servant! That may be what the people of Georgia want; if they do, they have it.—Enquirer-Sun.

THE COBB FLOGGING.

It is gratifying that Cobb county officials, headed by Solicitor Wood, of the Blue Ridge circuit, are working with such dispatch and determination to bring to the justice the parties guilty of flogging a white woman near the Cobb county line on that county a few nights ago.

The mob spirit is promoted by the slowness of justice, and when court and enforcement officials expedite their obligations as they have in this case, it is worthy of commendable comment.

It is proper to bring the accused—those who have already been arrested—to trial at the earliest possible moment for two reasons: first if guilty, to serve as a lesson that Georgia will not tolerate such mob practices as alleged, and will promptly and commensurably punish such violations through constituted authority and to the full extent of the law; and second, if not guilty, as the defendants claim, most if not all of them alleging alibis, then the quick establishment of that innocence is due the young men, or any one or more of them from among those who stand charged with the crime.

It is a serious thing to be charged with the offense of flogging a woman; or with superseding constituted authority in any way and manner through alleged attempts at punitive "regulation" of community affairs.

When the law is made into waste-paper, and constituted authority is slapped in the face by self-appointed vigilantes, then government ceases, and anarchy begins.

Georgia has had too much of that sort of thing; and the state has been advertised throughout the world as tolerating it until it is time to call a halt, if it takes the combined military at the command of the governor to protect the integrity of the law, and to hold sacred and supreme the constitution upon which our government is based.

A crime of any kind—a violation of the statutes of a major or a minor nature, of a social or a material nature—should be promptly punished by the law that inhibits and prescribes the penalty.

The machinery of jurisprudence and of law enforcement, is set up for that purpose, and there are no extenuating circumstances to crime and no justification for crime.

A crime is a crime. If an alleged offense is legally justified it is not a crime.

There is no middle ground, and the law is no respecter of persons, whether dealing with social sins or the great civic problems of men of affairs.

The law is supreme and must be respected—

And it can never be so long as any irresponsible element is permitted to "regulate" the affairs of a community in defiance of law.

Nor can it be so long as enforcement officials permit criminal practices to be flaunted in their very faces without their full and solemn duty as prescribed by the oaths they take.

The Georgia mob spirit is passing, for which every good citizen is thankful.

The past twelve months made a new low water record for lynchings.

Courts are being speeded up, and the situation as to constituted enforcements is getting better.

The ground that has been gained in the interest of law and order must not be lost by any toleration of these inexcusable crimes of flogging.

The guilty must be brought to justice, and the innocent, if accused wrongfully, must be set right before their neighbors, and before the world.

ERNEST G. JACKS IS ACQUITTED BY JURY LATE ON THURSDAY

Ketona Dairyman, Accused of Participating in Flogging of Dr. Dowling, Is Given Freedom

SOLICITOR'S PLEA FOR CONVICTION IS DENIED

Demonstration in Court Room Arouses Ire of Judge; Verdict in 45 Minutes

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May —Earnest G. Jacks, Ketona man, was acquitted of the of kidnapping in connection with the flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, by a jury verdict brought into court shortly after five o'clock this afternoon.

Montgomery Advertiser 6-1-23

The jury deliberated upon the case about 45 minutes. A demonstration in the court room aroused the ire of Judge O. A. Steele, trying the case.

Members of Mob Excoriated.

Members of the whipping mob were excoriated as slanderers, propagandists, cowards and liars, who under cover of night's blackness lured a man of mercy from his home on the pretense that he was to relieve human suffering.

The health officer was pictured as a brave official, enforcing the laws of health without fear or favor. This, the counsellor declared, brought the enmity of the defendant.

Mr. McCoy stressed that "civilization is in a bad fix if a public official can be taken out in the dead of night and flogged unmercifully". He told the jury that "shafts of poisonous slander" by the mob and its sympathizers had failed to shake the testimony of the state's star witness, Charlie (Bo) Tison, confessed member of the mob who testified that Jacks also was a member of the gang.

Propaganda Reaches Court Room.

"His evidence stands out as a monument to civilization", the solicitor continued.

Further in his argument the state's counsellor charged that the "propaganda" had reached the court house, even to the grand jury.

"Recall, gentlemen", said Mr. McCoy, "one of these grand jurors asked Dr. Dowling 'how many women he had in his employ?'"

"That reeking, insidious propaganda has even penetrated this court. There are men in this court enemies of Dr. Dowling.

Attacks Star Witness.

Launchingan attack upon the state's star witness, Tison, Jim Burgen, attorney for the defendant, characterized the witness, "a half-wit and army deserter."

Spectators were severly reprimanded by Judge Steele when Mr. Burgens' shafts of irony and facetious utterances caused ripples of laughter to spread over a court room packed with an eager crowd that sought to catch every word that was said. The court threatened ejection of the next person to laugh audibly.

Mr. Burgen condemned mob rule and he said the defendant bore like sentiments, they both agreeing with Mr. McCoy fully on that question. Continuing he asserted that there was no evidence to connect the defendant with the outrage and he asked for acquittal. The attorney decried the testimony of the mob's victim in the recognition of men by their voices.

Hugh Locke, former judge of the court in chancery, defended the reputation of the defendant and excoriated state's witnesses.

"Gentlemen," he asked, "is there any man in the world who could have come into this respected court and presented a fairer reputation?"

Jacks has yet to stand trial on charge of assault with intent to murder in connection with the same offense. Solicitor Jim Davis, after the verdict, stated that this charge and charges against eight other men under indictment in the case will be prosecuted to the full extent of his power, regardless of the first verdict.

Demonstration Staged

A demonstration by spectators broke out as the verdict was read. Judge O. A. Steele rapped for order.

"Close that door, sheriff," he commanded. "I want those who made that demonstration to come to the front. I hope you will have manhood enough to admit taking part."

No one moved.

Two persons in the rear of the court room were ordered to the front by Judge Steele. They were sworn in, but were unable to identify any of the offenders. Judge Steele told them he had noticed they had taken no part in the applause, and thought he might get information from them as to who did.

"If you have any manhood in you," Judge Steele addressed the spectators, "you will come to the front."

Judge Commends Spectator

One man came forward. He said his name was H. M. Russell, that he had followed the lead of others in applauding, that it was his first time in court and that he had intended no violation of the law.

Judge Steele congratulated him upon his courage and declared that in view of the action of other offenders he would not make an example of him.

Arguments upon the case got under way shortly after court opened this morning.

Trial Started Monday

Jacks went on trial Monday morning. Chief witnesses for the state were Dr. Dowling, who declared he recognized the dairyman as one of the men in the flogging party, and C. W. Tyson, a dairyman, who admitted he had taken part in the affair and declared Jacks was also involved. The defense sought to establish an alibi for Jacks, and to show that Dr. Dowling had testified before the grand jury shortly after the offense that he had recognized none of the members of the band. They also attacked the testimony of Tison, alleging him to be mentally incompetent.

Ernest G. Jacks, Ketona dairyman, charged with kidnapping in connection with the whipping of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, May 17, 1922, was acquitted Thursday afternoon at 5:05 o'clock in circuit court after a jury had deliberated approximately 40 minutes.

The jury was released for deliberation at 4:25 o'clock, immediately after Judge O. A. Steele had completed his charge.

Shortly after 5 o'clock, the court was notified that a verdict had been reached and the 12 men were led into the courtroom.

R. J. Keefe, the foreman, stood out and answered for the body.

"Gentlemen, have you reached a verdict?" asked the judge. "Yes, sir." replied Keefe, then read the following the verdict, "We, the jury, find E. G. Jacks, the defendant, not guilty."

Reading Followed by Applause

The words were scarcely uttered when a number of spectators cheered and applauded. At this juncture Judge Steele ordered the bailiff to bring the persons guilty of the disturbance before him. No one voluteered and the court summoned several sitting in different parts of the court to come before him. Each was asked who took part in the applause. Answers in each case was negative.

Finally, however, H. M. Russell, a youth, volunteered that he had been guilty of applauding. The court commended him for his truthfulness and condemned the many others who would not admit participation in the demonstration. Judge Steele, further referring to the demonstration, declared that "it seemed that the people had lost all respect for the courts and for the law." Earlier in the afternoon, the judge had warned the spectators that the court would not tolerate a demonstration of any kind and that the digrity of the court would be maintained. Judge Steele then discharged the jury.

JUDGE H. D. CLAYTON ATTACKS KU KLUX IN SPEECH AT EUFAULA

Declaration of Federal Jurist Followed by Hooded and Robed Klansmen Parade Quarter Mile Long

MASONIC BAND FURNISHES MUSIC FOR FESTIVITIES

Many Touching Scenes Witnessed as Old Friends Warmly Greet Each Other

BY ATTICUS MULLIN

EUFAULA, ALA., June 13.—Parading three hundred strong in full regalia immediately following an attack on the Ku Klux Klan by Judge Henry D. Clayton, in an open air speech tonight, furnished a striking coincidence in the Eufaula centennial celebration.

Montgomery Advertiser 6-14-23

Addressing five thousand people gathered in the beautiful Cowikee Community open park, Judge Henry D. Clayton, in a masterly speech declared that there is no place in the United States government for an invisible empire. Judge Clayton said "no man should be tried by a secret conclave."

Judge Clayton was addressing his hearers on the early history of Eufaula and digressed from his subject to state that he did not believe in the Ku Klux Klan under the present form of government in the United States and decried the movement which seeks to set up an invisible government.

Parade Quarter Mile Long

Immediately following his address, which closed at 9:55, a long line of white robed and hooded men began the march past the amphitheatre where the citizens and visitors were assembled. There was no one who believed that the parade was staged as a protest against the remarks of the jurist, but that it was just merely a conincident that the parade which had evidently been arranged several days ago should come off just after the speech. The parade was about a quarter of a mile long and attracted a bit of comment.

Before the throngs began to journey to the country club for the big dance which closed the Wednesday evening's program, announcement was maue that the Christ Child float was the winner in the parade during the day in which a large number of contestants were entered.

Homes Open to Visitors

From 6 until 12 Wednesday evening twelve Eufaula homes were thrown open to visitors and practically every visitor within the city limits passed through the portals of these hospitable homes.

The festivities come to a close Thursday evening with a grand ball at the country club folowing a great pageant at Carnegie library earlier in the evening.

The feature address of the day iwll be delivered at 11:15 Thursday morning in the First Methodist church by Governor William W. Brandon who has been in the Bluff City mingling with the celebrators.

During the early afternoon a luncheon will be served at the country club. Music by the Cowikee band and an "Old Settlers' Tea" at five o'clock are among the features of the closing program.

Spectacular Parade Is Feature

A spectacular parade through the streets of Eufaula was one of the many features of the program Wednesday. It was a parade which would do credit to any city in the country.

Eufaula Attracts Attention

If Eufaula is as neat and trim at all times as it is for the centennial, then indeed we have a miracle city. Eufaula has broad streets and down the center of the main streets are parkways. The parkway lawns are neatly kept there are flowers and plants and every evidence is given of someone's attention besides mother nature's.

Women Form Organization.

The secret is the women of Eufaula. While the men were planning and working on details for the centennial the women, or some of them were equally as active. There is an organziation here known as Rotary Anns. The Rotary Anns are wives of members of the Rotary club of Eufaula. The Eufaula Rotary Anns are one of about 15 clubs of like character in the United States.

The Rotary Anns are organized on the same lines as their husbands. They have the same committees. They have the same weekly luncheons. When their "hubbies" are lunching at the Bluff City hotel, "friend wife" is equally engaged at the tea room.

Rotary Anns Clean up Town.

The Rotary Anns concieved the idea of civic helpfullness and activity. Hear what Mrs. Sig Bloom says of the Rotary Anns and their work. "We felt we could do some good so we organized, we wives of members of the Eufaula Rotary club. We went to work to clean up Eufaula, not only for the home-coming but for all time as well. We met almost perfect cooperation. The results you can see for yourself. Of course we did not get by at first without some bumps. But we determined to put over a "cleaned up Eufaula" and you can see whether or not we succeeded."

And they have certainly succeeded and Eufaula is one of the cleanest and prettiest towns in the country. More power to the Rotary Anns, even if they are not recognized by the international Rotary body.

The floats were pretty the music furnished by the Masonic Home band of Montgomery and the Cowikee mills band of Eufaula, added just the touch necessary to make the occasion a great success.

Early Wednesday morning the crowds began to gather in Eufaula for the parade. The wide and beautiful streets of the Bluff City were filled with automobiles and with visitors. The Eufaula spirit was in the air. The sun shone brilliantly with just a trace of cloud. And if in atonement for the wretched start of the centennial Tuesday night from a weather standpoint, a cool breeze tempered the sun's rays.

Familiar Greetings.

"Hello Bill", "Hello, Bob", hello this and that and the other could be heard on every hand. Hundreds of Eufaulans had gathered on their native heath. They greeted one another cordially. Old boyhood recollections were recounted. Friends and boyhood playmates met who had not seen each other in a span of forty years. Eufaulans came back from the four points of the compass. Men and women came greeted each other on the streets. Men greeted staid matrons whom they had not seen in years and years. Perhaps they were childhood sweethearts. Perhaps the man had grown sons and daughters of his own and perhaps the beautiful daughter of Eufaula, beautiful still in spite of the passing years was a grandmother. It made no difference. The bloom of youth came back to faces long since wrinkled by the hand of time.

Many Touching Scenes.

To attempt to tell of the scenes on the streets of Eufaula Wednesday would perhaps lie beyond the power of a writer far more able than this correspondent. Not an Eufaulan himself, he at times almost felt sorry that fate had not ordained his birth on the bluffs of the Chattahoochee. The spirit, the Eufaula spirit is wonderful, never more wonderfully known and expressed than at the home-coming.

Colonel Hamp Graves led the parade. It was no new thing for Colonel Graves. He has led parades before but perhaps he never led one which caused him greater pleasure and pride than that of Wednesday morning.

The parade was made up of floats and automobiles in the following order, automobiles containing the city officials of Eufaula including Mayor H. H. Conner. This was followed by the automobile containing the ex-mayors of Eufaula. There followed this the machine carrying the circuit judge and county officials.

Many Floats in Line.

Floats in order follow: Alabama Pecan Company; Foy Brothers, Elks, Rotary, Kiwanis, Sapp Clothing Company, Whitlock Jewelry Company, Roth Clothier, Gift Shop, Eufaula Bakery, Queen Caroline II and court, American Legion, Oppenheimer, Cowikee Mills, county health department, Central of Georgia railway, Buick Auto Company, Pierian club, Holleman and Glenn, "The Christ Child Circle", Service Star, U. D. C., Lanier Club, Symposium club, D. A. R., Music Lovers club, James T. Kendall, Gulf Refining Company, Thompson Nurseries, Grade Crossings, Fire department.

Perfect Order Maintained.

Perfect order was maintained before during and after the parade. It moved without a single hitch. The broad streets of Eufaula furnished ample room for the great throng to view the parade. There was no jostling and pushing, no crowding into the center of the streets as so often happens in similar events in Montgomery. Comment was frequently made on the good order being maintained during the home-coming.

FLOGGING TRIALS MAY BE CONTINUED

Solicitor in Birmingham Expected to Ask for Continuance in Cases

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 4.—Special to The Advertiser.—Trials of five men charged with flogging Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, set for Tuesday morning, in all probability will be continued, it was indicated here Monday afternoon.

Sam Cargo, Frank Prosch, G. G. Williams, George C. Moore and Charles Tison are the six men whose trials are scheduled to begin Tuesday morning. Porter Newman and W. M. Yerby, two others, are slated to face trial during the week of June 11.

Ernest G. Jacks, Ketona dairyman, acquitted last week on a charge of kidnapping, in connection with the Dowling case, also faces the additional charge of assault with intent to murder, growing out of his alleged connection with the whipping.

Solicitor Davis, it is believed, will ask for a continuance when the cases are called Tuesday, and in event it is granted, they will probably be passed until the fall term of the circuit court

NEWMAN ACQUITTED IN FLOGGING CHARGE

One More Verdict in Connection With Assault on Dr. Dowling is For Defense

Advertiser Bureau,
Birmingham, Alabama,
By Hugh Sparrow.

Porter N. Newman, plumber, charged with kidnapping and assault with intent to murder, growing out of the abduction and flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, was acquitted by a jury in the circuit court Saturday night at 7:25 o'clock, one hour and 45 minutes after the jury had been relieved for deliberation.

Newman is the second defendant to be acquitted of charges in connection with the Dowling whipping, E. G. Jacks, dairyman, having been found not guilty by a jury here two weeks ago.

Following completion of Judge Harrington P. Heflin's charge, the case was given to the jury and the body retired for deliberation at 5:40 o'clock. At 7:25 o'clock the bailiff was notified that a decision had been reached, and Judge Heflin was summoned to the court. He arrived a few minutes later and received the verdict of "not guilty."

Prior to the return of the jury, Judge Heflin warned the few people congregated in the court room against any demonstration, and as a consequence the verdict was received without display. Newman was formally released after the written verdict had been rewritten and altered to make it comply with the law, and the defendant then held a brief reception in the courthouse in which attorneys and friends congratulated him for the acquittal.

Newman Speaks

Newman made a short address in which he declared that because of his innconce he had felt no anxiety as to his fate.

Testimony was completed Saturday morning at 11:30 o'clock, after Newman had occupied the stand virtually the entire morning and had categorically denied all knowledge of the attack on the health official.

Argument was opened shortly after noon Saturday, when John P. McCoy, assistant solicitor, began an hour's resume of the case. Mr. McCoy bitterly attacked the defendant's alibi, terming it foolish and an insult to intelligent jurors. The speaker was strong in his denunciation of "outside influences" which he said had been constantly at work in behalf of the defendant and had taken an active part in the defense of the first defendant.

In referring to the note introduced by the defense purporting to have been written by Mrs. W. M. Frazier, summoning Newman to her home to repair an electric light, the handwriting of the date, "May 17, 1922," he declared, obviously was not that of the body of the note.

George Frey, local young attorney, opened the defense's argument. The speaker carefully went into the details of the case and settled upon the testimony of C. W. Tison, as the basis for a vitriolis verbal assault. He was followed by Vassar Allen. The latter severly assailed Dr. Dowling, especially criticising him for what he termed withholding of information and facts from the grand jury that first investigated the flogging.

Solicitor Jim Davis, representing the state, closed with a ringing plea to the jury to try the case on its legal merits and weigh all evidence in the case without fear or favor. "Then", he said, "you will find the evidence from start to finish shows the defendant giulty of taking a hand in this foul attack on Dr. Dowling, and even greater crime against civilization itself."

Judges' Charge.

Judge Heflin delivered a brief ten minute charge, beginning at 5:15 o'clock, in which he summed up the case and instructed the jurors as to the legal phases. Judge Heflin also dwelt on the duty of a juror and admonished them as to fairness in weighing the evidence.

Newman's testimony in the main was a complete denunciation of Tison's accusations, and an explanation of his supposed presence at the home of Mrs. Frazier. He said that he had sold her an Aladdin lamp on May 10 of 1922. On the day of May 17 he said, she had sent him a note explaining that the light would not work and asking that he repair it. He went to the home and remained until 9 o'clock. After that he returned to his home and retired.

With the acquittal of Newman, seven others indicted in connection with the attack, remain to be tried. In all probability the remaining cases will be passed over to the fall term of the circuit court or else will be nol prossed.

1500 KLANSMEN IN PROTEST PARADE

Demonstration at Tuskegee Against Negro Officers in U.S. Hospital for Veterans.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 4.—Tuskegee Wednesday was tense with excitement after a demonstration of 1,500 klansmen Tuesday night against the installation of negro officers at the new million dollar negro veterans' hospital here.

Led by a white-clad masker carrying an American flag, closely followed by another bearing a fiery cross, the long line of masked figures paraded the streets, then drove in automobiles for a repetition of the demonstration at the Tuskeegee Institute. There they paraded around the grounds in cars, then on foot.

A negro who gave his name as John J. Calhoun, Jr., who arrived Tuesday morning to take charge of the hospital accounts, relieving a young white woman, boarded a northbound train at 7 o'clock at night. No threats had been made against him, it was reported.

KLANSMEN PARADE TUSKEGEE STREETS

Silently Protest Placing of Negro Personnel at Hospital

Tuskegee, Ala., July 3.—More than 1,000 white robed Ku Klux Klansmen, said to be representative of every section of Alabama, tonight filed through the streets of Tuskegee in silent protest, to the placing of a Negro personnel at the Negro war veterans' hospital hre.

Numbers of cars came from Montgomery filled with silent white robed figures to take part in the parade of protest.

Alabama Klansmen Parade in Protest On Tuskegee Streets

Tuskegee, Ala., July 5.—Streets lined with Macon county citizens tonight a thousand silent troopers of the Ku Klux Klan as they stealthily marched the streets of Tuskegee, in protest against negro officials at the government hospital for disabled negro veterans here. The parade was declared to represent the spirit of 50,000 Alabama klansmen.

The klansmen, in automobiles, toured the public highways of the countryside before beginning their march through the city streets. Intense interest has been shown here recently over the threatened move of the federal government to place negro officials at the hospital here.

While the klansmen paraded, in the distance was the flare of a fiery cross 45 feet high, symbol of the Ku Klux Klan.

MAN BEATEN, POISONED BY MOB IN ALABAMA

Forced to Drink Poison After Flogging.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 4.—Police were today trying to solve mystery attached to the maltreatment and poisoning of James W. Roff, Fairfield citizen, last night by a gang of men who abducted him. Roff was bound with wire and forced to drink a liquid which doctors said was poison of some character. Prompt action of hospital attaches saved the man's life.

Roff told the police that he believed the attempt on his life was a climax to threatening letters he had been receiving for a month.

An emblematic ring was torn from the man's hand after he had been stripped to the waist and otherwise maltreated. He was carried some distance in an automobile, then dumped into the yard of a relative of his employer.

Slowly, but surely nevertheless, the Ku Klux Klan is driving the government into a position where, like the Grant administration of many years ago, it will be compelled to take a hand to suppress the lawless and disloyal organization. Witness its effort at Tuskegee, Ala., this week, to thwart the publically expressed will of the President of the United States in the matter of the personnel of the official staff of our U. S. Veterans' hospital at Tuskegee.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 31.—Receivership for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was asked in a petition filed in the Fulton County Superior Court today by David M. Rittenhouse and others of Philadelphia, who charged gross mismanagement to W. H. Evans imperial wizard. 6-2-23

The petition also charged that the imperial wizard and W. J. Simmons, Klan Emperor, entered into collusion in settling the recent controversy involving control of the organization.

Judge Humphreys signed an order temporarily restraining the use of any Klan funds and citing the defendants to show cause before him June 9 why the petition should not be granted. Judge Humphreys also restrained the use of Klan money to pay expenses of the meeting of the Kloncilium called by Imperial Wizard Evans to meet in Washington, June 1 and 2.

Can't Remove Headquarters

The defendants, likewise, are temporarily enjoined from removing the headquarters of the Klan from Atlanta. Twenty other Klansmen are named in the petition in addition to Imperial Wizard Evans and Emperor Simmons. The petition also charges Mr. Evans and Col. Simmons with having violated the Klan's patriotic principles by trying to convert the organization into a purely money-making machine.

Dr. Evans is charged with having appointed Bertram G. Christian, head of the department of propagation in Illinois under an alleged agreement that he and Christian would split $5 of the initiation fee on a 50-50 basis.

Imperial Wizard Evans, the petition alleged, maintains a large espionage system and on one occasion, the petitioon alleged he authorized an expenditure of $68,000 to agents who were to give him information which would aid him in retaining supreme power over the Klan.

It was further charged that this and similar acts on the part of Dr. Evans and his associates is disintegrating the Invisible Empire and causing rebellion in many quarters. The petition alleged he authorized an leged careless manner in which the Klan's funds are handled; that the imperial wizard has called a meeting of the imperial kloncilium in Washington, D. C., for June 1 and 2 and that between $100,000 and $150,000 of the Klan's money will be spent for the expenses of those attending unless the courts forbid such action.

Secession Threatened

The petition reviewed alleged dissatisfaction among klansmen and asserted that secession is being considered in many quarters and that plans are on foot in a number of States to withdraw from the order, and establish separate organizations.

In the allegations the plaintiffs charged Imperial Wizard Evans with using large sums of the Klan's money for his personal use in addition to his salary of $15,000 a year. It is charged that Dr. Evans authorized the expenditure of $50,000 in a recent political campaign in Chicago and that other money was spent in attempting to influence the press in that city.

The petition stated that prior to 1921 the Klan had annual total receipts of $1,000,000 and in 1921 received $900,000.

The plaintiffs include: David M. Rittenhouse, Frank D. Collins, Robt. A. Bradshaw, Wm. Goudis, R. Oaks and B. F. Graham of Philadelphia, Thad D. Collins, and John Jeffries of New York.

Those named as defendants: H. W. Evans, W. J. Simmons, Fred L. Savage, H. K. Ramsey, H. C. Montgomery, Brown Harwood, Tom Akers, T. J. McKinnon, M. N. Furney, Gutzon Borglum, P. S. Enteridge, B. H. Sullivan, N. B. Forrest, O. A. Ridley, T. J. Shirley of Birmingham, A. B. Booth of New Orleans, B. C. Stephenson of Columbus, O., Charles J. Arbison, Indianapolis, J. A. Comer, Little Rock, Henry A. Grady, Clinton.

The State and Secret Societies.

Unauthorized use of state property by members of the Ku-Klux klan at Springfield is a matter which demands the investigation ordered by a unanimous vote in the Illinois house of representatives. The klan is a secret organization, the methods and purposes of which require further elucidation, and no public official is justified in permitting it to use public property or expend public money for objects not known to or sanctioned by the duly constituted authorities.

The klan's right to absolute secrecy, by the way, will be passed upon by the courts in a test case of unusual interest and importance. The New York legislature has enacted a law requiring all secret, oath-bound societies to file with the secretary of state sworn copies of their respective constitutions, by-laws, oaths and lists of membership. This measure, general in form, was intended to reach the Ku-Klux klan and do away with its secrecy and irresponsible character.

The leading klansmen of New York have taken the position that secrecy on the part of voluntary organizations is a fundamental right of which the legislature cannot deprive them. They declare that they will refuse to comply with the law. The klan, they say, must remain secret or lose its function and influence.

Refusal to file the prescribed statement will lead to a test of the law. If the law is upheld, the klan will have to obey it. In that case other states doubtless will enact similar statutes.

The Klan vs. the Law.

Springfield Illinois Journal 5-29-23

All that has been published in the news columns of the American newspapers relative to the Ku Klux Klan's connection with outbreaks of mob law in various parts of the country, and all that has been charged against that organization in the way of its assumption of superiority over the law are more than justified by the Chicago Tribune story of Klan gatherings in New York State last Saturday night, wherein it was decided to ignore the new law of the state that requires all secret orders within the state to furnish the authorities with the names of their members. At these meetings, we are told, open defiance to the new statute was preached and decided upon and the announcement was given out that "no law must tear down the veil of secrecy that surrounds the identity of our klansmen."

This law, of course, applies not to one nor to two but to all secret orders within the state. If any were exempted the others would have a right to protest against the discrimination. But since all are treated alike in the scope of the act they must all be treated alike in the enforcement of it. Now we have not seen where any other order outside of the Klux has decided to ignore or defy the law and for this reason the motive of the Kluxers must seem strangely incongruous with their professions. Surely ought they to be proud rather than ashamed of their names if they are standing four square behind their professions of 100 per cent Americanism. No good American can believe that his Americanism is something to hide or something to be masked with hoods and gowns. If there be any person or persons unwilling or ashamed to profess his or their idea of American principles open and above board then all such are unworthy to be American citizens and are a disgrace to such citizenship.

The Ku Klux Klan has the right to oppose the new statute, but, since it is the law of the state, there is only one course of opposition open to it or to any other individual or body that is really American. Any opponent can appeal to the courts of the land and leave it to the judicial branch of the government to decide whether or not the law conforms to the federal constitution. But the law is the law and it is binding upon each and every man in the state until the highest court of the nation should say it is in conflict with the constitution. And if the United States supreme court should admit such a suit and should pronounce the law valid then there would remain but one final recourse to its opponents. They could appeal to the voters of the state to elect a Legislature that would repeal the enactment.

If the Ku Klux Klan might be successful in one or the other of such attempts why, of course, it would then be absolved from the necessity of continuing to comply with the requirements of the statute. But, unless and until the law is either declared unconstitutional or else repealed, the Klan, and every other secret organization, are bound absolutely, and without escape to observe it in its entirety as well as in its smallest detail. To resist the law as it stands or as it shall continue to stand would be for the resisters to set themselves up in rebellion to the state of New York. And the state of New York could not do otherwise than bring to bear every power at its command to suppress such a rebellion and to punish adequately the rebels.

In the many lawless acts already committed throughout the country either by klansmen or else by persons operating under the guise of the klan, the law of the land has been trampled upon without any one being punished, because of various reasons it has been difficult to procure individual convictions. But there can be no mistaking the guilt or guilty if the Ku Klux Klan as an organization sets out to ignore or to defy a plain law. Nor should there be any mistaking the course the state of New York would be compelled to follow in suppressing this threatened rebellion.

Petitioners for Ku-Klux Receivership Charge $50,000 Was Spent by Wizard.

SIMMONS SAYS INNER CIRCLE TO SAVE KLAN

Charges Imperial Wizard Evans Broke Faith—Knights Kamelia Original Plan, Claim.

The Georgian 6-7-23

The fight between William Joseph Simmons, founder and emperor of the Ku-Klux Klan, and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, for control of the organization, was reflected Wednesday in a statement by Emperor Simmons, charging Evans with breach of faith and proclaiming establishment of the Order Knights Kamelia as an inner circle of klansmen, a "primary order of knighthood."

"To save the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan from spoliation and destruction," the proclamation asserts, "I have determined to establish the Knights Kamelia, and thereby give the klansmen of the invisible empire at least the opportunity to transfer to this primary order of knighthood and establish themselves upon the foundation as laid in the beginning."

In a brief interview with The Georgian, supplementing his proclamation, Emperor Simmons said Wednesday morning that organization of the Knights Kamelia was merely the fulfillment of his original plans for the klan, which contemplated four orders of knighthood—the first, or probationary order, the only one so far established; the Knights Kamelia as the second, or primary order of knighthood, and two higher orders not yet established.

PERSONAL POWER.

"In this action," he told The Georgian, "I am merely carrying out my work of developing the organization—fulfilling the powers which are vested in me as emperor and in no one else."

At the same time, the proclamation was interpreted by klansmen as definitely indicating a continuance of the contentions between Emperor Simmons and Wizard Evans, thought to have been settled by agreement which ended litigations between the two in the Fulton Superior Court. One of the publicly announced provisions of this agreement was that opposition to establishment of the Kamelia, an organization for women, fostered by Emperor Simmons, would be withdrawn by Wizard Evans and his administration.

However, at the Washington meeting of the klan, authority was given by a majority of members of the kloncilium, or governing body of the klan, to affiliate a number of women's organizations with the klan under the title "Women of the Ku-Klux Klan." This order left out the Kamelia, Emperor Simmons' organization for women. In this connection the emperor's proclamation Wednesday said:

VIOLATES CONTRACT.

"This action on the part of the imperial kloncilium in repudiating by explicit designation the Kamelia and by adopting other numerous organizations of women, was not only in violation of contract between H. W. Evans and myself, but was also in violation of a decree entered in the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, and further still was a violation of the original charter which defines that male members only shall be admitted to the order.

"The Kamelia is as much my child as is the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan—one is my daughter and the other is my son.

"I am, therefore, establishing a new and separate order of klansmen with which the order of Kamelia may co-work and from which the order of Kamelia may expect and receive protection and co-operation."

At the imperial palace, in Peachtree Road, the seat of the klan's administrative authority, it was said that all imperial officers were in Washington. The inquiry of The Atlanta Georgian as to the attitude of Wizard Evans' administration toward Emperor Simmons' latest move drew from a representative of the imperial officers this statement:

"We have no statement to make at this time in connection with Colonel Simmons' decision to found a Knights Kamelia. It is only a prolongation of the unhappy controversy that has occupied public attention for some time past.

"We believe that the public is sick and tired of the constant public airing of matters which properly belong within the klan itself, and in view of this belief, we have no comment to make upon Colonel Simmons' statement."

At the palace, word from Wizard Evans was expected some time in the day. Information of the emperor's proclamation was sent him Tuesday evening.

EVANS FAVORED.

News dispatches have made it apparent that the Washington meeting has been distinctly favorable to the administration of Wizard Evans, resulting in resolutions approving the Evans administration and in such actions as that which ignored Emperor Simmons' cherished organization for women coadjutors of the klan.

Emperor Simmons' move was the proclamation founding the Order Knights Kamelia. Development of the Kamelia, his organization for women, will continue, according to a statement by him Wednesday, supplementing his proclamation, in spite of the kloncilium's failure to indorse it.

Emperor Simmons explained that the Kamelia, the women's organization, is a separately chartered institution, independent of the klan, and not to be affected by any action of the kloncilium. He explained that the Order Knights Kamelia, which he had just established, is also to be separate from the government now directing the affairs of "the first or probationary order of Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan." In this connection the proclamation said:

"The members now on probation in the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan are under the administration of the imperial wizard and the imperial kloncilium, while the Order of Knights Kamelia will be under my control and direction, with such men as I may designate as members of my cabinet.

"I am impelled to promulgate the Knights Kamelia because of the restiveness that obtains among probationary klansmen throughout the country. There has been no way opened to advancement—no progress has been made—no constructive work has been done. Klansmen identified with the organization from its foundation have been held in a state of probation for years. They have not been indoctrinated with the principles or the philosophies of the order. They are unfamiliar with the great purposes of the founder. They have been given no definite objects to be attained.

"Everything that I have striven to build during the years gone by is in peril of being subverted to personal, political and sordid ends.

"This Order Knights Kamelia will also afford a refuge to klansmen who are exposed to the exercise of arbitrary and capricious power. A large number of excellent klansmen of the probationary order have already been banished without trial and without defense, simply because they did not yield in subserviency to authority running mad or lend themselves without protest to policies of tyranny."

Condoning Crime.

The Commercial Appeal 5-23-23 Memphis, Tenn.

That distinguished impresario of the nightshirt and pillow slip brigade, Captain Skipwith, has recently been touring Mississippi reciting the Iliad of the kluckers. The captain should get in line with the rest of his bunch who do business around Mer Rouge. These men generally deny for the Klan knowledge of or conspiracy with the Mer Rouge murders.

They got to the point where they denied that there were murders. But Skipwith in several of his speeches, notably at Clarksdale, stated that Wat Daniel and Richard defied the Klan to take them. The Klan, he said, accepted the defi and took them. They were taken by twelve klansmen and when last seen that number dwindled to six. Then the captain adds "I do not know whether they are dead or not and to be honest with you, I don't care."

This is a strange statement from a man protesting that he is for the supremacy of the law and that he believes in the law. It is lawlessness. It is tantamount to a confession of sympathy for murders. He does not know whether the men are dead or not, but he does not care.

If these men are dead, they are dead by violence. It is just as bad for a kluxer to murder as for a non-kluxer. Murder is murder and the status of the individual murdered cannot be considered by law courts and was not considered by the framers of the constitution.

No good American rejoices or is indifferent when murder is done. But even so, Skip is no worse for condoning the murder than those who know the thing was done to deny it. Each position is anarchistic.

Daniel was single, Richard was married. Daniel's watch and belt buckle were identified on the body. Certain clothing was identified. An eminent pathologist made an examination of the bodies. The evidence showed, and it was admitted, that Daniel and Richard were kidnaped and lectured. They made light of their assailants. The father of Daniel was whipped. The two men were seen to have been taken away by masked men. They have never since been seen alive.

If the kluckers are as far reaching in their organization as they say they are, it would be a great triumph for them to turn up Daniel and Richard alive. The widow of one and the father of one would be relieved. But any one reading the record is driven to the conclusion that these two men were killed. Probably Captain Skipwith has taken a more logical course, if there is any such thing as logic in lawlessness. But it is just as bad to be indifferen tto crime or to palliate it as to take part in it.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923

POWERFUL BODY OF CITIZENS IN COUNTRY STARTED

Chicago Defender 2-10-23

L. L. L.'s Originated With Those Who Oppose Views of Hated Ku Klux Klan

Something is in the air.

Something highly important, which commands instant attention wherever a hint of it is whispered.

Many people have heard rumors. Numerous inquiries from those who want to know more about the reports which are coming to their ears have reached this office.

At present little is known about the matter except this one positive, pertinent fact: A fraternal order, more secret than King Pharoah's tomb, more powerful than the Ku Klux Klan, more widespread than any other group or combination of human beings of any kind, degree or circumstance, has been formed and its membership is growing by leaps and bounds.

With the irresistible rush of a western prairie fire this order is sweeping across the continent and Chicago and its vicinity have already begun to feel its influence.

Efforts to learn something of its origin, extent and purpose resulted in gleaning these facts:

The order is known as L. L. L.

What that means is not revealed and it is understood it is never revealed to any but members, but this much is known: It is the opposite to everything that K. K. K. means, and everybody knows what those dread symbols stand for.

The L. L. L. originated with those who oppose the horrors of the Ku Klux Klan, its night riding, its seizing upon citizens in their homes and the resulting abductions, floggings and murders. The L. L. L. believes that no organization which declares against the Colored Race, Jews and Catholics as a whole can be American in character or patriotic at heart.

Advancement of any people can only be secured by mutual co-operation, by education and training, by bearing and forbearing, by recognition of kindred rights and by rendering mutual service.

These views, as contrasted with the doctrine of hatred and repression, have so appealed to people generally that it is reported more than a million members have already been enrolled in the L. L. L., and now comes the news that the great order has widened the scope of its influence and has begun admitting those who are as much interested and perhaps more than any others could be—the citizens of the Colored Race.

Branches are springing up in all the large cities and many of the smaller ones. The influence of the order is felt everywhere. The man who waits upon you in hotels, departments stores, groceries, insurance, railroad ticket offices, restaurants or dining cars may be a brother. The man who shaves you or presses your suit or drives your machine or cuts your lawn or sits next to you on the street car or train may have the password. He won't even hint at it unless he sees that you are a brother and worthy of confidence.

It is positively uncanny the way this new idea is spreading. Equal rights, protection for all, constant watchfulness, supreme intelligence—these are its manifestations. The supreme headquarters is constantly gathering information, sending out warnings, thwarting trouble, turning aside vengeance and all the time promoting the welfare and working out the advancement of the Race.

One of the most baffling situations is that of the man who subscribes to all these doctrines and becomes anxious to join, who wants to affiliate himself with this great onward movement which is sweeping like a whirlwind. He doesn't know to whom to apply. The silence of eternity envelops the whole proposition. Its head is unknown, and yet it must have a head—some great genius whose virile power is behind every move, silently directing. It must have a headquarters to handle the great bulk of records, reports, instructions, etc., but nobody knows either the head or the headquarters.

It is understood membership at present is only by invitation. The lucky individual receives a communication stating that he has been recommended for membership, and is privileged to join. If he does not take advantage of the opportunity it passes to some other person, and the mysteries are withheld from him.

An eye which never sleeps is the emblem of the order. The only name by which it is known to the uninitiated is the L. L. L. It is understood to be the greatest benefactor to the African Race since the sainted Abraham Lincoln decreed that men shall not hold men in bondage but that under the Stars and Stripes of America all men shall be free and equal.

In the meantime we can't help wondering—what in the world is it?

NEWARK CHURCH WELCOMES KLAN

(Crusader Service.) 3-14-23

NEWARK, March 13.—Forty robed and hooded members of the Ku Klux Klan strode down the main aisle of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Newark during services, and filed into seats reserved for them, while the choir and congregation solemnly chanted "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

The church was crowded as Rev. Parris E. Greely, pastor, had announced at the morning services that the Klansmen would visit the church for the purpose of revealing the true aims of the organization.

When the organist finished the hymn, the Klansmen left their seats and mounted the pulpit, where one was introduced by the Rev. Greeley as the "speaker of the evening, Mr. Exalted Cyclops."

ALBANY, N. Y., March 13.—The Walker Bill, designed to unmask the Klan in New York, has been set for a hearing March 21.

THIRTY N. Y. POLICE IN KLAN

It became known last night that detectives of the bomb squad, under Lieutenant James J. Gegan, during the last three weeks had secretly investigated a report that detectives and uniformed policemen were members of the Ku Klux Klan. It was also revealed that one detective sergeant recently had been reduced to patrol duty and sent to an obscure precinct in Brooklyn because of his activities for the Klan.

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT UNMASKED

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, March 10.—Chief R. E. O'Brien and a large detail of police raided the local headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan here one day last week. All the documents, records and regalia of the order were taken. In looking over the roster of members, the names of George E. McCord, superintendent of the city schools, and Dr. S. R. Hutchings and H. C. Copenhaver, members of the School Board, were found.

TWELVE LEAVE MOREHOUSE PARISH

MONROE, La., March 10.—Twelve residents of Morehouse Parish have departed within the last few days for Marfa, Tex., in the Rio Grande Valley, to make their homes, it was learned today at the sheriff's office at Bastrop. Among them were several who figured in the Morehouse hooded band investigations, most prominently of whom were Care and Laurie Calhoun.

KU KLUX KOPS

(Editorial from N. Y. Tribune.)

Indiscriminate persecutions of men merely because they are members of the Ku Klux Klan merely enables them to pose as martyrs and excites sympathy for an organization which could be better attacked by ridicule. Issuing orders to "drive the Klan out of town," as Mr. Hylan did in a moment of excitability, is not an effective means of suppressing Klanism.

But the discovery that thirty members of the sheet and pillowcase organization have been patrolling beats as metropolitan policemen appears to call for action. The Klan is un-American in its purpose and prone to be lawless in its methods. It is rather disquieting to learn that men who wear blue uniforms by day sport white robes and hoods by night, even if they do not engage in mob violence.

It may pain Mr. Hylan to ask Mr. Enright to get rid of such members of the force as are proved to belong to the Klan. But in the circumstances that seems to be the only course open to him.

Leaders of Klansmen Clash Over Relations to Kamelia

The proclamation to klansmen to the effect that they should not participate in the formation of women's organizations was issued in accordance with instructions of the national klonvocation of the Ku Klux Klan, which met here last fall, it was declared Saturday in a statement authorized by W. H. Evans, imperial wizard. Atlanta Constitution

The imperial wizard's statement was in reply to the statement made earlier in the day by William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the klan, in which he took issue with the recent proclamation of the imperial wizard forbidding klan members to identify themselves with any woman's organization. 4/1/23

"Last October it was brought to attention of the convention that a number of women's organizations existed, some of which sought to be recognized as women's auxiliaries to the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," said Wizard Evans.

"The klonvocation, which is the law-making body of the klan, ruled that the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan should form no woman's auxiliary and should recognize no woman's organization formed on klan principles until a special committee should investigate and report to the imperial kloncilium on or before May 1, 1923.

"The same resolution gave the imperial kloncilium full power to act in this matter. It named a chairman of the investigating committee and empowered the imperial wizard to appoint the rest of the members. This committee has not yet reported."

The statement from Emperor Simmons was issued in the form of a proclamation signed by him as "founder and El Magnus" of the Kamelia, a woman's organization fostered by him and as "founder and emperor" of the Ku Klux Klan

"I now proclaim that any klansman and that every klansman has the same inalienable and indisputable right to participate in the affairs of the Kamelia that I exercised in founding that order, the proclamation from the imperial palace to the contrary notwithstanding," it read.

Klan Statement.

The statement from klan headquarters, declared to have been authorized by Mr. Evans, follows:

The imperial wizard in issuing a proclamation to klansmen stating that they should not participate in the formation of any women's organizations in connection with the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, carried out the instructions of the national klonvocation of the order which met in Atlanta last November.

At this time it was brought to the attention of the convention that a number of women's organizations existed, some of which sought to be recognized as women's auxiliaries to the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

The klonvokation, which is the law-making body of the klan, ruled that the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan should form no woman's auxiliary and should recognize no woman's organization formed on klan principles until a special committee should investigate and report to the imperial kloncilium on or before May 1, 1923.

The same resolution gave the imperial kloncilium full power to act in this matter. It named a chairman of the investigating committee and empowered the imperial wizard to appoint the rest of the members. This committee has not yet reported.

Colonel Simmons' Statement.

Colonel Simmons' statement follows:

My attention has been drawn to the proclamation issued from the imperial palace and directed to klansmen throughout the invisible empire forbidding the identification of a klansman with any organization of women within the bounds of this country.

The proclamation is as follows: "Whereas, it has come to the knowledge of your imperial wizard that certain klansmen in the nation are becoming connected with, or fostering, or leading aid and encouragement to various women's organizations; some giving sanction to the claims of these organizations to being auxiliaries to our great order, in direct conflict with the expressed actions of the klans in klonklave assembled: Be it known that any klansman who represents any woman's organization, or assists in the organization of any woman's organization in any manner, without written authority from the imperial wizard, shall be held guilty of a major offense under our constitution and laws. It is hereby ordered that a copy of this proclamation be sent to every klan in the nation."

This edict subjecting any klansman to the severest penalty that may be imposed in the order absolutely separates the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from participation in any of the activities of any woman's organization as well as the Kamelia.

Severe Edict.

So rigid is the edict emanating from the imperial palace as to inhibit a klansman from counseling with his wife or his sister or his mother if such counseling gave aid or comfort to the companion and counterpart order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan or any other organization of women.

This proclamation, whether designed to do so or not will shock into inactivity as far as the woman's organization is concerned every klansman in the invisible empire. It is, therefore, incumbent upon me, as creator and founder of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and later as the creator and founder of the Kamelia and as the responsible head of both organizations to assure the klansmen of America that no arrest can be put upon their interest or upon their activities in the promotion and development of the Kamelia that will in any wise affect their standing as klansmen.

In the free exercise of my rights and in keeping with my original plans formulated many years ago and in obedience to the promise repeatedly made to the American women, I proclaimed and founded the woman's organizations known as the Kamelia. I now proclaim that any klansman and that every klansman has the same inalienable and indisputable right to participate in the affairs of the Kamelia that I exercised in founding that order, the proclamation from the imperial palace to the contrary notwithstanding.

SIMMONS AND EVANS CLASH OVER KAMELIA

Imperial Wizard and Emperor of Klan in War Over Authority of Organization's Officers

Heart of American Magazine

Direct issue as to authority in the Ku-Klux Klan has been raised between Dr. W. H. Evans, imperial Wizard, and Colonel William Joseph Simmons, founder and first imperial wizard an dnow emperor of the klan.

The challenge to Dr. Evans' authority came Saturday when Colonel Simmons issued a statement declaring Dr. Evans had exceeded his authority in advising klansmen that they could not, under the rules of the order, affiliate with the Kamelia. The Kamelia is a woman's organization announced as being in process of formation a week ago and under the direction of Colonel Simmons as "El Magus." Atlanta, Ga.

His communication follows:

My attention has been drawn to the proclamation issued from the Imperial Palace and directed to klansmen throughout the Invisible Empire forbidding the identification of a klansman with any organization of women within the bounds of this country.

The proclamation is as follows: "Whereas: It has come to the knowledge of your imperial wizard that certain klansmen in the nation are becoming connected with, or fostering, or lending aid and encouragement to various woman's organizations; some giving sanction to the claims of these organizations to being auxiliaries of our order, in direct conflict with the expressed actions of the klans in klonklave assembled: Be represents any woman's organization or assists in the organization of any woman's organization in any manner, without written authority from the imperial wizard shall be held guilty of a major offense under our constitution and laws. It is hereby ordered that a copy of this proclamation be sent to every klan in the nation."

EFFECT OF EDICT.

This edict subjecting any klansman to the severest penalty that may be imposed in the order absolutely separates the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan from participation in any of the activities of any woman's organization as well as the Kamelia.

So rigid is the edict emanating from the Imperial Palace as to inhibit a klansman from counseling with his wife or his sister or his mother if such counseling gave aid or comfort to the companion and counterpart order of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan or any other organization of women.

This proclamation, whether designed to do so or not will shock into it known that any klansman who

Constitution Says Six Thousand Present to Back Klan Founder

(Associated Press)

ATLANTA, GA., April 3.—Ku Klux Klansmen from all sections of the country were reported to be en route here tonight as William J. Simmons, founder of the order, exerted the temporary control over the organization given him by the Fulton superior court early today in appointing Dr. Fred B. Johnson of San Antonio, Texas, as chief of staff, and placing him in actual charge of the imperial palace.

The Atlanta Constitution will publish tomorrow that within the last 48 hours it has been reliably informed that approximately 6,000 klansmen have gathered here to lend their influence and support to Simmons in his move against Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, and other imperial officers of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. 4-4-23

The break between Simmons, who holds the rank of imperial emperor in the klan, and the imperial wizard occurred last week when Simmons announced that he would found and sponsor an organization for women, whose policies and purposes would be along the same lines as those of the klan. The imperial wizard issued a proclamation forbidding klansmen to espouse such an organization.

The coup d'etat of Simmons, the Constitution will publish seemed complete today as Chief of Staff Johnson his appointee, took charge of the imperial palace. Dr. Johnson commissioned several members of the order, who are known to be friendly with Simmons, to fill the various offices temporarily and to carry on the routine affairs at headquarters.

When the new officials commissioned by the Simmons faction appeared at the palace to assume charge, it is said, they were told by guards and other subordinate attaches that the imperial wizard and his associates were out of the city. Dr. Evans was reported to be in New York.

HE MAKES PROTEST.

Editor of The Commercial Appeal:

We want the public press to inform us whether or not it is a fact that the army of public officials who for the past five years have been and are now making trips to Europe do this at the expense of the public treasury at Washington, D. C. Have Democrats and Republicans appropriated money from the public treasury to afford tin-horn statesmen passage back and forth to Europe? If this is true, as charged, it is nothing more nor less than an unwarranted raid upon the public treasury. No law can warrant such a thing and be an honest law or be fair with the government of the United States. Chattanooga

Do you who know anything about the landmarks made by Washington, Jackson or Lincoln and believe they would have stood for this species of dishonesty? Has it become true that those in charge of the two old political parties are the worst enemies the people and the government have? In this country there are thousands who toil 12 hours per day, look nature sincerely in the face, till the bosom of Mother Earth, and its response to the touch, does range from $600 to $1,200 per year, upon which we expect them to raise large families and grow great Americans to be fooled in the future as in the past by suave statesmen filled with false promises. Yet there are millions holding office and millions filled with schemes of extravagance, wastage, leakage who by their art of deception are called "men of ability." 4/4/23

It takes now $6,000,000 and more per year just to administer the government by state house officials. This does not include city, county and other officials not connected with the "public trough" at the people's treasury at the state capitol. Any political party which continues to permit the public to be so filched and mulcted is not entitled and is not worthy of the confidence of the people.

There is no progress where there is no economy. What the people want is work and bread. Not so many thousands of officers to support. They are needless, and all should be abolished except those provided for and required by the constitution. Have we not become a government by man and private redress rather than a government by law? Officers are on the man hunt from early morn till midnight. Why not hunt those misusing and peculating with extravagance the public "weal and woof"? — 2-23

We resent and protest against the entertainment in our midst of a man charged with the murder of an American soldier and indicted for making a widow of an American woman and an orphan of American children. In this we are protesting. We are protestants and will be when the roll is called up yonder. We object and save our exceptions to the use of God's churches for speakers and fakirs to come here and exhort the people about the virtues of this spurious empire, with some of its leaders indicted for white slavery and other violations of the penal laws. This we know by the courier of the mighty public press. We object to officials permitting the use of the public park for a masked band of hooters, night hawks and cowards, whose only object, it appears, is to destroy the government we have. To spread hate and the plagues. Such officers should be impeached and scourged from their high place of authority. This public menace must be stopped, and it shall be stopped. If the officers are Ku Kluxers and will not protect the people in the security of justice and the rights, the people should organize themselves into squads of minute men and put a quietus on this meaningless nonsense once for all. Let the state and nation rise up as one man and put it down. There are hundreds of thousands of Washingtons, Jacksons, Johnsons and Lincolns left in this country.

14 State Legislatures Consider Anti-Klan Laws

N Y C CALL
FEBRUARY 4, 1923

Activities by and against the Ku Klux Klan figure chiefly in the current reports on civil liberty. The increase of cases in the North is notable. Fourteen legislatures are considering bills to curb Klan activities.

The Iowa Supreme Court's reversal of a conviction under the state criminal syndicalism law, due solely to membership in the I. W. W., is the first favorable decision on such a statute in the history of these prosecutions. The release on parole of Alexander Howat, deposed president of the Kansas miners, is one of the significant results of the election last fall, in which the Industrial Court law was a leading issue.

Interference with a birth control meeting at Albany, N. Y., where Mrs. Margaret Sanger was booked to speak, is to be made the occasion for another such meeting there in protest and for a suit in the courts.

MOB VIOLENCE.

Arkansas.—A nation-wide $3,000,000 fund to prosecute the "citizens' committee," which lynched E. C. Gregor and deported scores of strikers from Harrison on January 17, is being sought by labor unions.

George McVey, a hotel properietor of Leslie, arrested for stealing a revolver on January 22, has refused to go out on bail rather than risk punishment at the hands of a mob for sympathy with the Missouri and north Arkansas strikers.

California.—A letter signed "K. K. K." warning him to leave town was received by Grey A. Leet, former commander of the Modesto American Legion Post, on January 20.

Indiana.—An order compelling all Negroes to leave town unless the one who attacked a young white girl was found was issued by citizens of Blanford on January 24.

Louisiana.—Several members of the Ku Klux Klan hunting for J. M. Knight, Mer Rouge merchant, intimidated and questioned C. K. Rogers as he was leaving town on the night of January 18. This is the first Klan activity in Mer Rouge since the trial of members of the organization began there.

New York.—Eight men, supposed members of the Klan, were arrested in Brooklyn on January 26. They were charged with possessing concealed weapons and masks and driving without lights.

Rhode Island.—Four letters signed "K. K. K.," and threatening death and destruction of property, were received by Rev. Edward O'Donnell, State Senator Patrick J. Cox and two others at Woonsocket on January 13.

Texas.—Albert Fodor, an editor, who was kidnapped from Dallas in August, 1922, and taken to Oklahoma, because of unfavorable publicity given to high officials, returned to Fort Worth on January 21, having been kept under guard for nearly three months.

Criminal Cases.

California.—Several members of the I. W. W. were arrested following a mass meeting of 5,000 persons in San Pedro on January 14.

Iowa.—A state Supreme Court decision on January 16 reversed the conviction of Henry Tonn, which had been based solely on his membership in the I. W. W.

Kansas.—Alexander Howat, former president of the United Mine Workers of America, and five other district officers, imprisoned for defying the Kansas Industrial Court, were released at Girard on January 20.

Louisiana.—Police raided a meeting of the Universal Negro Improvement Association in New Orleans on January 18 and arrested 10 members on charges of inciting to riot. The raid was connected with the murder of the Rev. J. W. H. Eason, Federal witness in a mail defrauding case.

Massachusetts.—John E. Merrick, mechanic of Haverhill and a Communist, was arrested on January 22 charged with complicity in a dynamating plot.

Ohio.—An injunction temporarily closing the Fulton School at Springfield was issued by Judge Frank M. Krapp on January 26, pending the consideration of the charge that a school for Negro pupils only was being established by the Board of Education.

MEETINGS.

New York.—Mrs. Margaret Sanger was prohibited from delivering an address before a conference of the American Birth Control League at Albany on January 23 by an order of Mayor Hackett, who declared he "did not need any legal precedent" for the order.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Iowa.—An appeal to the Supreme Court against an anti-picketing injunction was lost by organized barbers of Sioux City on January 20.

Minnesota.—All members of the Minneapolis Police Department are forbidden to join the Ku Klux Klan by an order of the Chief of Police issued on January 17 and approved by the Mayor.

Bills aimed at curbing activities of the Klan have been introduced into 14 state legislatures: California, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin.

THE NEW REBELLION

Chicago Herald 2/3/23

ALL ARE FAMILIAR by this time with the aims, objects and purposes of the Ku Klux Klan. The fact must be apparent to every intelligent person that this organization is a national menace and if not checked or destroyed is calculated to impair, undermine and weaken the fundamental principles and doctrines upon which our government is based. While it is supposed to be a revival and reorganization of the organization of the same name which sprang up at the South during the days of reconstruction, yet this revived organization is more mischievous, dangerous and harmful than its predecessor for the reason that the old one was confined to the South and to the persecution of the black man, while this one extends all over the country and to all groups.

ITS PRIMARY OBJECT then was to wrest the state governments of that section from one political party to another. To do this the suppression of the Colored vote was necessary. The present organization not only is national but it includes among those to be persecuted Jews, Roman Catholics and Americans of foreign birth. The underlying motive of the originators of the new organization was no doubt the accumulation of wealth without earning it. With these persons it was immaterial what the baneful consequences of their pernicious doctrines might be so long as they could coin money through a base and cowardly appeal to race prejudice, sectional animosity and religious bigotry.

THEY CONCEIVED the idea that there are a sufficient number of credulous, prejudiced and bigoted persons in the United States to maintain an organization through the instrumentality of which the originators and organizers would amass large fortunes. If reports are true the objects sought by the originators have already been accomplished. But the teachings of the organization are not only calculated to array race against race, religion against religion, but to usurp the powers, duties and functions of government.

THIS MAKES IT a treasonable and lawless organization, and it should be dealt with as such by the federal government. When the Ku Klux Klan of reconstruction days commenced its nefarious work our brave and courageous President, U. S. Grant, sent a message to Congress dealing specifically with this organization and asking that the executive be clothed with sufficient power to crush it out through federal machinery. This was done. Several of the originators and organizers were prosecuted and convicted and served prison terms.

IF THE PRESENT chief executive had taken the same course when attention was first called to this menace, as did Grant, it would have been nipped in the bud and the crimes that are now exposed, resulting from its growth, would never have occurred. In spite of the apparent timidity of the national administration to deal with such questions, hiding behind the cloak of state rights, it is hoped that in view of the awful crimes known to have been the result of the activities of this organization that the administration will yet see its way clear to take whatever action may be necessary to deal effectively with it, and that if additional legislation should be necessary he will send a message to Congress asking that it be granted. What is needed is immediate and drastic action on the part of the federal government to arrest the growth and crush out what is evidently a national menace.

Mob Violence Treads Close Upon Heels of Ku Klux Klan

N Y C CALL
FEBRUARY 19, 1923

Cases of mob violence, actual or threatened, lead all others in the current reports on civil liberty issued by the Civil Liberties Union. It is particularly notable that at the present time most of them are from the North and Middle West, directly attributable to the extension of the Ku Klux Klan.

The return of Alexander Howat to jail in Kansas under the Industrial Court law because he refused to accept conditional parole is noteworthy, as is the action of the Providence (R. I.) authorities in stopping a meeting at which Jim Larkin, the Irish labor leader, was booked to speak.

KLAN ACTIVITIES.

Illinois.—Warnings of a threat to bomb the Sisson Hotel, in which Dr. Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, has his Chicago headquarters, were sent to six Jewish guests of the hotel on January 28.

Executives of the Ku Klux Klan have taken charge of the case of William Green, who was suspended from the Chicago Fire Department on the sole charge of being a klansman and is now on trial before the Civil Service Commission.

Indiana.—Two men were killed and Sheriff Harry Newlin was wounded in a street fight in Blanford on January 29 following an attack on a store whose Negro owner had refused to obey the order of a "citizens' committee" that all Negroes should leave the town.

Kansas.—Sanford Harrington, a 14-year-old boy, was beaten unconscious by two unidentified men at Bonner Springs on January 28. He was the brother of Leon Harrington, killed at Tonganoxie on November 7.

Kentucky.—J. C. Barker, employe of the ouisville and Nashville Railroad, and George Yarden, special guard, were killed in Corbin on January 30 in a street fight between striking railroad men and special police.

Louisiana.—Mayor Robert L. Dade, of Mer Rouge, who testified against the Klan at the recent open hearing, received anonymous threats against his life from Hot Springs, Arkansas, on January 30.

Two Negroes, William Shakespeare and Constantine Dyer, who were arrested in a police raid on the Universal Negro Improvement Association meeting on January 18, were indicted at New Orleans by a special grand jury on January 30 for the murder of Rev. J. H. W. Eason, who had been expelled from the association.

Massachusetts.—A guard was placed over the six children of Mayor Curley of Boston on January 27 after a threatening letter had been received in the Mayor's absence. Mayor Curley, a Roman Catholic, had written a letter bitterly denouncing the Klan.

New York.—District Attorney Charles J. Dodd of Brooklyn declared on January 30 that the right of peaceable assemblage would not be denied the Ku Klux Klan unless evidence showed conspiracy to commit crime. The declaration followed the arrest of eight men as members of the Klan.

Frederick Storm, Exalted Cyclops of the Klan in Yonkers, was placed on probation January 31 when he was found guilty of carrying concealed weapons.

Ohio.—The congregations of 200 Roman Catholic churches were invited on January 28 to join a national Catholic organization designed "to resist discriminating legislation and to nullify and exterminate the precepts of the Ku Klux Klan."

Oklahoma.—Displaying a banner with the legend, "Fod God, for Home and Native Land," and accompanied by a fiery cross and a brass band, 75 women of the Ku Klux Klan paraded through the principal streets of Oklahoma City on January 29.

Women members of the Klan began their activities in Oklahoma City on January 24 by raiding a still operated by men on the outskirts of the city.

Texas.—M. P. Rogers and three others were indicted by a grand jury at Houston on January 31 charged with planning an attack on E. C. Slaughter, former postmaster of Goose Creek. Rogers was already under bond on a charge of assault to murder filed by R. A. Armand, who was flogged on January 5.

Twenty of the 67 Negro soldiers convicted of participation in the Houston, Texas, race riots in 1917 received commutation of sentence on January 30. The sentences of 19 others were reduced.

MEETINGS.

Rhode Island.—James Larkin, who was pardoned by Governor Smith of New York on January 17, was prohibited from addressing a public meeting in Providence on January 28 under the auspices of the Liberation League.

CRIMINAL CASES.

Kansas.—Alexander Howat, Kansas mine leader, returned to jail at Columbus on January 30 to serve 52 days of an unexpired sentence for violation of the Kansas Industrial Court law, refusing to consider parole which demanded cessation of his activities against the law. August Dorchy, former vice president of the Kansas Miners' Union, was also sentenced.

Fred Esmond and Dan Buckley, Federal political prisoners at Leavenworth, have been freed by executive order.

DEPORTATIONS.

Thomas J. O'Flaherty, editor of the Voice of Labor, was arrested on a deportation warrant at Hegewisch on January 29 in an attempt on the part of the police to stop a meeting of the Labor Defense Council.

THE CHICAGO FIRE DEPARTMENT

Chicago Ill.

WHILE STRENUOUS efforts have been made to keep politics out of the Chicago fire department, certain factions seem to dominate the policy of this fire-fighting organization to the detriment, in some instances, of our group. There is but one station in the whole city where Colored men are given an opportunity, despite the fact that many have made application for positions and vacancies in so-called white stations frequently occur. Chicago Defender

THERE IS A REASON for this and perhaps a bit of this reason can be found in the recent disclosure of the Ku Klux Klan's activities in the department, but the major portion of the trouble is the narrowness not only of the rank and file of the men, but their governing heads. The duties of a fireman entail nothing social. The female sex is, or should be, far removed from their daily routine life. The dollar of the Colored taxpayer, the same as the dollar of the white taxpayer, goes to support the hundreds of white firemen and the few Colored firemen. 2/3/23

OBJECTION has never been raised on the efficiency grounds. The Taylor street station, where our men hold sway, is rated as one of the best, if not the best, set of fire fighters in the city. We strongly object to "Jim Crowism" as practiced in this municipal necessity. We do not ask that our men be placed on the pay roll simply because they are Colored and we have racial pride. But we do ask and insist that there shall be no discrimination shown in selecting men when vacancies occur in stations located in any section of the city.

SHOOTING Klansmen is no way to combat intolerance and bigotry. However sinister the influence of the white-robed fraternity, its own methods must not be used against it. Klansmen have a right to hate Jews, Catholics, and Negroes; they even have a right to parade, to make speeches, and to hold meetings in the hope of spreading their disagreeable doctrines—even though it is absurd to hear these lynchers and floggers claiming civil rights for themselves. Liberals who detest the race-hatred propaganda of the Klan will do well not to forget that free speech is meaningless unless it applies to those with whom we most violently disagree. Mob violence is a bestial thing even when its victims are Klansmen. It is possible to force the Klan into daylight—there is no reason why men who wish to parade should not be made to show their faces, or why the identity of Klansmen who get into trouble should be concealed. The authorities of Carnegie, Pennsylvania, are reported refusing information as to the identity of the Klansmen injured in the riot there. "Well known men are reported to be among them." If Klansmen believe in the Klan they should court publicity rather than thus play the coward. Klansmen carrying arms should be arrested and disarmed and their names should be made public, as would be done with common criminals. The Klan is a disgrace to America; but the disgrace would be deeper still were its own methods adopted to combat it.

MASONS AND THE KU KLUX

The New York Times

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There has been much talk latterly of Freemasons being forbidden to become members of the Ku Klux Klan, and in a few jurisdictions definite action along this line has been taken by the Grand Master or by Scottish Rite authorities. The question arises, then, as to what basis Freemasons may have for opposition to the Klan.

The Klan limits its membership to native-born Protestants and in defense of this calls attention to the fact that only Catholics may be Knights of Columbus and only Jews B'nai B'rith. But this is a fallacious comparison. The non-Catholic may not become a Knight of Columbus because he is not a Catholic, and the non-Jew may not become a B'nai B'rith because he is not a Jew. But the un-American position of the Klan is that only the native-born Protestant may become a member of the Klan because the Klan contends that only the native-born Protestant may be 100 per cent. American, and it claims to stand for 100 per cent. Americanism.

Again, the Klan claims not to be anti-Jew. Yet the writer heard a K. K. K. lecturer from Texas, speaking in Brunswick, Ga., in the Fall of 1922, say "the Jew does not believe in the American public school system"—an untrue statement, of course—and suggest further that no Protestant should trade with the peddler or with the merchant of the Jewish religion if he could trade with a Protestant. 9-N-23

Then there are the "Royal Riders of the Red Robe" (or some such organization), sponsored by the Klan for the foreign-born Protestant. No doubt the foreign-born American Protestant has heretofore considered himself 100 per cent. American, but, since the Klan contends that he cannot be that, one can but amusedly wonder if, when the foreign-born Protestant is "naturalized" into the Royal Riders, he is reduced in his own estimation to, say, 50 per cent. American. Since even the foreign born are usually intelligent enough, it is not surprising that so little is heard of the Royal Riders.

It is because of these "Klannish" teachings that doubt has so often been expressed that any man can at once be a true Klansman and a good Mason. The Masonic Fraternity welcomes alike the Jew and the Christian, the native born and the foreign born, and teaches that they should dwell together in brotherly love and harmony. The conflict between the Klan and the Masonic instructions can never be reconciled in one human heart. Thus it is that genuine Masons—Masons who are such in their hearts—cannot be Klansmen and cannot welcome with true brotherly love Klansmen into their lodges.

DAVID MEYERHARDT,
Editor Masonic Herald.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923.

General

THE American Civil Liberties Union showed its integrity of purpose when it wrote to H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan: "We believe heartily in free speech for Klan as well as anti-Klan, and we offer you our assistance in maintaining that right." At the same time the Civil Liberties Union points out:

The Nation

In June, 1922, the home of the Mayor of Columbus, Georgia, was bombed because of his support of law and order as opposed to the Klan's activities. . . . In January of this year a railroad worker in Harrison, Arkansas, a town run by a "Citizens' Committee" of Klansmen, was lynched because he refused to confess to sabotage of which he was not guilty. . . . The Klan in Harrison recently lynched a man named Lean. Frequent letters from the district inform us that "peaceable assemblage," as well as every other right, is still denied to all but "citizens." . . . Interference with the right of labor unions to organize workers has been one of the principal activities of the Klan. In January of this year W. E. Marsh, a speaker for the Farm Labor Union of Atoka, Oklahoma, was severely beaten by your members and ordered to stop his work for the farmers. A few months later in Bald Knob, Oklahoma, delegates of the Industrial Workers' Union were menaced and searched by a mob of Klansmen and driven out of town. . . . Religious hatred scarcely consistent with your recent defense of "free speech" caused Klansmen of New York to burn churches. . . . School teachers have been dismissed and left without positions in West Virginia and Georgia because of their Catholic faith, and attempts are constantly being made to limit the freedom of children to attend sectarian schools, as witness the recent legislation in Oregon fostered by the Invisible Empire.

Nov 26 23

TO this indictment might be added the statement from the office of the Governor of Oklahoma that it is the Ku Klux Klan that has led to the need of military rule in Tulsa County. Yet according to the Solicitor General of Georgia, the Klan seems belatedly to be seeking to get rid of the odium it has brought upon itself, by "spending money with apparent sincerity in connection with the local investigation [at Macon, Georgia] and appears to be especially desirous of exposing its own members who have been trapped as participants in the floggings." In Portland, Maine, the Klan suddenly threw its support to municipal reform, thereby, according to the New York Times, almost defeating a good thing by the stigma it brought upon it. Whether the new wine of civic virtue can be poured into the old bottles of Klanism, already condemned by public opinion, is a problem the Klan itself must solve. There is no solution in organizing Red Knights to battle the White Knights. As The Nation has frequently pointed out, nothing is gained for the cause of law and order by extralegal methods against any organization, though it be the leader of all outlaws.

AMERICA DIVIDED IN HOSTILE CAMPS

East Tennessee News

The advent of the Ku Klux Klan in the United States has given rise to a situation that is more than likely to bring about a state of chaos more appalling than that which Russia has so bitterly experienced for the past few years.

According to late press reports two additional Invisible Empires have made their entrance upon the American stage —all alike seeking to promte the "general welfare" of the American people. The motive behind these organizations as far as we are able to ascertain are pure and noble—that is if their promoters are truthful in what they proclaim from the stage, pulpit and through the pages of our dailies, but the question that is uppermost in our minds is: Is it possible to put into operation a better form of government that was inaugurated by the fathers of our country, or is there a better ideal of government to be found greater than Abraham Lincoln's—government for the people, by the people?

The success or failure of any nation does not depend on hostile groups but a well balanced population, so the ultimate success of the American commonwealth is not dependable upon invisible empires but upon an understanding and appreciation of the worth of all classes— from the man in the president's chairdown to the street sweeper.

Strange it is that all these organizations claim the same motive for existence and still stranger is the fact that they can not and will not get together for the common good. They all claim alike that it is very necessary for their particular organization to exist in order that they might uphold the constitution of the United States, for they fear that our government is liable to fail unless they, themselves take immediate and drastic actions. These arguments are too thin for thinking men and women. History has abundantly proven that every government that has ever been destroyed deserved its fate—Babylon was destroyed to give way to a better civilization; Persia did likewise; Greece, the most polished civilization the world has ever known deserved to occupy the position which she gained and more than deserved to lose her lofty position. When the Grecian mothers worked in the fields side by side with the men producing and thinking productive thoughts they gave birth to the greatest scholar of all ages. But alas, they became rich and with riches came idleness and debauchery—shame and crime became the rule rather than the exception. A few years later the once great nation perished because it got what it deserved. Then we have the history of the rise and fall of the Roman Empire with its hardships, success and failure.

Aug. 30, 1923

All of these different civilizations thought they were at the very climax of human progress but we today would not exchange places with a thousand Babylons, or any number of the others. Maybe in the years to come our posterity will laugh at us and call us silly for trying to perpetuate a condition of affairs before the great molding Hand of the Universe finishes His work.

Knoxville, Tenn.

Surely no good can come of a people divided in hostile camps all invisible. Truth courts the LIGHT.

A Remedy as Bad as the Disease.

The Birmingham News

Out in Steubenville, Ohio, as everywhere else, the Ku Klux Klan, besides proving attractive to a considerable number of misguided or vicious men, has excited the strong disapprobation of at least as many more who prefer a government by law to the enforcement of private opinions in the secret conclaves of disguised and irresponsible judges. As a result, there has been made in that part of the country a mistake hardly less grave than the one of which the members of the obnoxious and dangerous conspiracy have been guilty.

Its critics, professing a highly commendable antagonism to "all clans and klans," have proceeded to organize themselves as "the Knights of the Blazing Ring," which can be, itself, only another "clan or klan," and is sure in time, if not at once, to become simply another instrument for the execution of private opinions by irresponsible judges.

What the opponents of the Ku Klux Klan should do, in Ohio and elsewhere, is to proclaim their dependence on the police and the courts, and to see to it that officials of all sorts are elected who will justify that dependence. In a few desperate emergencies it may be necessary to fight the devil with his own weapons, but even that is questionable, and there does not exist in this country—as yet—any emergency that is desperate enough to justify the lynching of lynchers or to warrant the assumption by anybody that the country can be saved from such miserable enemies as the Ku Klux Klansmen only by resort to their own methods of coercion and punishment.

Simmons Attacks Evans' Election As Head of Klan

Atlanta Constitution

9-5-23

Asking that the election of Hiram W. Evans as imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan be declared by the court as null, and charging that during the last several months women have been admitted to membership in the order under the name of "Women of the Ku Klux Klan," Emperor William Joseph Simmons filed a petition in the Fulton superior court Tuesday in answer to an injunction suit brought June 21 by the H. W. Evans faction, in which it was sought to restrain the organization of the "Knights of Kamelia."

Emperor Simmons attacked the validity of the election of Dr. Evans as imperial wizard, claiming it was illegal, and asked that it be set aside. He claims that he alone is clothed with license to form a woman's branch of the order and requested that the temporary injunction granted June 21 be dissolved.

The suit set out that early this year the Evans faction of the klan held a meeting in Washington, D. C., at which time it was decided to enroll women in the order. Since that time the petition alleges, numerous female members have been initiated. Simmons further charges that derogatory reports against the Knights of Kamelia have been circulated with the view of destroying that organization.

Simmons also asks for a counter-injunction to restrain the klan from admitting women to its membership or from permitting the use of the ritualistic work or oaths of the knights of the Ku Klux Klan in any woman's organization whatsoever.

Hearing of the petition for receivership of the Ku Klux Klan brought by David M. Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and other klansmen, was postponed Tuesday until Thursday as a result of illness of attorneys. The case is set for hearing before Judge George L. Bell. Rittenhouse, with other plaintiffs, charge mismanagement of the klan funds under the administration of H. W. Evans, imperial wizard.

Little Rock, Ark., September 4.—Trial in circuit court here of the $100,000 damage suit, filed recently by Dr. Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan against William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the organization for alleged libel, has been set for October 18, it was announced today. The suit is based on statements alleged to have been made in a telegram sent to a local newspaper during the klan-kamelia controversy several months ago.

THE MOB SPIRIT AT PERTH AMBOY.

The Ku Klux Klan as an organization of intolerance is a challenge to American citizenship. That its mummeries and secret methods provoke the mob spirit among opponents who have no great respect for the law themselves is not surprising. At Steubenville, Binghamton, Pittsburgh and Perth Amboy there has been rioting of a grave character in which parading Klansmen have been stoned and beaten. One of them was killed at Pittsburgh. The organization demands the protection of the law, and should have it as a right when threatened with mob violence for assembling and holding permitted meetings. Justice can make no discriminations. However hateful and insidious the propaganda of the Klan may be, the remedy lies in public opinion, the Legislatures and the courts. As violence when passions are inflamed breeds violence, the organization will retaliate upon its baiters unless it can turn to the law for protection.

The full police powers of the State should be exerted, if necessary, to prevent such disgraceful scenes as occurred at Perth Amboy on Thursday night. Otherwise the rioting spirit will become infectious in every town where the Klansmen show themselves in public in their regalia. It is estimated that there are 65,000 members of the order in New Jersey. Throughout the country the number is believed to be between one and two millions. The Klan has supporters in city administrations and possibly on the bench.

It is one thing to condemn, another to assail lawlessly, this undemocratic organization, which is poisoning the political life of the country. Unless the law is impartial and the police do their whole duty in dealing with riotous outbreaks against the Ku Klux Klan when it stands upon it constitutional rights, it will gain partisans and prove a menace.

Now Klansmen Threaten the President!

More of mystery marks the other case of misusing an official name. Four days after President COOLIDGE succeeded President HARDING there was read at the Montreal convention of the Knights of Columbus, as coming from him, a message of some length, highly eulogizing that organization for its patriotic works and purposes. The statements made in the message were all true in substance, and it well may be that on some previous occasion President COOLIDGE did send or say them to some K. of C. meeting. That he would have done so in the first crowded days after assuming his present office is improbable to the point of incredibility.

As yet the President has made no public announcement in the matter, but according to the Washington correspondent of The New York Herald, certain high-titled members of the Ku Klux Klan have chosen to take fierce offense at what purports to be Presidential eulogy of a Roman Catholic organization, and they insolently are threatening that unless the authenticity of the telegram is denied immediately and explicitly the Klan will divert its millions of votes from the Republican Party in general and from President COOLIDGE in particular. As the President is not a man to take such menaces in good part, his answer to it, should he think an answer necessary, will be interesting.

And as a President of the United States cannot even be quoted without his express permission, the ascription to him of words he has not spoken or written is a serious offense. Hardly less, if at all, would be the misuse of words spoken or written by him in circumstances of place or time different from those alleged. In both of these cases quite as much of stupidity as of viciousness was shown, for detection was inevitable and sure to be prompt, and any "cause" thus served is sure to suffer.

KNIGHTS OF THE FLAMING CIRCLE

St. Louis Globe

The Knights of the Flaming Circle is the latest bid for our interest in a fight where other interests and ours are common. The history of the Ku Klux Klan and many other of its present practices are apt to cause us to grasp quickly and thoughtlessly, at any organized effort to resist the Masquerading Americans. 8-7-23

And this new anti-Klan organization may be a good thing for us as well as for Catholics and Jews. Having nursed cat's paw blisters so many times in the past, however, it behooves us to think carefully before entering into the danger of getting burnt again.

A careful weighing of the promises to us of the Knights of the Flaming Circle can't possibly do that organization, its purpose nor Negroes any harm. If the Knights of the Flaming Circle intends to deal fairly and honestly with us our thoughtful consideration of its proposals will bear the fact out.

St. Louis, Mo.

But there is another and more important factor for us to consider. We cannot, sensibly subscribe to any extra-legal methods for handling any public menace. The basic law of our Nation provides us ways and means for the legal removal of any and all public menaces and unless the leaders of the Knights of the Flaming Circle can convince us that its methods and object are within the basic law we cannot safely support the organization.

The Survey
New York City
September 1, 1923

REAL one hundred percenters are scarce in every walk of life. They are ideals we aim to approximate, like infinity, absolute zero, angels. Occasionally, however, such a rara avis appears upon the horizon. It was my privilege to observe at close range the manners, habitat, etcetera, of one of this species some few years ago. He was a high school principal with whom I spent two not unhappy years. Like Mr. Pickwick's cabby, he was too much of a curiosity to arouse violent anger at his shortcomings. He was a model, possessed of all the virtues of a true patriot, according to 1921 and subsequent designs.

I will record his antipathies, He hated: organized labor, all foreigners, Jews, Negroes, Catholics, dancers, bootleggers, evolutionists, his friends, his wife's friends, his enemies, his relations and his wife's relations.

He centered his affections about four objects: the Ku Klux Klan, two other well known and less obnoxious fraternal orders, and finally, himself. His chief indoor sport was speaking in derogatory fashion of all acquaintances except those within earshot.

With a decided bent toward commerce, he yet felt himself to be an abstruse philosopher. His discourses upon metaphysics must have formed the basis for that cynic's definition of a philosopher as a "blind man, going thru a dark cellar, looking for a black cat that isn't there."

Dancing was a terrible sin. I was regaled for hours with his tales of the evil physiological and psychological effects which were the positive results of indulging in this amusement. But when he left the field of education to enter business he immediately began learning the gentle waltz and breezier onestep, salving his conscience by emitting an occasional whine that "some women dance too closely."

His real Americanism was constantly evident in his daily conversation. The children were rigidly classified as wops, frogs, dagoes, niggers and Catholics. The last-named group was anathema.

So far was he imbued with current prejudices that he would distribute copies of the alleged fourth degree oath of the Knights of Columbus to non-Catholic acquaintances, particularly members of the faculty. As usual with one who feels intensely concerning religious differences. he was very devout. He wept when Billy Sunday pictured the horrors of backsliding. He cautioned us to grade our pupils fairly, "otherwise we will have to account for our dishonesty on Judgment Day." To this day I retain a haunting fear that in the unknown future an awful deity will bring me to task for marking Willie Jones "D" instead of "C" upon February 5, 192-.

When one member of the faculty lost his father, who was unknown to us, having lived in a distant state, the entire school was urged to stand at attention for two minutes beginning at 11:55 A. M. the following day. They did, and in my class the enforced concentration resulted in a decided increase in correct solutions of the problem then adorning the blackboard.

The Survey

Efforts of fraternization by members of the faculty were halted by his confiding to us, individually, that certain instructors were our deadly enemies, that we should be careful what we said to them and that a local social event to which we had not been invited was organized for the sole purpose of discomforting us. In assigning classes to the members of the faculty, he endeavored, so far as possible, to prevent any teacher from instructing in a subject for which she was unusually well-qualified. "Among the blind, the one-eyed man is king."

Nor were instructors permitted to speak in chapel. Either there was an outside speaker, usually a colorless resident preacher, or he presided himself. One of the faculty always acted as scout to notify us who would be the chapel lecturer for the regular Friday convocation. When the word was passed that "His Lordship" would preside, there was a scurrying for the latest magazine, baseball guide or fancy work. Nor did we feel called upon to reprimand students who followed our example.

If a girl's honor were under suspicion my one hundred percenter would, without investigation, notify her friends that she was unfit company, although it was ultimately discovered in the majority of cases that his suspicions were groundless. Usually a girl who dropped out of school was, in his imagination, about to become a mother.

Nevertheless he had his good qualities. In the management of our classes we were left quite alone, except that he hoped we would refrain from championing the cause of organized labor, an institution which he confidentially informed me was the product of medieval Catholicism in its efforts to conquer the world.

Sept. 1, 1923

In spreading Ku Klux propaganda he was entirely at home, and the assumed nonchalant air which he maintained while endeavoring to instil the Klan poison as "something I don't know much about myself, but they tell me" always caused his associates to conceal a grin. Through him I learned that the Catholic bishop of the diocese was in league with the Soviet to foment a class war in our nearby coal fields, and that labor unrest in our state had been stifled by the timely assassination of a Negro and a Japanese agitator, said holy act having been accomplished by a secret organization of worthy citizens.

New York City

Although keenly interested in business and proud of our commercial department his lecture to the pupils completing stenography was distinguished by the brilliant pronouncement that "no girl can succeed unless she becomes the tool of her employer." Following a bitter retort, he informed the same group that "It is my opinion that there is no greater calling for a girl than the business profession."

My erstwhile chief is now selling insurance and becoming wealthy. He drinks occasionally and he dances. He is slightly humanized. But his life is yet unhappy. I was not to mention it, it might be unethical, but he couldn't help informing me that his competitors in other insurance companies (he named them) were the most damnable, miserable gang of crooks one could imagine. "They would stoop to anything." I offered my sympathy. Immediately there followed a two hour harangue on the glories of the Blank Life Insurance Company. He held a double advantage over me. I was a guest at his home, and he made use of a simple rule of psychology. I sat in a chair and he stood over me. Finally, in a state of hypnosis, I signed the dotted line for a two thousand dollar policy. He drove me to the station and we shook hands cordially. I intend to visit him again when my salary permits me to increase my insurance but not before. I cannot afford such venal hospitality at ~~short intervals.~~

Americans Will Not Be Driven

American Form

Joining the Ku Klux Klan, means to serve others—and not to be served by others. Realizing, and memorizing this fundamental Truth, will prevent many an ambitious man, making a mistake.

San Antonio, Texas

Washington, Grant, Roosevelt, and Pershing led their men to battle, and deserters and traitors were seldom found among the millions of red-blooded, 100 per cent free-born Americans, who fought, bled, and died beneath their banners.

They came from palatial homes, cosy cottages, and from crowded and congested districts, where millions of them fought Poverty, from childhood—but every man .was a Man—and ducked his tailor-made suit. (or his home-made overalls) and proudly donned the uniform of his Uncle Sam, ready, and willing to die, in defense of the government they loved. better than they loved their own lives. It means annihilation, to defeat such an army.

They were Americans—they always will be Americans—and while a loved, and trusted guide may lead them into a Balaklava charge—against the Devil and all his infernal hosts—they instantly rebel, at the very first hint, of autocratic domination. It simply won't work, in America.

The above statements are not merely the individual opinions of the writer.

The love of personal freedom, and fairness, is congenital in the human heart and soul. It takes generation after generation, to educate a people to respect, and obey the will of any ruler, arbitrarily placed over them—especially, when there is even a suspicion of tyranny.

Emancipation, from government—other than one selected by the people, composing that government—has been the dream of down-trodden humanity since the days of Adam.

Selfishness, and the lust for power, has blighted the lives of multiplied billions of helpless and unhappy men and women who have struggled for one tiny glimpse of the Light, of Personal Liberty, and never got within radio distance of it—but went down to their graves, in bitter disappointment.

God knows, the Old World, has tried autocratic domination, to satiety. Rebellion is in the air, in every government on earth, in which a little handful of individuals, assert their right to dictate to the people—just what they may think, say, or do.

One brief view of Russia, and Germany, alone would seem to be sufficient warning to any would-be autocrat (big or little) and show them the dangerous breakers ahead.

It is human characteristic, to want a leader—and so long as he holds their confidence, red-blooded White Men will back him to the death.

We find this, an inborn trait of character, peculiar to humanity. in every country, and in every clime, and note it's first out-cropping in the homes of every people—as represented by the father and mother.

Children—from babies, to grown men and women, instinctively follow father and mother, as guides—and why? Simply because of their confidence in the unselfish loyalty of the pair of old grey heads, who have won their confidence, and love. Right, or wrong—they never pause, to count the cost, or the odds.

They fight first—and fight to the death—and it is all for a Principle, which they love better, than they love their own lives.

The reorganization of the old-time Ku Klux Klan, is merely a re-kindling of that universal, inborn, desire, implanted in the hearts and minds of every 100 per cent white Protestant American (or any other 100 per cent White Man) who stands for Peace on earth, and to man, good will.

It is a noble, God-given idea, or sentiment, and is the antithesis of Selfishness, Greed, and Personal ambition.

Loyalty, is the most precious thing on earth, or in heaven.

That's why God wants our loyalty—our confidence and Love—and not our miserable money.

The man who cannot subscribe to the Ku Klux Klan oath (barring it's religious obligation) is not worthy of citizenship in any country, supposed to be dominated by 100 per cent White Men.

The Ku Klux Klan, has never demanded, or desired, to forcibly change any man's honest opinion—politically, or religiously—despite the racous rantings of mental runts, who have lathered the face of America with lies, and are trying to shave it, with a cross-cut saw. Propaganda, is a very effective weapon, when used properly, justly, and with no admixture of Selfishness. Other wise, it is a boomerang—which missing it's quarry, returns to knock the eternal daylghts, out of the thrower.

A 100 per cent White Protestant American, will never attempt to interfere, with any man's religious convictions—or his politics—so lony as they do not clash, with this government, and it's laws. He can possess an inundation of any religious faith he prefers. (to follow Bob Ingersol into the dismal abyss of avowed atheism) and no man will bother him—but this is a Protestant government, owned and controlled by Protestants, and will continue to be such—and the effort to camouflage the question, and change it from a political proposition, to a religious question, is quite too silly to discuss.

Run your churches, to suit yourselves—and Uncle Sam will run his—which is frankly Protestant. In the meantime, he will also continue to run this government, without any help, or any advice, from any outsider—no matter where he hails from.

Some Truths About the Klan

American Forum

CLIP THIS AND SEND IT TO THOSE WHO ARE LABORING UNDER THE IMPRESSION THAT THE KLAN IS ANTI-ANYTHING

San Antonio, Texas

You have heard it falsely said that the Klan is "un-American." The Klan teaches and pratices uncompromising devotion to the Constitution of the United States, and Klansmen are under the most sacred obligation to assist the authorities at all times, when called upon, in the enforcement of all just laws.

You have heard it falsely said that the Klansmen wear masks and that they make forays for unlawful purposes under cover of darkness. They wear the insignia of the hood in the secret Klavern, only, as part of the mystic symbolism of a mysterious brotherhood. Klan law forbids the wearing of the hood in public, except by special permit and for a good and noble purpose. Secrecy in doing good, mystery as to methods, constitute the basis of the Klannish system. The Klan never engages in any unlawful or questionable purpose.

You have heard it falsely said that the Klansmen are bigoted and narrow, but they are, in fact, liberal and broad, as a rule, conceding generously that the Roman Catholic church numbers hosts of good people among its adherents. We oppose only and solely the POLITICAL activities of the papal hierarchy, which seeks to dominate the world, POLITICALLY, and which places the temporal authority of the pontiff of Rome above that of the President and the Constitution.

The Klansmen applaud and admire the good which they see in the character and works of Catholic people, and lament the fact that the Catholics as a whole are blind, through hereditary faith, to the autocratic and alien purposes of the Roman Vatican.

The Klansmen see, concede and admire the splendid and noble services which countless Jews have given to this Nation, and lament the suicidal policy of the organized Jews who, through prejudice. ignorance and cupidity, are warning against the Klan and giving aid to the alien enemies of America. In this they are injuring only themselves.

The Klansmen are the best friends of the negro, ready to defend his rights, but these rights do not include the social and racial equality to which the negro foolishly has been led to aspire. The Klansmen want the negro to have an education, to be rich in the fundamentals of American character, so that he may have all that is due him and be a worthy member of the brotherhood of man. Nowhere can be found a more genuine warmth of friendship for the well-meaning, law-abiding and deserving negro than among the Klansmen of America, especially those of the old South, where the negro is best understood. The Klansmen maintain, of course, that this is a white man's country, and that our native-born, freedom-loving heirs to liberty never will abdicate their absolute rule to any inferior race, or to the organized immigrants who acknowledge any kind of allegiance to any foreign power.

The Klan is intensely patriotic and thoroughly American in everything.

Texas and Middle West Keep Klan Alive; Anti-Negro Campaign Fails, but Headway Is Made by Fighting Catholics and Jews

Majority of Southern States Turned Against It When Negro Workers Began Exodus—Oregon Is a Hotbed—Klan Shows Strength at Polls and Has Lobby in Washington for Mayfield, Elected to the Senate

NEW YORK HERALD
JANUARY 14, 1923

HEREWITH is published the first of two articles dealing with the Ku Klux Klan as it is to-day. The writer has made a thorough study of this organization in various parts of the country, and not only are his findings interesting but they give full and clear light on the Klan's present activities. For example, this article shows that in the South, except for Louisiana and Texas, the Klan is dead, and that, compelled to give up its war on the negro, it is thriving now by its attack on the Roman Catholics and the Jews. The second article, to be published next Sunday, will describe the Klan as a political factor, going into detail and giving the complete story of Ku Klux work at the polls throughout the nation in the last election.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

New York Herald Bureau,
Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.

THE Ku Klux Klan is living today on its success in having started religious war in these States—Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Indiana, Missouri and Oregon. Outside of the two Southern States mentioned above it is a dead letter in the South, where it was born and where it was resurrected for the primary purpose of suppressing the negro race.

A survey in the South and West shows that the battle cry that brings in the most cash and the largest number of members and the best results in elections is that against the Roman Catholics, and, next in importance, the Jews. In the fall elections anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish slogans were used effectively in Texas, Oregon, Missouri and Indiana, and to a less extent in Kansas, Ohio and other States where the order is now making substantial headway.

The Ku Klux Klan is not organized for a "united front" campaign, for the issues vary in different localities. Groups directed by local leaders use the order to batter down certain elements in their respective communities. In some sections it is anti-negro and used to "keep the uppish" colored man "in his place." Occasional parades are considered sufficient for that in many communities. Some negroes have been whipped and told to go and sin no more.

The anti-Catholic feeling is widespread and easily fanned to white heat.

Jews Are Attacked for Movies That Keep Persons From Church

In recent months numerous Protestant preachers have taken a very active part in the Ku Klux movement against the Jews. They charge to them the tendency of the young people to make Sunday a day of pleasure rather than of church worship. Very bitter denunciation of the Jews for the "movie craze" in the country is found in papers that support the Klan. In many Southern and Western communities, where great congregations flocked to the churches on Sunday before moving picture shows came, it is now difficult to hold enough people together for the regular services.

In the current issue of the Wampus Cat, a defender of the Ku Klux Klan a special writer asserts:

"This country has been defiled by the Jewish moving picture producers. This Jewish propaganda which is thrown on the motion picture screens has been the undoing of the nation's morals. The Jew is getting his lunch hooks on our country by depraving our youth as well as our girlhood with their motion pictures."

This writer was defending the Ku Klux Klan. He declared that the slogan of the Klan is: "America shall be made safe for Americans."

"One of the greatest causes of our lack of morals in the last few years can be laid at the door of the motion picture as it is being made by the Jew," he added.

The Wampus Cat is a Seesville, La., publication. The South has many such Klan advocates. The political efforts of the Klan are giving politicians grave concern. The possibilities and opportunities for trouble making in that field are great. A situation now developing in the Senate will bring the Klan into play within the next sixty days. A lobby to prevent the Senate from ousting Earle B. Mayfield, Senator-elect from Texas, has been established here. It has headquarters at the Raleigh Hotel, and is directed by a Texas Republican formerly connected with the Republican National Committee. This man was selected for this particular job to hold party men in line for Mayfield, who is a Democrat. Klansmen in Missouri, Indiana, Kansas, Ohio and other Western States have instructions to write their Senators in behalf of Mayfield. If a showdown comes in this case there will be embarrassed Senators, for the Klan has thousands of loyal workers in ten or twelve close States.

Questionnaire Sent to Candidates Stresses Religious Beliefs

The new Imperial Wizard Evans when here last month asserted that his order would be represented at the national capital and forthwith organized the lobby at the Raleigh and Senators began to hear what they were expected to do. This was followed by a backfire and prodding campaign in Klan strongholds.

The launching of aggressive anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish campaigns in Missouri, Indiana and Kansas just before the election came as a great surprise to Democratic and Republican leaders in those States. A still greater surprise was caused when the ballots in some counties were counted.

At first the Klan was considered a joke, but as the days went by party workers realized that they were confronted by a real problem. Candidates were asked to fill out an elaborate questionnaire relating to religious affiliations.

The most common questionnaire submitted either by mail or by a committee of Klansmen bore the Ku Klux Klan decorations—coat of arms and motto, and read:

"The Most Sublime Lineage in All History

"Commemorating and Perpetuating as it does the most Dauntless Organization Known to man"

"IMPERIAL PALACE
"Invisible Empire
"Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Incorporated.
"Atlanta, Georgia.
"Department of Propagation.
"Dated at Indianapolis, Indiana.
"Send reply to P. O. Box 934.
"Dear Office Seeker:

"As you well know, whenever a man is running for a public office real citizens are anxious to know about the man, and as one of the fundamental duties of an American is to properly cast his ballot, we are sending each candidate in Marion county on the Democratic and Republican tickets one of these questionnaires. We request that you fill out each and every question, sign same, have it acknowledged by a notary public and return to us promptly.

1. Where were you born? When?
2. Where do you now reside?
3. How long in your present location?
4. Of what church are you a member?
5. Give your minister's name and address.
6. Of what church is your father a member? If deceased, of what church was he a member? Of what church is your mother a member? If deceased, of what church was she a member?
7. Of what church is your wife a member? If deceased, of what church was she a member?
8. In what schools were you educated? STATE FULLY!
9. To what school or schools are you sending your children? If their education is completed, state what schools they attended.
10. Of what fraternal and civic orders or clubs are you a member? STATE FULLY.
11. State your occupation for the past ten years."

It was distributed just before the primary. The Marion county (Indiana) questionnaire was like hundreds of others. When these questions were submitted in person the victim was asked by word of mouth if he had any business affiliation with Catholics or Jews. From the answers received the Klansmen later made out sample tickets used on election day.

Texas a Hotbed of the Klan, With Religious Issue to the Fore

By a jump from the middle West to Texas we come to the hotbed of the Klan. In the Lone Star State the Klan, with its strength estimated at 175,000 members, has taken up the religious war and entered politics. There the negro plays but an insignificant part. In the larger cities the Ku Klux have united the Protestants against the Catholics and the Jews.

An incident at Houston during the fall campaign shows to what extent the Ku Klux Klan has become a part of the political life of that city. Local papers had stated that a certain group of candidates was supported by the Klan. Other candidates were described as anti-Klan. Knights of Columbus met and indorsed the anti-ticket. Within a few days a meeting of Jews took similar action. An elderly Protestant preacher who was popular in the city called a mass meeting and rallied the forces for the Klan candidates. From that hour until the polls closed it was a religious war, and the Klan ticket won by an overwhelming vote.

The Texas Klan does not stop at political conflicts. It takes part in the enforcement of law. Its first activities were directed against bootleggers, gamblers and moral law violators. A system of spies has been built up and regularly and duly elected State and county officers accept tips from the secret investigators of the Klan. Men and women suspected of misconduct have been driven out of communities, tarred and feathered or murdered by persons wearing Ku Klux disguises. One prominent business man who made a visit to New York with a woman in his employ was mutilated on his return to the State. The Texas members of the Klan called on New York members for a report on the couple, and the drastic action of the Klansmen followed. Alleged bad men and bad women have been driven out of the oil fields of Texas. The Invisible Empire has reached all counties. Persons under the Klan ban do not wait for formal notice to depart, but flee at the first intimation that they are marked. In Texas one lawyer who joined the Klan had a rival attorney frightened away so he could get his practice.

Religious hatred has become so violent in many Texas communities that all industrial enterprises are divided on Ku Klux and anti-Ku Klux lines. In little towns there are Ku Klux and anti-Ku Klux banks. If it develops that Ku Klux directors are on an anti-Ku Klux bank board or vice versa they are asked to retire. The situation in that State grows worse instead of better.

In Louisiana the Klan movement is getting under good headway. It will enter the next Senatorial race if Gov. Parker decides to run against Senator Ransdell. The two Louisiana Senators are Catholics. It will be a difficult task to oust either one of them, for the Catholics are very strong in the State. Political opponents of Gov. Parker asserted that his flareup against the Ku Klux is an effort to curry favor with the Catholic element and put himself in the contest for the Senate.

Klan Worried About Papal Power, And Members Get Circulars

The printing presses of the Ku Klux Klan grind out anti-Catholic literature all the time. The public generally never sees this, for it is carefully distributed to prospective candidates for membership in the Klan and to actual members. A most insidious campaign is conducted from the Atlanta headquarters. During the recent campaign voters were asked questions like this:

"Do you know:

"That the Pope is a political autocrat?

"That a secret treaty made by him started the war?

"That he is enthroned and crowned and makes treaties and sends and receives Ambassadors?

"That 116 princes of his government are enthroned in our cities?

"That he has courts here enforcing the canon law?

"That he controls the daily and magazine press?

"That he denounces popular government as inherently vicious?

"That his canon law condemns public schools and forbids children to attend them?

"That Popery enthroned in great cities controls politics?

"That our war industries were placed exclusively in Roman Catholic hands?

"That no sectarian body or fraternal order but Knights of Columbus was permitted to do war relief work in the army and navy?

"That Roman Catholics compose one-sixth of our population and hold three-fourths of the public offices, being entrenched in national, State and city governments throughout the country?

"That they are pouring into our land as immigrants at the rate of 2,000,000 a year?

"That Knights of Columbus declare they will make Popery dominant in the United States?"

Most of Southern States Resent Klan Driving Out Needed Negro

As was said at the beginning of this article, there is no Ku Klux issue now in most of the South and the reasons for this condition are interesting.

By calling his organization the Ku Klux Klan "Col." William J. Simmons, the originator of the new order, capitalized civil war reconstruction sentiment in certain Southern communities. At the outset his Klan appealed to many people who apprehended trouble with colored soldiers returning from the world war. Ideas imbibed abroad made some of the colored men more ambitious socially. White neighbors resented the change in the negro. In Texas there was "bad blood" between white and colored communities.

All of these race animosities helped the Ku Klux campaign in its early stages. Frightened negroes left Ku Klux States by the thousands. Many of them went to the North and West. Some counties in Georgia were almost depopulated of negroes.

The 1920 census returns indicate plainly the drift of the colored population since the Invisible Empire became a menace.

The increase in the negro population of Georgia from 1900 to 1910, for instance, was 13.7 per cent., whereas from 1910 to 1920 it dropped to 2.5 per cent., far below the increase due.

At the beginning of the Ku Klux movement Florida was quickly organized and many negroes frightened or actually mistreated. The increase there from 1900 to 1910 was 33.8 per cent., but that went down to 6.7 from 1910 to 1920.

Alabama was Ku Klux ridden for several years. Her negro population increased 9.8 per cent. from 1900 to 1910, but decreased 0.8 per cent. from 1910 to 1920.

From 1900 to 1910 the negroes of Mississippi increased 11.2 per cent., but from 1910 to 1920 they decreased 7.4 per cent.

In Louisiana the negroes increased 9.7 per cent. from 1900 to 1910 and decreased 1.9 per cent. from 1910 to 1920.

The migration of the negro from a few of the Southern States became so heavy that farmers who depend on them to produce cotton joined a movement to counteract the mischief done by the Ku Klux Klan. In Atlanta a score of preachers conducted a very active campaign against the Klansmen on the ground that their activities were unjust, wicked and harmful to the community and State. This was led by the Rev. Plato T. Durham of Atlanta, a noted Methodist preacher, whose relatives had been connected with the old Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Durham has taken a very bold stand against the Invisible Empire. He has been helped by many descendants of the men of the first Klan, who resent the usurpation.

As a result of the counter movement to protect and conserve the negro population, the Klan has let up in that direction. Very little is heard of crimes against the negro. The first enthusiastic outbursts in Florida, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia and Oklahoma ended the aggressive Ku Klux movement in those States. It has failed to arouse any real interest in old Ku Klux centers. During the recent campaign in Florida one or two counties had Ku Klux flareups in the primary campaigns, but they did not amount to much.

In South Carolina, where the negro population is much larger than the white, an outside organizer of the Klan was told that South Carolinians could enforce their own laws, and handle their own undesirable citizens. The Klan promoter was practically forced out of Columbia, and South Carolina has not been considered good Ku Klux country since.

In North Carolina last week a Klansman was sentenced to a year at the rock pile for trying to intimidate a neighbor.

In States where Catholics and Jews are not very prominent, and hold but few offices, the Ku Klux propaganda fails to take.

Yet where dreamers and politicians still worry about "negro domination" the Klan holds on by a sentiment for "white supremacy." Prominent public men, like Representative Edward W. Pou, Democratic leader of the House Rules Committee, take the position that the Klan should be let alone, for the reason that it "does a lot of good and has among its members some of the best men in the State." That theory and defense have kept the new Klan from dying of dry rot there.

It is true that in the South groups of hooded Knights of the Klan parade on special occasions, and frighten timid negroes, and sometimes furnish cover for crimes.

The Klan has been used in a number of instances to cover up offenders. In Alabama, Florida, Texas, Louisiana and Kansas brutal attacks have been made on men and women by Klansmen or people disguised as Klansmen. The victims in a large majority of these cases have been white.

As for the supreme organization of the Klan the Imperial Wizard, H. W. Evans, hails from Dallas. The Imperial Cyclops is Edward Young Clarke, the money getter. It was Clarke and Mrs. M. E. Tyler who took hold of the movement when it was sinking under William Joseph Simmons of Atlanta and made it nationwide and strong financially.

Simmons, a tall, auburn haired, rosy checked man, looks more like a prizefighter than a minister of the gospel, but most of his life has been spent in preaching, orating and organizing fraternal orders. He belongs, or did, to the Masons, the Royal Arch Masons, the great order of Knights Templars, and a dozen or fifteen other orders. He spent fifteen years working for a fraternal organization of his own, but it was not until October, 1915, when the war fever swept over the land, that the opportunity came to rally enough supporters to get the Klan under way. Thirty-four Georgians, called together by Simmons, formed the nucleus. On December 4, 1915, the Secretary of State of Georgia issued the charter for the Invisible Empire. The organization was described and classified as a "standard, fraternal eleemosynary society, like unto the order of the Masons, Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Elks and other institutions" of that nature and national in scope.

Very few persons outside of Georgia heard anything about the Klan for several years. Numerous parades by right in full Ku Klux uniform were given in Georgia towns. The purpose of these was to frighten negroes and show off generally. Ceremonies were held on a mountain twenty miles from Atlanta. These performances delighted Simmons, who likes the limelight. But in the meantime the Klan was very poor. It was struggling for financial existence. While in this condition Clarke, a professional press agent and drive conductor, took charge of the financial end of the game. He was known as the most aggressive and effective advertising man in Georgia. He saw in the Ku Klux Klan movement an opportunity to put his talents to good use for himself. The $10 initiation fee had great possibilities in it. With a fine record for putting over money drives Clarke entered the Invisible Empire with enthusiasm and determination. He took with him Mrs. Tyler, who had worked with him on his publicity enterprises for years. Soon after Clarke and Mrs. Tyler joined the Ku Klux movement the financial troubles of Simmons began to pass. Klans sprung up everywhere. No opportunity or community was overlooked. If the people wanted to fight the negoes then the Simmons-Clarke-Tyler combination had the literature, the organization and the men. If they were after the Catholics or the Jews it was just as willing and ready. In Georgia the negro was used to get new members, in Louisiana and Texas the Catholics and Jews, and in California the Japanese.

Simmons has gone. But Clarke and Mrs. Tyler, the promoters and financiers, are still at the helm.

Within the last few weeks it was announced from Klan headquarters in Atlanta that Clarke has plans for a radical revision of the purposes of the organization. The changes are said to contemplate:

The extension of the Klan's membership to all Caucasian races.

The repeal of that provision of the organic law which debars persons of Catholic faith from membership.

The inauguration of intensive membership campaigns in European countries.

Making white supremacy the principal object of the order, which will apply to the yellow as well as the black races.

If there is such a program in view and if it is carried out it should furnish a much larger field for Clarke's financial proclivities.

UNMASKING A MENACE.

Since the time about two years ago when THE AGE obtained possession of the official manual of the Ku Klux Klan and unmasked its aims and purposes, public opinion has advanced in recognition of the menace presented by this secret organization. Not only did we reproduce a photograph of the cover of the volume ornamented with its cabalistic designs, but for several weeks space was devoted to reprinting the ritual and workings of the order. Until this time the only publications relating to the revival of the Klan had been those authorized by its promoters or evolved out of the imagination of the newspaper writers. New York Age 1-6-23

Following some months after the initial exposure by THE AGE came the results of an intensive study of the order from without and within, instituted by the New York World. Since then the doings of the Klan, either in the way of atrocity or camouflage, have formed part of the daily newspabulum set before the reading public.

The result of all this publicity has been to arouse among all sober thinking people the realization that an organization based on the principles avowed by the Klan, working in secret and in darkness, is a menace to American civilization. The most recent recognition of this true nature of Kukluxism was furnished at the testimonial dinner given to former Corporation Counsel O'Brien, recently elected Surrogate of New York County.

In his speech delivered on this occasion Dr. Joseph Silverman, president of Emanu-El Brotherhood, called upon the Protestant Church to denounce the Ku Klux Klan or stand condemned in the eyes of the American people. Dr. Silverman said:

> "We cannot shut our eyes to the great menace that has taken root in our midst. No clique or clan dare tell the millions of American people, of all races and creeds, that the United States shall be a land for white Protestants. The Jews cannot rule this country. Neither can the Catholic nor the Negroes."

Former Supreme Court Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, who was toastmaster, denounced the Kllan for "formenting hatred against the Jewish people, arousing a distrust of devout Catholics, oppressing the Negro and thwarting the efforts and ambitions of immigrants.

When Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, black and white alike, are aroused to the true menace of the Klan, its power for evil will be ended.

RACE RESTLESS IN FAR SOUTH DESPITE OBVIOUS PROGRESS

REIGN OF TERROR IN WAKE OF PLAGUES

Norfolk, Va.

Returning from a trip to Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas and other Southern States, Rev Long briefly summarizes his observations on the causes of the new exodus of Negroes as seen from the far South, in the article below. His views as given are the result of careful first-hand inquiry.—Editor.

By Rev. C. M. LONG

All things considered, the Negro in the South is making progress and doing well; but everywhere he is restless and dissatisfied. This dissatisfaction is showing itself in the form of all kinds of protests, and through a new exodus to the West and North. The causes of this restlessness are many, but chief among them are the World War, which gave the Negro everywhere a new outlook, and a new craving for that freedom for which he fought to give all Europe; the boll weevil, which makes it almost impossible for him to produce a good cotton crop—the sweet potato worm—a new pest under the sun, which does for his potatoes what the weevil does for his cotton—the peonage system which requires that he and his family work all the year, only to come out in debt to his master every year—poor schools—a dark future—the terror of the K. K. K., and the better industrial and economical and social conditions offered by the West and East and North.

ON THE MOVE

The Negroes are moving, the fertile fields which once waved with golden grain are growing up in hay and weeds; the Southern planter in particular and all the white South generally are crying over the strange activities of the Southern Negro, but my prediction is, that except the far South awakes to a sane Christian attitude towards the Negro, the black sons will continue their flights, and through the boll weevil, the potato worms and a thousand other plagues, God will totally abandon and completely curse that fair and sunny land that lieth in the South of our great Republic, which is too big a hypocrite to legislate an anti-lynching bill for the protection of her black sons, who went 3000 miles acrosse the sea to fight for "World Democracy."

O, Eternal Justice, where are Thy thunderbolts! O, Angels of God, how are ye restrained!!

THE NEGRO AND THE KLAN

Superior News

There has been many things written and said about the Negro, and likewise there have been many a thing written and said about the Klan. 1/13/23

There have been many things written and said about the Klan that were not true and there have likewise been many things written and said about the Negro that could be easily placed in the same category.

The very name of Ku Klux to the Negro of ante-bellum type or even of advanced years carried with it a fear, a horror, a real dread of the name. There has been known another Klan though of the same name, but of far different principles which has come to light in the latter days and which has claimed and is now claiming a sufficient amount of the country's attention, which in the columns of our own city press, and unsolicited (for we would not know who to solicit) has said that they are the friends of the Negro, and we have no inclination to doubt that friendship which they have voluntarily claimed for us, unless they adversely write it in acts.

It is not our purpose to here discuss any phase of the Klan, for to do so would be entirely irregular and wholly out of the question for we are not a member.

What we do propose to discuss here, however is, that there are too many things by far which are being directly attributable and charged to the Klan, that the Klan knows absolutely nothing about.

The hooded and robed feature of the Klan is the subject of much advantage being taken. Everybody who happen to have a grievance and wants to right the grievnce according to his own notion has nothing to do but to don the hood and robe, drop a placard with the three letters "K. K. K."and his every act from tarring and feathering to administering a good flogging, or whatever the case may be, is directly charged to the Klan, when the facts in the case are not arrived at in the least.

'Tis true, that nobody knows who operates behind the mask. And there is not a single mask now worn but for what some good and splendid imitation of the same thing can be found.

That being the case it stands to reason then that the Klan has to bear the direct responsibility for a goodly number of things of which they know nothing or little about.

We know that the Klan is organized for specific purposes, for those in authority have said so. But for all of this they should not be held up to ridicule any more than any other organization until it is an established fact beyond a reasoneble doubt that the Klan, or some member thereof has been guilty of an infraction of the law.

As with the Klan in many accusations which have been laid to them, so in a great many instances with the Negro.

The Negro is charged with a great number of things, some of which he is guilty and some of which he is innocent. The Negro, unfortunately, does not have a trumpeter, for to advocate the cause of the Negro would be the direct signal for one's unpopularity, no matter how commendable the cause may be. Hence for a lack of this, for a lack of some one to speak the word, when it should be spoken, for a lack of the facts in the case to be derived at before a proper execution of justice is directly responsible for a great number of innocent Negroes having to suffer.

It is no more fair to lay the hand of accusation upon them without the proper exercise of legal judgment, than it is to lay everything that happens to be committed under the guise of a robe to the Klan.

In the first place, let us all be fair and broadminded towards our ownselves, and being fair and broadminded to our selves we will likewise be fair in our accusation especially to the Negro and the Klan.

THE KU KLUX OR THE GOVERNME

New York News 1-6-2

The Harding administration is, in fact, sitting supinely by and watching the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan supplant the rotten though republican forms of government in the Southern States. The nation sleeps upon this smouldering volcano, trusting that the same Lord that looks out for fools and drunkards will preserve the nation eternally against the dangers that press from without and within. This nation apparently believes, like Macbeth, saying: "If fate will have me king, fate will crown me"; that willy-willy despite all efforts at self-destruction and all practices of selfishness, iniquity and persecution the republic will survive. The killing of the white Louisianans by the Ku Klux should be a sign to all of its patriots that would be heeded. The civil war that impends in the Pelican State between the hooded murder-graft band on the one side and the minority of its white citizens, backed by the State militia, is only the forerunner of a nation-wide outbreak unless the American people act and act now. The Ku Klux must be stopped and the principles of the Ku Klux must be crushed now and for all time or the consequences will be fast and terrible. If this is not done there will be no loyal elements in the time to come upon whom the nation may call in its dark hours of need.

Charles M. Schwab recently told to the Associated Press that his greatest reliance against Bolshevism in America is in her colored citizens. Back in the innermost recesses of every American patriot's brain rest that same admiration and confidence in the heroic loyalty of the twelve million black Americans. But back there also lodges the mental reservation as to the crying need of setting these pillars of the nation upon the eternal foundation stone of absolute justice and equality, not only in the enjoyment, but in the making of his livelihood. Back there also lodges the moral cowardice when it comes to demanding that these saviors of the nation from Bolshevism be given not only the right to vote in every State of the Union, but the right to have that vote honestly counted; the right not only to be represented, but the right to represent in their own government. The time may come, the American people should know, when the black man will demand as the price of his continued loyalty a square voice in his own government. He went into the Revolution to make his nation free and independent. He went forth to France to make the world safe for democracy. Today he enjoys in no tolerable degree either freedom, independence or democracy. If the American people are wise in any degree, if they are not blind to the black clouds of internal discord and foreign hatred now lowering upon the horizon, they will turn about face in their treatment of their brave black fellow citizens. Our personal advice is that the Intelligence Bureau begin at once the dissemination of propaganda to that end. Our personal advice is that the War Department, the Navy Department and every other department of the government at Washington drop at once its every color line. The twelve million colored citizens of the republic must not only be protected, but must be brought by drastic methods, if necessary, into the full enjoyment of their citizenship. They cannot be made to feel too soon, Mr. Schwab and fellow American patriots, that they are part and parcel of this nation—these saviors of the nation from Bolshevism!

We advise the American people that it is the race massacres and church burnings and jim-crowism and disfranchisement of Dixie that will make the spread of Bolshevism possible among the black twelve million loyal patriots of America. Words seemingly are wasted in arousing the republic either in the recital of the revolting details of the almost daily horrible lynchings of the South or the impending menace they are bringing to the entire country. For forty years the patriotic Union press daily and weekly, for more than a generation patriotic public men, white and black, have cried out to the Southern hoodlums to let their black neighbors go their plodding way in peace—to let law and order be the equal right of colored citizens, too. Since slavery education has been given in ever-increasing measure to both races throughout the Southland. Churches among both races have multiplied, and especially among the freedmen. In direct proportion to this evident increase of good citizenship among the blacks, lynchings, burnings at the stake, arson and every crime with which the Germans tortured the helpless Belgians, every outrage which the Reds of Russia have tyrannized over the bourgeoisie, the poor whites and indeed the "leading citizens" of Dixie have visited in ever-increasing measure and barbarism upon their black neighbors. Now that the world has been made safe for democracy by the blood of black soldiers; now that America is setting forth upon its policy of world redemption to American ideals; now that the black man finds himself a persecuted outcast, standing alone in the open field of ruin, with no hope of protection for his life and liberty guaranteed, with his churches and his lodges burning and no strong hand to bid his enemies cease, that Bolshevism does not eventually plant its poisonous seeds in his soul is little less than a miracle. It is the finest tribute in itself ever paid to the worth and patriotism of the black American. But let the black man once become convinced that mob law will always be his portion, that in the new order he will not be treated as a man and citizen, self-defense, meeting violence with violence, will be his program. We repeat in measured words the sentiment of Governor Parker of Louisiana and all his honest fellow Southerners on lynching that in this respect the South cannot save itself. The nation to save the South from its present Bolshevism among the whites and inevitable Bolshevism among the blacks—the nation, we repeat, must step in, and at once!

The issue confronting the American people is the Ku Klux or the government!

Ku Klux Klan—1923. General

DON'T BE FOOLED.

Don't be fooled by the pious ejaculations of the Ku Klux Klan, by their pompous pretentions of patriotism, their boasted high ideals. If they come to your church hooded and cowled asking the privilege of donating money and that prayers be said for their work, order them out; get a policeman if necessary, and see that they are fined for disturbing public worship. It would be better to spit on the money they leave, unless you say what the old colored preacher said when gamblers proffered a "donation for your church" namely: "The devil has used this money long enough, I am now going to turn it to the Lord's good work."

Colored people yet living know the unsavory history of klanism in the reconstruction period of the 60's. Ever since those terrible days Ku Klux have been under their ban. The K. K. K. is not only un-American, but is unlegal, un-Christian, a menace to all that is noble, good and grand. The habitues of darkness are engendering hate where love should be encouraged secretly conspiring in the dark and hidden ways of the compact, taking the law and punishment, courts and methods into their own hands, they encourage mob rule and lynching. Everybody knows by this time that the Ku Klux Klan is a foul thing, foreign to genius of the United States, a disturber of the peace, a maligner of races and religion. With every Colored man and woman in the country aainst it, every Jew and every Roman Catholic, ninety of every hundred intellient citizens, the thing aught to be stamped out and that in quick order.

Violence, intimidation, corruption, arrogance, defiance of law, order and peace, especially against Colored people, surely that people are against the thing day and night.

It is a strange thing but the Colored people, Jews and Romanists are confering about this un-American, anti-religious anachronism thrusts upon the American people.

Eternal vigilence is the price of liberty. Don't be fooled, ye Colored Americans.

THE NEGRO AND K. KLUX

It is dawning on the consciousness of public and business men in Southern States that the revival of Ku Klux Klan activities may be the urgent reason for an unhappy economic condition disturbing cotton, sugar, rice, corn and tobacco planters. An exodus of colored farm help to cooler climes has taken serious proportions. Alabama, for instance, with 900,000 Negroes, has lost 25,000 able-bodied men of that race this season. It begins to be doubted if this departure is entirely due to economic reasons. The Negroes have heard of the Ku Klux Klan and fear it. Memory of it goes back to reconstruction days after the Civil War, where more recent activities have not terrified them.

The colored race is of enormous importance to Southern enterprise. Its labor can be replaced by white men only at enormous cost, and his migration to the North already is pinching. Once it becomes established that fear of the Ku Klux is a cause of the exodus, and that organization, born in the South and with its headquarters there, is going to become "mighty unpopular" among all men interested in the progress and prosperity of the South, desired by the whole country.

The Negro loves the South. The chill of Northern Winters is disagreeable to him. He suffers in snows and cold winds. But he seems to prefer any climate to juxtaposition with bodies of Ku Klux in white hoods and robes, visiting colored neighborhoods in the middle of the night to impose discipline.

TEMPORARY ORDER AGAINST SIMMONS

Following charges that William J. Simmons is in open violation of his contract with the Ku Klux Klan in organizing the Knights of Kamelia as a separate order and appropriating costumes, rituals and other paraphernalia for its use, made in a petition filed Friday by the Hiram W. Evans faction, Judge John D. Humphries signed a temporary order restraining Col. Simmons and his associates from further proceedings until a hearing is conducted this morning.

The order was directed against Emperor Simmons and the following klansmen, whom he named as his "cabinet" in the Knights of Kamelia: Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd of the klan; J. O. Wood, editor of the Searchlight; Henry J. Norton, L. W. Lathrop, Jr., William E. Thompson and E. J. Jones, of Atlanta; Thomas H. Knight and C. W. Bosom, of Oklahoma.

Emperor Simmons announced organization of the Knights of Kamelia as a higher order of klanship a week ago following a meeting of the klan administration in Washington. He asserted that he was creating the order as an organization separate from the Ku Klux Klan, to be directed by a distinct administration, and that he was acting by his authority as emperor to create and promulgate ritualistic work of the order.

Under Alleged Contract.

The suit Friday asserted that Emperor Simmons was acting beyond his authority or invested right in his attempt to organize the Knights of Kamelia, which was intended originally, it was stated, as a distinct branch of the klan and not a separate organization. It was claimed that Emperor Simmons had contracted to convey all his rights to control of klan rituals, literature and paraphernalia to the klan in consideration of a $1,000 monthly annuity.

The Knights of Kamelia under the constitution of the klan is merely the second order of klanship, the suit sets forth. Emperor Simmons and his "cabinet" obtained a charter in Oklahoma June 6 to organize the Knights of Kamelia as a separate order, the suit claims.

There were to be four kloranic orders, the suit sets forth, as follows: The order of citizenship, or probationary order, to be designated as K-Uno; the Knights of Kamelia, or primary order of knighthood, designated K-Duo; the Knights of the Great Forest, the Order of Southern Chivalry, of K-Trio; the Knights of the Midnight Mysteries, the superior order of knighthood, or K-Quad.

Revive Court Decree.

A section of the court decree entered by consent of attorneys for Simmons and Evans, which ended the recent litigation between the two for control of the klan, was recited in the suit. By this section it is claimed Emperor Simmons relinquished all claims to independent control of klan rituals.

The section follows:

"It is found that William Joseph Simmons is the owner of the copyright and author's rights on the rituals, literature, costumes and paraphernalia of the order, but the court further finds that he has contracted to assign and convey to the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., all copyrights and author's rights that he may have, and that it is his duty to design and promulgate further rituals, literature, costumes and paraphernalia, which may become the subject of copyright, and that this service is being performed by him for the benefit of said corporation, and said William Joseph Simmons has agreed that the copyright and author's rights in and to all such rituals, literature, costumes and paraphernalia as he has hitherto obtained, shall be the property of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, in consideration of the sum of $1,000 per month to be paid him so long as he shall live, and thereafter to his wife, Bessie Shine Simmons, so long as she shall live, if she should survive him."

The suit recited records of Oklahoma courts, in which Emperor Simmons and his Knights of Kamelia cabinet obtained a charter June 6 in Oklahoma "to conduct a benevolent, charitable, fraternal and protective organization." It asserted that the emperor and his cabinet were sending letters to all parts of the country urging persons to join the Knights of Kamelia.

The suit also suggested that Emperor Simmons be restrained from conferring on any individual the rank or degree or title of Knight Kamelia. It was also asked that Emperor Simmons and his cabinet be restrained from use of ritualistic, kloranic matter or paraphernalia.

A CLEVER KU KLUX PLOT?

Monts ago we received the information that the Ku Klux Klan was going to enact a vicious plot against race harmony in New York and New Jersey. Teh plan as unfolded to us was that various framed-up assaults on white women by alleged colored men were to be staged in New York and New Jersey. The press agents of the Klan, several of whom are said to be reporters on the metropolitan press, were "to play these up" for all they were worth. An "anti-Negro" propaganda was to be started in Greater New York in this way. Every straw that could then be used was to be continually thrown into the blave until a fierce and bloody outbreak could be manufactured. When the race ferment was seething at its height, then drastic jim-crow proscriptive measures were to be proposed proposed and these were to be continually pressed and agitated until the South's Ku Klux Klan race methods were adopted. The opportunity for the Klan almost came with the Newark murder of a few weeks ago. But somehow the Klan's plans miscarried. Nothing further has occurred to keep the ball a-rolling. Now, however, there appears asu spicious-looking matter which has all the ear-marks of a bit of this Ku Klux Klan plot. The Harlem detective force has been continually annoyed by people whose daughters in school and in offices, have received postcards from one "Chief Johnson." Some of these cards have mistakenly been sent to colored girls. They make alluring offers to these girls to meet men in or near "protected Harlem cabarets." Many of these girls hase kept the engagements, only to have "Chief Johnson" and his agents fail to appear. The whole thing is simply a part of the Klan's plan, we believe. We urge the community to watch the developments. We urge the Police Department to hunt dow nthe criminals. The Ku Klux Klan won't get its work going here. But we should not let it get started.—N. Y. News June 16.

WIZARD EVANS EXONERATED IN KLAN ROW

Kloncilium Resolutions Declare Charges of Extravagance Are Unfounded.

Exoneration of Dr. W. H. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, and other officials, accused of "mismanagement and extravagance" in administering the affairs of the klan, was voted late Tuesday by the imperial Kloncilium in special session in the imperial palace, it was made known Wednesday.

Eleven members of the body were present, and the vote was said to have been unanimous.

The other officials, besides the imperial wizard, who were found not guilty, were F. L. Savage, imperial klaliff; Brown Harwood, imperial klazik, and H. K. Ramsey, imperial kligrapp.

Resolutions were adopted declaring the charges to be "untrue and unfounded."

The charges were preferred by Dr. W. E. Thompson, of Savannah, a former member of the kloncilium, and Miner Meriwether, of Tulsa, Okla., a former great titan in that state. Neither of the accusers was present, it was said, but the kloncilium proceeded with the trial. The session lasted all day.

Savage, in addition to the other charges aaginst the officials, was accused of being a member of the Knights of Columbus. Savage introduced records of the Second Adventist Church, Boston, for 1888, showing that he was baptized in that church and was a communicant, it was revealed.

Colonel William J. Simmons, emperor of the klan; Dr. Caleb A. Ridley and two other members were absent.

DENY FOUR BOLTED.

Members of the Kloncilium Wednesday denied these four had bolted the meeting, as had been reported in klan circles Tuesday. Dr. Ridley, it was announced, sent a message to the effect that he was ill. Another member recently broke his leg, and the other was unable to get here, it was declared.

Ben Sullivan, Atlanta attorney, and Nation B. Forrest, declared to have been appointees of Colonel Simmons, were present and voted, it was announced.

No further announcement had been made Wednesday by Attorney W. S. Coburn, one of the counsel in the latest injunction proceedings against the klan officials, as to whether he would institute contempt of court proceedings against members of the Kloncilium because of their action in trying and acquitting the accused officials.

KLAN IS BITTER ENDER.

Evans Issues Foreign Policy Declaring for Violation.

(By The Associated Press)

FT. WORTH, Texas, June 30.—Declaration that the Ku Klux Klan is strongly against President Harding's plan for a world court or any other form of alliance with foreign nations was made by Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans in an interview made public here today following a closed meeting held last night by the local klan, at which the imperial wizard delivered an address.

"The Ku Klux Klan is preaching pure Americanism and to that end will its efforts be spent," he said. "Concerning Utopian theories for the correction of civilization's ills the klan, as an organization will take no part. We think that if America will attend to America's business, treating all other peoples and nations alike and right but leaving to them their own responsibilities, the world will be better, civilization safer and our duties as men and Americans more fully performed."

In Ohio, the president's home state, more than 300,000 voters are members of the Ku Klux Klan, Dr. Evans said. He asserted the total membership of the organization had reached more than 1,000,000 and there were more klansmen north of the Mason and Dixon Line than in the south.

SIMMONS HALTED FROM ORGANIZING KNIGHTS KAMELIA

Imperial Wizzard Obtains New Injunction; Hearing Set for Today

CHARGE LEADER BROKE CONTRACT

ATLANTA, Ga., June 22.—Organization of the Knights of Kamelia by William Joseph Simmons, has been temporarily halted by an injunction obtained by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, which has filed a suit against Colonel Simmons emperor of the klan, seeking to enforce the contract alleged to have been entered into between the factions headed by Emperor Simmons and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, several months ago.

Judge John D. Humphries of the Fulton superior court signed the temporary restraining order late Thursday, but it did not become known until today. It was made returnable tomorrow, but klan officials stated tonight no action in the matter was expected for a week or more.

Many Are Named.

In addition to Emperor Simmons the defendants named in the petition are Rev. Caleb Ridley, former imperial kludd, or chaplain of the klan; J. O. Wood, editor of Searchlight; Henry J. Norton, W. H. Lathrop Jr., W. E. Thompson and E. J. Jones, all of Atlanta; Thomtas H. Kight, C. W. Beson, and N. H. Moore of Oklahoma, and the Knights of Kamelia.

Under the contract alleged to have been made by Colonel Simmons, he is to receive $1000 per month for the remainder of his life and thereafter his wife, if she should survive him, is to receive a like sum for the remainder of her life, in consideration of all copyrights and authors' rights he may have on all rituals, costumes literature and paraphernalia of the order.

Oppose Separate Order.

The petition sets worth that the Knights of Kamelia is the second of the four degrees of the Ku Klux Klan as provided for in the constitution of the order and is a part of the Ku Klux Klan, in no way separate except in the individual philosophies, teachings and secret mysteries. It alleges that while Colonel Simmons as emperor is given the right to promulgate the secrets of Kamelia, it in no way authorizes him to set up the Kamelia as a separate and distinct order under his own control and direction.

In addition to Emperor Simmons the on June 6, obtained a charter in the State of Oklahoma for the organization of the Knights of Kamelia as an order separate and distinct from the Ku Klux Klan and the petition makes charges to the effect that Emperor Simmons has appropriated to the Kamelia the rituals and other secret work created by him specifically for the klan and owned by the klan under copyright.

Charge Contract Violation.

Charges are made that Emperor Simmons is "in open violation" of his contrfact with the klan when he attempts, without the consent of the order, to set up the Kamelia as a separate order and this action on his part constitutes a "fraud on the klan."

Race Author Writes On "Ku Klux Spirit"

NEW YORK, June 28—J. A. Rogers, author of "From Superman to Man," "Where Nature Leads," and other literary works has completed "The Ku Klux Spirit," a brief outline of the notorious klan, both past and present.

Calm and Quiet Once More Reigns In K. K. K. Ranks

Calm and quiet again descended yesterday over the rank and file of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan following the announcement by William Joseph Simmons, emperor, that he had formed the Knights Kamelia.

Emperor Simmons' announcement came with dramatic suddenness, following a meeting of the imperial kloncilium in Washington at which it was voted to form a woman's organization in line with the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and include certain women's organizations now functioning with the exception of Kamelia, an order established recently by Emperor Simmons to function along lines similar to the klan.

Simmons, in explaining his right to promulgate a new order of klansmen, cites a section of by-laws which says: "These several orders of klannish achievement and kloranic advancement shall be communicated, and their kloranic regulations, requirements and governments shall be established and promulgated by and in the discretion of the emperor of this order in the unfoldment of its philosophies, and in the revelation of its spiritual mysteries."

The emperor stated that the Knights Kamelia will be for the purpose of giving what he now calls probationary klansmen a chance to advance in work of the order at no cost to the klansmen in transferring from the klan to the new organization.

New Order Given Charter.

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 6.—A state charter was granted today to the Knights Kamelia, the new secret organization founded by W. J. Simmons, emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. The order was chartered as a "benevolent, charitable, fraternal and protective" organization.

Officers, according to the application filed with the secretary of state are: W. J. Simmons, Atlanta, emperor; C. A. Ridley, Atlanta, chancellor; H. Tom Knight, Claremore, Okla., supreme scribe; C. W. Beson, Claremore, custodian exchequer; H. N. Moore, supreme great knighthawk.

Tulsa was given as the organization's chief place of business, with postoffice addresses at Atlanta and Claremore.

BRITISH CRIME EXPERT DENOUNCES KU KLUX KLAN

Sir Basil Thomson, former director of the criminal investigation department of Great Britain's detective center, Scotland Yard, warns of the danger of thre Ku Klux Klan, in an interview published in the New York Herald of Sunday, June 3. 6-16-23

"The new Klan professes to wage war against modern social evil," said Sir Basil, "but in reality it fosters animosity against the Roman Catholics, the Jews and the colored people. It can do no possible good, and it may do much harm.

"It's use of the mask opens the door to the adoption of disguise by violent criminals who will not be slow to copy the form of the Klansman's mask when they have old scores to settle.

"Some unthinking people have likened the movement to the Italian Fascist movement, but the Fascist works openly and scorns the use of masks. The Klansman's defense for the mask, or rather the defense of those with whom I have talked, is that some people are shy of joining a movement, however much they approve of its objects, if they have to come out into the open. One would have thought that recruits so destitute of moral courage were scarcely worth enrolling. I venture the suggestion, which I make without any disrespect to the Klan, that without the masks there would be no recruits."

UNDERWOOD AND THE KLAN ISSUE.

During the recent trip of Senator Underwood to Texas his friends were interested and somewhat concerned at his action in frankly taking up the challenge of the Ku Klux Klan, and not a few were a little uneasy as to the possible effect of the incident upon the campaign of the Senator for the Democratic nomination.

Montgomery Advertiser 11-8-23

But they were without adequate information as to the beginning of the incident and its attendant circumstances. The strength of the Klan in Texas was fully realized and there was a similar realization of its organized strength in Oklahoma, Georgia, Indiana and other States. Senator Underwood did not seek the controversy, but when the challenge was issued he met it with the courage that has characterized his public life. A show down was demanded of him by Mayfield's Weekly, a Ku Klux Klan organ of Texas. The Klan boycotted his meetings and officers of it made public criticism of his candidacy. His answer was open and above board in an address delivered at Houston. He was not for the Klan whose works he criticised and announced very definitely that he would not be, if elected President, subject to the domination of the Klan.

The incident, as can be readily seen, was of a more far-reaching importance than its effect upon the situation in Texas. The New York World, a leading Democratic organ of the national party, says of it:

Montgomery Ala.

What part the Ku Klux Klan expects to take in the choosing of a Democratic candidate for President is fairly well indicated by an announcement in Mayfield's Weekly, one of the more important Klan publications of the Southwest, that Underwood, Ford and Smith will be opposed by members of the order.

Underwood is out of it, according to the Weekly, because of his Houston speech, in which he expressed general disapproval of Klan activities. Ford is out of it because he has presented to an Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church a specially built car. Smith is out of it because he is a Catholic. The Klan's feeling toward Senator Underwood appears to have been rendered especially bitter by the fact that his blanket disapproval was unexpected. The Klan was prepared for some attempt at conciliation, and there was none. Hence it attacks Underwood as the "Jew jug and Jesuit" candidate.

Two names are mentioned favorablly by the Weekly, those of McAdoo and Ralston. Neither has committed himself on the question of Ku Kluxism. Until they line up on the other side they are in the class which included Mr. Underwood before he went to Houston.

As a matter of fact, no wise politician wants Klan support for the Democratic nomination. A united drive by the Klan in the open for any one man would ruin his chances. The Klan is therefore waiting in vain for a prophet to lead it out of the wilderness. Nobody is going to lead it. There are a number of possible candidates who have not expressed themselves on the subject, but there is not one who, when he comes to express himself, will not be obliged to offend the super-government of the Southwest.

Since no Democratic candidate with any chance of success will declare for the Klan, and since nothing less will draw a solid Klan following, the influence of the organization on the nomination is destined to be slight.

Men who had closely followed the public life of Senator Underwood, look upon the war made upon him by the Klan and his characteristic courage in meeting it as what might have been expected, if the leaders of the Klan forced the issue. It is now clearly understandable that no local issue has been injected into the pre-convention campaign, but an issue that will cause alignment in many States and one which will have its effect upon the candidacy of others who are seeking the nomination.

When time for a show down is made on any public question the man to meet it is Senator Underwood. And secrecy and hidden politics are as far from his convictions as the poles are apart.

THE ERROR OF THE KLAN.

Chicago Daily Tribune 11-7-23

A battle between William J. Simmons, "emperor," and H. W. Evans, "imperial wizard," for control of the Ku Klux Klan, has been going on at headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., for some time. Its latest development is the murder of William S. Coburn, attorney for the Simmons faction, by Philip E. Fox, official publicity agent for the Evans faction.

Chicago Ill.

As murders go, one more or less will be no great shock to opponents of the klan, who have long insisted that unrestrained violence is the common practice of the organization. But this particular killing ought to have an influence on members and friends of the Klan as well as upon its enemies. It reveals clearly the type of men at the head of the organization. It ought to bring the subordinate membership to a realization of its errors.

The klan probably is a natural outgrowth of an inherent desire among native born Americans for an organization which can express their sentiments as against any minor group or faction. In theory it is not bad; in practice it is. It is not the best thought and principle of America which moves men to mask themselves and commit outrages by night and in secret against those of whom they disapprove. However pure and high of thought and purpose the oath of allegiance to such an organization may be, it is dragged in the dirt by such practices.

We can conceive of, appreciate, and approve the spirit which seeks organization of an all-American society which would put the ideals and interests of this country ahead of any other loyalty or thought or interest in the world, but such a spirit cannot live with the spirit of the mask, of violence, and of summary injustice. The two things are absolutely incompatible.

Yet an attempt has been made to unite them and to justify the union in the ranks of the klan. It has, no doubt, attracted many otherwise good citizens. Each has credited the organization with the thought which is within his own heart. The good Americans have overlooked the un-American mask and violence as unfortunate local errors.

The Atlanta murder proves that the error is deeper than that. It goes back to the head of the organization. It fixes the status of the klan.

A NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC!

The New York Times 11-15-23

Three distinct Caucasian enterprises have recently been soliciting subscriptions in Harlem, using the name of "Alderman George W. Harris" as being a promoter. No one of these three is so authorized. We have not investigated their standing, nor have we subscribed to their stock or subscription propositions. We are, therefore, in no position to recommend them from a financial point of view. The first of these is a professed anti-Ku Klux Klan organization. A reputed former grand goblin of the Klan, who has left the order and who, it is alleged, has been persecuted into poverty and poor health, is the organizer of this effort. Until such time as all the credentials of this Southern gentleman and his propagandizing associates can be checked up, our policy will be to "Beware of the gift-bearing Greeks."

New York N. Y.

We do not here enter into the merits of such an organization. We recently addressed a monster mass meeting held in the Bronx under its auspices. We were invited, with many distinguished white citizens, to become a member of its executive committee. No meeting of this committee upon which we, like they, accepted memberships, has ever been called to our notice or knowledge. Until such time as a meeting of this distinguished committee is called we advise all our friends to wait. We shall give due and frank notice through these columns when the committee is called and the details of its program.

Another Southerner's enterprise has been showing activity in Harlem, using our name. This plans to build a great colored seaside resort in Florida. They are trying to sell stocks in their enterprise. This gentleman conferred with us. We told him candidly that the proposition was impossible and that we would take neither part nor lot in it.

The South, and especially Florida, was an inferno for colored citizens, we said further, and that neither the seashore resort nor its financial prospects could cool its hellishness from our point of view.

The third enterprise is a pure Wall Street stock-selling scheme. Yet their active agents have approached several of our friends, declaring that "Alderman Harris is in on the ground floor." A story made out of whole cloth. We advise all our friends and readers to beware of all such propositions. Consult us personally before being led into these get-rich-quick propositions. We say these things, that no one may be misled.

THE "PATRIOT."

If the "Patriot," K. K. K. sheet, speaks the Kluxers' sentiments, the hooded "Americans" have begun feeling a real apprehension of the effect of the Negro vote. According to a signed article in a recent issue this mouthpiece of the masked legion feels it an American duty to bar Negroes from the polls. St. Louis Clarion

One of the biggest mistakes we make (and this is a common American mistake) is that we too often underestimate the strength, appeal or power of the programs of our enemies. That the Klan is much stronger than is generally supposed can easily be recognized. Regardless of the fact understood by every intelligent American of whatever race or faith that it is an organization of a few shrewd money getters supported by a large number of people little better than morons, its program has become one to be reckoned with and thought of as intelligently as any other widespread public menace. St. Louis Mo.

We may sit in our homes and offices and spout defiance, but defiance alone will not stop the Klan. As an organization promising its membership emolument on a basis of race alone and without the requirements of ability, intelligence and industry it is active and well controlled. 1/-16-23

The Catholic Church, on faith, the Jews with money, can successfully combat anything the Klan may attempt against them but Negroes without organization, too often without honest leadership, venal in politics, lacking the sympathy of any large number of any group, will be forced to a realization that as a race they have only themselves to depend on in any fight the Klan may make on them where such fight is not common against Jews and Catholics also and the Klan will not for a long time attempt to take the vote from any white person.

The Patriot is a filthy sheet, not even moderately intelligent, but reading it, we may learn to think.

THE NATIONAL VIGILANCE ASSOCIATION seeks to rescue the term "Americanism" from the reproach put upon it by the Ku Klux Klan. The American Bar Association pointed the way when it warned the country against the ripening harvest of anti-Americanism and solemnly declared that our form of government is being challenged, "not alone upon the soap-box, but by oath-bound societies that cloak their deadly hatred of free principles under the guise of patriotism." Philadelphia Ledger 1-13-23 The National Vigilance Association is not an anti-klan organization so much as it is an anti-hate organization. It will fight, with existing laws and such new laws as may be necessary, against all oath-bound sectaries who stir up hatred and threaten free institutions. It is the first national effort to armor our liberties with a legal panoply that will withstand the midnight assaults of masked and servile vileness

JOIN TEXAN IN ASKING KLAN REPUDIATION

New York, Dec. 19.—James Weldon Johnson, Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, today issued a statement in comment on the request of R. B. Creager, Republican national committeeman from Texas, that the Republican Party openly repudiate the Ku Klux Klan.

"The only issue in the North is not the Klan vote," said Mr. Johnson. "The colored vote is involved. Colored voters in the states where the Klan is strongest are watching with keen interest to see what stand the Republican Party takes. Already Theodore Roosevelt has repudiated Klan support offered him, and his repudiation was in no uncertain terms. Is the Republican Party going to live up to Mr. Roosevelt's courage? Is it going to maintain the freedom from shameful secrecy and race hatred and religious intolerance that all true American citizens have a right to expect? Kansas City Star 12-29-23

"The colored vote in the northern states, immensely augmented by the migration of Negroes from the South, will be affected by the Republican Party's answer to these questions. The last thing colored voters will be satisfied with is 'pussy-footing'. The Klan issue is definite. There can be no compromise. People who want votes of colored people, and parties who want Negro support in the Presidential election of 1925, will do well to make themselves clearly understood in this matter."

CLARKE OFFERS TO HELP SHATTER KLAN HE FORMED

Asserts He Is Dismayed a Depths to Which Order Has Fallen.

TELLS COOLIDGE OF NATIONAL EVIL

Suggests President Give Him Chance to Put End to Menace.

Washington, Dec. 27.—E. Y. Clarke, formerly high in the councils of the Ku Klux Klan, wrote to President Coolidge today, offering to co-operate with the executive in ending the activities of "an element" which is converting the klan into an organization vastly different from that planned by its founders. Times Picayune 12-28-23

Clarke also announced his intention of issuing a proclamation to klansmen, "calling the better element" either to take hold and "remedy the existing evils" or to disband the organization. New Orleans

Clarke said there has been "a steady withdrawal" from the klan and that he had "voluntarily severed his active official connection" with the organization more than a year ago.

Charges were made in the letter against the activities of the organization in disregard of the "high ideals, principles and purposes" for which it was formed.

Clarke said in his letter the development of the klan as mapped out was to have been "through scientific educational propaganda inside the lodge room and through printed literature and by the establishment of universities and through the building of hospitals." The trend recently, he said, had been in a different direction.

Signs With Klan Title.

The letter was signed with the title "Imperial Giant, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan." The text of Clarke's letter follows:

"As the man most largely responsible for the building of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and having recently been confronted with indisputable evidence showing the prostitution of the ideals and principles of the klan and facts related to the steady withdrawal of the better element from the klan. I take the liberty of addressing this communication to you, the supreme head of our government, to tender you any assistance in my power to end the activities of an element of our citizenship which has crept into the organization and is apparently in control thereof and ideals and principles, I can not and will not rest passive and silent and sit idly by in the face of such conditions and thus allow to fall on my shoulders the blame for the outrages of justice, individual liberty and respect for the courts and the government resulting from the rape of the organization which has taken place in the last year or eighteen months.

"In the hearts of the founders promoters and builders of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, it was never intended that the organization should be either a law and order league or a political machine, but rather that it was to be an organization to upbuild and develop spiritually, morally and physically the Protestant white men of America. The process through which this development was to take place was designed to be through scientific educational propaganda inside the lodge room and through printed literature and by the establishment of educational universities and through the building of hospitals, included definitely among these aims being the world's largest white plague sanitarium and the largest dope curse place of refuge in America.

"It was still further designed through ceremonies in the lodge room and through the higher development of character of the membership of the organization, to teach the men who had taken the oath of the organization greater respect for law and order, and the courts and the government, thus giving to the government and the courts a body of men that would be an unseen but powerful and influential moral factor, serving to stabilize the courts and the government at all times and to be particularly serviceable in times of stress or trouble.

Disregard of Law.

"The thing which alarms me most in connection with the organization is the apparent trend of thought inside the ranks of the membership of the organization toward disregard for law and order and the tendency on the part of the membership to seek political dictatorship, and in my judgment when any powerful secret organization assumes either of the above attitudes it immediately becomes a real menace to free government and the rights, privileges and liberties guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States of America.

"The position I am taking is no new one for me, but is the platform I have stood upon since the day I first joined the klan and is in harmony with the oath I took when I became a klansman four years ago. When I was assistant as imperial wizard pro tem of the organization I unhesitatingly revoked charters of branch organizations, banished klansmen from fellowship and threatened at one time to revoke the charters of every klan in a whole state unless klansmen respected their oath as klansmen and committed no violations of law, either as individuals or as bodies of men and kept themselves free from political entanglements except as individuals voting for what they individually considered right as citizens. As a matter of public policy I at one time prohibited an entire state from holding any further parades and restricted within that state the wearing of the costumes of the klan exclusively to the lodge room because I felt that a wrong interpretation was being placed by the public upon the parades of the klan and that it was not good for the public morals or welfare for klan parades to be further allowed in that state.

"It is after an absence of six or eight months made necessary by orders of my physician to rebuild my health that I return to find the active membership of the klan has changed, certainly in some states if not in all, from men of the type who listened to and applauded the sentiments expressed in my speeches in Pennsylvania, to a class at present in control whose energies apparently are directed to participation in whipping parties, threats and character assassination and the formation of political machines.

Offers to Help Coolidge.

"In the face of this condition and as an American citizen and having taken a solemn oath as a klansman, and as the builder of the klan and the leader of the former controlling element in the klan whose aims and ideals were and still are the same as outlined above in this communication, I feel that I can do no less than come to you as the supreme head of our government, and speaking for myself and the hundreds of thousands of magnificent men who followed my lead and who came into the organization because of the proclamation of its high ideals and principles and purposes and tender to you any assistance in my power toward forcing the lawless element out of the klan, thus permitting it to function as intended as a high-tone character building active fraternal organization; or this being impossible, toward the stamping out of the menace which the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has become through the prostitution of its high purposes, ideals making the klan as operated a real menace to law and order, individual rights and liberties and democratic political government.

"I have received from widely scattered sections of the country direct and authoritative information that the klan is rapidly developing nationally as a cheap political machine, a regulatory law and order league, and, in sections where it is strongest, openly and openly superseding the authority of the courts, and through character assassination, intimidation and actual physical violence, depriving American citizens of their constitutional rights without due process of law or trial before a jury of their peers. The Republican Party Capturing the Klan

The newspaper sharps, who keep a sharper eye on politics and politicians than other agencies, have about decided that the Republican party is slowly capturing the Ku Klux Klan, at the expense of the Democratic party, especially in the South, where the Klan was born, and that Atlanta, which has long been the headquarters of the Klan, stands to lose that distinction to Indianapolis, center of Klan empire having shifted to the Middle West. That may be true, or it may be newspapar talk; the fact remains, however, that in the late elections, Indiana and Ohio both appear to have been captured by the Klan, the Republicans being whipped in their own party by the Klan members of it. The Klan showed political strength in other States of the North and Middle West, through its affiliations with the Republican party rather than with the Democratic party.

Or is the Klan capturing the Republican party? The question is of the 57 mixed pickles variety. Anyhow, the mix up has got the Republican and Democratic leaders all guessing. And it has got Afro-American voters guessing also. They can't vote for either party in any situation that nominates Klansmen for office, and when both parties do it in a given situation they just can't vote for either. We never expected to live to see a possible situation like that develop, but it has made its appearance and may make a problem for us in the Presidential election next year which it will be difficult to face or side-step.

Does the Senate Fear the K. K. K.?

SHORTLY after members of Congress began to assemble for the winter there occurred in the office of the correspondent of a great Middle West paper a session of the game known as poker. Sitting in was a member of the House from the Middle West whose name has been attached to some important legislative proposals.

New Republic

The correspondent, his face all innocence, turned to an unofficial western politician and asked if he had heard the story that was to be "broken" the following Sunday. Without waiting for an answer, the correspondent explained that the important member of the House then at the table was to introduce a resolution for congressional investigation of the Ku Klux Klan. Thereupon the member, a large, juicy gentleman much given to badinage, dropped his cards and made earnest remonstrance.

Dec. 26, 1923

"That," said he to the correspondent, "is nothing to joke about, not even in whispers. That stuff runs like quicksilver. You can't tell when somebody is going to pick up a word, and where it will end. There are thousands of those fellows in my district. But I don't know they are there. Nobody will be able to prove to me they are there. And if I don't know they are in my district, I am not called upon to express an opinion about them. That's what I am doing. That is the only thing to do. And don't you risk queering my game by any such jokes."

The policy of that member in dealing with the Klan issue may be individual; the mental attitude is that of scores upon scores of members of both Senate and House. Because of that, it will be extremely interesting during the next few months to observe the course of the Senate in the question of refusing or permitting Earle B. Mayfield of Texas the retention of the seat to which he was returned elected in November, 1922, and for which he took the oath of office when Congress met.

It should be recalled that two Democratic primaries for senator were held in Texas in 1922. In the initial primary, there were several candidates believed to be Klansmen, but Mr. Mayfield was popularly supposed to be the Klan favorite. No choice being made in that primary, a run-off was held one month later, in August. It is accepted that Mr. Mayfield was the Klan favorite in that contest. He was nominated over James E. Ferguson, impeached as governor a year or two previously. Subsequently, a Texas court forbade printing Mr. Mayfield's name on the general election ballot as the Democratic candidate. Information in Washington is that the court was satisfied, after hearing lengthy evidence, that Mr. Mayfield and his friends spent far more than the $10,000 allowed a senatorial candidate under the Texas law. There is dispute whether the injunction against printing Mr. Mayfield's name on the ballot was lifted. Enemies of Mr. Mayfield say it was not; others say it was. In any event, adherents could write his name on the ballot in a space provided. Meantime, the Texas Republicans in convention nominated Dr. E. P. Wilmot. Anti-Klan Democrats opened negotiations with them, and Dr. Wilmot was withdrawn, and George E. B. Peddy, a Democrat, was substituted as the Republican and Independent Democratic candidate. He, too, was ruled off the ballot, it being held that nomination for senator by convention was invalid, and that the law required direct primary nomination. Of course, his adherents could write in his name too. The election was held in due course and Mr. Mayfield was returned as having 264,260 votes and Mr. Peddy 130,744.

Now Mr. Mayfield may be as clearly entitled to his seat from Texas as ever Daniel Webster was to his from Massachusetts for aught that I know or aught that most others in Washington really know. He is a man of quiet demeanor, conveying no suggestion of sinister qualities. It may be entirely true, as some of his friends say, that he has been made to suffer in personal attacks and in attacks on the honesty of his election by anti-Klan sentiment run mad. But there are two facts that make his case particularly worthy of the spectator's notice in this session. The first is that charges of fraud and corruption have been filed against his election that are so amazing in extent and character that they cannot properly be ignored, whether or not they are true; and the second is that Washington hears persistent reports that there will be determined efforts, put forth through subterranean channels, either to have the charges ignored or to have consideration postponed until after the presidential election.

As to the charges: On file in the office of the Secretary of the Senate is a bulky protest made on behalf of Mr. Peddv. which sets forth that in ten counties the returns were not canvassed or account- name were substituted in many places Mayfield's ed for; that in nearly 200 counties ballots were for official ballots on which his name did not appused on which Mr. Mayfield's name appeared pear; that ballots were transported by unofficial fraudulently; that in eleven counties election offi- persons; and that ballots were not properly procials or others wrote Mr. Mayfield's name on the tected or accounted for. In sum, it is charged that ballots with pens, pencils or typewriters or pasted 200,000 of the 264,260 ballots returned for Mr. his name on; that unofficial ballots bearing Mr. Mayfield were fraudulent ballots.

Why Not the Ladies?

There seems to be much ado and not a little antagonism in the upper circles of the Invisible Empire where white robes and flaming crosses make the night's invisibility visible. Things are happening and they are not entirely according to the ordinary preconception of what should be real fraternity in this knighthood of the night. For all its invisibility the empire is rent with division and he who was once a sort of emperor in imperio, wizard extraordinary and cyclops plenipotentiary is now outside all else than the anathemas of the klonvocation. But this fact has no deterred William Joseph Simmons from continuing activities parellel to those of the knighthood he once commanded.

There must be something either very fascinating or else very profitable in the organization of Ku Kluxes and such like, for Mr. Simmons has not been prevented by his estrangement from continuing work of a similar kind. He has perfected an organization of ladies based upon the same principles and purposes as the Knights of Ku Klux but for some reason the new body is not acceptable to the older organization. We had thought that chivalry was in the ascendancy "when knighthood was in flower," but evidently we were mistaken. Not only is the intended ladies' auxiliary not recognized by the knights but also has the edict gone forth that any knight who assists such an organization in any way "shall be held guilty of a major offense under our constitution and laws."

Whence cometh such feeling, and why, are questions, of course, that are beyond answer by those who are outside the boundaries of the empire. But it is of general knowledge that these knights of the hooded klan assume to lead in the teaching and preservation of 100 per cent Americanism, and in such an elevated cause it will not be understood why they want to limit the scope of their influence and activities. If they can flog and tar and featehr 100 per centism into those who refuse to accept their leadership surely should they be able to teach the same brand to those who are willing to be led. The knights surely do not mean to have the country understand that the ladies are unable or unwilling to accept the tenets of undiluted Americans and no one would intimate they are unworthy.

Americanism of the 100 per cent variety ought to be recognized at least by its self anointed teachers and defenders as being such a good thing that it should have no limits within the borders of America. We had never before known that any one could do too much in doing good.

COL. SIMMONS WILL ORGANIZE KAMELIA DESPITE RESTRAINT

Calls Move an Attempt to Intercept Original Purpose

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 23.—William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, is prepared to proceed with the organization of the Knights of Kamelia, despite the injunction proceedings launched by opponents, he declared in a statement given out here today in reply to the latest move in the complexity of litigation in klan affairs. It was announced that Mayor Walter A. Sims of Atlanta would be leading counsel in the fight over the Knights of Kamelia.

Receivership Hearing.

Another development of the day was the setting of Friday, June 29, as the date for a hearing in the receivership proceedings against the Ku Klux Klan filed last month by David Rittenhour of Philadelphia and others in which H. W. Evans, imperial wizard; William J. Simmons, emperor, and members of the kloncilium, are named as defendants. The petition for the receivership charged gross mismanagement of klan funds by Imperial Wizard Evans and declared the officials of the order had turned it into a "personal machine for the enrichment and aggrandizement" of themselves.

In his statement Emperor Simmons declared the effort of H. W. Evans to "enjoin me from establishing the Knights Kamelia" is only another attempt to prevent the carrying out of "my original purpose and plan to perfect an organization of native, white, American citizens of Protestant faith." He said, "Nothing shall deter me from striving to keep my pledges to the American people and completing the great organization that I founded for the protection of American principles and the preservation of American ideals."

Mr. Simmons said he wished it understood that H. W. Evans has nothing to do with Knights Kamelia. "He has no authority for interfering with the order from without, and he can not be admitted to membership from within," said the statement. "Perhaps the fact that he is ineligible to membership in Knights Kamelia may explain his motive in antagonizing the order.

"It is in response to the clamor of klansmen from every section of the invincible empire that I am founding the Order of Knights Kamelia and that hundreds of thousands of klansmen in a state of revolt against the administration of H. W. Evans may be restrained in their movement towards secession and may be saved to the great organization as it was originally founded and promulgated."

Mr. Simmons declared this was his last effort to save the order from total and permanent disruption."

Emperor Simmons announced he planned to proceed next week to Texas and following that would visit also Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri in the interest of the Knights Kamelia.

PROTECTION OF SECRETS SOUGHT

Simmons Temporarily Enjoined From Giving K. K. K. Ritual to New Body.

Counterattack for the latest move of William Joseph Simmons, founder and emperor of the Ku-Klux Klan, in his effort to obtain control of the organization, came Friday from the opposing faction headed by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in a suit to restrain Emperor Simmons from further organization of the Knights Kamelia, the secondary order of the klan.

Judge John D. Humphries, in Fulton Superior Court, signed a temporary restraining order as asked pending hearing on the petition Saturday morning. The order was directed against Emperor Simmons and the following klansmen whom he named as his "cabinet" in the Knights Kamelia:

The Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd of the klan; J. O. Wood, editor of The Searchlight; Henry J. Norton, a leader in the Atlanta klan; W. H. Lathrop, Jr., William E. Thompson, E. J. Jones, all of Atlanta, and E. J. Jones, Thomas H. Kight and C. W. Besom, of Oklahoma.

AIMED AT SIMMONS.

Emperor Simmons announced organization of the Knights Kamelia as a higher order of klanship a week ago, following a meeting of leaders of the klan administration in Washington, where Wizard Evans, his opponent for control of the organization, was indorsed. He asserted that he was creating the order Knights Kamelia as an organization separate from the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, to be directed by a distinct administration, and that he was acting by virtue of his rights as emperor to create and promulgate ritualistic work of the order.

The suit Friday, which is styled "The Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan against W. J. Simmons et als.," asserted that Emperor Simmons was acting without authority or invested right in his attempt to organize the Knights Kamelia, which was intended originally to be a distinct branch of the klan, and not a separate organization. It was claimed Emperor Simmons has contracted to convey all his rights to control of klan rituals, literature and paraphernalia to the klan in consideration of an annuity of $1,000 a month.

CHARTER OBTAINED.

The suit set forth that Emperor Simmons and his "cabinet" had obtained a charter in Oklahoma June 6 to organize the Knights Kamelia as a separate order.

The suit asserted that the Knights Kamelia under the constitution of the klan were merely the second degree of order of klanship. There were to be four kloranic orders, it was asserted, as follows:

The order of citizenship, or probationary order, to be designated a K-Uno (this is the only order so far established, and that to which all klansmen belong); the Knights Kamelia, or primary order of knighthood, to be designated as K-Duo; the Knights of the Great Forest, the order of Southern Chivalry, of K-Trio; the Knights of the Midnight Mysteries, the superior order of knighthood, or K-Quad.

Emperor Simmons has no right to declare himself head of any such organization as Knights Kamelia under this plan, the suit declared.

The suit recited a section of the court decree entered by consent of attorneys for Simmons and Evans, which ended the recent litigation between the two men for control of the klan.

DECREE QUOTED.

By this section it was attempted to indicate that Emperor Simmons had relinquished all claims to independent control of klan rituals. The section follows:

"It is found that William Joseph Simmons is the owner of the copyright and author's rights on the rituals, literature, costumes and paraphernalia of the order, but the court further finds that he has contracted to assign and convey to the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, Inc., all copyrights and author's rights that he may have, and that it is his duty to design and promulgate further rituals, literature, costumes and paraphernalia, which may become the subject of copyright, and that this service is being performed by him for the benefit of said corporation, and said William Joseph Simmons has agreed that the copyright and author's rights in and to all such rituals, literature, costumes and paraphernalia as he has hitherto obtained, shall be the property of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, in consideration of the sum of $1,000 per month to be paid him so long as he shall live, and thereafter to his wife, Bessie Shine Simmons, so long as she shall live, if she should survive him."

EMPEROR'S POWERS.

Continuing, the suit asserted that "the constitution of the order in no sense clothes the emperor with the power to set up and establish under his own control and direction, with a cabinet of men designated by himself, a separate institution."

The suit recited records of Oklahoma courts, in which Emperor Simmons and his Knights Kamelia cabinet obtained a charter June 6 to "conduct a benevolent, charitable, fraternal and protective organization." It asserted that under this charter the emperor and his cabinet were sending letters to persons in every part of the United States urging them to join the Knights Kamelia.

This proselyting in behalf of the Knights Kamelia should be stopped, the suit asserted, and an injunction against it was asked. It was petitioned also that Emperor Simmons and his Knights Kamelia leieutenants be restrained from proceeding further with organization of the Knights Kamelia.

It was asked that they be restrained from conferring on any individual the rank or degree or title of Knight Kamelia.

Asserting that Emperor Simmons, in consideration of the $1,000 a month annuity, had contracted to perform all ritualistic work in behalf and benefit of the klan, the petition asked "that performance of contract of Simmons to turn over to the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan all ritualistic, kloranic matter or paraphernalia be decreed."

It was asked also that Simmons and his cabinet be restrained from the use of all such matter.

KLAN AND SCHOOLS.

Indiana Ku Klux Klan Plan to Oust Colored Children.

By William Pickens.

The Louisville News
Louisville, Ky.
6/30/23

"Told you so!" The Jim Crow school idea follows the Ku Klux Klan like a shadow. In Indiana they have opened campaign to "put the Negro children out of our schools." Why? Because you can not give a people equal education and perpetually deny them an unequal status in society. In the common school the Negro will get equal education. He will never get it in any segregated school.

And yet some of the easy-going, lazy, hope-to-have-do-nothing Negroes are always saying: "The Ku Klux ain't after us; they're after Catholics and Jews." And bless your soul, in Oregon the Ku Klux are trying to enact laws to compel Catholics and Jews to get into the public school, while in Indiana they are trying to enact laws to put the Negro out.

The most fundamental proposition of the Ku Klux Klan is "white supremacy," and both Catholics and Jews can qualify under that.

The Kentucky wing of the Klan is just trying to explain, as we write, that a Jew can become a Klansman by becoming a "Christian," and that a Catholic can become a Klansman by becoming "Protestant"—that is, a hardshell Baptist, a Holly Roller, or anything like that. And how can a black man become a Klansman? By becoming a white man. That is, the Negro is the only IMPOSSIBLE. So far as the Klan is concerned, the one permanent, irredeemable society outcast is the American Negro. If the Klan can effect it, your children will be forced out of school, you will be forced out of citizenship, and your race will be given a Mississippi status in Minnesota.

No, the" Klan ain't after us," it thinks it has got us. They will have another think coming, for not all Negroes can be fooled by church donations and flattering grocery-store talk.

Everywhere we go, some colored preacher or politician informs us: "You know Mr. So-and-So was talking to me this mawnin', an' he says this Klan ain't aimin' at colored people They want to get these Jews and Catholics." Even if that were not a lie, we should hate them for it.

Ku Klux Troubles.

The Chicago Defender
Chicago, Ill.
6/23/23

For an organization which proposes to right the wrongs of society the Ku Klux Klan appears to be having a rather remarkable lot of trouble of its own. Regulation, like charity, should begin at home. Alleging that a million dollars have been squandered by executive officers, a number of "members and stockholders of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan" have asked a receivership and an injunction restraining wasteful expenditure of vast sums. The Fulton county superior court, Atlanta, Georgia, assumed control of the affairs of the organization until a hearing for a permanent injunction, which was set for June 9. Among other things, it is charged that Imperial Wizard Evans and Emperor Simmons, together with other confederates, "conceived and put into operation a scheme to pervert said organization from its original and worthy and laudable design and purpose into a personal machine for the enrichment and personal aggrandizement of said defendants." This is the third or fourth time that charges and counter-charges have been hurled back and forth at Ku Klux headquarters and, so far as the public has learned, no reasonable ground for the troubles has appeared. It seems, rather, that the organization is of the kind which has a strong appeal to emotion rather than to good, sound judgment; and experience teaches that excited charges and domestic brawls are likely to flourish under such conditions, especially when secrecy rather than frank publicity is an approved principle.

KLONCILIUM ACTS TODAY ON CHARGES AGAINST WIZARD

The Evening Star
Washington, D. C.
6/28/23

Withdrawal of Colonel William Joseph Simmons and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley from the session and postponement of action on charges of mismanagement against Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans featured the first day of the special called meeting of the kloncilium of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan at the imperial palace Tuesday.

Definite action either absolving Evans of the charges or placing the blame on him will be taken Wednesday, it was reported. Eleven of the 15 members of the kloncilium are reported to be favoring the exoneration of Evans.

Emperor Simmons and Dr. Ridley, imperial kludd, and two other members of the kloncilium who are said to be insisting that the Evans administration be condemned, are reported to have bolted the session shortly after it convened.

Newspapers Will Soon Begin to Give Klan a Square Deal

ONLY A FEW DAILIES NOW FIGHTING ORGANIZATION—THEY WILL SOON BE FORCED TO STOP BY PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

I frankly admit, the following story, written by Tennessee Smith, and published in that trustworthy periodical the "Dawn," of Chicago—if absolutely true (and I have no reason or inclination to doubt it) brings to the members of the Ku Klux Klan, the most welcome, and gratifying news, that has been printed in America, since the reorganization of the order.

The writer has been a Klansman (in principle) all his life.

As a small boy, he listened in wrapt attention, to the story of the Klan, from the lips of a Confederate soldier, who voluntarily joined the army at such an advanced age, that he was never permitted to mount his Spanish cow-pony, ride straight to the front, and "clean up the entire Federal army."

To his disgust, he was carried to Galveston, in company with many other aged, but ambitious champions of the South—and all they could do, was to watch Yankee gun-boats meandering up and down the Bay—just out of range—cuss 'em out, and dare 'em to "come shore, and fight it out like men." He was my father—and he lived and died an unconverted, 100 per cent white, Protestant Southern gentlemen. God has never made better men.

My father had a broad streak of humor running through his make-up—that was never handed down to his descendants—and from him, I learned many interesting things connected with the original Klan—how they "carried on" despite Federal soldiers, sent to harrass the South—scared the negroes into absolute obedience—and never harmed one of them—unless the colored gentleman over-heated himself after catching a glimpse of white-robed horsemen, and running ten miles—when his first jump into the nearest thicket, was all that was necessary.

He said, that "when a nigger was sighted away from his cabin at night, we all yelled, "There he goes—Catch him! We never followed him a step. We rode good horses, but knew it was foolish, to chase him, for a race horse has no show to over take a scared nigger, on foot. I don't know how they do it—but they simply fade away—and it's foolish to try to over take them. The fact is, we never wanted to capture them—just wanted them to stay in their cabins at night, and not to be chasing around with disreputable white men, who could always induce the ignorant black, to do something he should not do."

The identical principles, espoused by the original Ku Klux Klan, are practically the same, as they are found today, in the new organization. Anything new, is merely the difference between conditions existing in 1865, and in 1923. The creed of the original Klan, included:—

The tenets of the Christian religion —though at that time, there was no war declared on the Protestant faith by imported foreigners.

White Supremacy—forever.
Protection of pure White Womanhood.
Preventing the cause of mob violence and lynching.
Upholding the Constitution of the United States.
Sovereignity of State Rights.
Separation of Church and State.
Freedom of speech and press.

People familiar with the old, and new order, will doubtless note a remarkable similarity—and wonder why any loyal, white American, can possibly object to any of them. Without any disposition to appear abrupt, or unreasonable, I will add, that some people do object to the Klan principles—but their objections will not prevent them being carried out. Remember, the Protestant religion will not be forced on any man—but it will still remain the faith of 100 per cent white Americans—and that class of people will control this government.

Coming back to the article written by Mr. Tennessee Smith, I must confess, that there is logic in the argument—and hope he is correct. An old adage declares, "Actions, speak louder than words"—and if Mr. Smith is correct (which I hope he is) we will soon find the anti-Klan papers giving the organization a square deal. They attacked the Klan viciously, on information supplied by a lot of men, who for treachery, and disregard of every noble attribute belonging to a worthy human being, have made Benedict Arnold look like a piker—and the Devil, the synonym for Truth and Honor.

If daily papers have been an unconscious tool of such characters, as those mentioned in the article, I have an indistinct impression, that the journals, so imposed upon, might feel inclined to rectify such an injustice—without even being asked to do so. If an honest man commits an error, and discovers his mistake, he don't have to be caoched, to do his duty, and rectify the mistake.

I presume, that under such conditions, a man usually acts, according, to his early training. I was raised in the South—born and reared on the frontiers of Texas—and had no opportunity whatever of absorbing these rare violet rays of higher education, and polite diplomacy, afforded by our modern instructors.

Under our rules, if one man did an unjust injury to another, through false information—(and later on found he had been deceived) he did his best, to repair the injury. He certainly never expected the innocent victim of his bad judgment, to come and ask him to apologize.

Of course old frontier ideas are crude, and out of date probably—but it's hard to teach old dogs new tricks—and for that reason I'll never ask the daily press to retract the damnable, unreasonable lies they have printed concerning the Ku Klux Klan. I hope it will do it—and believe it will—but I'll see 'em in Hades before I will ever beg them to do so.

Read Tennessee Smith's article—which is a good one—and it herewith follows:—

"The daily newspapers of Chicago and of the country at large have not entered into a conspiracy against the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

"A few papers, particularly the New York World, are fighting the organization, but they are the exception rather than the rule.

"Newspapers are eager to print news that its editors know, from long experience, will be of interest to the largest numbers of readers.

"The readers of the typical American newspaper are native-born, white, Protestant, gentile in the same proportion that this group is Lo the population of the country as a whole. Such papers as the New York World, and others that appeal to particular racial or religious classes, pander to the prejudices peculiar to their subscribers, that they are not typical of the nation's press.

"The newspapers are so willing to give the Klan space that they even print stories whenever a contribution is made to a pastor by Klansmen, or whenever Klansmen take part in a funeral services, or call in a body, upon an errand of mercy. Similiar activities by other fraternal organizations do not usually receive so much publicity.

"More news matter favorable to the Klan would be printed if the newspapers could secure the facts. The secrecy attendant upon its meetings, membership and activities makes it almost impossible for the paper to obtain authentic information.

"The reporter does not know whom to interview. He cannot locate his story accurately and he can not usually get confirmation of rumors that he learns nor official denial of malicious reports that makes the rounds.

"The enemies of the organization are always ready to aid in securing facts and supplying them to the papers when something happens that can be made to reflect unfavorably

I frankly admit, the following story, written by Tennessee Smith, and published in that trustworthy periodical the "Dawn," of Chicago—if absolutely true (and I have no reason or inclination to doubt it) brings to the members of the Ku Klux Klan, the most weclome, and gratifying news, that has been printed in America, since the reorganization of the order.

"The enemies of the organization are always ready to aid in securing facts and supplying them to the papers when something happens that can be made to reflect unfavorably upon the Klan or its individual members.

"It must be remembered that the Klan has not been altogether without fault and that certain of its officials have laid themselves open to publicity of an unfavorable kind. The newspapers are not to be blamed for printing stories about them. The blame should be placed upon those who make the mistakes.

"Klansmen should realize that the news and business departments of the larger and influential papers are entirely separate. The city editor and his reportorial staff are not influenced in any way by the wishes or policies of the advertisers. It has been charged that the advertisers control the papers, but such charges are untrue and only serve to reveal an ignorance of the methods by which papers are managed.

"It is possibly true that some of the small papers, the one man sheets, are sometimes affected by the personal whims of the owner, but these papers are never strong enough to have much weight either for or against the organization.

"The metropolitan papers that printed the "confessions" of Major C. Anderson Wright, and other Ku Klux traitors, some two years ago, were, in many instances, the victims of mislead confidence. When men whom the Klan's Imperial officers had trusted completely made revelations under oath it was natural that the publishers should feel that they were uncovering "big news." When these defamers of the Klan were discovered to be liars and crooks the damage was done. The publishers had paid a large sum for matter that was as untrue as it was sensational; the public had obtained a gross misconception of the Klan, and the organization was faced with the necessity of living down the basest betrayal ever perpetrated against a group of patriots.

"The papers that were victimized and the press of the country generally has undergone a remarkable change of attitude since that time, despite the fact that there has been so little disposition on the part of Klansmen to get the facts properly placed before the editors.

"Many editors do not know just how strong the Klan is. They do not realize how many of their readers are members of the organization, or at least in sysmpathy with it. Their judgement, good in other instances, has not been formed on known facts because they have no way of knowing the truth.

"Managing editors of metropolitan papers would be agreeably surprised to have Klansmen of high standing in the community wait upon them and acquaint them with the real principles of the Klan; inform them of the kind of men who belong to the organization; tell them of its patriotism, charity, fraternity bonds and other features.

"It is unreasonable to expect editorial writers to devote their columns to praising an organization that has had its dark rather than its bright side exposed by publicity. If they knew the truth they would support the noble purposes and ideals of the "Invisible Empire."

"It is even more unreasonable to expect editors to fill their news columns with reports of addresses and meetings that are largely devoted to unfavorable criticism of newspapers and the men who make them.

It has almost come to be a habit with Klansmen to berate the daily newspapers.

"Such an attitude will get the organization nowhere.

"With the co-operation of the dailies the Klan will much more rapidily attain a position of dominance in the life of the nation.

"It is inevitable that its high principles will bring about that dominance, but the daily papers can speed the day as no other agency can.

"In view of this it is good sense to work with rather than against them.

"While the very nature of the organization makes it impossible to reveal all the sacred and secrets ties that hold it together, there is much that can be said of its many activities for the public good.

"No opportunity should be lost to bring the projects of the Klan to the attention of the editors and publishers.

"No editor should be permitted in ignorance of the Klan's existence, in his city, nor the real purposes of the organization.

"Personal calls, and letters to the publisher, or the managing editor, should acquaint them with the great demand for constructive news, stories and editorials regarding the organization.

"Don't expect editors to censor all stories uncreditable to the Klan, but you have the right to expect them to publish stories, when they are placed in a position to obtain the facts.

"The newspapers want to tell the Truth. They want to be fair.

"The Klan can aid them, and at the same time speed the day of America for Americans, by substituting co-operation, for opposition."

WHAT THE PRESIDENT

Told Congress the Ku Klux Klan Was Characterized It As a Criminal Association—Much of What He Said Applicable to the Organization of Today!

Washington, D. C.—The legal battle in the Federal Court at Chicago between officials of the American Unity League and the Ku Klux Klan has served to focus attention upon the possibility of legal proceedings against the latter organization such as were taken by the Federal government to curb the Klan of Reconstruction days. What these methods were and the effectiveness with which they were used is learned from reading official messages and reports of that time. A report made to President Grant by the then U. S. Attorney-General, George H. Williams, April 19, 1872, and transmitted by the President to the House of Representatives, indicates the success with which the Federal authorities had combatted the Klan conspiracy to prevent enforcement of the federal laws.

Grant's Characterization of Klan.

That President Grant entertained no doubts as to the character of the Klan of the Reconstruction era is shown by quotations from his message to the House of Representatives, April 19, 1872, to which was attached the report of the Attorney-General from which quotations were given. Referring to the Klans in certain counties of South Carolina, President Grant wrote:

"They are connected with similar combinations in other counties and states, and no doubt are part of a grand system of criminal associations pervading most of the southern states. The members are bound to obedience and secrecy by oaths which they are taught to regard as of higher obligation than the lawful oaths taken before civil magistrates. They are organized and armed. They effect their objects by personal violence, often extending to murder. They terrify witnesses; they control juries in the state courts, and sometimes in the courts of the United States. Systematic perjury is one of the means by which prosecutions of the members are defeated. From information given by officers of the state and of the United States and by credible citizens, I am justified in affirming that the instances of criminal violence perpetrated by these combinations within the last twelve months in the above named counties could be reckoned by thousands."

PROTESTANT BODY DENIES AFFILIATION WITH K.K.K. WOMEN

Women's League Will Stand Independent, National Leader Says

Denial that the League of Protestant Women plans any affiliation with the Ku Klux Klan or any other organization is made in a statement issued Saturday over the signature of Mrs. E. J. Roth, national secretary.

"The League of Protestant Women was organized along lines calculated to reach the thousands of women who want to work for a united Protestantism in a practical way," the report says. "It is operated along lines strictly independent—of women, by women and for women, without a spirit of commercialism, and with a policy open and without apology. Our activities are too broad in scope to permit our absorption by any other organization."

The statement mentions the Protestant Home for Business Girls in Houston as epitomizing the league's spirit, and goes on to say that of the few salaried officers, none receive more than $150 per month.

"Our national president, Mrs. Henry D. Morse, who has never received one cent of remuneration, did not sign the application for charter of the Ladies of the Ku Klux Klan, and is joined by the national board representing our thousands of members in saying that the League of Protestant Women of America, as such, is here to stay.

"We expect to co-operate with every other organization working consistently for the great principles of Americanism and united Protestantism, but our plan has been tried and found effective, and as freeborn Christian American women we propose to do our own thinking and stay just as we are, instead of affiliating with the Ladies of the Ku Klux Klan."

Ku Klux Klan — 1923 II

General.

Court of Fulton County, before whom the petition was filed, made an order dismissing the petition and placing the properties and affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan back into the hands of Dr. H. W. Evans as Imperial Wizard thereof, but shortly thereafter and within an hour, the court reconsidered his action in dissolving the injunction placing the property in the hands of Dr. H. W. Evans, revoked his order and appointed a commission consisting of Dr. H. W. Evans, William Joseph Simmons and J. M. George, Marshal of the Atlanta Municipal Court, to take charge of said properties and conduct the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan until the original bill, answer and cross bills could be heard upon their merits. The American

This is the status of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan at this date. At all times after the election of Dr. H. W. Evans as Imperial Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, William Joseph Simmons recognized Dr. Evans as the Imperial Wizard with all of the powers, perogatives and privileges vested in the Imperial Wizard in accordance with the constitution and by-laws passed by said Klonvokation.

By reference to the old constitution and by-laws it will be seen they provide for the convening of a delegated convention of the various Klans throughout the nation and that the same, when so convened, would constitute the law making body of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, which constitution provided for the election of an Imperial Wizard.

Colonel Simmons learned of the convening of the committee of which E. Y. Clarke was chairman, created for the purpose of investigating the advisability of bringing into being a woman's division of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and learning of the decision to the effect that an organization of this character was likely, Simmons announced that he had organized a Woman's organization called the Kamelia.

Thereupon H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, issued a statement to the effect that this Woman's organization known as the Kamelia was not a part of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and that it was not endorsed by the Klan and that the Klan would take no part in organizing it, and advised all Klansmen to remain aloof and refrain from endorsing or aiding in the establishment of such organization.

This statement and direction was in keeping with the direction given and prescribed by the Klonvokation. The statement was resented by Colonel Simmons, who concluded that he would usurp the power of Imperial Wizard and rescind the order or decree issued by the Imperial Wizard and seek to take over the properties of the Knights of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and to manage and control its affair. In order to bring this about he brought the suit referred to.

Shortly after the November Klonvokation adjourned, the Kloncilium, which is the executive body of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, convened and recommended that Colonel Simmons be paid during his natural life as Emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, the sum of $1,000.00 per month. Colonel Simmons has accepted such salary in acordance with said recommendation.

At the close of the Klonvokation a financial statement concerning the condition of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan showed that the organization had about $200,000.00 on deposit in the bank. On April 1, 1923, the time of Colonel Simmons complaint, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan had on hand and on deposit in the bank more than $300,000.00. Between the Klonvokation and April 1, 1923, the liabilities of the Knights of th Ku Klux Klan were reduced more than $50,000.00 and all current bills of every nature were also paid. During this period Colonel Simmons was paid several thousand dollars on an item of $25,000.00 which was voted to him by the Imperial Kloncilium during the year 1921 and was also paid his regular salary of $1,000.00 per month between December 1, 1922, and April 1, 1923. The liabilities of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are less by thousands of dollars than they were four months ago, while assets are greater. During the period of four months referred to necessary property improvements were made amounting to more than $10,000.00.

You will recall that after the filing of the bill by Colonel Simmons, Mr. N. N. Furney and T. J. McKinnon were arrested at the behest of followers of Colonel Simmons, charging them with larceny. These charges have been dismissed for the lack of evidence. Mr. N. N. Furney is and was at the time of his arrest cashier of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and had given a bond of $25,000.00 for the faithful performance of his duties, and to insure the Klan that all monies coming into his hands would be accounted for. T. J. McKinnon also had given bond for the faithful performance of his duties and proper accounting of monies coming into his hands. When the writs were served Messers Furney and McKinnon placed in a strong box these monies in order that they might be able to account for and surrender them to the rightful party when called upon to do so.

The court, in issuing its restraining order and the Sheriff in dispossessing the employees and appointees of Dr. Evans did not require of William Joseph Simmons and his associates a bond to indemnify Dr. H. W. Evans, N. N. Furney and T. J. McKinnon from damages or from loss of money or property, and in order that they might protect themselves against loss of funds or property, so they saw fit to place the monies where they would not fall into the hands of irresponsibles without any recourse at all.

When these facts were learned by the trial court that had under consideraton the charges placed against Messers. Furney and McKinnon, the court dismissed the charges and the respective parties were released. This is a true history of the Knights of Ku Klux Klan in its sequential operations together with a statement of the legal proceedings and the acts of the parties in relation to the suit brought by Colonel Simmons in his attempt to dispossess Dr. Evans of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

KLAN OFFICERS ARE ORDERED TO TESTIFY

Wizard Evans and Staff Are Denied Injunction in Receivership Proceedings.

Atlanta Georgian 7-10-23

A plea by Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku-Klux Klan, and six other officers, that klansmen who recently started court proceedings for a receivership for the order, be halted, by injunction, from taking their testimony before a commissioner and from bringing the books and records of the klan before the commissioner, was denied Monday by Judge John D. Humphries, in Superior Court.

This means that the officers must answer subpenas served on them on June 29 by Attorneys William S. Coburn and Colquitt & Conyers counsel for the klansmen who are asking for appointment of a receiver. D. O. Smith has been named as commissioner to take the testimony and the hearing originally had been scheduled to start Tuesday. Because of the effort made in court to stop the hearing, however, it will be delayed for several days, Attorney Coburn announced.

The testimony to be taken by the commissioner is to be used in the regular court hearing on the receivership application.

The six officers, besides Imperial Wizard Evans, who were directed to appear before Commissioner Smith and give testimony are: N. N. Furney, cashier; H. K. Ramsey, imperial kligrapp; T. J. McKinnon, head of the investigation department; H. C. Montgomery, imperial klabee; Brown Harwood, imperial klazik, and Tom Akers, a member of the kloncilium.

The evidence sought from the books and records of the klan relates to the expenditures of monies, to bank deposits and other financial features of the order.

The bill to enjoin the taking of the testimony was filed last Friday. Judge Humphries set the case for hearing Tuesday in view of the fact that subpenas cited the witnesses to appear before the commissioner Wednesday. The court was asked to grant an injunction until a demurrer, filed by the klan officers and in which they ask that the receivership action be thrown out of court, is acted on. The bill also charged fraud in the receivership suit, declaring that the names of some of the petitioners in that suit were not authorized. Attorneys Etheridge, Sams and Etheridge appeared in behalf of the klan officers.

FOUR BOLT MEETING OF KLAN

Action on Charges Against Imperial Wizard Evans Is Delayed.

Atlanta Georgian 8-28-23

Eleven of the 15 members of the kloncilium of the Ku-Klux Klan attending Tuesday a special called meeting of that body to consider charges against Imperial Wizard William H. Evans of "gross mismanagement" in klan affairs, announced they would delay any action until the Wednesday meeting, when several points arose as follows:

1. Announcement of W. S. Coburn, attorney for the insurgent faction of the klan, that any action taken by the kloncilium involving matters set out in the suit recently filed in Fulton Superior Court asking that a receiver be appointed for the klan, would be considered as in contempt of court. Mr. Coburn said that should such action be taken he immediately would take steps to hale the members before the court for contempt.

FOUR BOLT.

2. Bolting of the meeting of the kloncilium by four members, said to favor Emperor William J. Simmons in his attack on Evans, two of whom were learned to be Emperor Simmons himself and the Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd of the klan.

3. Demand of Evans' supporters for a disclosure of the books and statements of the klan in an effort to disprove the charges against Evans of violation of rules of the klan in depositing sums of klan money under the names of individuals and alleged squandering of klan funds.

DEFY COBURN.

4. Defiance of Coburn's announcement by attending members of the meeting in the statement that definite action would be taken Wednesday either absolving Evans of the charges, or placing blame upon him.

The meeting Tuesday was held in the kloncilium chamber of the imperial palace. It was understood that the 11 men present were stanch supporters of Evans, and intended to take steps to give him a "clean slate" in the running of klan affairs.

To a reporter for The Georgian, Attorney Coburn said:

"It is my opinion that if the kloncilium tries in any way to change the status of the klan, as effected by the temporary restraining order granted in Fulton courts, it will be in contempt of court, especially if such action involves any of the matters set out in the suit now pending.

"I intend to keep a close eye on this meeting, and if necessary I will enlist all the resources of the law in preventing such action."

The suit was filed about two months ago by Attorney Coburn in the name of more than 40 members of the klan at large, among them principally members of the Philadelphia klan, charging Evans with mismanagement.

It is to receive a hearing June 27.

KNIGHTS OF KAMELIA STRANGLED IN INFANCY

Klan Gets Temporary Injunction Against Organization.

USE OF SECRETS ENJOINED

Injunction Seeks to Enforce Contract Whereby Simmons Gets $1,000 Monthly for Life as Author of Secrets.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 22.—Organization of the Knights of Kamelia by William Joseph Simmons has been temporarily halted by an injunction obtained by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, which has filed a suit against Col. Simmons, emperor of the klan, seeking to enforce the contract alleged to have been entered into between the factions headed by Empror Simmons and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, several months ago.

Judge John D. Humphries, of the Fulton superior court, signed the temporary restraining order late Thursday but it did not become known until today. It was made returnable tomorrow, but klan officials stated tonight no action in the matter was expected for a week or more.

In addition to Emperor Simmons the defendants named in the petition are Rev. Calib Ridley, former imperial kludd, or chaplain of the klan; J. O. Wood, editor of Searchlight, Henry J. Norton, H. Lathrop, Jr., W. E. Thompson and E. J. Jones, all of Atlanta; Thomas H. Knight, C. W. Besom and N. H. Moore of Oklahoma, and the Knights of Kamelia.

SIMMONS WILL GO AHEAD WITH PLAN TO FORM KAMELIA

Emperor Says Nothing Shall Deter Him From Striving to Keep His Pledges to American People

ATLANTA, GA., June 23—William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, is prepared to go ahead with the organization of the Knights of Kamelia, despite the injunction proceedings launched Friday by the klan, he declared in a statement given out here today in reply to the latest move in the complexity of litigations in klan affairs.

It was announced that Mayor Walter A. Sims, of Atlanta, would be leading counsel in the fight over the Knights Kamelia.

Another development of the day was the setting of Friday, June 29, as the date for a hearing in the receivership proceedings against the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan filed last month by David M. Rittenhouse of Philadelphia, and others, in which H. W. Evans, imperial wizard; William J. Simmons, emperor and members of the kloncilium are named as defendants. The petition for the receivership charged gross mismanagement of klan funds by Imperial Wizard Evans and declared the officials of the order had turned it into a "personal machine for the enrichment and aggrandizement" of themselves.

Criticizes Evans

In his statement Emperor Simmons declared the efort of H. W. Evans to "enjoin me from establishing the Knights Kamelia" is only another attempt to prevent the carrying out of "my original purpose and plan to perfect an organization of native, white, American citizens of protestant faith." He said: "Nothing shall deter me from striving to keep my pledges to the American people and completing the great organization that I founded for the protection of American principles and the preservation of American ideals."

Mr. Simmons said he wished it understood that H. W. Evans has nothing to do with Knights Kamelia. "He has no authority for interfering with the order from without and he cannot be admitted to membership from within," said the statement. "Perhaps the fact that he is ineligible to membership in Knights Kamelia may explain his motive in antagonizing the order.

"It is in response to the clamor of klansmen from every section of the Invisible Empire that I am founding the order of Knights Kamelia and that hundreds of thousands of klansmen in a state of revolt against the administration of H. W. Evans may be restrained in their movement towards secession and may be saved to the great organization as it was originally founded and promulgated."

Mr. Simmons declared this was his "last effort to save the order from total and permanent disruption."

Emperor Simmons announced he planned to proceed next week to Texas and following that would visit also Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri in the interest of the Knights Kamelia.

Little Rock, Arkansas, Will Be Headquarters

Will Not Be Connected With the Ku Klux Klan, Although It Will Have Its Support

By I. C. Ahl.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Decision to organize the "WOMEN OF THE KU KLUX KLAN" to include Protestant women's organizations over the country, except the Kamelia, was reached by the imperial kloncilium of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan at its closing session last night at the Willard Hotel.

The Kamelia, which was stricken from the list of societies to be taken into the new order was recently founded by Col. William Joseph Simmons, founder of the Klan and has been the subject of much constroversy within Klan ranks.

The kloncilium indorsed fully the administration of Dr. H. W. Evans, as imperial wizard and planned a national campaign for the enforcement of all laws on the statute books and all constitutional amendments.

A thorough investigation of the charges which have been made in the press against imperial officers of the Klan, it was announced, will be made at a special meeting of the Kloncilium in Atlanta June 19. No mention was made, however of the receivership proceedings instituted by a certain element in Atlanta. These are characterized by Klan officials as having no significance.

Headquarters of the new women's organization will be in Little Rock, Ark. It will be incorporated under the laws of Arkansas. A meeting to organize the women will be held within a few days.

Among the women's organizations which were listed as being desirous of affiliating with the Women of the Ku Klux Klan are the League of Protestant Women, the American Women, the Puritan Daughters of America, the Ladies of the Invisible Empire.

The new order, it was emphasized, will in no way be connected with the Ku Klux Klan, although it will have its fullest support.

The kloncilium meeting was preceded by a conference of the grand dragons of every state in the union. The grand dragons also approved to the fullest extent the administration of Dr. Evans.

Many of the Klan leaders will leave Washington Sunday although Dr. Evans and others will remain for the Shrine convention in session here this week. Ninety per cent of the dragons and members of the kloncilium are Shriners.

Evans Declares Klan Is Strongly Against World Court Proposal

Fort Worth, Texas, June 30.—Declaration that the Ku Klux Klan is strongly against President Harding's plan for a world court or any other form of alliance with foreign nations was made by Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans in an interview made public here today following a closed meeting held last night by the local klan at which the imperial wizard delivered an address.

"The Ku Klux Klan is preaching pure Americanism, and to that end will its efforts be spent,' 'he said. "Concering utopian theories for the correction of civilization's ills, the klan, as an organization, will take no part. We think that if America will attend to America's business, treating all other peoples and nations alike and right, but leaving to them their own responsibilities, the world will be better, civilization safer, and our duties as men and Americans more fully performed."

In Ohio, the president's home state, more than 300,000 voters are members of the Ku Klux Klan, Dr. Evans said. He asserted the total membership of the organization had reached more than a million, and there were more Klansmen north of the Mason and Dixon line than in the south.

Asked whether the Klan as a whole would endorse publicly any single man for the presidency, Dr. Evans replied it would not. He added he hoped the Klan's influence for good government would be felt in both parties in the next presidential election.

PLANS FOR MOVING IMPERIAL PALACE OF KLAN MOOTED

Asheville, N. C., June 26.—Plans for moving the imperial palace of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from Atlanta to Asheville, will be considered at the imperial council meeting July 16, it was reported here today. Grand dragons of the order from every state in the union will be present for the session. It is understood that a permanent resident of Asheville, who is affiliated with the klan, has offered to donate property for the erection of the palace in Asheville.

While those affiliated with the organization here are silent on the plans this information was obtained on what was declared to be good authority.

"It's a good joke," declared H. K. Ramsey, imperial kligrapp of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Tuesday night, upon being informed of the reported proposal to remove the imperial palace to Asheville. He further stated that he had heard nothing of the proposed change.

Ku Klux Klan — 1923.

General

Emperor Simmons Proclaims Order of Knights Kamelia as Established

ATLANTA, GA. June 5—Establishment of the order Knights Kamelia as the "primary order of Knighthood" with a government "separate and distinct from the government now controlling and directing the affair of the first or the probationary order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan" was proclaimed tonight by William Joseph Simmons "in the exercise of the authority vested in me only as emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan Inc."

Referring to the action of the imperial kloncilium in leaving out the "Kamelia" among the women's organizations authorized to become affiliated with the Klan under the title of "Women of the Ku Klu Klan," Emporer Simmons' statement said:

"This action on the part of the imperial kloncilium in repudiating by explicit designation the Kamelia and by adopting other numerous organizations of women, was not only in violation of cntract between H. W. Evans and myself, but was also in violation of a decree entered in the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia, and further still was a violation of the original charter which defines that male members only shall be admitted to the order."

The establishment of the "primary order Knights Kamelia" means, the statement declared "that the members now on probation in the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are under the administration of the imperial wizard and the imperial kloncilium while the order Knights Kamelia will be under my control and direction, with such men as I may designate as members of my cabinet. The order Knights Kamelia will therefore be absolutely free to inaugurate its policies, to establish its principles and to realize its ideals under my supervision and direction and free from interference from any source of hstility within or without the Invisible Empire.

"I am impelled to promulgate the Knights Kamelia because of the restiveness that obtains among probationary klansmen throughut the country. There has been no way opened to advancement—n progress has been made—no constructive work has been done. Klansmen identified with the rganization from its foundation, have been held in a state of probation for years. They have not been been indoctrinated with the principles or the philosophies of the order. They are unfamiliar with the purposes of the great order. They have been given no definite objects to be attained. Meanwhile there has been a continuous demand for another and higher order, that these worthy American citizens might pass from the probationary stage into actual Knighthood and into active service in the Invisible Empire. These citizens connot be detained longer upon the threshold of the order but must be admitted and elevated to another realm in which they may find exercise for their restrained and abated forces.

"Another motive for founding the order Knights Kamelia at this particular time is that my original plans, purposes and pirnciples in founding the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan may be observed and consummated. Everything that I have striven to build during the years gone by is in peril of being subverted to personal, political and sordid ends. To save the Knights of the Ku Klix Klan from spoilation and destruction I have determined to establish the Knights Kamelia and thereby give the klansmen of the Invisible Empire at least the opportunity to transfer to his primary order of knighthood and establish themselves upon the foundation so laid in the beginning.

"This order Knights Kamelia will also afford a refuge to klansmen who are expcsed to the exercise of arbitrary and capricious power. A large number of excellent klansmen of the probationary order have already been banished without trial and without defense, simply because they did not yield in subserviency to authority running mad or lend themselves without protest to policies of tyranny."

The statement of Emperor Simmons then refers to his founding the Kamelia, "and organization to be composed of native born, white, protestant Christian women," and says this met with the "instantaneous disapproval" of the imperial wizard and with the recent disfavor of a majority of the kloncilium. He declared this order is present in twenty states.

He declares that Kamelia is "as much my child" as the klan, and that his purpose is to see the two orders are kept separate but working along parallel lines for the accomplishment of the same "great ends". In addition, therefore, he conitnues, "I am establishing a new and a separate order of klansmen with which the order of Kamelia may co-work and from which the order of Kamelia may expect and receive protection and co-operation."

"According to promises made when the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was promulgated and its organization was begun," the statement declares, "all charter members of the probationary order may be transferred by selection and call to the order of Knights Kamelia without cost to such klansmen, provided, however, that such klansmen may qualify in other ways for membership in Knights Kamelia.

KLAN BATTLES FOR LIFE

Beaumont, Tex., July 5.—The warefare within the Klan is reaching its heights every day. The battle has increased to a 3 cornered affair between Dr. H. W. Evans, Col. W. J. Simmons and George B. Kimbro, jr.

Simmons and Evans Pull Hair.

Simmons is the old head of the Ku Kluxers. His direct and most bitter opponent is Dr. Evans who was first to arrive here, and who is imperial wizard of the Klan. Kimbro represents mostly that group of the Klansmen who are dissatisfied with both Simmons and Evans.

Kimbro, while officially known as Grand Goblin, or Funds collector is really trying to crystalize the sentiment of the dissatisfied bunch, with himself as the leader. To date, he has gained quite a following. Evans and Simmons are openly opposed to each other while Kimbro poses as a mediator between the two, and as a sort of confident to whom the disgruntled ones in both factions may go. Diplomatically, Kimbro is making the most of this confidence.

Dr. Evans has started on a speaking tour which is expected to include every town and hamlet in the state of Texas. His speeches at Waco and Houston have been fiery, indicating that he means to carry the fight to the end.

Want to Change Name.

Simmons himself is active. His speaking itenery calls for engagements not only in the principal cities in Texas, but Wichita, Kans., and Kansas City, Mo. It is generally admitted that Simmons at present is the choice of the majority of the Klansmen in this state. Simmons' program calls for a change in the name of the knights to Knights of the Great Forest, in honor of Gen. Nathan B. Forest, who was a leader in the Klan is reconstruction days.

Evans, it is said, also desires a change in name from the present Ku Klux Klan to Knights of the Midnight Mystery. This name is proposed, it is believed, because of the disrepute which has come to the name "Klu Klux Klan." It is significant to note that all the present leaders in the Klan desire a change in name.

Kimbro, who hails from Mississippi, and who at times pals with Simmons, secretly attempts to keep going the strife and dissatisfaction with the old heads in the hope that he will benefit thereby.

Kimbro, who has had charge of the funds of the Klan, realizes the big income from curious Americans who part with their $10 in becoming members of the empire invisible, and for that reason is anxious to establish a "brood" all his own who will dump their ten dollar bills in his lap, for the privilege of wearing a pillow slip and a sheet and running around with a gang of marauders.

Costumes Same.

It is stated on authority that the plan of Simmons does not include a change in costume, but simply a change in name. By his oratory he is endeavoring to win back his supporters for years who have deserted and to keep others loyal to him thru this, the hottest fight of his entire career.

Fight Is Hot.

To say that the battle is raging is putting it mildly. Kimbro has brought suit against Evans for alleged slander and libel in some of his speeches, Evans has ousted the mayor of Houston from office and several other prominent officials, and Simmons is hurling epithets here and there, trying by oratory to regain his tottering throne.

The women of the klan, who have gone under the name "Knights of Kamelia," are disgusted with Simmons, and seem mostly in favor of Kimbro and Evans.

Level headed Texans and Negroes of Texas see in this battle the disruption entirely of the Klan. They see it as a desperate and wild ride to an inevitable fall. Suspicion is being aroused amongst klansmen as to the financial status of the organization. The klan has collected millions of dollars, and trouble was started when a number of the klans in different states wanted to know whence it has gone.

SIMMONS TO FORM KNIGHTS KAMELIA BRANCH OF KLAN

Declares New Organization Will Be "Primary Order of Knighthood Governed Separately From Klan."

ACTS "TO SAVE KLAN FROM DESTRUCTION"

Only Continuance of Tiresome Controversy, Says Klan Headquarters in Refusing Comment.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Establishment of the order Knights Kamelia as the "primary order of knighthood" with a government "separate and distinct from the government now controlling and directing the affairs of the first or the probationary order of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan" was proclaimed tonight by William Joseph Simmons "in the exercise of the authority vested in me only as emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc."

"Everything that I have striven to build during the years gone by is in peril of being subverted to personal, political and sordid ends," Emperor Simmons said in a statement. "To save the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from spoliation and destruction I have determined to establish the Knights Kamelia and thereby give the klansmen of the invisible empire at least the opportunity to transfer to this primary order of knighthood and establish themselves upon the foundation as laid in the beginning."

Referring to the action of the imperial kloncilium in leaving out the "Kamelia" among the women's organizations authorized to become affiliated with the klan under the title of "Women of the Ku Klux Klan," Emperor Simmons' statement said:

Violation of Contract.

"This action on the part of the imperial kloncilium in repudiating by explicit designation the kamelia and by adopting other numerous organizations of women, was not only in violation of contract between H. W. Evans and myself, but was also in violation of a decree entered in the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia, and further still was a violation of the original charter which defines that male members only shall be admitted to the order."

The establishment of the "primary order knights kamelia" means, the statement declared, "that the members now on probation in the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are under the administration of the imperial wizard and the imperial kloncilium, while the order Knights Kamelia will be under my control and direction, with such men as I may designate as members of my cabinet. The order Knights Kamelia will therefore be absolutely free to inaugurate its policies, to establish its principles and to realize ideals under my supervision and direction and free from interference from any source of hostility within or without the invisible empire."

KLAN HEADQUARTERS DECLINES COMMENT.

"We have no statement to make at this time in connection with Colonel Simmons' decision to found Knights Kamelia," it was officially stated at headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan here Tuesday night. "It is only a prolongation of the unhappy controversy that has occupied public attention for some time past.

"We believe that the public is sick and tired of the constant public airing of matters which properly belong within the klan itself, and in view of this belief, we have no comment to make upon Colonel Simmons' statement."

Simmons' Statement.

Colonel Simmons' statement follows:

"In the exercise of the authority vested in me only as emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., I do hereby promulgate the establishment of the Order Knights Kamelia as the primary order of knighthood.

"My authority for promulgating this order Knights Kamelia is set out in the constitution and laws of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., as adopted by the klonvocation November 29, 1922, and is as follows, page 89, section 4:

"'These several orders of klannish achievement and kloranic advancement shall be communicated and their kloranic regulations, requirements and governments shall be established and promulgated by and in the discretion of the emperor of this order in the unfoldment of its philosophies and in the revelation of its spiritual mysteries.'

"This article vesting me with sole authority to establish successive orders in klannish advancement gives me the absolute right to promulgate the order Knights Kamelia, and to establish that order under such regulations, requirements and governments as I may devise and authorize. It is my purpose in the exercise of that authority to establish and promulgate a government for the Order of Knights Kamelia separate and distinct from the government now controlling and directing the affairs of the first or the probationary order of Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

"This means that the members now on probation in the Knights of the Ku Kux Klan are under the administration of the imperial wizard and the imperial kloncilium, while the order of Knights Kamelia will be under my control and direction, with such men as I may designate as members of my cabinet. The order Knight Kamelia will therefore be absolutely free to inaugurate its policies, to establish its principls and to realize its ideals under my supervision and direction and free from interference from any source of hostility within or without the invisible empire.

Motive for Founding Order.

"I am impelled to promulgate the Knights Kamelia because of the restiveness that obtains among probationary klansmen throughout the country. There has been no way opened to advancement—no progress has been made—no constructive work has been done. Klansmen identified with the organization from its foundation have been held in a state of probation for years. They have not been indoctrinated with the principles or the philosophies of the order. They are unfamiliar with the great purposes of the founder. They have been given no definite objects to be attained. Meantime there has been a continuous demand for another and a higher order, that these worthy American citizens might pass from the probationary stage into actual knighthood and into active service in the invisible empire. These citizens cannot be detained longer upon the threshold of the order, but must be admitted and elevated to another realm in which they may find exercise for their restrained and abated forces.

Another motive for founding the order Knights Kamelia at this particular time is that my original plans, purposes and principles in founding the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan may be observed and consummated. Everything that I have striven to build during the years gone by is in peril of being subverted to personal, political and sordid ends. To save the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from spoilation and destruction I have determined to establish Knights Kamelia and thereby give the klansmen of the Invisible Empire at least the opportunity to transfer to this primary order of knighthood and establish themselves upon the foundation as laid in the beginning.

"This order Knights Kamelia will also afford a refuge to klansmen who are exposed to the exercise of arbitrary and capricious power. A large number of excellent klansmen of the probationary order have already been banished without trial and without defense, simply because they did not yield in subserviency to authority running mad or lend themselves without protest to policies of tyranny.

Founded Kamelia.

"In keeping with my vision of 20 years ago and in the full exercise of my rights, I have founded the order of Kamelia, an organization to be composed of native-born, white, Protestant, Christian women. The founding of this order met with the instantaneous disapproval of the imperial wizard, and more recently has been branded with the disfavor of a majority of the imperial kloncilium.

The Kamelia is composed in more than twenty states where it is organized and operating of the wives, the sisters, the daughters and the sweethearts of klansmen. The action of a majority of the Kloncilium separates the Kamelia from association with their kinsmen, their friends and their neighbors who are klansmen. At the same time the Imperial Kloncilium indorsed a number of organizations of women, authorized those associations to become affiliated with the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and bestowed upon them the title, "Women of the Ku Klux Klan."

"This action on the part of the Imperial Kloncilium in repudiating by explicit designation the Kamelia and by adopting other numerous organizations of women, was not only in violation of contract between H. W. Evans and myself, but was also in violation of a decree entered in the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia, and further still was a violation of the original charter which defines that male members only shall be admitted to the order.

"The Kamelia is as much my child as is the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan—one is my daughter and the other is my son. I should gladly lay down my life for either to preserve my children from prostitution and degredation. It is my duty, however, to live and to see that my purposes are carried out in the founding of these orders and in keeping them separate and apart but working along parallel lines in sympathetic co-operation for the accomplishment of the same great ends.

"I am, therefore, in addition to the foregoing reasons as stated, establishing a new and a separate order of klansmen with which the order of Kamelia may co-work and from which the order of Kamelia may expect and receive protection and co-operation.

Membership.

"According to promises made when the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was promulgated and its organization was begun, all charter members of the probationary order may be transferred by selection and call to the Order of Knights Kamelia without cost to such klansmen, provided, however, that such klansmen may qualify in other ways for membership in Knights Kamelia.

"Promulgation of the government, the ritual and the regulations and the requirements of Knights Kamelia will be made to klans and klansmen throughout the invisible empire within the next few days.

"To the faithful men and women of native birth, of the white race, who believe in the principles of Americanism and who adhere to the tenets of Protestant Christianity, I send you my greetings of good cheer. We are in the midst of troublous times. Enemies without the organization have assailed it, but they have not intercepted our great onward movement or at any time broken our lines. Enemies within may do what all the alien and un-American foes combined could not do by way of arresting our progress and disintegrating our forces. But the result is sure. After the dangers are passed and our great fraternities are at peace we shall stand not only invincibl and invulnerable in righteousness, but we shall also stand as the one great organized force in the protection of the white man's civilization and the white man's breed in all the world.

"WILLIAM JOSEPH SIMMONS,
"Emperor Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

SIMMONS DETERMINED.

Will Continue Organizing Knights Kamelia, Despite Court's Flat.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 23.—William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, is prepared to go ahead with the organization of the Knights Kamelia, despite the injunction proceedings launched Friday by the klan, he declared in a statement given out here today in reply to the latest move in the complexity of allegations in klan affairs.

It was announced that Mayor Walter A. Sims of Atlanta would be leading counsel in the fight over the Knights Kamelia.

Another development of the day was the setting of Friday, June 29, as the date for appearing in the receivership proceedings against the Ku Klux Klan, filed last month by David M. Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and others, in which H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard; William J. Simmons, emperor and members of the Kloncilium were named as defendants. The petition for the receivership charged gross mismanagement of klan funds by Imperial Wizard Evans and declared the officials of the order had turned it into a "parsonal machine for the enrichment and aggranlizement" of themselves.

In his statement Emperor Simmons declared the effort of H. W. Evans to "enjoin me from establishing the Knights Kamelia" is only another attempt to prevent the carrying out of "my original purpose and plan to prefect an organization of native, white American citizens of Protestant faith." He said, "Nothing shall deter me from striving to keep my pledges to the American people and completing the great organization that I founded for the protection of American principles and the preservation of American ideals."

Mr. Simmons said he wished it understood that H. W. Evans has nothing to do with Knights Kamelia. "He has no authority for interfering with the order from without and he cannot be admitted to membership from within," said the statement. "Perhaps the fact that he is ineligible to membership in Knights Kamelia may explain his motive in antagonizing the order.

"It is in response to the clamor of klansmen from every section of the Invisible Empire that I am founding the order of Knights Kamelia and that hundreds of thousands of klansmen in a state of revolt against the administration of H. W. Evans may be restrained in their movement towards secession and may be saved to the great organization as it was originally founded and promulgated."

Mr. Simmons declared this "was his last effort to save the order from total and permanent disruption."

Emperor Simmons announced he planned to proceed next week to Texas and following that would visit also Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri in the interest of the Knights Kamelia.

Evans Acknowledges Service of Ku Klux Receivership Papers

Service of Ku Klux Klan receivership petition papers was acknowledged Saturday by Attorneys Etheridge and Etheridge on behalf of Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans, H. C. Montgomery and N. B. Forrest. This acknowledgement, filed in Fulton superior court, developed the fact that all persons named as defendants in the suit have not yet been served. Attaches of the sheriff's office stated that it will probably be several weeks before all the defendants, some of whom do not reside in Atlanta, can be found and formally served with notice of the suit.

The case can not be put on the docket until all papers are served and can not be placed on the calendar of the court for trial until it has been placed on the docket.

All members of the kloncilium of the klan are supposed to be included in the list of defendants named. The petition for receivership was filed by David M. Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and others, last month. It charges that the klan is being turned into an organization for the personal benefit of the defendants.

Surely the Klan is not deserving of censure because it excludes from its membership the Roman Catholic, the Jew and the negro, for these people have their own secret fraternities. They would be out of place in the Klan.

The Klan is a grand brotherhood of men and women who think more or less the same of certain fundamental problems, who are in sympathy with each other in principles and purposes, and they have the unquestionable right to select their members as they see fit, granting the same right to all others.

American Forum

Jesus Christ is the Klansmen's criterion of character, and by this lofty standard they sit in judgment upon themselves. How can they go far wrong?—Making all allowance for human frailty, they are certain to endure and prosper, in exact proportion to their fidelity to this sublime ideal. To the extent that the Klansmen are in harmony with the divine will, just to that extent they will succeed in their cause. With the Christ as guide and Master, they cannot fail. All intelligent opponents of the Klan will recognize the truth of this statement and, if they be honest, will measure their criticism with care. The Klan already wields considerable power—to the extent that its efforts and methods are in harmony with God.

The Klan recognizes and hails the living Christ! He is everywhere in the world today. The omnipotent power of His love is free to all men, regardless of race or creed.

The Klansmen are rich in spirit. to the extent that the Christ is with them, and are engaged in a splendid effort to promote a national movement that will bring wisdom and brotherly love into all human activities. Their purpose is to remove whatever obstructs the way to the kingdom of heaven. They are eager to uplift the fallen and to strenghten the weak. They recognize the truth that all men have one mind, one God and father, one life, truth and love, and that the Klan is a medium which they can promote right living, right thinking, right conduct and the Golden Rule in everything. To the extent that the Klansmen live up to this glorious ideal, they are invincible.

The same truth that compels us to strive toward this ideal surely is rebuking all unfair and ill-advised opponents of the Klan, for God Almighty is behind this cause and whoever opposes Him will perish in the effort. "He shall be suddenly destroyed and that without remedy."

Christians and men in the other fraternities who have prejudged and denounced the Klan, on heresay. have done so only through error. The time is coming when they will desire to recant and make amends. The Klan is imperfect, of course, composed of very human but sincere Americans. The motives behind it are based upon patriotism and devotion to the Cross. It is not yet the "stately mansion" which it is going to be, but it is a righteous cause in which its soldiers of peace can put on, if they will, the whole armor of God, striving only to overcome the woes and sins of ignorance and selfishness, preaching and practicing the slogan that the crowning glory of a Klansman is to serve. This surely is in accord with divine will. If it does not fully demonstrate all the positive forces, if it fail to galvanize the churches into evangelical activity, if it fails to inspire all Christians with zeal for the common good then will develop the necessity of establishing a great new church, with millions of members to begin with, a church based upon the fundamentals upon which all men agree, as expressed in the Sermon on the Mount.

The Klan, unfortunately, is opposed through error by the malign forces of alien intrigue, which seek political domination in America. These forces are wrecking themselves by using the negative methods of bigotry and hate. They might as well try to sweep back the sea as to halt or destroy the Klan. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

The real leaders of the Klan, who are men of good-will and of experience and sound judgment. are directing all efforts into channels of constructive good, making every Klavern a mission of the Cross, an incubating center of Christian service, striving the best they can to utilize the wisdom of a great Teacher, who said: "The measure of life shall increase by every spiritual touch." This means that the Klan is establishing a firm and enduring foundation. It is going to be and is even now to a great extent a recuiting system for the Chrsitian churches, and for the army of common good.

In defense of home, and nation, in the enforcement of just laws through co-operation, in far-sighted world work for civilization, the Klan already is a power of great importance, but it is insignificant when compared to what it is going to be within ten years—America's greatest fraternity and social force, with a membership of ten million native-born, liberty-loving Americans.

From the "Western American"

Without any exceptions, this is the best, most logical, and truthful Klan article, I have ever read. Every word is the Truth—and it should be clipped, and pasted up in the home of every red-blooded, 100 per cent, White Protestant American, in the United States.

Principles Of Ku Klux Klan

(By William Pickens)

By the Kluxers—But with Commentary and Exegesis by Us

(For The Associated Negro Press)

"The Jayhawker American," the Klux paper of Kansas, sets forth in capital type, in the center of the front page, the "principles" of that organization. We shall help the Ku Klux to advertise by repeating these 17 principles and aims here, making such comment on each as seems fit.

Michigan State News

"The Tenets of the Christian Religion"

That is the merest rot. These fellows propose to whip you, to tar and feather you, and to murder you "in the name of Jesus Christ." Of all criminals, the most dangerous, and the most contemptible, are those who attack you under the guise of religion: they "open with prayer" and close with hell.

"White Supremacy" 10-13-23

Now! this is the real honest-to-goodness foundation of the Ku Klux Klan. This is the author of their being. This is the reason for their existence. This is their beginning and their aim. They place it SECOND on their program, in order to hide it by beginning with the RELIGION camouflage. "White supremacy" is really the first of their tenets and aims.—And yet some imbecile colored leaders allow Klan "speakers" to come into their churches, make a $25 "donation" and tell the congregation, "We are not after colored people." And yet the very first text of the Klan, next to their blasphemous attack on heaven, is their blanket attack on all things colored: "WHITE SUPREMACY."

Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Protection of Our Pure Womanhood"

Perhaps the emphasis here is on the "our." And yet these hypocrites whipped and raped white women in Oklahoma, according to Governor Walton. We heard a prominent Southern white woman say recently that they do not want to be protected by criminals. We might add that womanhood never has been and never will be protected by crime.

"Closer Relationship Between American Capital and American Labor"

And a closer relationship still between "American capital" and the Ku Klux treasury.

"Preventing the Causes of Mob Violence and Lynching"

Of course, the Klux try to fool somebody by making a face and uttering ambiguous phrases against mob violence and lynching. But do you notice how they put it? They are not going to prevent mob violence and lynching, but they are going to prevent the "causes." Now what are the "causes"? The general cause of lynching is the progress of the Negro American toward equal rights and his demands for full citizenship. This progress and demand is what the Klux aim to "prevent." There is no particular crime which they can name as the cause of lynching: lynchings are for everything and for nothing. Only a very small number of the people lynched are accused of rape, even by the lying mobs that lynch them. An old Negro was lynched for trying to prevent white men for raping his grand-daughters. This is one of the "causes" that the Ku Klux propose to "prevent." That is, instead of preventing that old man from being lynched, they would prevent him from opposing white men who just only wanted to rape the old black man's little grand-daughters. Colored men have been lynched for defending their wives against the attacks of gentlemen like those in the Klan. This caused those black husbands to get lynched and massacred because they had farms and homes and automobiles that were "too good for niggers." The Klux would eradicate such evil causes.—We do not need to go any further: the reader can carry on from here.

"Preventing Unwarranted Strikes by Foreign Labor Agitators"

This is not going to fool any hard-headed laboring man. Why is an "unwarranted" strike any worse when the striker is "foreign" or the agitator "foreign"? Who is to judge when a strike is "warranted," if not the laborer himself? What makes the Ku Klux a competent judge in such a matter?

"The Limitation of Foreign Immigration"

If this be desirable, it can best be done without the interference of outlaws. We would, however, prefer any of the immigrants to the "citizens of the Invisible Empire."

"The Promotion of Pure Americanism"

That's treason. It is more rot, like that "religion" with which they headed up these "principles." Pure Americanism is a square deal to every man. It will uphold the law of the land before any mob, even a mob with sheets over its shoulders and pillow-cases over its head.

"Upholding the Constitution of the United States"

By executing and whipping men and women without judge or jury,—by VIOLATING the constitutional rights of every citizen. By advocating the violation of certain amendments to the Constitution. By denying the EQUALITY of rights before the law,—which is the reason for the making of the Constitution."

"The Sovereignty of Our State Rights"

By defying the government of Oklahoma and denying the power of the whole state government. By seeking openly to set the decrees of the Imperial Wizard up above th law of the states.

"The Separation of Church and State"

And the UNION of "protestantism" and "kluxism." In the name of God, we would rather have no religion than any religion dominated by this gang of criminals and bigots. The separation of church and state originally meant RELIGIOUS TOLERANCE, but religious intolerance is really next to "white supremacy" in the Klan Bible.

"Freedom of Speech and Press"

And yet there is not a Klan-ridden state in the whole South that would permit the Negro people and press to speak and print freely.

"Education of Worthy American Citizenship"

Look at that "worthy." Citizenship is made worthy by education, but the Klan proposes to pick out the "worthy" and then educate them. That is, the Klan proposes to say who shall be educated at the expense of the public. That is easy to see through

"EMPEROR SIMMONS"

The Baltimore Herald 8-15-23

Some southern jackass is eternally delivering himself of his opinion as to who is the Negro's best friend. It has continued through so many years that it has become a fixed habit, and any time the Negro or any matter pertaining to him is mentioned, the usual ebullition follows.

These superficial, although sometimes kind-hearted and well-meaning, southerners never lose conceit enough to consider that maybe the Negro himself knows who are his best friends, and don't need anyone from the outside to point them out. Baltimore, Md.

This brings us to the Rev. W. J. Simmons, Emperor and high muck-a-muck of the "Invisible Empire," otherwise known as the Ku Klux Klan.

The "Emperor" goes the average white southerner one better in the friendly attachment which binds the Klan to the Negro. He says "the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are the greatest friends the Negro ever had: they are wholly without racial prejudice, they seek only to maintain the supremacy of the white race. To keep the Negro in his place is our intention, not to kill or drive him out of the country."

With such benevolent intentions announced to the world, it's a wonder all Negroes don't through up their hats and holler for their Ku Klux friends and quit leaving the South.

But they are still leaving and so long as the South is dominated by the sentiments expressed by the "Emperor" Negroes are going to continue to leave.

They are no longer to be considered under the feet of "Emperor" Simmons and his Klan or any other class or group of citizens and will no longer submit to assignment to a "place" selected by such men. Like all other citizens their place is whatever place they win by their merit.

And if "Emperor" Simmons finding that his Klan cannot "keep them in their place" undertakes to kill or drive them out of the country, he will find that numbers of his klan will be put in places where they will not have to be kept. They will remain where placed until final roll call.

SEVEN HUNDRED KU KLUX

By

WILLIAM PICKENS

THAT'S all it takes to bluff a great government. And all they have to do is "parade."

Lord, what are we coming to?

When we heard that General Hines was "on his way to Tuskegee," we knew that he was on his way to surrender, to yield the honor of government and the rights of the American Negro to the whim of a village which would have never been heard of if a Negro named Booker T. Washington had not lived in it.

N. Y. Amsterdam News 9-12-23

Who has ever before heard of a government going nearly a thousand miles to inquire of 700 outlaws what that government was privileged to do with its own affairs? Even China made a better stand against more formidable outlawry.

NOTICE: Hines consulted the wishes of "leading citizens" of Tuskegee, meaning only white citizens. Why are not Robert Russa Moton, successor to Booker T. Washington, and the whole Tuskegee staff, in charge of the best-known school in the South, "leading citizens" of that village?

Let the colored people of America make no mistake: the party to be held responsible in this matter is not the Ku Klux Klan but the present national administration. The K. K. K. are the least dishonorable party in the whole business, for they have made plain their position and even "paraded" for it. The government makes no stand, if Hines is to be taken seriously, but yields,—yields to a mere parade of the enemy. What would we think of our wounded colored soldiers if in Europe they had yielded and surrendered simply because the enemy "held a parade" to scare them,—what would we think of them?

Suppose 700, or even 7,000 Ku Klux should "silently parade" as a demand that Hines resign, would he do it? Do not let these government officials fool anybody,—they only yield when and where and on what they want to. The Imperial Wizard is not running the country for them, —except where the Negro's interests are at stake.

Hines invited disorder when he said to those villagers that he would do nothing, not even to carry out the orders of the United States Government, "that might bring disorder to this community." That meant, and he knew that it meant, that all they would have to do to get whatever they wanted was to threaten the government with "disorder" in the form of another "parade." Just think of it: a government of 110,000,000 people falling on its belly before 700 masked paraders!

That is a lie,—the government of Hayti or of Dahomey would not have to do that. This is an attempt at a "double-cross" on the part of government officials, and they have a poor excuse for it.

Let the Negro remember: That even the Ku Kluxers are honorable foes when compared with the dastardly treachery of entrenched false "friends."

President Harding had better hurry back from Alaska to Alabama.

THE K. K. K. AND THE OTHERS.

There is a good deal of propaganda for and against the K. K. K. being carried on through the metropolitan press, the pulpit and otherwise. We have been trying to make out what it all means. St. Louis Clarion St. Louis, Mo.

The Catholic and Jew do not oppose the K. K. K., nor do the white ministers who are not members saying anything unfavorably of the Klan, because of its position on the Negro question. We believe all of them agree with the Klan, that the Negro must be made to understand that this is a "white man's country." The Catholic and Jew oppose the Klan because it excludes them. not the Negro.

DECLARE MISLED 200

DeKalb and Fulton Ku-Klux Decry Forrest Knights for Revealing Membership

Resolutions condemning the action of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No 1, of the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, in announcing its secession from the national klan organization, were made public Tuesday following a meeting of other klans of Fulton and DeKalb Counties, including College Park Klan No. 96, Buckhead Klan No. 128, East Point Klan No. 51, Belton Klan No. 121, Decatur Klan No. 42. Atlanta Georgian 10-24-23

The resolutions asserted that all klans attending the meeting subscribed to their sentiments. They were signed by M. O. Dunning, chief of staff of the Realm of Georgia.

The resolutions asserted that investigation has revealed that the action of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan does not represent the entire membership, but fewer than 200 members, and that an even smaller group of 15 persons has misled these 200. They decried the action of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan in revealing the identity of one of their members in a public statement.

Hundreds of members of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan have made application to one or the other of the six klans subscribing to the resolutions for transfer of their membership, according to the resolutions.

After the preamble, the resolutions provided for condemnation of the action of Klan No. 1, and that the subscribing klans continue in their policy of not officially recognizing any of its acts as official.

"We will continue," the resolutions concluded, "to exercise toward the members thereof the same spirit of fraternalism that we have heretofore shown them. We condemn in no uncertain terms the action of anyone who, without warrant or authority, reveals the secret of our ritual or the names on our roster."

THE KLAN IN THIS STATE.

Much light is thrown on the peculiarities of politics in this State by the allocution to newly initiated members of the Ku Klux Klan, delivered in that order's gathering outside of Binghamton on Saturday night. The first duty of a Klansman, it appears, is to oppose any measures for redistricting the State so that New York City may have a larger representation in the Legislature. In this one particular, at least, the Klan will find it easy to square principles with practice and support the Constitution.

Its provisions insuring that the city shall always be under-represented, that two rural votes shall in general count as much as three city votes, were not specially designed for the aggrandizement of native-born white Protestants. But it happens that they do favor the districts in which native-born white Protestants are relatively more numerous. They also happen to favor the districts where Republicans are more numerous. Thus it seems pretty clear that the Klan in this State will have to ally itself with the Republican Party, if with any.

If the Anti-Saloon League, representing probably a much smaller number of votes than the Klan, could in the past dictate Republican policy in NewYork, the Klan may be encouraged to seek to restore the lost dominion. The Klan organizer's indication of Tammany as the great enemy of the sheeted heroes recalls vividly Superintendent WILLIAM H. ANDERSON'S recent and passionate appeals to the Klan to come to the rescue of the liberties of America against this same foe. How many members of the Anti-Saloon League in this State also belong to the Klan there is no means of knowing, but in some of their principles and more of their methods there is a similarity obvious to any observer. Both profess allegiance to the law; both insist on being treated as above the law. Both aim at a division of the electorate into governors and governed, on religious lines.

It is at least something to get the opposing forces out in the open before election and see how they line up. If the Republican organization in New York is to have the Klan on one flank and the Anti-Saloon League on the other, we might as well know it.

Hate Cannot Eliminate Hate.

The news columns announce the formation of several organizations of citizens to contest with the Ku Klux Klan. These organizations, we are told, include Protestants, Catholics and Jews, and citizens of various races and creeds who believe that great harm and no good can come to the country through a division of its people along the lines of racial and creedistic hate. It will be the purpose of such organizations, so the dispatches say, to contest the gospel of hatred and intolerance that is being preached so assiduously.

We know nothing whatever of the aims and principles of these organizations, or how they intend to proceed in counteracting the malevolence that is afoot. But we do know tha they cannot succeed and will only make bad matters worse if they try to fight hatred with hatred. It may be the logical sequence, as we have frequently warned, that one organization founded on hate breeds opposing organizations also founded on hate, but we will never be able to eliminate hate with hate.

On the contrary if these organizations intend to preach a gospel of brotherly love, of abjuring hatreds of all kinds and of judging Americans not by their race or by their creed but by their loyalty or lack of it to the principles and institutions of this republic, then they are entitled to a place of welcome in American affairs. We have never for one moment doubted that the good sense, the tolerance and the fairness of the American people would defeat all organizations and institutions whose sole purpose is to divide the people of this country into malevolent hating groups. Breadth of view, justice of purpose and fairness of conduct can never be defeated by narrowness, intolerance and hatred, least not in this country.

COOLIDGE'S MESSAGE TO THE KU KLUX

In terms so plain that no Ku Kluxer can misunderstand, President Calvin Coolidge sent as his first official message a ban to that infamous murder-graft bund. While the telegram was addressed to the Knights of Columbus, the orders were to the hooded outlaws. The shrouded cowards have officially called the Catholics un-American and have vowed eternal warfare and vengeance against them. They plot with no less brutality and barbarism against the members of the Catholic faith than they do against members of the colored race and of the Hebrew race.

At the Indianapolis convention of the Rainbow Division of the American Legion the Ku Klux Klan brazenly booed Father Duffy, its Catholic chaplain. Throughout the country the Klansmen have made and are making war—political and personal warfare, sometimes open and sometimes covertly—upon the church. In behalf of these proscribed and patriotic Americans the President has breathed official defiance and has taken up the challenge.

When the convention of the Knights of Columbus met on Tuesday of last week in Montreal—in the section of which ten million dollars of Catholic church and school property has been burned by the Klansmen— they received this brave message and assurance from America's Chief Magistrate:

The Knights of Columbus is in every sense a patriotic order. You have established great war charities, you have helped to fill the national treasury by your contributions to the various Liberty loans and you have sent your dearest and best to bear the brunt of battle.

Your order has ever shown its steadfast devotion of American principles and American ideals. You are Knights of Columbus, a name of great significance representing not only a great discovery but the external principle of all discovery and progress. When all the world doubted, when his own followers sought to turn him back, he sailed on, daring to follow the truth. There is no finer knighthood.

In it your noble order stands resisting all evil council, supporting every patriotic cause, following the eternal principle that the truth shall make you free.

In every case where the President has here referred to the Knights of Columbus may be substituted "colored" or "Hebrew" without mistake or misgiving. The challenge to that unnumbered host of Klansmen throughout the nation is clarion. The bold stand which he has taken as his first step to set America's house in order first is epoch-making. The days of temporizing and pussyfooting with this growing menace to American institutions are past. This cancer, he says in effect, must be cut out, and at once. The hours in office of the three to five hundred postmasters, United States marshals and other Federal office-holders who are known to have subscribed to the oath of allegiance to the Ku Klux Klan will be, we predict, as miserable as they are brief. The three to four thousand Federal employes in Washington who belong to the Ku Klux Klan and whose names President Harding's Department of Justice secured and placed on file will either resign their jobs or their Klan membership, and that we predict at no distant day. President Cooldige has struck a mighty blow for a united America and a free America which knows no American by his creed or color but only by his service and his sacrifice. This is all colored America asks—a free field and no favors. If we read the signpost of Calvin Coolridge aright this will be its portion and protection. We congratulate President Coolidge. Let him fight out the nation's present domestic battle along this line and an ever-increasing host of black Americans will stand by to serve the country—north, east, west and south—in times of peace and to forever save it in times of war. May God so direct President Coolidge. May Providence so preserve the Republic!

LLOYD GEORGE IS LAUDED BY KLAN CHIEF.

Simmons Asks for Interview on Unification of English-Speaking Nations.

The following telegram, indorsing the plans and purposes of David Lloyd George, Britain's war Premier, in unifying Great Britain and America, was dispatched Monday to Lloyd George by William J. Simmons, founder and head of the Ku Klux Klan:

"Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 15, 1923.

"Hon. David Lloyd George,
Minneapolis, Minn.,

"May I not tender to you my deep appreciation of the plan you outlined for harmonizing and unifying Great Britain and the United States in purpose and ideals.

"The order of which I have the honor to be the founder and the responsible head and composed of millions of native born white Protestant citizens of this country has as a part of its program of service the unification of the two white English speaking nations of the world.

"Neither the League of Nations nor the International Court can accomplish and secure the ends so earnestly desired. A simple compact between sovereign nations dissimilar in color, creed and ideals can not be maintained. The International Court can not coerce and restrain the nations of the earth into righteous and amicable relations.

"Your country and my country must be linked together by the ties of blood, of sympathy, of common destiny, to preserve our Anglo-Saxon civilization and to safeguard the world against recurrence of war. In any event Great Britain and the United States must be united in the deeper and finer things of democracy and determined that white man shall never engage in war against white man anywhere upon the face of the earth. The press reports are that you are to favor Atlanta with a visit.

"Will you not be good enough to grant me the privilege and the honor of an interview when you reach this city?

"WILLIAM JOSEPH SIMMONS,
"Emperor of the Invisible Empire."

Ku Klux Klan—1923. III.

General.

the wearing of the hood that enables individuals and groups to use the cover of the klan for the prosecution of private vengeance.

As to the secrecy, as to the objection that the klan tries to carry out even those of its purposes that are justifiable, or at least no worse than debatable, anonymously—to this objection the klan member makes the ingenious answer that he in his attempts to influence public action is no more anonymous than the writer of newspaper editorials, nor that figure who is so often alluded to as "the man higher up" or the man in the background of many bodies organized for political or social action. In this as in many aspects of any argument you have with a man who seeks to justify the klan there is some slight amount of half truth. It all throws light on the nature of the minds and on the motives of some who join the klan with sincere though only partly informed motives.

Sunday Courier 10-21-23

In all that is said here there is no intention to deal with the essential principles of the klan, nor with the men at the head of it. Some of them may be good men; some others of them may be decidedly otherwise. One of the early organizers of the klan was a rather venerable old fellow who in his vague minded, narrow minded, long haired way had motives entirely sincere and completely unworldly. One of the others who had a good deal to do with the energetic spreading of the klan appears to have been a decidedly less attractive type—in fact, his name has been appearing in the papers pretty frequently in rather markedly odious connections. All that, however, is a different story. The present article does not concern itself with the leaders of the klan, nor with its methods of organization, nor with those men—frequently very commercial minded, one is compelled to suspect—who make money through the organized selling of memberships in the league, who practice what has been called the commercial exploitation of hate. All that, let it be repeated, is another story. The present article has in mind only the individuals who join the klan—and only some of them. Some who join the klan do so because they see in it an opportunity for the prosecution of private feuds in an illegal and odious way. Some join it in a spirit nothing short of the most deplorable bigotry. But the clear fact that must be conceded, if we are to make any headway through dealing with this widespread prejudice in a spirit of calmness and tolerance, is that some others who join it are good men with motives that are sincere, even exalted. The writer has been told by sources which compel him to believe it that in many local communities, especially in the South and West, the very best men in the community belong to the klan. And it is with the attitude of mind of this sort of man that the present article deals.

Such a man in the course of any long conversation with you will tell you and will easily convince you that his motives personally are at least unselfish. The salesmen of memberships and those who organize the salesmen and direct them may be in it partly or wholly for the commissions they earn and the various financial "rake offs" incident to the commercial side of the organization. But the good man who pays his money to those salesmen in obviously quite without any selfish motive. Such a man indeed will tell you and will marshall a certain amount of proof that among all the organized forces now aiming to have influence in American politics the Ku Klux Klan is almost alone in having no selfish material object. He will tell you that the object of the farm bloc, for example, is to get more money for its members in the shape of higher prices for crops, government credit and the like. He will tell you that the purpose of the labor unions in trying to exert political pressure is to get higher wages. He will tell you that even the American Legion has among the objects of its political action a cash bonus for its members. He will cite other similar examples until you find yourself almost tending to admit that among all these blocs and organized minorities the two which have conspicuously an impersonal motive free from material considerations are the Ku Klux Klan and the Anti-Saloon league. In this, as in any similar broad generalization, there is of course a certain amount of specious half truth.

Nothing of this kind should blind any one to the fact that some of the principles of the klan are inconsistent with the American theory of democracy and government and the fact that some of the actions of some of its local groups are even more concretely odious. The important point is that to the degree that honest men with good motives are attraced by some aspects of the klan they should be provided by the political parties, by the newspapers, by the courts and legislatures and by the other more orthodox vehicles for the expression of organized opinion with less excuse for taking to this kind of group action in order to get consideration for those of their purposes that are legitimate.

LET THE KLAN DIE.

"The most un-American State in "the Union, as measured by the Ku "Klux Klan standard, is South Caro-"lina." This report from a TIMES correspondent fits in with other evidence about the peculiar nature of the order's strength in the South. It is strong in Georgia, strong in Texas, though not so strong there as it used to be; but it is not the old Ku Klux Klan and not enough like it to appeal to descendants of the men of standing who supported that order. It seems to be stronger now in the Middle West than in the South. Indiana is the choicest jewel in its crown.

N. Y. Times 11-20-23

Some statistics of the religious population of Indiana, published yesterday, show that somewhat less than 10 per cent. of the Hoosiers are Catholics and somewhat less than 1 per cent. Jews. The other 89 per cent. must feel their inferiority keenly if they are forced to band together to save Nordic supremacy. As a matter of fact, the more Klansmen the less compact their unity. Birds in their little nests agree, but the Emperor's men and the Wizard's men shoot each other up with all the enthusiasm of Guelphs and Ghibellines.

Every day it seems more probable that the Klan will vanish by natural disintegration. The problem will not be solved, certainly, by counter-attacks such as that sponsored by the Knights of Columbus at Atlantic City. When the Knights are attacked solely because of their religion, naturally enough they rally as Catholics to fight back. The impulse is intelligible, but the results are certain to be unfortunate. When the Knights of Columbus organize a Vigilance Committee with the help of negroes, and the Mayor arranges a comic-opera system of signals with dairy whistles and police traffic lights by which "volunteers "will be summoned to the City Hall "to curb outbreaks," they are only furnishing more material for the fanatics of the Klan. Let the thing alone and it will fall to pieces of its own weight.

"ONE-HUNDRED PERCENTISM" IN NORTHERN STATES

Baltimore Herald 10-17-23

(By William Pickens)

In the North, East and West, Mr Colored Man, they are not coming after you (yet) with tar and feathers, or whip and rope. They are coming first, in the way in which they can come and get away with it, after your job, after your child's seat in the unsegregated school, after your half-equal accommodations in public places, after your elective or appointive office of any kind. Once they get your status lowered in these ways, then the tar and feathers, the rope and the convenient limb will be not only probable but inevitable. It is only a degraded people than can be so treated, and the first move, therefore, will naturally and instinctively be to degrade you.

O, they will not think this all out. Some of them, most of them, have not got that much power of thought. Some few of them will even think and protest honestly that they do not intend any such thing. But this is the natural and instinctive procession of acts and events on the road to utter oppression. These things lead in one direction. The one oppression, if "got away with," becomes the reason and inspiration for the next. In a way, each step in oppression makes the next step necessary. Even those members of the oppressing group, who may be opposed to the first step, will become advocates of the second, because the first will have changed both the conditions and their psychology in the matter. Some of them who were opposed to school-segregation at all at first, will be in favor of high school and college segregation after the grammar school sare all fully segregated. The whites who are at present opposed to jim crow cars, will be in favor of high school and college segregation after the grammar schools are all fully segregated. The whites who are at present opposed to jim crow cars, will be in favor of it, or tolerant to the idea, after every other public privilege has jim crow'd.

This "one hundred per cent. nuisance and Ku Klux menace is working underground at first, outside of Oklahoma, Texas, and others of its strongholds. It must have a period of "mining and sapping" in the more civilized parts of the country.

After this work is thoroughly done—and it won't be long, if it is not vigorously opposed and checked,—the next step will be open defiance to the rights of those who are "alien" to the invisible power.

Here in an Indiana city, this bastard breed of "Americanism" is raising sand because a German painter, who is now an American citizen, perhaps, has won the contract to paint a public building. They say: "Of course the way is over, but——," and they the proceed to show that it is not over. If they would starve the Teuton descendant, they would starve the descendants of Africa. As it is, the Germans whom the brown boys shot at in 1918, and happened to miss, can come over now and have much more freedom anywhere in Indiana than those brown boys can have.

Oo not fool yourself, Mr. Colored Man: Ku lKuxism has you at the very bottom of its scheme of things Ask them to take "white supremacy" off their list, and await their reply.

KLAN LOSING GROUND AMONG TENNESSEANS

Makes Little Headway in Mississippi—Signs of Revolt in Alabama.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGN FAILS

Order Is Fighting Senator Underwood's Presidential Aspirations in Own State.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 15.—Is the Ku Klux Klan disintegrating in the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee? It is, according to all the signs, on the down grade in Tennessee; to date, despite the efforts of the Klonciliium and local propagandists, it has been unable to make any appreciable headway in Mississippi and while it still holds commanding proportions in Alabama the evidence is that the Wizard and his goblins will fail in their effort to line up that State in the so-called 100 per cent. American column.

N. Y. Times 11-16-23

The one section of the country, the Southern States to the east of the Mississippi River, where the Klan could naturally have been expected to expand with the greatest ease, appears to be where the organization has struck a snag. This does not mean that the strength of the Klan is insignificant in these States, but it does mean that the organizers of the masked forces have failed in their campaign for the political control of Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The campaign is still being waged with all the force the "throne in Atlanta" can command. While Atlanta refuses to concede defeat, the fact appears irrefutable that the Eastern South cannot be induced, as have Texas, Arkansas, Indiana and other States west of the Mississippi, to the Klan.

Success in Southern States.

Of the three States named, Alabama is without question the one where the Klan has made the greatest progress. In this State the order controls Jefferson County, of which Birmingham is the seat, and there are other sections of the State in which the Klan is admittedly in dominant position. In the rural dis-ricts and in Mobile and in Montgomery, however, the Klan is a minority organization, and it so happens that a majority of the people of Alabama live on farms and in the cities and towns where the Klan is not in control.

At this moment the big political question in Alabama is the candidacy of Senator Oscar Underwood for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Until very recently it was not thought that Senator Underwood would have any opposition in his home State, but it now appears certain that he will have opposition, and that B. Musgrove, who ran against him for the Senate two years ago, will try to get the delegation. The scheme is said to involve an alliance of the Ku Klux, the Anti-Saloon League, the labor unions, and certain farmer organizations behind Musgrove.

Musgrove is distinctly a local celebrity and his candidacy is solely to humiliate Senator Underwood, if possible, in his home State. Some years ago Musgrove gained considerable notoriety in connection with a proposition to solve the cotton picking problem by teaching monkeys to pluck the staple from the bolls. In his campaign for the Senate in 1922 he came within less than 1,500 votes of defeating Underwood, and he had behind him that year the very elements which the enemies of Mr. Underwood are counting on to support Musgrove in the primary next April.

The odds are, however, in favor of Senator Underwood and his friends are confident that he will weather the storm. So far the Alabama Klan papers have not attacked him, but the official Georgia paper, which circulates everywhere in Klan territory, has opened fire. The situation, so far as the Alabama Klan is concerned, is a puzzle. The rank and file of the organization are generally understood to be against Underwood but the direction heads are fearful of defeat if the issue is openly joined, and just now the Klan is in no position to suffer further loss of prestige in this part of the country.

Home Section to Give Hard Fight in Own County.

Senator Underwood's hardest battle will be fought right here in his home county of Jefferson, for nowhere in Alabama is the Klan so strong as in the Birmingham territory. Jefferson County polls about 32,000 votes and to the Klan is conceded a voting strength of at least 15,000. The Klan itself claims 18,000. The Sheriff of the county, T. J. Shirley, is a Klansman and is said to be the Alabama representative of the Kloncilium. At least two Judges are also of the Klan, while the other county and city officials who owe allegiance to the Wizard in Atlanta are said to total more than a score. Senator Underwood's friends concede that on the face of things he is in danger so far as the county in which he has spent his entire political life is concerned.

William W. Brandon, the Governor of Alabama, is frankly on friendly terms with the Ku Klux Klan. He has declared for Underwood. J. Thomas Heflin, the junior Senator from Alabama, is also in high favor in Klan circles. The Alabama Klan organ in its issue this week urges all Klansmen to hear Heflin speak whenever opportunity occurs. He is eulogized as one of the greatest orators in the United States, a man who is always, says the paper, "eloquent, instructive and entertaining."

The Presidential aspirations of Senator Underwood, summed up, will be the big issue in Alabama next year. In all the years he has been in public life Senator Underwood has never lost a fight in Alabama, and the indications are that he will again be victorious in 1924, for despite its admitted stronghold in Birmingham, the metropolis of the State, the Ku Klux Klan is on the defensive in Alabama and the signs are that the hour of its greatest influence has struck.

Now as to Tennessee. In that State the Klan is no longer boastful. The election in Memphis the other day, when the hooded organization was decisively defeated by more than 3,000 votes, is the biggest black eye the Klan has yet received in Southern territory east of the Mississippi. Everywhere in Tennessee the reports are that the Klan is losing and although it will probably poll a considerable vote in the 1924 elections, it will not be a controlling factor.

Senator Shields will be the paramount issue in Tennessee next year. He has been denounced by former President Wilson and will, in addition, face the opposition of the Anti-Saloon League, the Ku Klux and those soldier voters who are demanding a bonus. The Shields fight will not be unlike that "Jim" Reed waged in Missouri in 1922. He will be opposed by Nathan Bachman of Chattanooga and General L. D. Tyson of Knoxville, both of them followers of Mr. Wilson and both of them statesmen of the bone dry school.

Klan Loses Tennessee Fight.

As in the case of Reed, it is possible that Senator Shields may get enough East Tennessee Republican votes to pull him through. Rumor has it that both Reed and Borah will come to Tennessee and urge his election, for Shields has been from the first one of the most consistent members of the League of Nations irreconcilable group in the Senate. By itself the Klan cannot defeat him, but it can add a good many thousands of votes which in the end may accomplish his undoing.

Governor Austin Peay, of Tennessee has not been conspicious among those Tennesseans who have denounced the Klan; for this reason it is generally understood that the Klan will accord him its support in his campaign for reelection next year. Whether the Klan will back Bachman or Tyson for the Senatorial nomination has not been disclosed. It is out to beat Shields and may be expected to line up behind the candidate who shows the greatest preelection strength.

Viewing the situation in Tennessee as a whole the evidence is all one way. The Klan has lost in its fight to get the State. It may develop strength here and there, but it will never, say those who are familiar with the Tennessee political situation, be able to make its influence count to any appreciable degree in either affairs of the State.

Mississippi, the last of the trio, appears to be almost as safe as Tennessee, so far as Klan domination goes. From the first some of the strongest men in Mississippi have fought the masked horde, men like ex-Senator Williams and Percy, especially the latter, who has never permitted an opportunity to pass to warn his fellow-citizens of the dangers that lurk behind masked control. The Klan is fairly strong in parts of the State, but so far as control is concerned, such an outcome appears as remote as it does in Tennessee. As the situation now sizes up, the Klan will not be able to play a very important part in Mississippi next year.

Gathering the Harvest of Hate.

Spokesmen for the Ku Klux Klan claim that it has a membership of something over 2,000,000 persons. Each one of these members has paid an initiation fee of $10, besides the regular dues and the amount he spent for regalia. If the number of members be as large as claimed, or even nearly so, it is plain that a considerable sum has been contributed to the treasury of the invisible empire. Also obvious is it that the sum is of such proportions as to attract the lustful eyes and hands of those who have gotten to be leaders. The almost constant litigation that has been in progress for months on the part of one faction or the other to get in control of the administration of the klan funds should be proof sufficient of the motives inspiring the litigants.

These quarrels within the klan and the latest result of them also prove another theory that opponents of the klan gospel of hatred have maintained. Men who know something of human nature have all along insisted that those who preach hate against others will practice hate against themselves whenever the occasion may arise. There are any number of such occasions, and the most apt are money and politics. Both of these occasions have entered into Ku Klux affairs, and the tragedy that happened in Atlanta the other day is the beginning of the justification of human wisdom.

In the imperial city of the invisible empire the attorney for a faction contesting for control of the empire's affairs was shot down in his office by the editor and publicity agent of the faction in control. The whole country is thus made witness to the fact that the teachers of hate are its most apt practitioners. Whatever violence and crime the klan may deny against those outside of the ranks they cannot but admit within the gates. The seeds of hatred that they have implanted in Ameriacn soil have developed into the plant that is poisoning themeslves. The man who is dead and the man who caused his death were engaged in the business of urging upon some of their fellows the obligation of hating some other of their fellows. They seem to have attained their end to their own destruction and disgrace.

They have sown the wind broadcast and they are reaping the whirlwind at home.

Out of the Invisible

On Monday last the exalted cyclops of the Morehouse parish Ku Klux and several of his satellites were duly adjudged guilty of "carrying firearms on the premises of another," a violation of the law. The charge was based upon an armed invasion of a Morehouse parish home. On the same day, another Knight of the Invisible Empire conducted an armed invasion of the premises of a brother Klansman and shot him to death.

As the cloak of Ku Klux invisibility is lifted little by little and here and there, the wonder must grow that men of intelligence, of patriotic impulse and good will, should cleave to it longer, even in secret. Hundreds of masked mob mysteries still await elucidation, as for the example the murders in Mer Rouge and Texas and the numerous "whipping bees" in Oklahoma, Georgia and elsewhere. It must be a very rigid rule of silence and secrecy that keeps so many of these outrages dark for so long—and in regions where dwell many subjects of the "Invisible Empire" solemnly vowed by their professions to law enforcement. But wherever the light of orderly justice has pierced the shadow, the klan philosophy and psychology are revealed in forms and purposes utterly unlike those paraded by its professions of "super-Americanism" and super-reverence for law.

How long can the pretense and profession blind the well-meaning and law-loving elements of klan membership to the realities bared now and again in courts of record? How long can the plea that the "Invisible Empire's" good deeds offset the evil ones attributed or proved against its members stand against the self-evident fact that good deeds do not need the mask and robe which, by sheltering those who don the trappings of invisibility for evil and criminal purposes, encourage them to lawless excesses?

Replying to a telegram sent by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People of 69 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has repudiated the support offered him by a Ku Klux Klan speaker at Freeport, L. I., recently. Mr. Roosevelt said he had declared himself against the Klan in a speech at the National Republican Club on Lincoln's Birthday last year.

"I have not heard one thing about the Ku Klux Klan endorsing me," wrote Mr. Roosevelt to Robert W. Bagnall, Acting Secretary of the colored organization. "I cannot conceive that it is so, because I came out flatfooted against them in a public speech at the National Republican Club on Lincoln's Birthday last year.

"The fundamental, underlying principle of Americanism is that men should be judged as men, and no distinctions made on racial or religious lines."

In his Lincoln's Birthday speech Mr. Roosevelt said in part:

"The word American has been soiled by being used by some groups for the purpose of furthering their brutally intolerant designs. Such a group is the Ku Klux Klan, who have banded together against certain creeds and races. Americanism never goes masked, and he who tells you it does, lies."

Ku Klux Klan Blamed As One Cause of Negro Migration to the North From Cotton States

N. Y. HERALD

MEMPHIS, Nov. 12.—The negro exodus has presented a real spectacle at Memphis. For five months, from April to September, a continuous stream of men, women and children left here for Cincinnati, St. Louis, Louisville, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and smaller cities in Missouri, Kentucky, Ohio, Illinois and Michigan. Labor agents corralled and directed the movements of groups of them North and West. One railroad provided special trains as the occasion demanded. The second section of one regular scheduled train carried nine or more cars to Chicago. It is estimated that it carried from 500 to 600 persons a week for at least five months.

Memphis, was swamped with railroad passenger business, and the city overflowing with strange negroes. The Mayor instructed his police officers to enforce the vagrancy laws and keep the migrants moving.

Tennessee lost but a few thousands of its own negroes. It served as a muster ground for those from Georgia and other more Southern States.

"We have nine trunk line systems running in and out of Memphis," Mayor Paine explained to The New York Herald reporter, "and it is but a night's ride to all the important centers to which the moving negroes were headed. Most of them went north, to Chicago and Detroit, from where they scattered to points their services were desired. Three months ago the movement reached the peak.

Many Went to Missouri.

"Many negroes from this immediate section went to the new cotton belt in Missouri, moving ahead of the boll weevil. The negro population of Memphis has been gradually losing in comparison to the white. The last census shows that but 37 percent of the entire number of people in the city were negroes. In 1900 it was about fifty-fifty. This is true of many Southern communities. Negroes have been migrating to the North, East and West for thirty years, but not in such numbers as they are now going. We are not trying to prevent individuals from leaving, but we require agents to live up to our laws. Tens of thousands have passed through here."

The chief of police of Memphis said that 7,000 to 8,000 had left the city, but their places were filled by others coming in.

Memphis observers of the exodus declared that it was a movement from the farm to the city, as well as a transfer of negro labor from the South to the North, East and West.

Southern business men are becoming interested in this question. They realize that the loss of labor is serious, and that many thousands of "good negroes" are gone for good. Bankers and merchants are trying to stem the tide. In Georgia, where the unrest among the negro residents is most pronounced steps have been taken to improve conditions.

"How can we keep them?" is the question they are trying to answer. James S. Peters, president of the Georgia Bankers' association, who conducted an inquiry into the situation in his state, asserts: "This is a condition and not a theory. It will continue so long as conditions here remain as they are and the industrial North and East offer higher wages and better living conditions. It is useless to talk about labor agents or legislate against their activities. It did not require labor agents to take population and transplant it on the shores of North America.. Superior living conditions and better wages did this."

Labor Agents Not Held to Blame.

Mr. Peters declared that he doubted if labor agents had any real influence to the negro movement.

"We have very few negroes now in Georgia but what have relatives or friends in the North and East," he explained. "Every mail brings letters back to the South to fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, sweethearts, neighbors and friends telling of the high wages, good living quarters, schools and other superior living conditions, and I find that in many instances those who have gone ahead are sending money back to their families and friends to cover their transportation up north."

Mr. Peters has painted for his associates of the Georgia Bankers Association a gloomy but accurate picture. He has made recommendations for steps to bring about a change and stop the outflow. Other States are joining forces to the same end.

"That most of the negroes have left the farming section of our State is evidenced by the fact that in travelling through the middle part of Georgia either on the railroad or public highway you will see thousands and thousands of acres of land and farm dwellings lying vacant," Mr. Peters reported. "The land is growing up in weeds and the farm dwellings deteriorating. These lands sold, or should have brought, in 1919 from $40 to $75 per acre, and today there is no demand for them at all. In fact, you cannot lease them for the taxes. A large percentage of them are covered with mortgages and the owners are not able to pay the interest."

Mr. Peters quoted this in his report on conditions, and added: "The exodus of the negro has left in its trail a destruction, silent, but as great as that wrought by Sherman's army from Atlanta to the sea."

Would Improve Living Conditions.

Some of the principal suggestions being made by Southern men of ability, character and substance are:

First, that wages be increased to a par with those of the North, East and West with proper allowances for the difference in the cost of living.

Second, living conditions in the negro sections of the towns and cities be improved.

Third, the increase of educational facilities, the purpose being to bury the theory of moss backed Southerners that an ignorant negro is better than one with education.

South Carolina and Georgia rank higher in illiteracy than any other States in the Union because of the condition of the negro.

The pocketbook of the South was hard hit this year by the negro exodus. It is estimated that the loss in cotton will total from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. This fact has aroused men of means to demand better treatment of the negro.

The Ku Klux Klan, organized by an Atlanta group, has had much to do with the negro migration movement. Few negroes have suffered at the hands of the hooded bands that parade the public highways, but the constant apprehension that they will be visited and mistreated by disguised men has demoralized negroes in many communities. Labor agents have used the garb and tricks of klansmen to frighten good negroes from jobs they have had for years.

At Hapeville a suburb of Atlanta, negroes were warned by signs bearing the three telling letters—K. K. K.—to leave the community. Their employers and friends offered to stand by them and see that no harm came, but the signs were given again and again and many negroes ran away. White leaders there assert that the K. K. K. had nothing to do with that drive, but it had the same effect.

Some farmers had plenty of hands under contract for the year, but a few nightly visits by men claiming to represent the Ku Klux Klan drove them away.

Efforts to frighten the negroes on the plantation of Watt Daniel of Mer Rouge, La., resulted in the Morehouse Parish kidnapping and alleged murders. Daniels protested against the activities of the Klan on his place and he was then spotted for "a lesson."

The Klan is held responsible to a large extent for the unrest among the negroes of States in which it is strong.

The Klan scarecrow has followed the negro into Northern States. At Portsmouth, Ohio, the latter part of October several hundred hooded representatives of the Invisible Empire paraded through a negro section and frightened the residents. At Pittsburgh, in a suburb where a white girl was attacked by a negro an invisible committee ordered "all negroes to pack up and get."

11 STATES JOIN KLAN REVOLT, IS REPORT

2,800,000 Sever Connection With Imperial Palace, Information to Col. Simmons

Atlanta Georgian

Representatives of the Ku-Klux Klan in eleven states, at a conference held a few days ago in Richmond, Ind., revolted and voted to withdraw from the national organization, according to a report made to Colonel William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Invisible Empire, and which was made public Monday by Henry J. Norton, exalted cyclops of Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1, of Atlanta. 12-4-23

The report, Mr. Norton announced, will be mailed in circular form to all klansmen of the Simmons faction in the internal fight in the klan.

The states represented at the meeting, all of which were reported to have seceded, are:

Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, New Jersey, Kentucky, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. These states were declared in the report to represent a total membership in the klan of 2,800,000. Thirty-two representatives of the klan in the eleven states were said to have been present at the conference and to have voted unanimously.

The revolt was led by D. C. Stephenson, said to be head of the propagation department of the klan for all of the states mentioned.

According to information reported to Emperor Simomns, Stephenson made a short talk, explaining that he had withdrawn from the national kloncilium "on account of certain men that were connected with it, referring particularly to Dr. Evans, H. K. Ramsey and Savage."

The "Dr. Evans" referred to is Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard.

The conference, the report said, later was adjourned from Richmond to Indianapolis, where the discussion of klan affairs was contin[illegible]

Stephenson was reported to [illegible] explained that he had instructed all kleagles and exalted cyclops in his territory not to send any more remittances to the Imperial Palace in Atlanta and to have no further correspondence with the palace.

Stephenson also explained, it was said, that he controlled his own printing and robe plants and that "it would not be necessary to ask the Imperial Palace for anything." He declared, the report said, that he did not fear any legal action on the part of the imperial officials.

The conference was adjoruned to be called together later by Stephenson for consideration of further plans, the report con luded.

Dinosaurs and Others.

Human knowledge is making progress backward as well as in other directions. The report from Peking, for example, that the third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History has discovered in Manchuria nests of dinosaurs dating back 10,000,000 years with dinosaur eggs in the nests justifies the hope that equally careful investigation into some present-day mysteries will result in discoveries of importance. Indeed, one cannot devote oneself wholly to a study of dinosaurs without overlooking matters of more immediate moment.

Chicago Daily News

Take the acute problem that convulses Oklahoma. One important element among the people of that state is deeply disturbed by the alleged crimes and the supposed lawless purposes of the Ku-Klux. Another large element is no less concerned about the alleged evil practices of the state's official governing agencies. Amid the general turmoil it is not wise to assume that all the fault lies on one side.

Chicago, Ill.

The Ku-Klux constitute a strange phenomenon—amazing in many of its manifestations. Its vast and continuous growth demands that an understanding of its purposes and its practices be arrived at by the general public with the least possible delay. 9-17-23

This country already has an immense fund of information relative to the bad or inefficient government from which the people so commonly suffer. The alarming increase in taxation and the breakdown in law enforcement are two features of this situation which never can be overlooked for any considerable time. If Americans should attack with intelligent determination the abuses that cause bad government, so simplifying and otherwise improving it as to transform it into good government functioning with admirable efficiency, they would make all such strange and sinister growths as the oathbound and sheeted order of the Ku-Klux manifestly preposterous and without a shadow of justification.

Fatuous tolerance of evil in our courts, evil in our legislative bodies, evil in our executive offices, has bred in some quarters a sort of desperation that is prone to take on dangerous forms.

Having discovered nests of dinosaurs in Manchuria it should be possible for American enterprise, joined with American patriotism, to discover and destroy the nests of present-day agencies of misrule here at home.

JUSTICE!

A Defence of the Klan

The Nat'l Republic 12-5-23

SIR: I have read your article, Why They Join the Klan, with a great deal of interest. There are two outstanding reasons for the enormous growth of this order; first, about nine-tenths of the men and women of this country are Klansmen and Klanswomen and do not know it; all it takes to complete them is to go through the initiation and take the oath. And, second, advertising; persistent, effective advertising.

The Klan should not be classed as a political party as you suggest, when it is plain to be seen that they are the finest advertisers in the country. And the advertising—untold millions of dollars worth—has not cost one penny. We know that the great newspapers employ astute men to guard against the wiles and schemes of the press agents; yet all the efforts of all the press agents who ever lived are as nought compared with the gigantic press agent scheme the Klan has worked on them. They have swallowed the bait, sinker and line.

In this town of about two hundred thousand, it is safe to say that had the Klan spent ten million dollars for paid advertisements in the two local papers and the Scripps daily, the results would be inconsequential compared with the persistent, front page knocking of these three newspapers. It is the same thing, all over the country. This talk about ignorance, bigotry, cruelty, whippings and all the rest, is mere propaganda of these same gratuitous advertisers of the Klan. The anti-Klan propaganda is about as reliable as Russian, Open Shop and other paid propaganda. No doubt there have been Klansmen at these various whipping parties. (And let me say that in every case of a whipping, when the facts are sifted, most anybody would say that he got what was coming to him.) Likewise, out on the plains, where I was raised, every time a horse thief or cattle rustler was summarily lynched, there were men in the parties who were members of the well known secret orders, members of the churches, men whose lives and opinions were worth something in their respective communities.

The Klan is not in politics. It is not anti-anything, excepting anti-wrong. It does teach, however, that in politics no account is to be taken of expediency, but, rather, let the best man win. It is claimed that every officer of the city and county of Dallas is a Klansman; yet our county commissioners have spent millions of dollars of road and other money without a whisper of graft. The city is enjoying the most efficient and economical government it has had during my thirty years' residence.

It is my opinion that within a short time it will be impossible for a man to be elected to any important office in the United States if he is opposed by the Klan. For the Klan is one hundred percent American; it is trying to bring us back to the faith of our fathers, who founded this government. Had the principles of the Klan actuated the heads of the governments we would not have had the ghastly war; further, if the teachings of the Klan were followed by those who hold the destinies of the world in the hollow of their hands, we would not know that now, today, there are millions of innocent men, women and children starving in Germany and other war-swept countries. Political expediency and fear of what the voters will think, is the curse of the world today. C. M. ROBK.

Fred Callahan Makes Plea for Brotherly Love.

Memphis, Tenn.

"What is the matter with the world is one of the questions that has been asked of all ages and the answer the centuries have given back is the answer today—we are not loving each other enough," declared Fred Callahan, attorney, and teacher of the Men's Bible Class of St. John's Methodist Church, in the puplit yesterday, which he occupied in the absence of the Rev. C. C. Grimes, pastor.

"The one thing that has wrought more ruin than pestilence or famine, that has filled the world with crying, a shapeless, headless thing, that entered Eden upon the wings of sin, is hate," he said.

"Hate is not only an attitude toward someone or something; it is a positive force, capable of exercising a tremendous influence over us if indulged; it is Satan's smoke screen. Being headless it is without reason and men do all manner of things under its influence, unable to see in the thing the do, Satan's hand.

"Unlike man, hate did not enter the garden alone. A proper soul-mate conceived of Satan in one of the blackest pits of hell was prepared aforehand and entered the garden with hate, likewise upon the wings of sin; this soul-mate is a blind thing, and is called mob-spirit. The two, throughout all the centuries that have passed have wallowed in the blood of brothers, blind and without reason, leaving behind them a crimson trail, a world billowed with the graves of the slain.

Mob Rule a Great Enemy.

"Every great movement for good since the very morning of time has been forced to meet and overcome this enemy of the race. Every milepost that human grogress has ever passed in this slow journey upward bears upon its surface bloody fingerprints. Every great life ever offered upon the altar of service in the promotion of brotherly love bears on its body somewhere marks of hate.

"On a spring morning some twenty centuries ago in an eastern city a mob gathered, the hour was early and the mob had formed beneath the window of the governor of that province. At the midnight hour of the night that had just passed a young Jew had been arrested and contrary to all law or custom, had been tried before sunrise and condemned to death. At first there was some shouting, then the mob, apparently having gained its end, the shouting died down for a time, when suddenly the mob poured out through the city's gate, through the gate called the Damascus gate, bearing with them, pushing him, dragging him, the young Jew.

"That city, ladies and gentlemen, was the city of Jerusalem; the young Jew, Heaven's Prince. Only words of love had ever fallen from His gracious lips, only deeds of kindness had ever engaged his hands. The crowd however, aflame with hate and led by the mob-spirit crucified Him, God's Son.

"A short time after this brings us to the lesson story of today, "The Stoning of Stephen."

Stoning of Stevens, Example.

"Stephen had preached such a gospel as no one could answer. He had preached from the scripture the coming of the world's Saviour, how He should come, where, how He should die, and when and where He should be lifted up. There was no answering him and the rulers stirred up the people, feeling that the people would act first and think later. The closing argument of his defense, as he stands on trial for his life, is in substance these words: "Your fathers, throughout all the ages that have passed, have stoned the prophets, and you have with bloody hands, slain God's Son." Stopping their ears we are told they rushed upon him, rushed him out through the gates, and the mob adds another name to its long list of victims, this world has stoned the prophets, slain God's Son, burned, tortured and crucified those who have given so much to lift humanity out of the valleys and to promote brotherly love.

"In 1530 William Tyndale gave to this world probably its first complete Bible. The great mass, in his day, were eager to learn God's word as written in God's book, and men in England have been known to barter whole loads of grain or hay for just a few chapters of St. Paul written perhaps with a pen.

"Tyndale gave us our Bible, and in 1835 he was strangled by a mob for this act.

Discord Shakes Nation.

"You say these things occurred centuries ago. These could not happen today. These things could not possibly happen in America. We have our constitution, our laws, we enjoy freedom of conscience. Each citizen is guaranteed, you may say, under the law, the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. We are each of us guaranteed a speedy and public trial and to have the advice of counsel. We are guaranteed the right to stand face to face with the witness accusing us of wrong, and with all this law and these guarantees hate could never make any headway or the mob spirit. Shame us! as it has shamed other countries.

"How sure are you of this? If you will stand upon the crowded streets of our city, back in one of the little eddies where men pause in the exchange of a few words; if you will visit one of the downtown parks and will listen you will hear the heartbeats of a nation and in it a chord or note of discontent. You will discover class-hatred and that there is little love for one another. You will hear ugly rumors of outrages, of strikes, of hooded men, and of other things that combine to produce a feeling in us that things are not just altogether right.

"I stood on the courthouse steps of this city one day during the past week and heard a discussion concerning the coal strike and concerning the Ku Klux Klan. Some of the men insisted that the members of the klan and that the organization was altogether bad, others that it was altogether good. It is my opinion, ladies and gentlemen, that many of these, perhaps a large per cent, who are members of the klan, are men of integrity. Their aim is high and lofty.

Men of Integrity Mislead.

"They had entered the klan perhaps because they believe it furnished a field where service, needed service, could be rendered by them. It is also my opinion, if you please, in spite of the things that I have said, that it is the most dangerous thing with which the human race has ever played since the dawn of the world. I concede that these gentlemen have a right to their belief. Being an American citizen myself, a thirty-second degree Mason, a Methodist and a Democrat, I feel confident that they will accord to me the same right.

"In the first place, from my viewpoint, the very word "klan" is un-American. It means clique; it means classes. Webster says it means those bound together by class prejudice or narrowness.

"In the second place, America is my country. Every Klansman that breathes, every Jew, every Catholic, and every negro, that stands beneath our flag can make this same statement with just as much right as I have to make it. The fact that I do not believe in the power of the pope, that I do not believe as the Jew believes, certainly can never give to me the right to drive him from a land in which he has played as great a part in building as I have, and which is as much his land as it is my land.

"There is not enough love as I understand it to include all of us. Some of us are unloved. The tendency, whether intentional or not, is to create class hatred, to array Protestant against Catholic, Gentile against Jew, white against black, here in a land to which we have all contributed, in which we have all had a part of the building, before whose laws we stand as equals and beneath whose single flag as one people we all seek shelter.

"Why the Hoods and Woods."

Solomon has said: "There are six things that God hateth, nay, seven things, and the seventh thing is a man who stirreth up strife between brothers."

"In the third place, every bum, cutthroat, or thug that outrages society will lay his crime at the Klansman's door, knowing full well that with the hooded face he will stand a poor chance to defend himself in the eyes of the world. Over his face he wears a mask; his meeting place is in the heart of the forest or some dark wood; his meeting hour many times the midnight hour. It simply puts the Klansman in a bid light. The whole world wants to know if you are 100 per cent American; if you are willing to practice the Golden Rule, whatsoever you would have men do unto you, do you therefore unto them; if you are willing to accord each American citizen every right that you claim—then, why the hood? Why the meeting place in the woods, and why the midnight hour?

"In the fourth place, from Oklahoma and from the Lone Star state, from other southern states, and from the state of Louisiana, stories are coming to us of mob violence, of midnight visits, of outrages. Who, for the next 50 years to come will hear the word Louisiana without thinking of the little village of Mer Rogue, of Bastrop, and Watt Daniels? Oh, they say the Klan is not guilty of all these things, which is perhaps so in a majority of the cases. Nevertheless, the very fact that men are traveling the streets and the highways at the midnight hour, masked and perhaps armed, has filled the very air with uneasiness. Men walk at high noon casting an occasional glance over their shoulders.

Labor Supply Affected.

"And another thing, the negroes are going from the cotton fields, going from the fields of sugar cane and corn; going from the cabins that stand upon the bayou banks, they are gone. Every steamboat that breasts the waves of this mighty Mississippi River to the northward, every passenger train that pulls out of the Grand Central Station or from the Union Depot bears it cargo of black men and their loved ones. And why are these negroes going—our negroes?

"In spite of the circumstances surrounding him, in spite of the fact that he has lived in a hut and that his bed in many cases has been but a dog's bed, he's a good negro, when you consider the chance that he has had. And he is leaving the land to which he has really contributed so much. He has cleared the cotton fields, and the fields where corn and sugar cane grow. His hands have laid the paving bricks of our city's highways, dug the canals, and borne the mortor and brick to the highest story of our tall buildings. You say, it is more money he is seeking, he is following a mirage. That may be true in part but back of it there is another thing, known as fear. Soon to forget the banjo and the songs of the south, his loss if you please, is our loss.

"While shepherds watched their sheep upon the hill sides which rose above the little village of Bethlehem 20 centuries ago, they were suddenly startled, near the midnight hour, by sounds of heavenly music, music wondrously sweet. Angels were singing, "Glory to God in the Highest, Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men." This Prince came preaching "Love one another." Oh! His Kingdom was small at the beginning, only 12, then 120, then 500, then Paul pushed the kingdom into heathen Antioch, then it spread to the island provinces of Rome, then to Rome, then to middle and western Europe, then this land, then to the earth's uttermost outposts.

"And I believe that these great Bible classes springing up everywhere throughout the land are being used by this Gallilean as recruiting stations for His army. Let more love, ladies and gentlemen, be our watchword. Let's banish from our country and city and from the whole world the influence of hate. Let's help the Master of Men push His kingdom by loving each other more."

MICHIGAN LEGION MEN BRAND KLAN AS UN-AMERICAN

Times-Picayune 10-18-23

Prepared to Fight for Resolution Scoring Hooded Order.

NEUTRALITY URGED IN RELIGION, POLITICS

New Orleans, La.

Anti-Bonus Group Asks "All for Disabled, Nothing for Able-Bodied."

San Francisco, Oct. 17.—The American Legion tonight closed the third day of its fifth national convention with two of the foremost questions before it undecided.

The first barrier was the stand of the Michigan delegation for the complete repudiation of the Ku Klux Klan. The second impediment to harmony was the organization of a San Francisco unit of the legion to fight on the floor any resolution favoring compensation of ex-service men.

Late today a spirit of compromise entered the Ku Klux Klan question when the California delegates in caucus voted an "honest neutrality" in matters pertaining to politics, religion and industry. This was the first of the breaks in a situation which legion officials admitted was threatening the existence of the legion as an active organization.

Klan Fight Foreseen.

Michigan delegates said they would fight on the floor of the convention to force through the resolution drawn up by James E. Hunt of Mount Pleasant, Mich., in which the legion will be called upon tomorrow or Friday to renounce the klan as "un-American in fact" and "contrary to the principles for which the American Legion stands."

The formation of an anti-bonus league here dispelled the hope that the compensation committee would work out a resolution in committee that would be acceptable to the convention, legion officials said tonight. The anti-bonus organizations selected Lieutenant Commander William C. Van Antwerp of San Francisco, member of the legion national advisory council as chairman and Lieutenant Edward H. Clarke, Jr., as secretary.

"For the disabled, everything, for the able bodied, nothing," will be demanded of the anti-bonus faction, Mr. Van Antwerp stated.

Failure of any of the committees to get together forced an early adjournment of the third day's session of the convention at an early hour today. With all night sessions facing several of the most vital committees, it was the hope of officers of the legion that the full convention could proceed tomorrow.

Decorated Men Greeted.

Robert E. Bondy, representing the American Red Cross; William J. McGinley, supreme secretary of the Knights of Columbus, and Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, addressed the legionnaires at today's session.

Four wearers of the congressional medal of honor were welcomed by the legion delegates. They are: Isabelle Stambaugh of Philadelphia; Earl D. Gregory, Virginia; Louis Van Insel, Los Angeles, and Joseph H. Thompson, Beaver Falls, Pa.

The latest tricks of the air as developed by the army, navy and marines, were shown here at Crissy Field, during the "National Defense Day" celebration. Bombing of a toy fort, sky to land communications and night fireworks from airplanes were the features of the air program.

The largest combined army and navy aircraft squadron that ever took part in an intercity flight arrived here from San Diego to join in the legion events, according to Major Harris C. Alten, legion convention aviation chairman. Eighteen combat torpedo and scout planes with Albert Marshall in command, comprised the Pacific fleet air force.

WE are beginning to think that the Ku Klux Klan is a reasonably open, democratic sort of an organization. After all, any man owning five dollars who is able to prove that he is neither a Catholic nor a Jew nor a Negro stands a fair chance of admission. Compared, for instance, with the task of achieving citizenship in the United States, the customs of the Klan look positively free and easy. Of course there are Jews and Catholics in the United States who are allowed to vote, and even a few Negroes here and there, but the tests for admission to citizenship are subtler and less easily defined than those of the Klan. You may, for instance, be an orthodox evangelical blond Nordic named Smith and still be blackballed by some judge because you were a conscientious objector in the World War. And just recently a new barrier to citizenship has been erected by a judge in West Virginia. According to a letter from the president of District 16, United Mine Workers, a young miner named Dan Spolarich, an ex-soldier, was denied citizenship papers because he was a member of the union and on strike. Apparently we are establishing a new organization—the Exalted Order of Citizens of the United States, to which only those aliens may be admitted who fall in with the war policies of the Government and the labor policies of our leading coal operators.

OUT OF THE NIGHT.

Kansas City Star

By Melvin B. Tolson.

Out of the Night with high-flaming torches
  Gallop the Klan with its fiery cross,
Led by the Kleagle of Hate and Destruction,
  Beating the valleys of verdure and moss.
Silent, they ride through meadow and woodland,
  Past fields of cotton and yellowing grain,
Past dark Golgothas where black men have suffered,
  Past stakes of horror whose spirits remain.

Kansas City, Mo.

There in the cabins the tear-stricken inmates
  Whisper a prayer to their forefathers' God;
Mothers clasp babes to their fear-pulsing bosoms,
  Listening to hoofs that resound on the sod.
This is a land of Wild Terrors and Demons
  Haunting the morass and furrow and glen.
Then comes the crash—the silence is broken
  By Human-Tigers who prey upon men!

10-13-23

Thundering hoofs and the jingle of trappings—
  Foam-crested steeds on their haunches are thrown;
Curses, ah, curses and shouts echo madly,
  And from the cabin there issues a groan.
Mine not the pen to describe scenes so gory—
  Dawn has appeared in the palace on high;
God from his throne looks down on the victim
  Hanging—like Christ—'twixt the Earth and the Sky.

In this fair land 'neath the Altar of Freedom,
  Hoodlums our Law and our Customs defame,
Polluting soil which the martyrs made sacred,
  Dethroning Justice and enthroning Shame!
Ye who have come with your fire-brands and terror,
  Back to your birthplace, the region of Hell.
Land of our fathers—if Duty command us,
  Here we will fall where the patriots fell!

LEGION AND KLAN.

The convention of the American Legion has gone further than a good many people expected on the issue of the Ku Klux Klan. It is true that the compromise resolution offered by the Michigan delegation, which was adopted by an overwhelming vote, mentioned no names, and merely recited the fact that any individual or organization which fostered racial or class strife or took into its own hands the enforcement of law was inconsistent with Legion ideals. This is about the same as saying that the Legion stands unswervingly for virtue, and disapproves strongly of vice. But in view of the considerable number of Klansmen who must have been among the delegates, even that is a good deal.

A stronger resolution, explicitly denouncing the Klan, was beaten by a vote of nearly seven to one; but still more one-sided was the vote of the convention against a declaration introduced by the Oklahoma delegates, which said in effect that the Klan was none of the Legion's business.

As for the bonus, while the Legion in the main is still for it, there was not a voice against the resolution that care of the disabled was the first consideration. So it will seem to others outside the Legion.

KLAN TRIAL HERE BARES MER ROUGE PROBE INCIDENTS

Klan's Plans for Stopping Floggings in Oklahoma Disclosed on Stand by Wizard Evans.

E. Y. CLARKE DECLINES LEADERSHIP OF KLAN

Charges Nationwide Plot by Foes To Ruin Him and Declares He Will Fight.

Atlanta Constitution

How a Ku Klux Klan campaign of education in Oklahoma was planned in a hotel room at Asheville, N. C., and happenings in connection with the Mer Rouge incident of last winter when an investigation of the deaths of Watt Daniel and T. J. Richard was under way, featured depositions and affidavits read Tuesday in Fulton superior court in the hearing in the case of H. M. Rittenhouse, of Philadelphia, and others, seeking a receivership for the organization.

Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, in a deposition taken at the Imperial palace here on October 4, told of the campaign planned for Oklahoma and discussed various matters connected with the klan and with Oklahoma and J. N. Littlejohn, formerly a klan investigator, told of the Mer Rouge incidents.

A side issue of more than usual importance was the giving out by Edward Young Clarke, former head of the propagation department and imperial wizard, pro tem, prior to the election of Dr. Evans, of a letter to William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the klan, declining to become leader of the Simmons faction and of one to Dr. Evans, communicating his refusal to call a meeting of the committee on national program of which he is chairman. He gave as his reason in both instances alleged discovery of a national conspiracy against him, asserting that all of his time would be required to fight it.

Deposition Read.

Attorney Colquitt, one of the attorneys representing the plaintiffs in the action, read the deposition of Dr. Evans. The imperial wizard was asked first about the gathering in the hotel room at Asheville. He said that Paul Etheridge, N. B. Forrest, of Atlanta; C. J. Orbison, Indianapolis; C. A. Comer, of Little Rock, and himself, were in the room. The gathering was during a kloncilium meeting in the North Carolina city.

He said in response to a series of questions that the situation in Oklahoma, where Governor J. C. Walton had said there had been 2,500 whippings, was discussed. "Feeling that kind of situation ought to be remedied," he said, "and an institution founded upon the teachings of justice, obedience and patriotism ought to get behind the officers of the law to the extent of putting on a campaign throughout Oklahoma for a law that would make it a penitentiary offense not only to flog but to conspire to flog, and thereby make the lives and liberty and bodies of the people of Oklahoma safe from unlawful invasion, and had just the sort of conversation I have outlined to you."

Campaign Planned.

Asked what sort of a campaign was planned, Dr. Evans said it was to be a speaking campaign in favor of an anti-flogging law and to build up a sentiment for law enforcement and obedience to the law. The imperial wizard said that no particular propaganda was issued against Gov. Walton, the only plan being for a campaign to stop lawlessness.

"Then propaganda was issued against Gov. Walton?"

"Not particularly, no sir."

"In carrying out your plans?"

"No sir, the idea was the governor had said this kind of thing was happening and the idea was to stop any such thing happening in Oklahoma. No more than to say that because of the fact that we are perfectly willing to get behind the law officers at Macon and aid them in the flogging situation that we are starting a fight on the governor of Georgia. We are supporting the officers of the law wherever they are in proper performance of their legal duties."

"Well, to what extent did the plan go with reference to the Oklahoma fight, the Oklahoma situation?"

"I couldn't tell you, sir."

"They did send money?"

"They spent some money in Oklahoma, yes sir."

"They have spent a large sum of money in Oklahoma since that July meeting?"

Don't Know How Much.

"I would say they had spent a good deal, yes. I don't know how much."

"How much spent or sent there to be used in the Oklahoma situation."

"I couldn't tell you. As money has been needed in Oklahoma it has been furnished them, I should say."

"How many other campaigns in different states has the executive committee authorized the expenditure of money?"

Ku Klux Klan — 1923. II.

General.

"I don't know how many states. Whenever it has been necessary to take care of the interests of the klan or klansmen I have tried to do so. Now; there are forty-odd states in this union and wherever the cause for which we serve, and the institution we [illegible] to need [illegible] we help them.

"There are no political campaigns with us. We don't get behind men in politics. We [illegible] principles; we get behind principles."

Dr. Evans said E. Y. Clarke got four-fifths of the money turned into the propagation fund during the time he was in charge of that department and turned one-fifth into the klan.

Denies He "Split Fees."

Dr. Evans denied that he ever had handled the state of Illinois in which plaintiffs have charged in an affidavit introduced Monday that he had split fees with B. G. Christy, grand dragon of that state. "I never split anything with Mr. Christy," he said.

"Has the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, since you have been imperial wizard, participated in or furnished any money to any political campaign anywhere that you know of," he was asked.

"No sir," was the reply.

He was questioned again about the Asheville meeting at which the Oklahoma situation was discussed and declared that he would not make or allow to be made any appropriation for any political campaign and at his request he stated his reason why he believed it was necessary for the klan to take a stand for an anti-flogging law in Oklahoma.

Blames Klan's Enemies.

"The enemies of the Ku Klux Klan," he said, "have steadily tried to convict the klan in the mind of the nation of being a lawless, law-breaking, whipping, tar and feathering piece of machinery. When, as a matter of fact, under solemn oath, on the contrary we have sworn to support the law on all occasions. When I saw the statement of the Oklahoma situation to the effect there had been 2,000 whippings out there, I thought and believed if they had had any such condition as that, that an institution, every member of which was sworn to uphold the officers of the law in the proper performance of their duty, ought to take a stand for law and against whippings anywhere at any time."

He then said that the executive committee at the Asheville meeting agreed to put on a campaign of education in Oklahoma with lecturers acquainted with the state and to bring about peace and harmony in the state. The money spent in Oklahoma, he declared, was spent for this purpose only.

"Klan Blackballed Walton."

"Was Governor Walton a Ku Klux?" he was asked.

"Well, no, not exactly." Governor Walton applied and was obligated partially, not fully."

Mr. Ethridge: "Do you know that of your own knowledge."

"I will have to give it the way it was told me by an agent of the Ku Klux Klan," was the reply. "He was obligated by an agent of the klan; they sent in his fees and the klansmen where he lived didn't want him, didn't believe in him; and so he was not taken into the klavern and has always been in the attitude of having been obligated but not affiliated."

Mr. Coburn then took up the question.

"Doctor, in taking in a klansman where the klan is not chartered, they are taken in by kleagles merely by obligation and dedication, isn't that true?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then they are klansmen when they are obligated?"

"Well, under that—what I would say I would hold that this man Walton if he proved the fact that he had been obligated, since he denies it—I would hold that he was a klansman at large until such time as he had been properly gotten out of the order."

"Klansman at Large."

"Then, having taken the obligation, Governor Walton was a klansman at large, isn't that true?"

"Yes, sir. Now that is predicated upon his having this obligation. Governor Walton denies it, Mr. Coburn, other men affirm it and the record will prove their affirmation. There have been some written records published about it, I don't know of my own personal knowledge because I don't know Jack Walton, but I will say this much, that if he is a klansman, he was taken in the back door and I think, if he is a klansman, he ought to be removed before the eyes and the scrutiny of the American public through their front door."

"Then if he was taken in the back door, the kleagle who took him in was not attending to his business, isn't that right?"

"I don't approve of his selection of material, but that is not an answer to the question."

Questioned About Money.

Dr. Evans was again asked by his attorney about the connections of E. Y. Clarke and the amount of money in the klan treasury when a suit was filed by William J. Simmons, emperor, last April. He replied that there was about $337,000, but did not have the exact record before him. When the present suit was filed, he said, there was about $400,000 and at the time the deposition was taken about $700,000.

Dr. Evans said that he saw a copy of a resolution passed by klansmen in Texas instructing members to refrain from contact with Atlanta headquarters, but the resolution never reached him. He said he knew of only one klan that had passed a resolution about withdrawing and withholding money from headquarters and that this was the San Antonio klan, but that it rescinded the resolution within 30 days.

He was asked about a similar resolution said to have been passed by the Oklahoma klans at Tulsa, but said he never had seen any such resolution.

After being questioned about the bank accounts and various safe deposit boxes he was asked: "Doctor, you drew out $16,000 in $1,000 bills through the federal reserve bank when you went out to see about some paper publication, Mayfield's Weekly, didn't you?"

"No sir. I never paid Mayfield's Weekly a dollar in the world for any paper or character of work."

"But the klan did?"

"No sir."

"The klan ordered how many copies of Mayfield's paper?"

"I don't think we ever bought a copy up to now in the history of the klan. I have no knowledge of any payment of any kind having been made to Mayfield's Weekly by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

"Did you take any money out there to them?"

"No sir, I know I carried no money to them."

Anent Mer Rouge.

Assertion that J. J. Bracewell, a Ku Klux Klan investigator, had told him when he went to Bastrop, La., to investigate the disappearance of two men that "there was no use for him to go to Mer Rouge; that the two bodies found in the lake had been tied or 'spread eagled' on logging cartwheels and rolled down the hill and that was what crushed the heads off the two bodies," was made in a deposition by S. N. Littlejohn.

Littlejohn said that he was employed at the time as an investigator for the Ku Klux Klan. He was sent to Bastrop about January 12 to make investigations. There he met Bracewell to whom, he said, other investigators seemed to look for advice and instructions. It was at this time, he said, that Bracewell advised him it would not be necessary for him to go to Mer Rouge. Littlejohn said that he operated at Bastrop under the name of George K. Lawrence.

Given Instructions.

Littlejohn said that Captain Skipwith at Mer Rouge urged Imperial Wizard Evans to keep him (Littlejohn) on the job there. Littlejohn said that he was detailed to work under the direction of Captain Skipwith and that all other investigators were sent away and that his instructions were "to work with the end in view that there might be no indictment."

He said that when the grand jury failed to return an indictment he sent a telegram to T. J. McKinnon. He said that his instructions from McKinnon were to "keep Captain Skipworth quiet so as not to crowd the issue." He said McKinnon was afraid the captain would talk too much.

Three lawyers named Todd, Newton and Sandle, he said, were employed by the Ku Klux Klan directly from the imperial palace. Each received $500 and later were paid $250 each, all of the money being sent through Judge Barnett, of Shreveport, La. He said that Judge Barnett was chief counsel in the Mer Rouge matter and was paid a very large fee; "to the best of deponent's knowledge and belief, this fee was $5,000."

Littlejohn said his salary was $50 a week and expenses and that his expenses would average $75 a week. He said that in addition to himself eight other men, all employees of the imperial palace, were sent to Bastrop to work on the case. These were M. Hamilton, of Houston, Texas; J. A. Bracewell, Lloyd Ingle, H. L. Talinferro and C. C. McIlwain, all from Atlanta; M. Murray, of Shreveport, and O. D. Jackson and M. Mann, of New Orleans.

Littlejohn also said that a "strong arm squad or wrecking crew" had been formed and organized for work around Bastrop and Mer Rouge. He said that these men were picked from other districts, none of them being located around Bastrop or Mer Rouge, so that their identity might be concealed.

Evans Gives Orders.

"Deponent further said," the affidavit continued, "that he was called to Atlanta by McKinnon in March and that during his conference at the imperial palace with the said T. J. McKinnon it was mentioned that C. R. Upchurch and Harry Terrell were at Mer Rouge at that time securing affidavits in connection with the said Mer Rouge case which was not known to this deponent at that time but that the said McKinnon did then and there speak to this deponent:

"'You have got your machine down there; use it and get them out of the way.' This deponent understood this language to mean that the strong arm squad or wrecking crew was to pump up Upchurch and Terrell."

Littlejohn said that H. W. Evans gave him specific instructions to "beat up" Harry Terrell and to charge whatever his fine was on his expense account.

Littlejohn also said that when Dr. C. M. McKoin was charged with being implicated in the Mer Rouge affairs that J. A. Bracewell was sent to Baltimore to handle Dr. McKoin's fight against extradition from Maryland. He said that Bracewell, using the alias Baker, went to the offices of Attorneys Ecke and Keck and said to them, "we have a man in jail here and I have $10,000 dollars and want to get him out." The attorneys made a charge of $3,000 for their services but Bracewell did not pay this sum at that time and Littlejohn was sent to Baltimore to close the deal. He paid the attorney $750, he said. All transactions were in cash.

Reading of a long deposition in which N. N. Furney, cashier of the klan, explained certain accounts and checks was in progress when court adjourned at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon until 9:30 o'clock this morning.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED IN CLARKE'S STATEMENT.

Declaring his belief that "machinery of the United States government was being used by certain of its officials in a national conspiracy to wreck him physically and financially," Edward Young Clarke, imperial giant and former imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Tuesday made public communications to William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the klan, in which he declined leadership of the Simmons' forces of the klan.

Simultaneous with the letter of Emperor Simmons, Clarke dispatched a letter to Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in which he declined to call together the committee of national program of the klan and expressed the hope that factional differences in the klan might be settled.

The letter to Emperor Simmons explained that Clarke found it necessary to lay aside everything else to "defend himself and to vindicate his good name before the people of the nation" because of the "national conspiracy to wreck him mentally and physically."

Mr. Clarke's statement follows:

Within the past two weeks I have uncovered some of the most amazing and startling facts connected with the many law suits and various fights through the press that have been made on me and I find that there is really a national conspiracy to wreck me mentally, physically and financially. It shall not be done if I can prevent it. My information leads me to believe that even the machinery of the United States government through certain of its agents is being used to carry forward the conspiracy against me, and the most villainous and slanderous circulars are being circulated all over the nation, and women without honor and without character are being marshalled to file suits against me and to slander me in every way possible. The time has come when patience ceases to be a virtue and if I am not to be utterly crushed I must fight back and give to the world what I believe will be shown to be one of the most damnable and despicable attempts to crush an American citizen ever perpetrated in the history of the nation. I expect within the next few days to make some startling disclosures and as the various court cases against me come to trial, through witness and by affidavits, I intend to open the eyes of the public and my friends to things that it is hardly possible to believe could be done against any man. I call upon my friends in all parts of the nation to assist me in vindicating myself and my good name and in preventing enemies and crooks from accomplishing their fiendish purpose of thoroughly discrediting me and wrecking me physically and financially.

Jackson Confirms Charge.

New Orleans October 30.—O. D. Jackson, federal prohibition enforcement director for Louisiana, today admitted he had been employed by the Ku Klux Klan early this year to investigate the so-called Mer Rouge case, as stated in a deposition read today in Atlanta in the suit of F. M. Rittenhouse and others for a receivership for the klan. Jackson at that time operated a detective agency here.

M. Mann, also of New Orleans, named in the deposition as having participated in the investigation for the klan, was one of Jackson's employees.

Parker Raps Klan.

Baton Rouge, La., October 30.—"The Associated Press wires from Atlanta only confirm information we had as to the presence of a large number of klan investigators doing their utmost to balk justice," Governor John M. Parker said today in commenting on the deposition of S. N. Littlejohn offered in Atlanta in connection with the Rittenhouse receivership suit against the Ku Klux Klan. "And this was from an organization which has the audacity to claim itself 100 per cent American and to insist on the enforcement of the law. Further comment is unnecessary."

KLAN TO BE FACTOR IN POLITICAL FIELD

Ku Klux Will Likely Figure Largely in Local Elections, on One Side Here, the Other Elsewhere, for Congressman or Senator, but Will Hardly Intervene as a Body in National Campaign—Will Possibly Be Mentioned in One Platform or the Other.

By Mark Sullivan.

Washington, Oct. 20.—One of the influences that will affect the elections next year is the Ku Klux Klan. It is not necessary to infer that the klan as a nationwide organization can or will try to throw its influence in favor of one of the presidential candidates as against the other. There is practically no probability that the personalities of the two candidates will be such as to give occasion to this kind of prejudiced discrimination. It is conceivable that the platform of one party or the other may contain a plank either denouncing the Ku Klux Klan specifically or denouncing the kind of thing it stands for. Such a plank in either platform might lead to the lining up of the adherents of the klan one way and those who disapprove the klan the other way. But it is not necessary to anticipate this sort of thing. Quite aside from anything like this, the klan will undoubtedly figure largely, sometimes on the Republican side and sometimes on the Democratic side, in local elections for congressman and senator. Some of the states in which the klan is particularly powerful are doubtful ones. Indiana, for example.

In Indiana last year the klan was partly responsible for defeating one of the best men who ran for the senate in any state that year, namely Albert J. Beveridge. It was not that the klan disapproved of Beveridge. Nothing in Beveridge's record or associations incurred their prejudice. They had nothing against him. If the election had been held over again a month later the klan might as readily have voted in favor of Beveridge. What the klan happened to do was a haphazard fluke. But, combined with other things, it was just enough to defeat Beveridge.

The circumstances were these: Just a few days before the election Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas, an old Progressive party associate of Beveridge, came into Indiana to deliver some speeches in Beveridge's behalf. It happened that only a little while before, Allen, as governor of Kansas, had denounced the klan, using the vigorous language of which he is capable, in the same manner in which many other governors and other public men have expressed their disapproval of the menace to some fundamental American conceptions of government involved in the klan's activity. It just happened also that the particular Indiana towns where Governor Allen was booked for his speeches were towns in which the klan had recently organized and had secured considerable bodies of adherents. In these Indiana speeches Governor Allen again denounced the klan, taking it as one of his topics, just as he took up other public matters then current.

The immediate reaction of the klan members in these communities was to take the first opportunity to show their resentment. As often happens when action is determined by a temporary emotion the expression of resentment was erratic. They wanted to vent their resentment against Allen's speech on somebody and they took it out vicariously on Beveridge.

It was all quite without relevance to Beveridge or any issue with which Beveridge was associated. But the thing happened so close to the election that it was impossible to overcome its effect.

In the election next year there will undoubtedly be cases like this and other cases where—cases in which the klan will deliberately and avowedly vote as a body against some candidates and in favor of others.

All this is as unfortunate as possible. The activity of the klan, its very existence—and, let us not omit to add, the things, some real and some imagined, which give rise to those prejudices on which the klan thrives—all this constitutes one of the least happy aspects of present-day American life. Where the situation raised by the existence and activity of the klan is clear, where it is a simple issue between the klan and the fundamental organization of our democracy, there is no duty on the part of the conscientious citizen except to put his voice and his vote on the anti-klan side.

And yet, if you find any good man who is a member of the klan or an advocate of it or an apologist for it—and in some communities you can find good men who either are members of the klan or have sympathy for some of its principles—if you talk to such a man and if you practice toward him the spirit of toleration which we all demand he shall practice toward the rest of us, you will be led to feel that it would be useful to make an experiment in frankness and clarification.

It is clearly wise to accord to such men the spirit of tolerance we demand from them. If they are in any degree intolerant the best antidote and disinfectant for intolerance is tolerance. Clearly the most of the newspapers and magazines, as well as most others which have discussed the klan at all, have gone at it rather too hammer-and-tongs. The fact that the klan has gone on and grown is some proof of that. It is proof also, or at least it suggests, that there may be something vital and appealing somewhere in an institution which has been able to survive such severe onslaughts as well as such obviously detestable conditions as there have been in some parts of its own organization.

If you talk to a man who tends to be sympathetic with the klan, or at least who is moved to refrain from outright denunciation of it, he will tell you that, stated broadly, one of its main purposes is to maintain American traditions against alien influences—alien influences in business, in art, in literature, on the stage and in the movies, in religion, in politics and in the schools. The Southern or Western small town sympathizer with the klan has got the idea—in which he has not the information to distinguish among the truth, the half truth and the no truth—that the American stage is almost wholly inspired, managed and dominated from New York, and that New York is not an American city and does not reflect American ideals or traditions. He has the same idea about New York furnishing the models and leadership of the country in the world of the movies, of art, of fiction writing and fiction publishing, the world of the newspapers and magazines, the world of finance and business.

In support of this sort of loose thesis the klan sympathizer will quote to you a recent warning uttered by Secretary of Labor Davis to the effect that "American ideals and institutions threaten to be submerged beneath a tidal wave of Old World immigrants, bringing Old World ideas." To the persons who read this utterance from Secretary Davis it sounds pretty convincing. Especially does it sound convincing to people in smaller towns and in cities in the South and West, where the population is prevailingly native American in greater proporation than it is in the large cities of the East. It is in these native American communities that the klan has had its greatest growth, and the chief reason for that growth is the sense of alarm about American ideals and institutions which is voiced by Secretary Davis. To the man on the country road this expression of sentiment from Secretary Davis carries conviction. He knows that Secretary Davis is the official in charge of immigration and is therefore in the best position to have the greatest quantity and the most accurate kind of information about the aliens who are coming into America and the effect they threaten to have on American life. Further than this, he knows that Secretary Davis himself an immigrant, having come as a boy from Wales, and is therefore presumably the less susceptible to be moved by a sense of danger or to give expression to a sense of danger unless he sees it clearly and feels it strongly. (Perhaps it should be added that neither the Ku Klux Klan specifically nor the anti-immigration sentiment generally has in mind the sort of immigrant Secretary Davis was. The prejudice against immigration and the alarm about alien influence on America are not directed against the older immigration that came from England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Scandinavia or even from Germany. If all our recent immigration had been coming from these countries we would not now have any Ku Klux Klan in the form in which it exists nor any considerable anti-immigration sentiment. Everybody familiar with the present state of feeling in America who can be frank with himself and with others knows that our present anti-alien sentiment is directed against other races who come from Eastern and Southeastern Europe and who in recent years have come enormously to exceed the older immigration with which we were familiar in the past and which we have assimilated so successfully that we hardly ever distinguish between it and the native American stock.)

The man with whom you talk, the man who has come to a mood in which he refuses to denounce the Ku Klux Klan unreservedly, if he is a man of intelligence, of ideas and large information will throw a good deal of light on that oddly assorted body of prejudices, suspicions and half truths which animates many who join the klan. He will tell you among other things that the sentiment which sets up the klan as an irregular vehicle for the extra legal, and sometimes dangerously illegal, expression of opinion may lie in the feeling that the political parties, the newspapers, the courts, the legislatures and other institutions which constitute the regularly accepted vehicles of American public opinion sometimes give a sense of failing to function adequately to bodies of citizens considerable enough to make up the Ku Klux Klan and even to others who would never join that kind of organization, but have emotions not dissimilar about some things that go on in America.

When that Kabotschnick family in Philadelphia, having a wholly legitimate desire to shorten their name to a form easier for Americans to understand and spell, honored the Cabot family of Boston by asking the court recently to let them assume that ancient Boston name it was, as reported in the newspapers at the time, an observable and possibly not negligibly significant phenomenon of present American life that the court dismissed the objection of the Cabots (or rather the objections of the Society of Sons of the Revolution, for apparently it was this old American institution, and not merely the Cabot family, which set up the objections in court). Also it was observed, that the reaction of the newspapers in the Eastern cities took the form of humorous jibing at the Cabot family. One wondered, in the first place, whether the Kabotschnicks might not have been at one and the same time more considerate of the rights of others and more conscious of self respect in themselves if they had spelled it with a "K." More deeply than this, one wonders what may have been the reflection of a good many Americans on the decision of the court, and especially on the attitude of the newspapers—whether these reflections may have included the thought that perhaps the newspapers and other institutions of the larger Eastern cities reflect the fact that those cities are prevailingly alien more truly than they express pride in American traditions. Since the action of the court presumably was determined by the law—or more accurately possibly by the absence of a law covering the situation—perhaps the kind of man who sees some justification for the klan reflected that some law-making bodies, out of deference to the presence of bodies of alien voters, fail to pass precisely those laws which the members of the klan think ought to be passed. From many angles this episode, though small in itself, is illustrative. I suspect that the majority of native Americans have almost as much pride in these old American names, long and honorably prominent in our country's history, and in the American traditions with which they are identified, as do the bearers of the names themselves.

One may be permitted to guess that this Kabotschnick episode did not help much toward suppressing the Ku Klux Klan. Indeed, any one familiar with the resourcefulness and ingenuity of salesmen might assume that those agents who sell memberships in the klan at so many dollars commission per membership pasted those clippings in their prospectuses as, to use the vernacular of salesmanship, "a fine selling point," and counted it a good day.

If some of the principles and many of the practices of the klan were not so clearly of a sort that they can not be countenanced with safety to democracy and the orderly process of law—if it were not for that, one might listen with some patience to the klan sympathizer who argues that a man who wishes to impress his ideas on the community has as much right to organize a group who believe with him as any other citizen has to start a newspaper or to organize a good government league or to make himself head of the local precinct Republican committee.

It is quite true that there is always a field beyond the field or statute law, a field of common custom and commonly held beliefs, in which there is recognized propriety in organizing for political action or otherwise for the informal expression of widely held standards about the conduct of men in their relation to others, for the maintenance of traditions, for a kind of informal censorship or reproval of any sort of conduct that is repugnant to the community generally.

But when the klan sympathizer argues this way the obvious answer lies in two aspects of the klan which are not common to other organizations that aim to impress themselves on the community. One is the secrecy; the other is the wearing of the hood, the covering of the face. As to the latter, the honest klan member tries to explain that it is immaterial, that it was one of the devices of the old klan of 50 years ago in the South to impress the ignorant or superstitious negro, and that this feature of the ritual just happened to be taken over with the rest by the organizers of the present klan. But the fact is, the wearing of the hood is material in practically all those present local activities of the new klans which are illegal and not to be condoned. It is the wearing of the hood that helps individuals and local klans to commit crimes with the minimum danger of detection. It is

DR. RIDLEY TO SPEAK FOR KLAN IN FLORIDA

Will Make Address on the "Aims and Purposes" of Organization.

Atlanta Constitution

Datona, Fla., January 18.—A paid advertisement in a newspaper here that Dr. C. A. Ridley, of Atlanta, would deliver his lecture on the "aims and purposes" of the Ku Klux Klan here soon and that "the day of battle is just ahead," and the removal of Police Chief Joe Osborne from office after he had shot an anti-klan demonstrator were the outstanding developments today in the klan and anti-klan situation.

Atlanta Journal 1-19-23

Osborne, it was said, shot Charles Pent when he declared Pent resisted arrest after the latter's companion disrobed and unmasked two klansmen, who, with about 200 others, were parading through the streets Tuesday night. Osborne was beaten by Pent's sympathizers subsequently.

1-19-23

Last night the directors of the auditorium at Daytona Beach refused to allow a meeting of klansmen there after Mayor Guy C. Bailey had requested that action on the ground that trouble might result. Notices previously had been posted on the auditorium by anti-klansmen warning women and children to remain away from the meeting.

In his advertisement, Dr. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist church at Atlanta, said that despite the fact his proposed lecture at Daytona Beach last night was "postponed indefinitely" by the management of the hall, he would speak there "at an early date."

Dr. Ridley laid the enforced postponement of last night's meeting to the doors of "bootleggers and politicians" in the advertisement, stating that "the hour of their doom will strike. The Ku Klux Klan was here yesterday, is here today and will be here forever. These are only skirmish hours—the day of battle is just ahead."

Chaplain at Chestnut Hill Home Tells How Klansmen Bound, Gagged, Tarred and Feathered Him.

SPECIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE NAMED TO PROBE ATTACK

THE REV. PHILIP S. IRWIN

A clergyman who was flogged and tarred and feathered by the Ku Klux Klan at Miami, Florida, because he preached to colored persons, has found refuge in Philadelphia.

He is the Rev. Philip Sydney Irwin, a British subject, now chaplain of the Home for Consumptives at Chestnut Hill under the direction of the City Mission of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Mr. Irwin today told of his encounter with the Klansmen in which he stood by his ideals despite his torture. A special committee of Congress has been appointed to take up Mr. Irwin's case.

The attack occurred in July, 1921, and at that time it was brought up in the House of Commons in London. In answer to a question in the House at that time, Cecil Harmsworth, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said:

"I am confident the United States authorities will take such steps as may be necessary to see justice is done without representations from His Majesty's Government."

The committee of Congress has not as yet made a report.

"On returning from St. Agnes' Church, in Miami, after the evening service July 17, in my car," said Mr. Irwin, "I was stopped on the road leading to my garage by a touring car drawn across the entrance. The hood of the car was up, and there seemed to be some engine trouble. Another car, with men in it, was drawn up in front of a house immediately behind the first car.

"One of the men asked for a monkey wrench. 'I may be able to help you,' I said, and went over to their machine and stooped over the engine to see what was the matter.

"They then pinned me by my arms, put a gag in my mouth, blindfolded me, put handcuffs on me and threw me into the car. As well as I can judge, they drove for about half an hour. While driving through the city they sang songs, as though, I supose, to suggest they were joy-riding.

"When a little way out of the city they loosened up the gag a little and commenced to ask questions.

"'Are you a member of the Overseas Club?' they asked.

"'No,' I answered.

"'You are —— liar! We saw your name in a pamplet.'

"'You are a friend of Higgs? (a colored Methodist minister in Key West and a British subject, whom they had maltreated and sent out of the country a week before).'

"'No.'

"'You are a friend of Garvey, and are going to bring him here to preach to the niggers and members of the United Negro Improvement Association?'

"'No.'

"'Well, you are a —— liar.' Anyway, you are a white man preaching to niggers?'

"'Yes.'

"'Well, you have got to go back to Nassau in forty-eight hours. Will you go?'

"'No. I am a British subject, and my home is in Ireland.'

"'No matter where your home is: you have got to get out of this place in forty-eight hours. Will you go?' they again demanded.

"'No. I am under orders from my superiors in Orlando and New York,' I replied.

"'We don't care whose orders you are under. You've got to get out of this in forty-eight hours or we'll hang you, and all the kings in England or Ireland can't save you. Will you go?'

"'No.'

"By this time they had reached their destination and they took me from the car and after some whispered conversation they again asked me whether I would go. I said I had given them my answer and there was no other.

"They then proceeded to strip me, they took the handcuffs off and the gag from my mouth, but still kept me blindfolded, and threw me on the ground, and proceeded to flog me with a heavy strap. I think from time to time they would ask me whether I would go. I merely shook my head. Then they would lay on me again and curse me for an obstinate pig.

"After a while they thought I had fainted; then they held up their castigation and consulted together in whispers. After that they lifted me up and applied a coat of tar-coal oil and feathers, wrapped me up tight in some sacking and suggested they had a good mind to hang me. Again they demanded whether I would go.

"I shook my head, and said they could only hang me once. Again they cursed me, and again they threw me in the bottom of the car and covered me up and drove away. The other car went ahead as a scout car, and from time to time would hold back, I suppose until some traffic had passed.

"I did not know in the least where we were. They slowed down a little and drove close to the sidewalk, opened the door and shoved me out. I rolled once or twice to loosen up the bags around me, and then got the bandages off my eyes. I then saw a city policeman coming towards me. He recognized me, and asked what had happened. Then we proceeded to a police station, where they took all the particulars I could give them.

"I asked for some gasoline to remove the tar and feathers, but they said they had none, but that one of the men would drive me back home. He did so, and I asked him to drive me to the back entrance.

"They had asked me at the police station if I could identify any of the men in the party. I said I could not. Or if I had any evidence and I said 'No.' When the policeman put me down I remembered the wrench. It was of unusual make. I told the policeman it might help to give us a clue if it was found. What was my surprise to see in the morning papers mention of the wrench!

"I went upstairs to wake my daughter, Kathleen, and asked if she had any gasoline or kerosene in the house. She had not. What her thoughts and feelings must have been to be waked up to see her father in such a condition I cannot say.

"I went down and drew two quarts of gasoline from my car and proceeded to get off the coat of tar and feathers. After that, a good bath, in the midst of which the Sheriff and his deputy were waiting up and wished to get all particulars and any evidence I could give them which to proceed.

"I was summoned before the Grand Jury later. They had been charged by foremen to inquire into the cases of the charges, which some had made against me, of teaching or advising intermarriage and social equality between the races.

"The Grand Jury seemed to give most of their time to sifting evidence of the spurious charges, and very little to an attempt to trace the instigators or perpetrators of the crime. The Grand Jury found no evidence to substantiate the allegations made against me.

"On July 19 I was waiting in the courtroom with Bishop Mann. Judge Branning saw me there and came over to me. He said he was just about to send me a message and asked me to come into his office. I went with him and there I found A. H. Hubbard, the British Vice Counsel and 'Jack' Cleary, commander of the Leeds Post of the American Legion.

"Apparently, on the representation of Mr. Cleary, the Judge had sent for the British Vice Consul. The Judge told me he had asked the British Vice Consul to take me under arrest for protection at the British Consulate, for, as was represented to him by Mr. Cleary, the gang which attacked me were going to 'get me' that night and lynch me.

"I thanked the Judge and informed him the Sheriff had kindly offered me a lodging in the county jail. Mr. Cleary thought the best thing to do was for me to leave the city on the 4.40 train that afternoon. I would not give my consent. I said the Bishop and the Mayor were discussing the subject in another room.

"We went over and joined them. Mr. Cleary made the statement that secret service men of the Legion had found the gang were determined to get me and that the best thing to do was for me to decide to leave.

"For the sake of Miami, and for the sake of respect for law and order, I stated to consent. It seemed such a terrible thing, and would bring such reproach on the city, to say that an inoffensive resident and worker in the city could not be protected from a cowardly set of lawless ruffians.

"'Mr. Mayor,' I said, 'I am sorry for you, that you have been called to rule over a city which cannot protect a harmless resident against a lawless mob.'

"'I can and will protect you,' he replied. 'I shall set an ample armed guard around your house.'

"Mr. Cleary interposed and said if such a thing took place probably the infuriated gang would set fire to St. Agnes' church and shoot up the colored town, and there would be a riot with the loss of many innocent lives.

"The Bishop said he could not ask me to stay in the face of such conditions.

"What could I do? I could not sacrifice the lives, or even risk it, of those committed to my charge, and amongst whom I had loved to work. And yet to confess that mob law was supreme in Miami. Well, that was the burden for the constituted authority to bear. I said I would go by the 4.40 train and with two hours notice, my daughter and I packed a few things and left Miami."

Mr. Erwin was asked today whether the men who kidnaped him were members of the Ku Klux Klan. "Undoubtably they were, or at any rate the outrage was the result of their teaching," he said.

"The man who approached me did not wear the garb of the Klan. It was night but I had no reason to be suspicious or to seek to identify anyone. When I leaned over to examine the motor the men bound me and blind folded me so it is impossible for me to say whether the men wore the white gowns and masks."

PREVENTS KLAN RALLY

Montgomery Adv. 1-22-23

Daytona Police Chief Interferes With Leader's Plans

(Associated Press)

DAYTONA, FLA., Jan. 21.—Police today prevented a Ku Klux Klan rally in the Daytona baseball park by posting notices at the entrance of the park, forbidding the meeting and stationing officers there to prevent a gathering.

Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Atlanta, was scheduled to speak at the rally on "un-Americanism."

Montgomery Advertiser 1-22-23

Last Wednesday night Dr. Ridley was prevented from speaking at the Daytona Beach Auditorium when the directors of the auditorium declined to allow the meeting following a request by the mayor, who stated that he feared trouble would ensue. Notices had been posted on the doors, warning women and children not to attend the klan meeting and it was reported that anti-klansmen were organizing to prevent the rally.

NEGRO VOTERS INTIMIDATED

Ku Klux Klan of Miami Forbid Them Voting

Miami, Fla., April 9—With a glowing heading "Beware" hundreds of circulars have been distributed in the colored section of the city warning the colored voters to keep away from the polls on election day. As usual such threats have affected a very few weaklings, but the men as a whole feel that it is not a crime to vote and that they will do so for those principles that they feel will be of best interest to the community.

Like everything else of a similar nature, the circulars have caused a mild sensation here, and a deal of stir. With the usual skull and cross bones attached, the circular reads:

BEWARE!

Negro Citizens, as long as you keep your place, we will protect you.

BUT

BEWARE! THE KU KLUX KLAN IS ALIVE AGAIN and EVERY NEGRO who approaches a polling place next Tuesday will be

A MARKED MAN

This is a white man's country, boys, so save your own life next Tuesday

DR. ELMER BEATEN; ORDERED TO LEAVE

Victim of Kidnaping in Miami Reported to Be Suffering From Concussion of the Brain.

Miami, Fla., April 9.—Investigation into the kidnaping last night of Dr. F. Eugene Elmer by three men who carried him away in an automobile and severely beat him, was begun today by Sheriff Louis A. Allen. The sheriff visited the physician in his bed at his home, but said he found him in such condition that he could answer no questions.

According to Sheriff Allen, Dr. Elmer was badly whipped and was covered with abrasions. Huge welts gave evidence that clubs had been wielded on him. An eight-inch wound in the chest inflicted last Tuesday by A. A. Daugherty, the physician's brother-in-law, was reopened during the attack, and being an inch and a half deep is causing him considerable pain, an attending physician stated. Daughtrey, when arrested, told the police that Elmer had cruelly mistreated his wife, who is suing for divorce.

Dr. Elmer was unconscious at periods all during the day and it was said this morning he had suffered concussion of the brain. His physician has not yet been able to determine this however.

The kidnaping of Dr. Elmer occurred about 8 o'clock last night, while he was visiting friends. The three men drove up to the house and calling him outside, on the pretext of questioning him about a stolen automobile, handcuffed him and whisked him away in their own car. The physician returned to the city about 1 o'clock this morning on a truck driven by a negro.

His only statement was when he entered his house after the affair, he was heard to say, "they told me to leave town by Monday night, and not to fight divorce proceedings of my wife."

Florida Voters Targets of Klan Death Threats

Miami, Fla., April 13.—Thousands of posters bearing the Ku Klux Klan name and a skull and cross-bones were circulated here prior to Tuesday's election, warning Race voters not to go to the polls.

The posters read: "Beware! Negro citizens, as long as you keep your place we will protect you, but beware! The Ku Klux Klan is again alive and every Negro who approaches a polling place next Tuesday will be a marked man. This is a white man's country, boys, so save your own life next Tuesday.—Ku Klux Klan, Miami chapter.

"P. S.—Don't think for a minute that we don't know you. A white man will be at every polling place with his book. Don't get in that book!"

Florida has been the scene of several election riots in the last few years. The south maintains that it deprives the Race of the vote by a system of tests which apply to both races alike. The above shows that that is not true. The Ku Klux Klan declares it upholds the constitution of the United States. The above also shows the Klan does not uphold the law.

Referring to the Ku Klux circulars distributed in the colored section of Miami, Fla., warning the Negro voters to keep away from the polls at the municipal election, the Savannah Tribune said:

A similar attempt was made here some months ago to intimidate our voters. But instead of keeping them from the polls, it only stimulated interest and they voted in larger numbers than ever before. This should have been the answer of the colored voters of Miami. It is no crime to be a registered voter, nor is it a crime to cast a ballot. The ballot is a God-given right approved by the laws and should not be denied any class of citizens, nor should any one be intimidated from exercising this franchise. Despite dangers and threats we should the more be determined to qualify ourselves and cast a ballot when necessary.

This is the spirit of resistance to oppression and determination to forge ahead that makes the Negro a progressive race. Such a race, animated by such a spirit, cannot be kept down indefinitely.

Washington, Aug. 9.—President Coolidge may go to Massachusetts to make the early important decisions before him, where he can obtain seclusion away from the hordes pressing upon hsi time and attention here.

The President has been urged to go next week to the summer home of Frank W. Stearns at Swampscott, and is givng the suggestion consideration, although at present a "Massachusetts White House" is only a possibility and he may find himself unable to get away, much as he would like to go.

Florida Klans Parade In Tribute To Pres. Harding

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 15.—Ku Klux Klansmen took advantage of what they announced as a tribute to President Harding last Monday by parading through the city. About 200 were crowded into a string of autos.

Kidnaped From Sheriff, Flogged, Told to Leave State, Davis Comes Back

Eau Gallie, Fla., August 20.—G. A. Davis, who was removed from the jail here last night after a deputy sheriff had been overpowered and his keys taken from him, walked into Eau Gallie today.

Davis had been flogged and warned to leave the state, he said. Then he was forced to walk back four miles on a shell road barefoot, he said. He was placed in jail and at a preliminary hearing this afternoon was held for the grand jury on $150 bond on charges of disorderly conduct and non-support.

MINISTER PREACHHES TO COLORED CONGREGATION AND LOSES HAIR

Jacksonville, Fla.—Rev. Geo. W. ordained minister for 48 years, was Messeger, who says he has been an seized in his study Sunday night by three men, one of whom cut off his hair and beard with a pair of scissors while the other two held him, according to a report made public by the police.

The trio, the preacher is quoted as saying, visited him about noon, told him he had been preached to colored people, and that they were going to give him a "little treatment." He started to run, but was caught, forced into a chair and held there until his hair and beard had fallen, according to the police report.

Some time ago Rev. Messenger, who is a missionary, said he appeared before a colored congregation to discuss missionary work. He stated he could identify his assailants, and would swear out warrants for their arrest.

THREE RESIDENTS OF TAMPA FLOGGED BY UNMASKED MEN

Tampa, Fla., November 1.—Unmasked men last night took at least three residents of Tampa to the outskirts, whipped them and left them wounded and bleeding to make their way back to the city, according to reports made to Chief of Police Williams today.

Leo Isaacs, restaurant proprietor, under the care of physicians as a result of the lashing he got, told newspapermen that four men seized him at the door of his cafe, carried him in an automobile to the woods about six miles east of town, where they gave him a whipping. His physicians said he had lost considerable skin and that his body was covered with welts and discolorations. Isaac said his assailants handed him a letter warning him to close up his business in ten days and not to open it under threat of death. He has been arrested many times on federal warrants charging liquor law violation, say the authorities. The written warning stated: "If the officers cannot handle you we can and will."

Enrique Rosa, head waiter of a well known Spanish cafe here, was spirited away by a band of men to the woods near Oldsmar, fifteen miles west of Tampa, where he was lashed and left to make his way home. Andrew Williams, negro restaurant proprietor, was taken to a point near Myrtle Hill cemetery, five miles north of here and beaten. Both men received warnings similar to that given Isaacs. They were signed "Que Que Que."

The seizures took place about the same time during the height of the Halloween celebration and their cries for help brought no assistance.

Stone Isaac, Missing Since June, Thought to Be in Clutch of Klansmen

10-13-23

Miami, Fla., Oct. 12.—Kidnaping and the subsequent disappearance of a reputable citizen of this city on the night of June 27 last is reported to Governor Cary Hardee of Florida in a letter sent by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, New York city, asking him to investigate.

The kidnaped man, Stone Isaac, is said to have been called for by two men representing themselves as officers of the law. He has not been heard from since his disappearance. The letter to the governor follows:

"We are informed by competent and trustworthy persons that a women who had been unsuccessful in court action against Stone Isaac maliciously spread the false report in Homestead, Fla., that Mr. Isaac was organizing a black Ku Klux Klan to kill the white people. She is also said to have reported to the police that he had 30 high-powered rifles in his home. The police on investigation found this report to be untrue. But the man was subsequently kidnaped and has not been heard of since.

"May we ask that you as governor of Florida investigate the facts set forth and take appropriate action to apprehend and prosecute the kidnapers, and possibly murderers, of Stone Isaac."

"Citizens here believe the kidnaping the work of the local Ku Klux Klan.

TAMPA, FLA. TRIBUNE

NOV 2 - 1923

STOP IT NOW!

The first mob whippings reported in Tampa occurred early Thursday morning, when the proprietor of a restaurant and refreshment place and the head waiter of a Spanish restaurant, and at least two other persons were taken to the woods by masked men in automobiles and severely lashed.

The perpetrators of these outrages—for they are outrages, and cowardly ones, regardless of what inspired them or the identity of the victims—indicated by warnings left with the men whipped that their purpose was to punish and check the sale of liquor. In this, aside from the lawless method employed, they confess that they are outlaws, seeking to inflict punishment, without trial or conviction, for alleged offenses which the courts alone have the power and right to try and punish.

If it is the purpose of these masked cowards and outlaws to whip all liquor sellers in Tampa, taking two each night, they will be kept busy until after Christmas and probably well into the New Year. But this is entirely aside from the present proposition, which is that Tampa will not stand for a reign of mob and lash outrages such as have terrorized other cities and sections." The citizenship of Tampa, regardless of the motive of the whippers or the character or guilt of the persons assaulted, will arise in its might and demand that the authorities stop this practice in its incipiency and before those who are responsible for it have gained the impression that they are immune from detection and punishment and that they can inflict their mob lawlessness upon any citizen they choose, at their own sweet will.

The Tribune seriously doubts that the perpetrators of the cowardly assaults of Thursday morning were acting for the Ku Klux Klan or any other organization. Although they were said to have worn the regalia of the Klan, that is easily imitated, and it is very probable that this whipping was done by a gang of lawless "rough necks" actuated by some personal grievances against the persons they "visited."

But, whether Klan or not Klan, whether the result of an organized plan or of personal vengeance or retaliation, MOB WHIPPINGS WILL NOT BE TOLERATED IN TAMPA.

The best citizenship of Tampa must assert itself NOW in denunciation of these practices and must DEMAND that the authorities exert their utmost efforts to detect and punish the perpetrators.

This whipping business can not continue where there is a genuine and earnest purpose on the part of the officers of the law to stop it. Only in communities where the officials have winked at it and made no serious effort to check it has it become prevalent and continuous.

The innate cowardice of those who, under cover of masks and darkness, perpetrate such outrages, will quickly surrender to a determined attitude on the part of constituted authority or indignant citizenship.

It is well for this to be clearly understood now, at the first manifestation of this mob spirit in Tampa.

AMERICANS ASK DEPORTATION OF NEGROES FROM FRANCE.

Atlanta Independent

Paris, Jan. 10.—(Crusader Service.)—A branch of the Ku Klux Klan has been organized here and its first official act was to get Americans resident here to sign a petition to the French government asking the deportation of all colored Americans now living in France. The klan, it is said, will seek to effect this through the cooperation of the American Embassy. 1-18-23

The anti-Negro feeling of white Americans here is nothing new. Neither is their resentment of the fact that the French people consider as equals, and treat accordingly, the Negro population here. But the flames of hatred have been fanned recently by the exploits of two colored men who soundly thrashed and deeply humiliated three American whites when the latter attempted to introduce jim crow laws unofficially and independent of the French government and people. Influential American whites had colored men locked up on a charge of assault but they were released when the colored men showed war service papers.

The American whites thereupon resorted to spreading the most vicious and unfounded lies about the colored men. They allege that one of the colored men, Dick Bullard, was outlawed from the French aviation service during the war for cowardice in refusing to attack German planes. Bullard is credited with having accounted for two of the whites.

PARIS, Jan. 1.—An attack on an American and his bride and a British officer by two American negroes early this morning outside of Ciro's Restaurant, is being investigated by the Paris unofficial branch of the Ku Klux Klan.

Dick Bullard, an American negro, who was put out of the French aviation service during the war on account of cowardice, struck Harry McClelland of Stockton, Cal., a lawyer, on the nose with brass knuckles because the latter resented the negro jostling his bride. Leaving his confederate to kick Mr. McClelland, whom he had knocked down, Bullard swung on the jaw of Baron Ronald Reuter, a Lieutenant in the British Army, son of Baroness Reuter, who had dined with the McClellands.

Gerald Kiley was passing as Bullard tried to kick the prostrate Mr. McClelland, and Mr. Kiley punched the negro. Ned Hillsberg of Saratoga also aided the white men, belaboring Bullard with an unbrella.

The police took the four to the station, but released Bullard and the other negro when they showed papers showing they had been aviators in the war. Mr. McClelland, not being able to speak French, was unable to have the men searched for brass knuckles.

Ku Klux in Wales Terrorize Negroes

Savannah Tribune

Cardiff, Wales, Jan. 1—The Ku Klux Klan has crossed the Atlantic ocean and has organized a klan here from among American residents and British exponents of angio saxon unity and world domination by the anglo saxon breed. 1-4-23

One of the first acts of the local klan was to whip a Chinese found "going" with a white woman. They also warned Negroes and Chinese to leave this city. Most of the Negroes here are natives of Africa and these have all organized to resist the terroristic methods of the klan. Most of the West Indians here are joining with the Africans in measures for self-defense should Ku Kluxism force this issue.

Ku Klux Klan Will Not Be Allowed in France

New York Times

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The Ku Klux Klan will not be permitted to establish a branch in France. A high official of the prefecture of police this afternoon declared that no secret society having the announced aims of the klan can be permitted to establish itself under the existing French laws.

"In France the white and the colored man are equal under the law," said this official. "The whole idea of the French republic is equality, not only of classes, but of sects and colors, too. Therefore, it is not permissible to organize any campaign against Negroes.

Documents of Klan Seized Aboard Espagne

Commercial Appeal

(By Chicago Tribune-The Commercial Appeal Foreign News Service.)

PARIS, July 27.—Documents belonging to the Ku Klux Klan were seized aboard the steamer Espagne at St. Nazaire today. Memphis, Tenn.

Port officials, who suspected a well dressed American of being implicated in a customs fraud, held his baggage for examination. A careful search revealed no evidence of any frauds on the customs but a number of lists of ritual and oaths and propaganda pamphlets for the klan. The material was removed to Paris for inspection by the department of justice, while strenuous efforts were made to find the American, who had disappeared during the search of his baggage.

The police say that the Ku Klux Klan exists secretly in France according to documents seized in the search, but that no indication was given of the extent of the organization. Warrants were immediately issued for the arrest of the American and further action will be taken to exterminate the Klan if it be proved that it is really in existence.

Ku Klux Threat Received. The first evidence that the Ku Klux Klan has invaded England was a letter signed by the klan name received by a London man of unsavory reputation. The letter, widely published in the newspapers, informed the recipient that he was "not fit to live" and threatened him with death by torture. It was stated that the American organization had declared its intention of extending its activity to British soil.

Five Men Shot When Mob Fires Into Klan Meet

Wilmington, Del., August 31.—Five men were shot and rioting continued for several hours following an initiation of 250 candidates by the Ku Klux Klan on a farm near Newcastle tonight. 9-1-23

The most seriously injured are Harry Hushbeck, 17, Newcastle, shot in the back, and William Clark, 31, Newport, shot in the neck. The rioting started at the close of the ceremony, when a cross was lighted. Disorders began with a volley of shots from a crowd of about 500 boys in an adjoining field. Klansmen pursued them, but were met by nearly 1,000 men, who rushed the Klansmen off the field and destroyed the cross. The Klansmen rallied and there was a general fight. Policemen and firemen were called out but were unable to quell the disorders.

The Klansmen were finally routed and fled the scene in automobiles. As they sped through a suburb they were pelted with stones hurled by a gang of negroes.

Republicans for Klan

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 23.—By a tie vote the Republicans in the Council succeeded in defeating a measure to bar the Ku Klux Klan from the streets of the city.

Philadelphia, Pa.

THE PARTY OF THE KU KLUX KLAN

The Advocate 8-18-23

The Republican party of Wilmington, by the votes of the six Republican members of the City Council, in defeating the ordinance prohibiting the holding of meetings and groups which tend to stir up racial and religious strife, has irrevocably tied up the party to the Ku Klux Klan, an organization of assassins and grafters. The Colored people now realize that all those masquerading under the name of Republican know nothing of the traditions of the party of Lincoln, Grant and Roosevelt—and care less: The mere label of Republican on a Jimmy McManus, an Alex. Abrahams, a Vincent, a Johnson, a Caddy Faulkner or a Ward is as worthless as a counterfeit government seal on a lead nickel. When these men were elected to office as Republicans they either knew nothing of the principles and traditions of the Republican party of the past regarding law and order and human rights, or they masquerade under the name of the Republican party for personal gain. These six willful, little brained and short sighted Councilmen are either Kluxers or they are in fear of this oulaw gang.

Wilmington, Del.

Councilman Hopkins was the only Republican who voted for the ordinance. The pressure brought to bear on him to forsake his race and be a party to the betrayal of those who elected him was worthy of a better cause. The Klux adherents, elected to their office as Republicans, largely by colored votes, thought that their specious arguments could make him as big an ingrate as they are, but Councilman Hopkins, true to his race and the best interests of the city, stood firm and immovable in his advocacy of principles of true Americanism. He was joined by five patriotic Democrats: McNabb, Duffy, Glen, Taylor and Biorowski. All honor to them. They were true to the principles of the Declaration of Independence "that all men are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The Colored voters of Wilmington and the State of Delaware are invited now to the spectacle of the Republican party becoming the party of the Ku Klux Klan, one and inseparable.

Last fall the Colored voters defeated former Congressman Layton on the issue of the Dyer Anti-Lynching bill. The Ku Klux Klan is an organized gang of lynchers and midnight marauders. No Negro, Catholic or Hebrew is safe where it is allowed to exist. The Republican party makes itself the tool of this conscienceless gang of malefactors. Who compose the membership of this unholy piratical crew and who are the invisible political bosses who pull the strings on their puppets in Council? Without the Colored vote in Delaware the Republican party is doomed to defeat. We, as Colored people, cannot support the Republican party as long as it is joined to the Ku Klux Klan. We must choose whom we shall support. The Republican Councilmen, by their vote, heedless of the wishes of the Colored people, defeated the ordinance introduced by Councilman Hopkins that had for its purpose the keeping of the Klan from holding meetings in Wilmington. As the Republican party is responsible for these men, we advise our race to keep a long memory and at the first opportunity hold the party to a strict responsibility for the recreancy of its members. Vote against it and vote for men regardless of party until the Republican party purges itself of the gang that prostitutes its principles and casts odium on its former good name.

DEL. G.O.P. TIES UP WITH K.K.K.

The Advocate 8-18-23

Ordinance by Our Councilman Rejected

Wilmington, Del.

Last Thursday night the Republican party, through its representatives in Councils, tied up the party to the Ku Klux Klan, the most vicious and un-American gang of free booters that ever disgraced the name of an organization.

Dr. John O. Hopkins, the race's representative in Council, a week before introduced an ordinance the object of which was to "prevent organizations and groups which tended to stir up racial or religious antagonisms" from holding meetings or parades within the city limits. This ordinance was up for third reading and final passage last Thursday night.

The Republican newspapers of the city advertised the fact that, fearing trouble, the Chief of Police had planted a number of policemen and plian clothes men in the audience. This, of course, brought out a large crowd and it is safe to say that fully six hundred people crowded into the Council Chambers as the seating capacity is limited a large number of men and women were compelled to stand.

Colored people are wont to think that the Republican party is made up of its friends, and the Democratic party is made up of its opponents, but when the issue arose in the Councils last Thursday night, all the Republicans voted against what the Colored people wanted and all the Democrats voted for what the Colored people wanted. In other words the Republican party in Councils voted in favor of the Ku Klux Klan and the Democratic party voted for the best interests of the colored people and for law and order and public decency. The only Republican who voted against the Klan was Dr. Hopkins, the only Colored man in Council. Here are the Democratic Councilmen who voted against the Klan: McNabb, Glen, Taylor, Duffy and Biorowski. Here are the Republicans who voted for the Klan's interests: Ward, Vincent, Johnson, McManus, Faulkner, Abrahams. These are the men who feel that the triumph of the Klan is of more importance than the good will of the Colored people who, by their votes, made it possible for these very Republicans to hold their office, but only that it is the colored people of Wilmington and of Delaware who keep the Republicans in office.

The Advocate

But there will be a new story to tell at the next election. Never have the colored people of Wilmington been so aroused, and in their present temper they will, at the first opportunity, register their disapproval of the Republican party for its perfidious betrayal of their rights. All over Wilmington the one topic of conversation was the way the Republican members of Council went back on their Colored constituents. The political bosses who pull the strings have stirred up a hornets' nest and on all hands the expression is heard that the Republican party must be taught a lesson, the same kind of lesson that was administered to them last Fall when Congressman Layton was defeated.

The news of the betrayal by the Republican party in Council spread thru the State like wild-fire and in all sections down State the Colored people sent word to the Wilmington people that they are ready to rebuke the party for the action of the Republican Councilmen at the first opportunity. If the Republican party is to be the party of the Ku Kluxers, then the Colored people want none of that party.

Wilmington, Aug. 25.—In a session marked with hoots and hisses, City Council Thursday failed to pass the proposed ordinance barring meetings of the Ku Klux Klan from the streets of the city.

More than 1000 were packed into the Council chamber with numerous policemen scattered throughout the room.

Wilmington

Six Republicans voted against the passage of the measure, while the Democrats and John Hopkins, Republican, the colored member from the Sixth ward, voted for the measure.

Three ballots were taken, and on the final one of the vote remained at 6 to 6. President of Council Ward ruled that as there was not a majority for the ordinance, it was lost.

At the request of President Ward, who feared that the bitter feeling engendered by the discussion of the matter would result in disorder, policemen patrolled the front of the public building and a reserve force of forty was held in the police station in case of trouble.

Phila.

From the start of the meeting there were hisses, catcalls and charges by the partisans, favoring and opposing the measure.

Councilman Alexander Abrahams Republican, of the Fifth ward, presented the maority report of the Law Committee, holding that the ordinance was not necessary and was unconstitutional.

Councilman Duffey, Democrat, of the Tenth ward, presented the minority report, signed by the Democratic members. It favored the passage of a law banning Klan meetings as dangerous to the public peace.

Councilman McNabb, of the Third ward, delivered an impassioned speech against the Klan.

"The members of the K. K. K." he said, "hide their faces behind masks and take men out in the night and whip them. This organization is against Roman Catholics, but I can prove that 61 per cent of the men who fought for the United States in the World War were Roman Catholics."

He was interrupted with hoots and hisses and cries of "It is not not so. I served overseas." It was with difficulty that order was restored.

Councilman Evans, of the Ninth ward, who is ill in the hospital, is claimed by the Republicans.

KLUX FIGHT IRISH & K. C. ON FEDERAL JOBS

CORP. TANNER, REGISTER OF WILLS AT WASH., D. C., FAMOUS G. A. R. LEADER GETS THREATENING LETTER — DEFIES KLUX AND APPOINTS IRISHMAN.

The Baltimore Sun 6/28/23

Washington, June 27, 1923.—The Ku Klux Klan issue has been brought to the attention of Government officials in acute fashion following the receipt by Corp. James Tanner, famous Civil War veteran and for twenty years Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, of a letter threatening him unless he rescinds his decision to appoint John Shiel, a member of the Knights of Columbus, as his deputy. It is regarded as the beginning of a campaign to prevent Catholics and members of the Knights of Columbus being appointed to Government positions. The letter, which is written by a blue pencil, reads:

"We understand that you have appointed as Second eDputy a Catholic and Irishman by name John Shiel,—unless you dispense with his services at once we will be forced to apply the methods of the fiery cross to you, so beware, beware!

"Grand Kleagle, K. K. K."

The reverse side of the letter reads:

"We know he is the head of all things in the hated Knights of Columbus.—K. K. K."

This side of the letter is adorned with the skull and crossbones and a drawing supposed to represent feafthers, and a ring to represent tar, and a long straight line representing a pole with the words "tar, feather and pole" written out in heavy bluo letters.

Corp. Tanner, who is well known in Grand Army circles, was at one time United States Pension Commissioner at Washington and Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The Civil War veteran, with characteristic courage, announces that he will treat the threat with the contempt it deserves. He has answered the threat with the following letter:

Corp. Tanner's Reply.

"To the Ku Klux Klan of the District of Columbia,

"Collectively or Individually:

"Sirs: I received at my breakfast table this morning your undated, unsigned, cowardly, despicable communication threatening me with your vengeance because of the announcement of my appointment of Mr. John A. Shiel, a full-blooded, native-born American citizen, specifying that he is the object of your hatred because he is a Knight of Columbus and a Catholic.

"The first result on receiving this absolutely cowardly, contemptible expression of your bigotry is the causing in my mind of a scorn which I have not the power to express in its full measure.

"no one of your organization dares to come into my office or my home and express to my face the sentiments you sent me. Mr. Shiel will assume his duties as my Second Deputy on the morning of Monday next."

Register of Wills Announces His Selection of Shiel as Deputy Will Stand.

With a broad smile on his face Corporal James Tanner, for 20 years register of wills for the District, sat in his office at the courthouse yesterday afternoon and dictated his defy to the Ku Klux Klan in response to a threatening letter received by him at the breakfast table yesterday at his residence, 1610 Nineteenth street northwest.

The letter, which is written with a heavy blue pencil and addressed to "Hon. Mr. Tanner," demands the removal of John Shiel, a Knight of Columbus, who has been appointed second deputy register of wills to succeed Theodore Cogswell, who was in turn promoted to fill a vacancy of first deputy register caused by the resignation of William Clark Taylor. Mr. Shiel formerly was employed in the War Department and will begin his duties Monday morning.

Threat Sent by "K. K. K."

The letter to Mr. Tanner reads:

"We understand that you have appt'd as 2d deputy, a Catholic & Irishman by name John Shields—unless you dispense with his services at once we will be forced to apply the methods of the Fiery Cross to you so beware, beware."

"Grand Kleagle

"K. K. K."

The reverse side of the letter reads: "We know he is the head of all things in the Hated Knights of Columbus—K. K. K."

This side of the letter is adorned with the skull and crossbones and a drawing supposed to represent feathers and a ring to represent tar and a long straight line representing a pole with the words "Tar, feather and pole" written out in heavy blue letters.

When asked if he intended to inform the police of the threatening letter, Mr. Tanner laughed heartily.

'I don't know whether this letter is a joke or not," he said. "There seem to be a lot of these letters being written to people in different parts of the country. I am going to answer this one through the press of Washington and let the Ku Klux Klan know individually and collectively, how a legless, 80-year-old veteran of the Yank army of the civil war feels about such leters."

The leter bears a local date line and was received at the city postoffice at 9:30 o'clock last Monday night. It is addressed in ink.

The answer made by Corpl. Tanner, who was at one time collector of taxes of what was then the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., United States commissioner of pensions, and former commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, reads in part:

"To the Ku Klux Klan of the District of Columbia,

"Collectively or Individually—

"Sirs: I received at my breakfast table this morning your undated, unsigned, cowardly, despicable communication threatening me with your vengeance because of the announcement of my appointment of Mr. John A. "No one of your organization dares to come into my office or my home and express to my face the sentiments you sent me. Mr. Shiel will assume his duties as my second deputy on the morning of Monday next."

"We don't do business that way," a high officer of the Klan in the District said yesterday disclaiming all knowledge of the letter received by Mr. Tanner. "The Klan does not employ such tactics, and would not countenance any of its members using them.

"If this organization should find any of its members employing such tactics, he would be turned over to the authorities as quickly as anyone else, and they could do what they please with him."

President Declares Extra Session Would Not Help.

DISTRESS "TEMPORARY"

Letter to Senator Gooding Discloses That Mr. Coolidge Has No Intention of Calling Congressmen to Washington.

(By Chicago Tribune-The Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Congressional action to aid the farmers does not seem expedient, President Coolidge declared in a letter to Senator Gooding, (Republican, Idaho), made public today.

Senator Gooding, a member of the Senate agricultural bloc, had wired the president urging him to call an extra session of Congress to aid the farmers, and to consider the coal situation. Concerning the latter, the president took occasion to point out that Congress had already created the United States coal commission to deal with the fuel question, but his answer on this phase of the telegram was indefinite and not final.

President's Letter.

The president's letter to Senator Gooding, dated August 14, follows:

"Your telegram relative to the agricultural and coal situation has been received. The Congress has already had before it, the coal problem and has authorized the investigation and report of the commission, which has been and now is, actively engaged in this work and in mediation between the disagreeing elements in the anthracite fields.

"As you know, the Congress has been engaged during the past two years, oftentimes in accordance with your own suggestion, in the passage of legislation for the relief of agriculture. It was one of the first acts of President Harding and one of his last thoughts. I share with you, a great solicitude for this important interest and a great sympathy for any part of it which may be, temporarily I trust, in any distress. It is my earnest desire to afford every possible relief and listen to every possible suggestion. The most experienced legislators with whom I have consulted have not yet been able to offer any plan for legislative action which seems to be practicable.

"Our department of agriculture is digesting every plan that is offered for relief in the hope that some method of procedure may be found which would afford a helpful remedy. I can assure you that no effort is being spared in this direction but up to the present time congressional action has not seemed expedient."

Agricultural Situation.

Discussion of the agricultural situation was taken up today by President Coolidge and members of the farm loan board at the White House when the president was informed that the law by which the board was created is operating satisfactorily. Progress was reported to the president regarding the establishment of the 12 new intermediate credit banks set up throughout the country.

An optimistic outlook was given the president by the board members who told him there would be no difficulty in providing adequate credits for the marketing of crops by use of the banks.

It was made known at the White House that as yet, no practical plan had been presented for further relief for agriculture and it was added that President Coolidge will give consideration to no plan that does not possess constructive qualities and will call no extra session of Congress for additional legislation unless an emergency should make this necessary and a real remedy offered.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who will have charge of any proposal that may be made, agrees with the president that price-fiixng is not the remedy and has pointed out that this means has never been successful.

KU KLUX SEND "FIERY CROSS TO HARDING RITES

The St. Louis, Mo. 8/26/23

A Florist's truck drove up to the Harding Home shortly before noon and unloaded a "fiery cross," five feet high, bearing the white letters on the cross: "K. K. K." A note written in a small hand was signed "Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

The cross was made of red lilies and flaming scarlet straw flowers. It was placed on the edge of the lawn near the dozens of other large wreaths so silently and quickly that few were aware of its presence until after the florist's truck had driven away.

THE STRUGGLE AND THE AIM.

The Washington Eagle 7-14-23

It is not without meaning to us, that life is a struggle. The very rain, which makes life possible, comes from the force of the wind, the resistance of the mountains, the gathering and leaving of the clouds and the pressure of the atmosphere. Our very breathing is against pressure and our movements demand energy.

Everywhere there is struggle, but not until we see intelligence do we see an aim. The infant struggles, but with the added weeks of life, we can detect an aim in its movements. The baby's cry is a struggle to express its discomfort, while speech is in line with an aim to satisfy a known want.

Man struggles to live, then aims to live better. Civilization is the total result.

Law is to aid man to live better. All government aims to make men live better in groups or communities, large or small. When law is partial and justice fails, when governments are weak in protecting their citizens or strong in oppressing them, then men do not live as well as their taxes or their ideals proclaim.

Determined men not only struggle to live, but they plan, work and fight to live better. When conditions anywhere prevent decent living and a chance to live better, then sensible men act to change those conditions.

Men organize to give the force of numbers to their plans, and to secure the services of leaders who shall devote their time, energy and talents to their desired aims.

The Ku Klux Klan seems to be the only organization that aims to interfere with the manner in which other people live. They assume right to determine the plan of living for their objects of hatred.

We are human, hence we struggle to live and aim to live better. We are human, hence we struggle by instinctive or inborn methods as well as by imitation and training. And, we are civilized, hence we aim to live better by effort, by organization and by work.

Individuals, races and nations have been and are tested by these measures in all time.

We shall never cease to struggle and we are willing to pledge ourselves to the death for the right and privileg to live better.

The modern colored American simply regards the Ku Klux Klan as another obstacle to be overcome in the struggle to live and the aim to live better. Its methods are questionable, its members are mortal and its power limited, hence it shall be overcome.

REPUBLICANS AND THE KLAN

Baltimore Herald

Northern Republicans' Ku Kluxism And Lilywhitism Playing A High Hand

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—The exposure that the Republican Secretary of the State of Indiana is a member of the Ku Klux and is the klan's candidate for Governor recalls that exposure of the chairman of the Republican State Committee as a Ku Klux caused that leader to announce he has ithdrawn from the klan. This gnetleman has served as chairman quite a time and is one of the political friends of Will Hays.

Joe Kealing of Indiana is another of the Indiana Republicans whose "honey fuggling" with Southern "lily whites" has been very noticeable of late.

Baltimore, Md.

Has the Southern Democracy, in concert with the Northern Republican Ku Klux, caused the Washington administration to go Southern Democratic on the Negro question? Was George Christian, Democrat, the go-between under Harding? Is Slemp to be the go-between under Coolidge to pacify the Northern Republican Ku Klux and make friends with the Southern Democrat in Congress? 9-19-23

Wit hstrong Northern Democrats like Mayor Hylan of New York and other Democratic mayors and governors in Northern States, unfriendly to the Ku Klux, has not the Republican party been gold-bricked in being led into recreancy and betrayal of the Negro? The Republican, "let the South alone" policy has permitted Southern aggression to come North and the Ku Klux is making a monkey of its so-called human rights pretense.

COOLIDGE IN KLAN WAR.

Commercial Appeal

Drawn Into Tangle Despite Desire to Avoid Taking Sides.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The federal government has been drawn into the Oklahoma Ku Klux Klan tangle despite an obvious desire to keep its hands off and let Gov. Walton fight it out with the hostile legislators.

In response to an appeal from the Oklahoma executive to President Coolidge and Attorney General Daugherty to prevent the use of federal buildings in Oklahoma by those who desire to convene the Legislature, the White House has ordered that federal property be closed to anything but federal business. This is not expected to please the klansmen who, in addition to the legislators, are seeking the governor's impeachment.

The White House telegram, dispatched last night, pointed out that regulations forbid the turning over of federal buildings for purposes other than those authorized. It said:

"Use of federal buildings for purposes other than business of the United States government is contrary to regulations, and a telegram has been sent to the custodian of the federal building there not to permit the building to be used for any unauthorized purpose." 9-27-23

Attorney General Daugherty sent a telegram saying government buildings outside of Washington were under the direction of the secretary of the treasury.

So far as was known there is no precedent for Gov. Walton's request for the federal government to prevent the use of a building by a Legislature. Though the message sent by the White House explained that regulations stood in the way of the plan of the legislators it made clear President Coolidge is not inclined to stretch a point in assisting a fight against an enemy of the klan, which President Harding condemned by inference in various speeches.

Judge Moore Out of Scottish Rite Council Over Klan

Montgomery Advertiser 10-20-23

WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 19.—Special to The Advertiser—The Washington Evening Star today prints the following:

"Judge George Fleming Moore, past Grand Commander of the Supreme Council Thirty-Third Degree of Scottish Rite Masons, and Inspector General of the Scottish Rite in Alabama resigned today from the Supreme Council. His resignation followed a discussion by members of the council in which he is said to have been severely criticised for the alleged use of his weekly publication, the Fellowship Forum published in this city, for furthering the aims of the Ku Klux Klan. Although the paper designates itself to be a digest of fraternal news from all over the world, it has been regarded as a Masonic publication, its circulation appeal being made to Masons throughout the nation.

Lately it has been claimed by members of the council that the paper has become a semi-official organ for the klan. From what could be learned today very little sympathy is found toward the klan among the members of the Scottish Rite Council.

MASONIC OFFICER RESIGNS AFTER DEBATE ON KLAN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—Judge Geo. Fleming Moore, past sovereign grand commander of the supreme council and inspector general of Scottish Rite Masons in Alabama, resign from the supreme council today after a discussion over the Ku Klux Klan.

During the debate, Mr. Moore was charged by members of the council with using his weekly publication, "The Fellowship Forum," issued here, for furthering the aims of the klan.

Elks to Expel Klansmen.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 19.—The Atlantic City lodge of Elks, No. 276, has adopted a resolution authorizing the expulsion of members of the Ku Klux Klan, it was stated today.

The resolution is the forerunner of a national campaign in this direction, according to Exalted Ruler Eugene G. Schwinghammer, who said the principles and practices of the klan "are in direct variance to the precepts on which the Order of Elks was founded."

Grand Lodge in No Hurry.

Watertown, S. D., Oct. 19.—Action of the Elks lodge of Atlantic City in expelling members who are also members of the Ku Klux Klan does not have the approval for the present of the grand lodge officers.

"I am not now prepared to say what action will be taken ultimately," said one of the officers, "because until we know whether the oaths and obligations taken by klan members are at variance with Elk precepts no decision will be made. So far as I know, no consideration is being given to a national campaign to bring about similar action."

Denies Ku Klux Held Initiation in White House

Washington Times 10-13-23

It has been rumored during the past two years that the late President was a memeber of the Ku Klux Klan. No definite information on this could be obtained. However, after the death of the president the Klan began to hold memorial services for the President and this again brought forth the gossip that Mr. Harding was a clansman.

It was stated but could not be confirmed, that when the Harding funeral train was journeying to Washington from Frisco, while nearing the Ohio-Indiana line, a huge wreath of flowers in the shape of the Klan's cross was placed on the funeral train.

So great has the gossip become lately connecting the dead President with the Klan that his former secretary, George B. Christian, Jr., wrote a letter to the New York World this week denying the truth of the story.

The following statement appeared in The World Sunday October 7:

Systematic circulation by the Ku Klux Klan of boasts that the late President Harding was a member of the Invisible Empire evoked yesterday the following categorial denial by George B. Christian, jr., who was Mr. Harding's secretary throughout his term of office:

"All statements that President Harding was a Klansman or that there was a White House initiation are absolutely false. He held decided views contrary on their methods.

"(Sined)

"GEORGE B. CHRISTIAN JR."

This statement, made at the request of The World, supplements that made by Dr. Charles E. Sawyer, Mr. Harding's personal physician in The World yesterday.

The present version of the Klan boast is included in an account of the Harding memorial services held at Lake Charles, La., Aug. 10. At largely attended exercises held there in the open air in which clergymen of all faiths, including Jews and Catholics, participated, 200 robed Klansmen marched to a position just before the rostrum. Their leader, announcing they were members of the Lake Charles Klan, said:

"Fellow Countrymen: We have come to join you in this ceremonial of mourning in honor of our decesaed President and fellow Klansmen, Warren G. Harding."

Accounts of this meeting, and particularly of the announcement regarding Mr. Harding, are being published throughout the United States in Klan papers and in papers that sympathize with the Klan, whether openly or otherwise.

So many instances of this publication have been brought to the attention of The World in the last fortnight that the matter was laid before Mr. Christian for his answer. The result is the unequivocal denial quoted above.

HIGH MASONIC OFFICIAL RESIGNS ON KLAN ISSUE

N. Y. Times

Colleagues Charge Judge Moore With Using Fraternal Weekly to Aid Ku Klux.

10-20-23

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Judge George Fleming Moore, Past Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Council and Inspector General of Scottish Rite Masons in Alabama, resigned from the Supreme Council today after a discussion over the Ku Klux Klan.

In the course of the debate Judge Moore was charged by members of the council with using his weekly publication, The Fellowship Forum, issued here, for furthering the aims of the Klan.

Although the publication has designated itself as a digest of fraternal news from all over the world, Masons have regarded it as a Masonic publication. Consideration of Mr. Moore's resignation was postponed.

The council is also considering the resignation of Perry W. Weidner, Secretary General, who has announced that he desires to return to Los Angeles.

The biennial session of the council will close tomorrow. It has yet to consider the advisability of recommending consolidation of The New Age, the Scottish Rite magazine; the Scottish Rite News Bureau and the Capitol News Service under one head.

LEGION AND KLAN COME TO BLOWS

The Star

Gold Star Mother Objects to Wreath Placed on Monument and Trouble Follows.

Cedarhurst, N. Y., Nov. 29.—A fight between members of the American Legion and the Ku Klux Klan today marred ceremonies attending the dedication of a monument to nine youths who lost their lives in the World war. 11-30-23

Resisting efforts of the klansmen to place a wreath on the monument, after a "gold star" mother had protested, the legion men several times forced the members of the secret order to withdraw and finally tore their memento to shreds.

The mother, whose son was one of those to be honored, demanded removal of the klan wreath, declaring her boy had not died for the tenets of its faith, while spectators applauded the subsequent statement of a rabbi, who took part in the observance, that the boys who died in war had not fought to di[illegible] ica.

KLAN FOES U[illegible] A NATIONWIDE HUNT

Vigilance Association Organizing at Washington.

(By The Associated Press).

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Incorporation for an organization for the purpose of "inaugurating an extensive campaign looking to the disintegration of the Ku Klux Klan and kindred organizations," was announced today by the National Vigilance Association.

Commercial

E. F. Corcocan, directing vice president, who will be in charge of headquarters here, declared that for several months, preliminary work has been in progress and that the association was pepared to fight against all influences and agencies which seek to breed class or religious discrimination."

Memphis Comm.

The programme adopted by the organization calls for the passage of an anti-masking bill by the Legislature of each state, forced publication of membership lists of all secret organizations and enactment of a federal statute dealing with mob violence.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Unmasked and unhooded and sounding a clarion call to battle, in glaring contrast to the secret midnight meeting on Stone Mountain when he Ku Klux Klan was formed a few years ago, the National Vigilance Association came into being today with the avowed purpose of killing the Ku Klux Klan.

Behind the war on the klan is declared to be a notably array of educators, business and professional men, clergymen and laymen in all sections of the country.

Among those listed as members of the national committee, which is the governing body of the association, are Dr. R. B. von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California; Judge Francis K. Mancuso of the central sessions court of New York; Rust Rhees, president of the Rochester; Ellen F. Pendleton, president of Wellesley College; E. P. Tivnan, president of Fordham University; Prof. R. S. Graves of Yale; Dr. Stephen L. Penrose, president of Whitman College, Washington State; Pauline Kelp of Mills College, California; Thomas H. Cannon, Chicago; Clara D. Maxwell, president general of the Colonial Daughters of America; Dr. E. A. Milliken, president of the alofirnia Institute of Technology; Dr. D. P. Barrows, former president of the Univresity of California; Dr. H. A. Garfield, president of Williams College; H. Loring Young, speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives; Frederick [illegible]d, New York; Prof. James E. [illegible]h, New York University; David [illegible]f, president of the Radio Corporation of America.

E. F. Corcoran is the directing vice president in charge of the national headquarters which has been opened here. Frank C. Sindori of Washington is national secretary. Corcoran formerly was a Philadelphia newspaper man. He also has had considerable experience as an organizer and publicity director.

The opening announcement of the association promises a battle to the death fith the Ku Klux, who are denounced as having created "one of the most dangerous situations confronting the economic life of the country." Disintegration of all "kindred organizations" likewise will be fought for, it is stated. A countrywide campaign with this end in v iew is planned at once.

Two hundred branch councils of the association in a large number of states and cities are said to be already in the process of formation. The national officers also assert taht the influence of the movement against the klan already has made itself felt in certain sections ct the country.

In prosecuting the campaign against the klan, the association will move along these definite lines.

First — Passage of anti-masking bills by state legislatures, making it unlawful to appear on highways wearing masks or hoods.

Second—Enactment of laws compelling such secret organizations to make public their membership rosters.

Third — Congressional action to bring mob violence under federal statute, with prosecutions of offenders in United States courts.

Fourth—Propagation of faith in respect for and obedience to the institutions of government, with the weapons of education ,agitation and organization.

All "philanthropic, fraternal, social and military organizations" will be urged to co-operate in the fight. Particularly mentioned are the Masons, Elks, Moose, Eagles, Odd Fellows, Foresters, Redmen, Knights of Pythias, Sons of America, American Legion, Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs. Thes organizations will be asked to condemn the klan and expel any members who swear allegiance to the "invisible empire."

In a personal statement accompanying the formal announcement, directing Vice-President Corcoran asserts the National Vigilance Association "is nonreligious and nonpolitical." He characterizes it as a "bloc for patriotic purposes." Charging the klan is a "revolution that is shaking the social, economic, political and religious structure of the country to their very foundations," Corcoran says:

"There are lawabiding citizens in sufficient numbers throughout the nation to demand the enactment of legislation which will insure proper respect for government institutions and the punishment of those who are saaking to breed class and religious discrimination. And once these loyal citizens are aroused to the necessity for action there will be little need for further apprehension."

To help spread ammunition, the association will publish an oficial bulletin under the title, "The Sentinel." The first issue, accompanying the announcement, is a four-page, four-column journal with pictures of Washington, Roosevelt and Harding adorning the front page. Gen. Pershing's picture also is found on an inside page.

Extracts from public addresses and written addresses by the late President Harding and Gen. Pershing are cited to show their vigorous opposition to the klan. Washington and Roosevelt also are declared to have been opposed to all that is now represented by the klan.

FORM NATIONAL BODY TO FIGHT THE KLAN

Educators, Business and Political Leaders Unite in Vigilance Association.

ASK FRATERNAL ORDERS' AID

Request Expulsion of Klansmen by Their Societies and Condemnation of Hooded Knights.

Special to The New York Times.

N. Y. Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A National Vigilance Association has been incorporated to wage "an intensive country-wide campaign looking to the disintegration of the Ku Klux Klan and kindred organizations," according to an announcement made here tonight.

Among the members claimed are many college presidents, business executives and political leaders in all sections of the nation. They are said to be seeking the co-operation of the representative fraternal orders, civic and veterans' organizations, requesting the condemnation of the Klan and the expulsion of members who belong also to the Klan.

E. F. Corcoran, Directing Vice President of the Association, asserted that its formation had been progressing for several months and that now it was ready to open its campaign. The program calls for achieving the following aims:

"Passage of an anti-masking bill by the Legislatures of every State in the Union, making it unlawful to appear upon the highways wearing masks or hoods.

11-12-23

"The bringing of sufficient influence to bear upon the individual members of State Legislatures looking toward the enactment of laws compelling such secret organizations to make public their membership rosters.

"The establishment of a Federal Statute so drawn as to cover mob violence and to provide Federal prosecution of offenders.

"The propagation of the faith in respect for and obedience to the institutions of Government with the weapons of education, agitation and organization."

To Fight Racial and Religious Bias.

Explaining the Association's plan, Frank C. Sindoni, Secretary, said:

"The Association is prepared to fight against all influences and agencies which seek to breed class or religious discrimination. It will work actively for the renewal of respect for the law and the Constitution, according to its certificate of incorporation.

"It will be the object of the Association to publicly present arguments bearing upon the necessity of respect for the authority vested in the judicial power of our courts, compliance with the laws, acquiescence in their measures; the discouragement of all obstruction to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations designed to direct, control counteract or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities; the direction of an educational campaign of Americanization looking toward the preservation of our Government and the permanency of the Union. Its officers claim its influence has already asserted itself in certain sections of the country.

"The National Vigilance Association was organized as a direct result of and in response to a striking warning made in a recent report by a committee of the American Bar Association, which found that: 'The harvest of anti-Americanism was ripening; that our form of government was being challenged, not alone upon the soap box, but by oath-bound secret societies that cloak their deadly hatred of free principles under the guise of patriotism, and that the movement was an attack upon our form of government—a government by the people under a written constitution.' The Law Committee stated that it was a most disheartening symptom that it aroused so little interest and so little public condemnation.

Will Ask Aid of Fraternal Orders.

"The association will seek the co-operation of philanthropic, fraternal, social and military organizations, particularly the Masonic Order, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Moose, Eagles, Odd Fellows, Foresters, Red Men, Knights of Pythias Order, Sons of America, American Legion, the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions Clubs, in condemning the Ku Klux Klan, expelling such of their members who persist in swearing allegiance to the so-called Invisible Empire. Many of these organizations have already gone on record as condemning the Klan.

"Two hundred councils of the association, representative of a great number of States and cities, are already in process of formation, according to the statement. Each council will elect its own officers and appoint its own committees. There will be committees on legislation, publicity, speakers, &c.

"National headquarters will keep in touch with the situation at the capital and act as a clearing house for the dissemination of information, plans of operation and the preparation of material in the form of news items and the publication of booklets, pamphlets and other material for national distribution."

The announcement gives the following names as among those who have already joined the association:

Dr. R. B. Von Kleinsmid, President, University of Southern California; Judge Francis X. Mancuso, General Sessions Court, New York; Rust Rhees, President, University of Rochester; Kenneth C. M. Sills, President, Bowdoin College; Robert J. Aley, President Butler College, Indianapolis; Ellen F. Pendleton, President of Wellesley College; Charles J. Smith, President of Roanoke College, Virginia; E. P. Tivnan, President, Fordham University; Dr. D. M. Edwards, President of Earlham College, Indiana; Professor H. S. Graves, Yale University.

"UNITE AGAINST THE KLAN", IS DEBS' ADVICE

St. Louis Clarion

St. Louis Mo.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 —Eugene V. Debs, several times candidate for President on the Socialist ticket, attacked the Ku Klux Klan last night at a meeting in Commonwealth Casino, 135th street and Madison Ave.

'It is the business of every one to expose the sinister purpose of the Klan', he told the audience. 'The Colored people could do something for themselves if they would unite. There are 12,000,000 in the United States, and they could develop a power that would make them respected.'

Debs announced he was proud of having gone to prison for 'seditious utterances' during the war, and said he would gladly go to 'prison or the gallows' for Socialism. He said there is a growing sentiment in this country for Russia and predicted the Government of the United States would soon recognize the Soviet.

Others who spoke were: A. Philip Randolph, editor of the Messenger, his wife, Lucille Randolph, Jas. Oneal, a white Socialist leader, and Frank Crosswaithe, a Colored Socialist.

KLAN'S CHALLENGE QUICKLY TAKEN UP

"Deliberate, Malicious Misstatements," Says Reply on Behalf of Catholic Conference.

RABBIS OFFER TO DEBATE

Clear Issue of Intolerance Seen in Speech of Imperial Wizard to Dallas Gathering.

N. Y. Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25. — Replies were issued here today on behalf of the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the Executive Committee of the Assembly of Orthodox Rabbis of America to the address delivered at Dallas, Texas, last night by Dr. W. H. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, outlining the Kian's attitude toward Catholics and Jews.

Father John P. Burke, General Secretary of the Catholic conference, declared Dr. Evans's statement regarding the Catholics in America had made the issue clear-cut, adding that "it is for Americans to decide whether they will stand with their country or with the Klan."

Challenging the Klan to a joint debate, Rabbi Simon Glazer of New York declared the question at issue was whether Jewish Americans are to be considered Americans, or, according to the Klan, whether they must first be converted as Americans.

"The statement reported in today's press as made by W. H. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan," said Father Burke's statement, "reveals without further question the Klan's intolerance for the negroes, Jews and Catholics. Up to the present, in spite of statement and evidence to the contrary, the Klan has denied that it persecuted any of the above named.

"Evans states that to the Catholic hierarchy of the United States, the President of the United States is subordinate to the priesthood at Rome; that the parochial schools of the country are a proof of 'divided' allegiance on the part of Catholics. He offers no proof of these statements. He cannot offer proof. They are deliberate, malicious misstatements, refuted completely, if refutation were needed, by the official declaration of the American bishops on America's entrance into the war; by the thousands of Catholic dead buried overseas; by the fact that the first American officer killed was educated in a Catholic school and the last American killed was a Catholic priest.

"The Klan, through its official representative, sets at naught the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of every State in the Union. According to the Klan the foundation on which our country was built, religious and racial tolerance, cannot endure."

KLAN THREATENS NOMINEE.

Enters Politics in This State for the First Time to Fight John G. Peck.

N. Y. Times

The first instance of the Ku Klux Klan's participation in New York State politics was disclosed yesterday when George K. Morris, Republican State Chairman, received word that the Klan was making an active fight against Assemblyman John G. Peck, candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket in in the First District of Suffolk County, because he voted for the bill to require the filing of the names of members of secret societies, commonly known as the Anti-Klan bill, at the last session of the Legislature.

Mr. Morris's informant was Harry Lee, chairman of the Suffolk County Republican Committee, who said he had been visited before the primaries by men believed to be affiliated with the Klan who asked him to keep Mr. Peck's name off the ticket. Mr. Lee refused, and the threat was then made that the Klan would defeat Mr. Peck.

On Oct. 9, the last day for filing independent petitions, a petition with 2,100 signatures placed in nomination for the Assembly Arthur H. Myers, a hotel keeper, as the candidate of the Independent Party. Signers of this petition included several members of the Suffolk County Republican County Committee. The Independent Party's emblem is a circle enclosing an "A," said to stand for "American."

Mr. Peck, who won by 4,000 last year, said last night at his home in Southampton that he expected to win again this year. He asserted that the Klan had attempted to misrepresent his votes on certain bills and had charged in pamphlets distributed throughout the district that he had voted for the repeal of the Mullan-Gage State Prohibition act and for the repeal of the Lusk laws. Mr. Peck said he had voted against both repeal bills. The campaign literature circulated against him, he said, was not in the name of the Klan. "We know the source," he added, "and the fight is being directed by the Klan, even though it does not come out in the open."

The Klan is believed to be strongly organized in Suffolk County. Although no definite information has reached the Republican leaders, it is believed that members of the Klan are working secretly against other Assemblymen who voted for the anti-Klan bill.

GREAT DRIVE ON KLAN IS PLANNED BY "VIGILANTES"

Chicago Daily Tribune

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—With a national committee composed of educational, business and professional personages, the National Vigilance association has been incorporated here for an intensive country-wide campaign looking to the disintegration of the Ku Klux Klan and kindred organizations. 11-12-23

Working quietly for several months perfecting its organization the association will establish headquarters here. The campaign is for:

Passage ofan anti-masking bill by all legislatures.

Publish Members' Names.

Enactment of laws compelling such secret organizations to make public membership rosters.

Establishment of a federal statute to cover mob violence and to provide federal prosecution.

Propagation of the faith in respect for and obedience to the institution of government with the weapons of education, agitation, and organization.

The association will seek the coöperation of philanthropic, fraternal, social, and military organizations in condemning the Ku Klux Klan, expelling members who persist in swearing allegiance to it.

E. F. Corcoran of Philadelphia, newspaperman, has been placed in charge of the Washington headquarters.

Purpose of Association.

"The association is nonreligious and nonpolitical. It is a bloc for patriotic purposes," he said tonight. "The association is a league of visible vigilant volunteers.

"Fomenting a hatred of the Jewish people that, after 300 years of tolerance, is daily finding expression in acts of violence and cunning cruelty surpassing the tortures of old world pogroms; arousing a distrust of devout Catholics, whose adventurous priests first planted the cross in a land that was yet to be dedicated to religious freedom; oppressing the Negro, who for sixty years has made a constant attempt to prove himself worthy of the trust the great Lincoln reposed in him; thwarting the efforts and ambitions of those hardy, thrifty sons of the mother countries who come to our shores seeking 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness' guaranteed them by our constitution, the Ku Klux Klan is rapidly developing into the most disintegrating influence ever felt in our national life."

National Vigilance Association Plans Fight on Ku Klux

Washington Herald

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Incorporation of an organization for the purpose of "inaugurating an extensive campaign looking to the disintegration of the Ku Klux Klan and kindred organizations" was announced today by the National Vigilance association.

E. F. Corcoran, directing vice-president who will be in charge of headquarters here, declared that for several months preliminary work had been in progress and the association now was prepared "to fight against all influences and agencies which seek to breed class or religious discrimination." 11-12-23

The program adopted by the organization calls for the passage of an anti-masking bill by the legislature of each state, forced publication of membership lists of all secret organizations, and enactment of a federal statute dealing with mob violence.

COLD RECEPTION GIVEN KLAN NOTE AT WHITE HOUSE

Clarke's Action Has Earmarks of Publicity Ruse, Says Coolidge.

Times-Herald

Washington, Dec. 28.—Action of E. H. Clarke, former high official of the Ku Klux Klan, in making public a letter to the president prior to its presentation at the White House was criticized today by a spokesman for President Coolidge, who asserted that such a course tended to indicate the communication was written more for publicity purposes than for consideration by the executive. 12-29-23

Mr. Coolidge, the spokesman said, was thoroughly familiar with the methods of those who seek publicity by directing a letter to the president or some other official. The spokesman indicated no attention would be given Mr. Clarke's letter other than the routine acknowledgment of its receipt forwarded today to the former klan official.

The letter was made public here yesterday through Edgar Fuller, secretary to Mr. Clarke, who subsequently transmitted it to the White House.

Acknowledgement of Mr. Clarke's letter was made today by President Coolidge in a brief communication which merely said that the president had received the letter and read it "with interest."

KLAN "WRECKING CREW" AIMED AT POLITICIANS

Connecticut Members Told of Plan "To Jail" Catholics and Jews.

1/8/23
New York Times

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 7.—Snow spoiled arrangements for an outdoors meeting of the Ku Klux Klan in Connecticut last week, according to information received from inside sources by the State police and the meeting was held in a private home in Berlin, just outside of New Britain, where the police recently went on strike because they thought their drill master had attended a Klonklave.

C. Allan Nott of Meriden, who is State organizer, was at the meeting, in the course of which a new feature of the organization, the "wrecking crew," which is "to jail politicians," preferably Catholics and Jews, who flout the Klan's influence, was disclosed.

According to one of those present one speaker asserted the Catholics had altogether too much influence in politics in New England. "Do you men know that some of the politicians in this State are wondering why Templeton beat Fitzgerald," this speaker asked asked. "Well, you can see why, can't you?"

The inference was that the Klan had something to do with the defeat of Mayor David E. Fitzgerald of New Haven, according to the belief of the informant.

The Klan is seeking at least 200 members in New Britain one speaker is reported to have said, continuing:

"Everyone knows that every voter controls at least ten other votes. Now with 200 Klansmen in New Britain, do you see what you could accomplish?

"I want to tell you something that isn't generally known. We have in our organization what is called a 'wrecking crew.' Now, don't misconstrue what I say. By the 'wrecking crew' we mean a group of the best lawyers and legal talent in this country. And they are just waiting for some of these politicians to pull something, and they'll be down to put those men behind the bars where they belong, and keep them so far away from public office that they will never see one again."

ANTI-KLAN BILL OFFERED IN CONNETICUT

Louisville News
Louisville, Ky.

Hartford, Feb. 1.—(Crusader Service) An anti-Ku Klux Klan bill was introduced today by Senator Thomas McGrath, of Waterbury, the democratic leader, and referred to the Judiciary Committee for a hearing.

The bill, entitled "An Act to Prevent the Existance of Clandestinal Organizations", provides that the banding together of three or more persons whose identities are concealed by hte use of masks, hoods, robes or other disguises, shall be punishable by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars or by imprisonment of not less than three years or by both. The State's attorney of any county is authorized to proceed against persons accused of unlawful acts or the subversion or distruction of a republican form of government. He may demand in writing of the secretary or keeper of the records af any organization, a list of officers and members. If the secretary fails to furnish it, he shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars or sent to prison for one year or both. 2/3/23

Another bill to be introduced this week will require all secretaries and organizations to keep in the office of the secretary for public inspection a complete and accurate roster of membership, corrected every three months.

Announcement Made at Stamford Preceding Fiery Cross Ceremony —1,000 to Be Initiated.

Times 8-19-23

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Aug. 18.—That the Ku Klux Klan intends to take an active part in Connecticut politics became apparent today following a meeting here, when an officer of the order who lives in Darien, Conn., but who declined to permit the use of his name, gave out the following statement:

"Overtures have been made to us in different sections of the State by various political leaders asking for our support. In each case we have replied that we will support the man whom our investigators have found to be the most honest and straightforward of all the candidates and whom we think will live up to the requirements of his oath of office."

Charles A. Nott of Meriden, Conn., Klan lecturer and organizer, added to this the following:

"There are certain local conditions which are very distasteful to the citizens of this city, who are justified in expecting that they who are placed in office by their ballots should live up to the obligations of their offices to the last letter. These conditions are known to the members of the organization locally and it is entirely possible that at the ballot box in the near future men will be placed in office who will live up to the obligations of their office. When that time comes, bootleggers and persons engaged in vice will have to go."

It was also reported in Klan circles here tonight that J. S. Saunders of Darien, King Kleagle of the Realms of Connecticut and Rhode Island, had been deposed and a new King Kleagle appointed in his place. Asked about this Saunders said:

"I have never disclosed Klan matters for publication and I do not propose to do so now. I cannot help what the newspapers say or what gossip says. I have nothing to say about the matter."

Arrangements are under way for an open-air meeting, to be held near Stamford in the near future, at which time 1,000 new members are to be received into the Klan with fiery cross and other ceremonies. As a preliminary, a fiery cross ceremony, on a small scale, was held near Stamford about midnight tonight.

Can Harvard Students Be Klansmen?

The New York Times 10/14/23

If it is true that the Ku Klux Klan, having already gained a footing at Harvard, is about to begin a vigorous "drive" to increase its membership among the students, then that venerable institution will have a chance to show what it can do when confronted by a danger like this. Indeed, the university authorities well might search their hearts carefully to find out how it happens that even one of the young men whom they are supposed to be teaching reason and truth should have been led astray by such vicious and absurd arguments as the Ku Klux Klan has been presenting to them. Only in the case of the greenest of freshmen could such a thing be possible, if Harvard training effects its designed ends.

Klanism is for the illiterate or the stupid—for those who have despaired of our laws and our courts as the guardians of public order and safety.

It is well enough for the Harvard students to hear what the Klansmen have to say for themselves, their masks and their methods; but if the students are not capable of seeing through the fallacies and the criminalities of which the Ku Klux Klan program wholly is composed, then a college education is of little value.

HALT KLAN MEETING WHEN PRIEST OBJECTS

DENVER, Colo., July 7.—After Mayor Stapelton had given permission for the Ku Klux Klan to hold an open meeting at the municipal Auditorium here, the meeting was brought to a close by Col. Rice W. Means, manager of public safety.

The Klan lecturer, Dr. G. C. Minot, of Dallonia, Texas, had just begun to make his speech when a Catholic priest and a colored man stood up and objected to the meeting.

Col. Means then took charge of the proceedings and ordered the meeting closed, declaring that permission had been given to hold it in case there was no objection to it.

KLAN SPEAKER FORCED TO STOP SPEECH IN DENVER

Denver, Col., June 27.—Rice W. Mans, director of public safety, tonight stopped a meeting being held in the municipal auditorium at which Dr. G. C. Minor, from the headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan, Atlanta, Ga., was to have been the principal speaker.

The meeting had been advertised as Immaculate Conception, was the first to stand and voice objection.

Father Walsh was attired in the uniform of an army chaplain.

"All right," said Dr. Minor, "if you object I will not speak."

Others jumped to their feet, some protesting the proposed talk and others expressing a desire to hear it. In the confusion, Safety Director Means took the floor and called off the meeting, declaring that he had promised to forbid the address if objection to it was raised.

Dr. Minor was escorted from the stage door by a detail of police, but there was no demonstration.

At Denver a Ku Klux lecturer disappeared through a side door when the crowd became unruly. Probably decided, after looking them over, that they were not "100 per centers."

Arson and Lynchings.

This morning's Register tells of the burning of two more Catholic schools in Canada, making eleven such institutions which have been destroyed, one after another, by fires of mysterious origin. It must be apparent that these fires have not all been accidental, and that there is some motive behind all of them. The Catholics have suspected, evidently with some reason, that an anti-Catholic organization, perhaps the Ku-Klux Klan, is responsible.

Of course it is Canada's problem to deal with, not ours. We may ask why Canada doesn't do something about it, and wonder why there is no action taken to stop such devastation, yet how much more impotent this country must look to Canada when it permits eighty-seven lynchings in a year and hardly turns a hand to catch the men who perpetrated them—men inspired by the same prejudices and intolerance which obviously is causing the series of unexplained fires in Canada.

Klan Would Establish Mandate Over Mexico

Pittsburgh Gazette Times 5-19-23

Although one of the prerequisities to citizenship in the invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan as published in their official literature is that "No man is wanted in this Order who will not and cannot swear an unqualified allegiance to the Government of the United States of America, its flag and its Constitution, who does not esteem the Government of the United States above any other Government, civil, political or ecclesiastical, in the whole world", the activities of the Klan in Canada has grown to such proportions as to attract the attention of the Canadian Press.

The Spectator quoting an official of the Klan states that "the Klan is already established in the western provinces of Canada and will soon be operating over the entire Dominion and has for its goal" the idea of a sort of a confederacy. That does not necessarily mean your separation from the British Empire, but a more definite alliance between the two great English speaking countries on this continent. We have a definite programme in view that will be of the greatest benefit to all. Confederacy would prohibit the dumping of European emigrants on this Continent would absolutely forbid a further influx of Orientals and would establish a mandate over Mexico.

According to the Mayor of London (Ontario) Canadians will not tolerate men with bloody hands walking in their midst. Justice in the Dominion is sure and swift, as Mayor of London I will use all the power of my office to rid the city of the verminous missionaries of an order that seeks to terrify citizens who may differ from these so-called Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in race, color, religion or ability to succeed.

Hibernians Are Urged To Begin Campaign Against Ku Klux Klan

Montreal, July 18.—The most important task in which the Ancient Order of Hibernians could engage at present is wide exposure of the Ku Klux Klan, President James Deery declared today in his annual report at the order's convention.

After a sweeping attack on the klan, Deery declared that religious tolerance was the keystone of liberty in Canada and the United States and asserted that the public should endow chairs of tolerance in all the universities of the continent.

Hibernians' Leader Says It Would Abridge Rights of Citizenship.

MONTREAL, July 18.—The Ancient Order of Hibernians was urged at today's session of its convention to wage war on the Ku Klux Klan.

President James Deery, in his annual report, declared that no greater duty faced the order than exposure of the klan. Specifically he urged support of the Unity League of America, which he said was organized in the United States to combat the klan there.

"In the United States," he asserted, "the klan questions the rights of Jews, Catholic, negroes and foreigners to enjoy the right of American citizenship, and has successfully entered the field of practical politics in many states, electing senators, judges, governors, mayors and sheriffs. It appeals to the ignorant and prejudiced mind. It is well financed and well led.

"It is not the jews or negroes or Catholics who are in danger. It is American liberty."

Both in Canada and the United States, he continued, religious tolerance was the keystone of liberty. He suggested that chairs of tolerance might well be established in universities supported by the public.

California Sheriff Issues Proclamation to Peace Officers.

WOODLAND, Cal., Jan. 4.—A warning against the activities of the Ku Klux Klan has been issued in a proclamation directed to deputy sheriffs and 150 volunteer officers of Yolo County by Sheriff H. W. Monroe, it became known here today.

The proclamation reviews the alleged activities of the klan and declares officers in Yolo County must believe in the enforcement of all laws and must not be members of the klan.

The sheriff's warning refers to the murders in Mer Rouge, La.

Sheriff Monroe returned recently from Louisiana and declared he saw a sign on a tree near Mer Rouge in regard to the murders there, which read:

"Unless prosecution is dropped the Loss of Mer Rouge will be covered in red."

Such a challenge constituted a menace against the law and can not remain "unanswered," Sheriff Monroe's proclamation says.

ST. PAUL WINS FIGHT FOR 1924 CONVENTION

Report of Americanization Section of Legion Unanimusly Adopted by Delegates.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

San Francisco, Cal., October 18.—A bitter anti-Ku Klux Klan resolution, submitted by Charles Kendrick, of San Francisco, and a pro-Ku Klux Klan resolution submitted by E. W. Whitney, of Oklahoma, were both defeated at the fifth annual convention of the American Legion here today after one of the most bitter fights in the history of the organization.

The resolution of the Michigan delegates, which delegates termed a mild denunciation of the klan, was almost unanimously adopted by viva voce vote.

The famous resolution, No. 407, which was adopted, follows:

"Whereas, The fundamental law of our country guarantees to all peoples equal rights and equal opportunities and the right to worship their God as they see fit, and,

"Whereas, It provided that our laws shall be made and enforced by representatives of our people, chosen under the law to do so, and,

"Whereas, Membership of the American Legion is made up of those who served our country in time of great national stress without distinction as to race, color, creed, or class, and,

"Whereas, The American Legion is pledged to the orderly enforcement of our laws, through lawful agencies; therefore be it

"Resolved, By the American Legion in national convention assembled that we consider any individual, group of individuals or organization which creates or fosters racial, religious or class strife among our people, or which takes into its own hands the enforcement of laws, determination of guilt or infliction of punishment to be un-American, a menace to our liberties and destructive of our fundamental law; and, be it further

"Resolved, That we consider such action by any individual, groups or organizations to be inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion."

Adopt Americanism Report.

The American Legion report on Americanism was unanimously adopted. It recommended:

Making the national commander ex-officio chairman of the National Americanism commission and the director of its executive offices.

Creating a community and civic betterment bureau of the National Americanism commission, an advisory council and a broad program of community welfare work.

Recommending to the National Finance committee a budget of $33,500, for the regular Americanism work and $10,000 for the community work.

Indorsing the system of scholarships in French universities for Americans, in memory of the dead of the American field service.

Favoring universal physical education for school children.

Urging the teaching in public schools the meaning of the sacrifice of life for one's country.

St. Paul Is Chosen.

Fixing the date for the closing of the national essay contest for school children as April 1 of each year.

Approving the Pennsylvania system of awards to grammar school graduates for good citizenship traits.

Urging that the immigration program of the legion be made a special object of interest the coming year.

Reiterating demand for legislation excluding immigrants ineligible for citizenship.

Demanding cessation of all immigration for five years; selective system of immigration; control at source of immigration, regulation of aliens, raised standards of admission and preference in entrance to families of soldiers and of citizens.

Asking annual registration of all aliens in the United States.

St. Paul was selected for the six annual convention of the American Legion in 1924 by the legion convention here today.

Paris, France, was recommended as the convention city in 1928 on the tenth anniversary of the signing of the armistice.

UNAMERICAN BODIES HIT BY LEGION

Atlanta Georgian 10-19-23

Scathing Report Made on Organizations Formed in Defiance of Constitution.

By COPELAND C. BURG,
Staff Correspondent of the I. N. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Oct. 18.—A report of the resolutions committee assailing un-American organizations, believed to be aimed at the Knights of the Ku-Klux Klan, although not specifically naming the klan, threw the fifth annual convention of the Amerrican Legion into a tumult Thursday.

The report scathingly denounced any organization formed in defiance of the country's constitution, which guarantees equal rights to all, "regardless of race, creed or color."

Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian, and chairman of the all-powerful resolutions committee, appeared confident when he read the resolutions to the convention that they would be adopted with a few dissenting voices.

Important resolutions in the committee's report as submitted to the delegates this morning were as follows:

IMPORTANT RESOLUTIONS.

1. Condemnation of all organizations fostered by racial and religious hatreds.

2. Refusal to indorse American entry in the International Court of Justice.

3. Approval of the French occupation of the Ruhr.

4. Recommendation for a legion commission to investigate methods of bringing about world peace.

5. Suggestion to Congress for the building of a memorial hospital in honor of Gold Star mothers.

6. Expression of sympathy for Japan in its earthquake disaster.

7. Establishment of railway mail service seniority for World War veterans.

8. Testimonial to President Harding's work.

After a conference lasting far into the morning, the resolutions committee, tossed about by the anti-klan resolution for the past three days, finally came to an agreement and submitted its report to the convention. Stormy scenes behind locked doors marked the deliberations of the committee on the klan issue, but it was said the way had been paved for adoption of the report without a fight on the convention floor.

An effort, however, may be made by some of the radical opponents of the klan to attempt to amend the resolution by specifically mentioning the knights.

ORDER DENOUNCED.

The report contained the following denunciation:

"Whereas, the fundamental law of our country guarantees to all peoples equal rights and opportunities and the right to worship God as they see fit, and in that the American Legion includes in its membership ex-service men of every race, creed and color;

"Be it resolved, that the American Legion considers any individuals or organizations which create or foster racial, religions or class strife among our people, or which take into their own hands the enforcement of the law, determination of guilt, or infliction of punishment, to be un-American, a menace to our liberties and destructive to our fundamental law.

"And be it further resolved that the American Legion considers such action by an individual to be inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion."

VOTED AGAINST.

Texas, Oklahoma and New Jersey delegates were reported to have cast votes in committee against the anti-klan resolution and three members of the committee admitted they were members of the Ku-Klux Klan organization.

Only six members of the committee voted to name the Ku-Klux Klan in the resolution, all others casting their votes in favor of the resolution as finally prepared.

Recommendation of the committee that a legion committee be named to investigate plans to bring about world peace was regarded as the answer to requests that the Hughes-Hoover World Court be indorsed. The proposed legion commission would report its findings at the next convention of the veterans.

The Legion was Thursday pledged the united support of organized labor on obtaining passage of an adjusted compensation bill by the coming Congress.

Addressing the fifth annual convention of the Legion, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor told the Legionaires that the bonus was a "debt owed the fighting boys which must be paid" and added that the bill should be passed by the next Congress without further delay.

The report of the committee on Americanism was presented and urged the following program:

Universal education for school children.

Reiteration of demand of exclusion of aliens ineligible to citizenship.

Demand that "smuggling of immigrants be stopped.

Cessation of all immigration for a period of five years to be followed by a selective system of immigration with raised standards for admission.

Registration of all aliens.

Prohibition of child labor under the age of 15.

Klansman Claims Press Stirred the Legion to Attack the Klan—St. Paul Wins Next Year's Convention, While Many War Veterans May Journey to Paris in 1928.

(By the Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—St. Paul was selected for the sixth annual convention of the American Legion in 1924 by the legion convention here today.

Paris, France, was recommended as the convention city in 1928 on the tenth annual anniversary of the signing of the armistice.

(By The Associated Press).

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—A verbal battle over pro-Ku Klux Klan and anti-Klan resolutions, in which the press of the country was charged with trying to split the American Legion over the klan question, raged for several hours at the fourth day's session of the fifth annual American Legion convention here, resulting in the adoption of the "Michigan" anti-Klan resolution which avoids using the name of the hooded order.

A total of 933 delegates made it known that while the legion objects to the klan order, it will not denounce it through a resolution whics calls a spade a spade. With equal force it voted down a resolution the Oklahoma delegates introduced to offset a denunciatory resolution offered by Charles F. Kendrick of San Francisco.

The Resolution Voted.

The resolution which was carried by a roar of "ayes" to the weak cry of a score of "noes" was as follows:

"Resolved by the American Legion in national convention assembled that we consider any individual, group of individuals, or organization, which creates or fosters racial, religious class strife among our people or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt or infliction of punishment, to be un-American, a menace to our liberties, and destructive of our fundamental law and be it further,

"Resolved, that we consider such action by any individual, groups or organizations to be inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion."

Kendrick Resolution Beaten.

The Kendrick resolution which was lost on a roll call vote 815 to 112, with 36 not voting, was as follows:

"Resolved, that the Ku Klux Klan is an organization which is destructive to American principles and ideals, and is unfair to hundreds of thousands of our comrades in arms during the World War. This convention, therefore, most unequivocally denounces the Ku Klux Klan as being an un-American organization and unworthy of membership by loyal American citizens."

Major Kendrick cast a lone ballot for his own resolution in the California deleagtion, the other 36 delegates voting "no." The Oklahoma resolution voted down was submitted by E. W. Whitney, of Oklahoma, who stated he was a member of the klan.

The resolution follows:

"Whereas, the constitution of the American Legion recognizes the rights of the members thereof to their own free opinion in matters of religion and politics, and

"Whereas, the basis of membership in the American Legion is service, irrespective of the religion or politics of the members, now, therefore, be it resolved,

"American Legion adheres to its original purpose and stands for the service man frrespective of belief in religion or politics and welcomes all such to its fold. That within this fold the question of such belief or affiliation be never raised to the prejudice or hurt of any one, but that the spirit of tolerance and good-will be extended to all, irrespective of their belief in or adherence to any society or organization whatsoever, so long as the same does not conflict with allegiance to God and the government of the United States."

Maj. Kendrick's Speech.

Major Kendrick accused the legionnaires of "pussy-footing" the Ku Klux Klan question and announced that he was there to "tear the mask off things and see just where we are."

He said:

"Far be it from me to inject into this convention a religious issue. However, much as I desire that such not be the case, there is a religious here and there has been one for more than two years. The only way to meet the issue is to meet it squarely, meet it face to face, the same as we met other issues in times gone by.

"We can't pussy-foot in this organization and get anywhere. Let's tear the mask off of things and see just where we are.

"You all know just as well as I do what happened in New Orleans. You know perfectly well that Bill (William) Deegan's candidacy was proposed down there and the most important factor regarding him was his religion."

Maj. Kendrick withdrew the statement when it was objected to by California delegates and said:

"I withdraw the statement that you all know it and merely say that I know it, and let me get a little closer to home with you. In Kansas City my name was proposed throughout the convention as a probable candidate for commander and on all sides I found my religion was a most interesting matter to men who desired to know whether they should or should not consider me as a possible commander.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 15.—Veterans of St. Mihiel, Chateau-Thierry and Argonne, the unsung heroes of 1917 training camps, and the warriors of the sea went over the top under a barrage of San Francisco's hospitality Monday in opening the fifth annual convention of the American Legion. More than 150,000 delegates and visitors from every state and territory in the union, and from many foreign countries are in attendance.

Twenty thousand Pacific Coast Fleet sailors joined San Francisco residents in welcoming the delegates.

While National Commander Alvin Owsley, of Texas, was calling the convention to order, plans were being made for the opening of sessions of the American Legion Auxiliary and La Societe des 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux, the "mystic shrine" of the legion, both organizations opening their conventions later Monday.

DAVIS SPEAKS.

Among the important addresses of the opening session of the legionnaires was that by James J. Davis, United States Secretary of Labor, who indorsed the legion's stand for further restriction upon immigration to this country. Secretary Davis told the veterans that a selective immigration system was essential to insure the highest citizenship. He congratulated the legion upon its interest in the care of delinquent and homeless citizens.

Admiral R. E. Coontz, commander-in-chief of the United States Fleet, and General Joseph Haller, commander of the army of the Polish republic, also addressed the legionnaires.

Indications at the opening of the convention Monday were that a fight upon the Ku-Klux Klan would prove a big issue before the veterans. Echoes of the attack to be launched upon the klan were heard everywhere in the corridors of the convention hall and various factions were lining up their forces.

ELECTION WARM.

Those opposed to the klan said they would come into the open and denouncement of the organization early in the convention was promised.

Eastern delegates will probably be marshalled against those of the West in the race for the office of national commander. Colonel Joseph Thompson, of Pennsylvania, and John R. Quinn, of California, were widely mentioned as Owsley's successor, while others rallied around James A. Drain, of the District of Columbia.

Restriction of immigration, limitation of air armament and a soldier's bonus campaign were three outstanding policies upon which the various factions were expected to test their strength.

No attack will be made upon the policies governing the United States Veterans' Bureau, it was said, and many prominent legion leaders are making a stand for unqualified indorsement of the bureau's activities.

Leaders Fear Issue May Split the American Legion — Anti-Bonus Delegates Show Strength in Committees.

(By The Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—The American Legion tonight closed the third day of its fifth national convention with two of the foremost questions before it hanging in the balance.

The first barrier was the stand of the Michigan delegation for the complete repudiation of the Ku Klux Klan. The second impediment to harmonious continuance was the organization of a San Francisco unit of the organization to fight on the floor any resolution favoring compensation of ex-service men.

Late today a spirit of compromise entered the Ku Klux Klan question when the California delegates in caucus voted an "honest neutrality" in matters pertaining to politics, religion and industrial enterprises. This was the first sign of break in a situation which legion officials admitted was threatening the existence of the legion as an active organization.

Michigan Will Press It.

Michigan delegates stated that they would fight on the floor of the convention to force through the resolution drawn up by James E. Hunt, of Mount Pleasant, Mich., in which the legion will be called upon tomorrow or Friday to renounce the klan as "un-American in fact," and "contrary to the very principles for which the American Legion stands."

When the resolutions committee resumed its session here late today it faced a third all night meeting, according to members of the committee.

The resolutions committee, its members said, is split wide open on the question of the legion's attitude on the Ku Klux Klan question. Officers of the American Legion, it is said, strongly advised the committee to ignore the question.

Openly Anti-Klan.

The sentiment on the floor of the convention is openly anti-Ku Klux Klan and it is freely predicted that any resolutions favoring the denouncing of the klan by the legion will be substantially adopted.

The formation of an anti-bonus league here dispelled the hope that the compensation committee would finally work out a resolution in committee that would be acceptable to the entire convention, legion officials stated tonight. The anti-bonus organization selected Lieut.-Commander William C. Van Antwerp, of San Francisco, member of the legion national advisory council as chairman and Lieut. Edward H. Clarke, as secretary.

"For the disabled, everything; for the able bodied, nothing," will be the demand of the anti-bonus faction, Mr. Van Antwerp stated.

Failures of any of the committees to get together forced an early adjournment of the third day's session of the legion convention at an early hour today. With all night sessions facing several of the most vital committees, it was the hope of the officers of the legion that the full convention could proceed tomorrow.

Robert E. Bondy, representing the American Red Cross; William J. McGinley, supreme secretary of the Knights of Columbus, and Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, addressed the legionnaires at today's session.

Four Heroes Welcomed.

Four wearers of the Congressional Medal of Honor were welcomed by the legion delegates. They were: Isabelle Stambaugh of Philadelphia; Earl D. Gregory, Virginia; Louis Van Insel, Los Angeles and Joseph H. Thompson, Beaver Falls, Pa.

The latest tricks of the air as developed by the army, navy and Marines, were shown here at Crissy Field, during the "national defense day" celebration. Bombing of a toy fort, sky to land communications and night fireworks from air planes were the features of the air programme.

The largest combined army and navy aircraft squadron that ever took part in an inter-city flight arrived here from San Diego to join in the legion events, according to Major Harris C. Alten, legion convention aviation chairman. Eighteen combat, torpedo and scout planes with Albert Marshall in command, comprised the Pacific fleet air force.

Michigan Delegation Expected to Offer Resolution Condemning K. K. K. in Most Emphatic Terms

Resolution Against Klan

American Legion Fails To Take Action on Admission Of Negroes in the South

Resolution Providing for Such Recognition Is Killed in Committee—But Legion Takes Strong Stand Against Ku Klux Klan and Similar Organizations.

San Francisco, Calif.—The fifth national convention of the American Legion convened at San Francisco, October 15-19, inclusive. No action was taken on resolution to secure Negro's Legion membership in the South.

New York Age

This great body of ex-service men of the World War reaffirmed its allegiance to the ideal of loyalty to the disabled comrade, of making this a land of 100 per cent Americanism by upholding law and order and propagating the ideals of equality, justice and democracy for which it fought.

10-13-23

Condemns Ku Klux Klan.

Emphatic evidence of this was given in the endorsement of socalled resolution No. 407 which condemned the Ku Klux Klan constitution and I. W. W., and other such organizations which tend to destroy the principles for which America's best fought. The resolution was as follows:

Whereas, the fundamental law of our country guarantees to all peoples equal rights and equal opportunities and the right to worship God as they see fit, and

Whereas, it is provided that our laws shall be made and enforced by representatives of our people, chosen under the law so to do, and

Whereas, membership of the American Legion is made up of those who served our country in time of great national stress without distinction as to race, color, creed or class, and

Whereas, the American Legion is pledged to the orderly enforcement of our laws through lawful agencies; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the American Legion, in national convention assembled this 17th day of October, 1923, that we consider any individual, group of individuals or organizations which creates or fosters racial, religious or class strife among our people, or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt, or infliction of punishment, to be un-American, a menace to our liberties and destructive of our fundamental law; and be it further

Resolved, that we consider such action by any individual, group or organizations to be inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion.

No Action in Negro's Favor.

This resolution was the most important one of the convention and we believe that much good will come out of the decided stand taken by the Legion.

Other resolutions were introduced and referred to committees which were of interest to the colored ex-service man.

A resolution offered by New Jersey sought the endorsement of steps to secure a complete colored personnel for the Tuskegee Hospital. Action to that effect having been promised by the director of the United States Veterans' Bureau it was not acted upon.

Other resolutions asking for a Negro legionnaire to be appointed to the national executive committee; of devising means to secure charters for eligible ex-service men of the South who were disbarred by their color from joining the Legion by the Departments of their respective states, were killed in the committee rooms, through indifference on the part of the Northern delegates and opposition on the part of the South.

Negro delegates present were Dr. Jonathan C. Gibbs of Trenton, N. J.; Capt. W. A. Hamilton of Washington, D. C.; Capt. Emmett Brown of St Louis, Mo.; Commander Jas. E. Franklin of Denver, Colo., and Lieut Henry E. Dunn of Indianapolis, Ind. These were the only Negro delegates out of nearly 1,000 convention.

Capt. John [illegible]nes and Howard Duke of Witchita, Kan.; Lieutenants Dennis G. Matthews and Norman Hughson of Los Angeles, and A. P. Alberga of San Francisco, were also in attendance.

Extensive and elaborate social diversions were arranged for colored visiting Legionnaires by Lieut A. P. Alberga of San Francisco, who worked unceasingly to provide for their entertainment. Lieut. Alberga is a real race man and formerly fought with the 365th in A. E. F.

The Negro has a real future in the American Legion, but he must increase his strength where possible and more actively assert his interest in his disabled comrade and the welfare of the nation in peace.

CHOOSE ST. PAUL FOR 1924

And Pick Paris for 1928 Convention on Armistice Decennial—Gompers Calls for Bonus.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—A bitter anti-Ku Klux Klan resolution, submitted by Charles Kendrick of San Francisco and a pro-Ku Klux Klan resolution, submitted by E. W. Whitney of Oklahoma, were both defeated at the Fifth Annual Convention of the American Legion, here today, after one of the most bitter fights in the history of the organization.

The resolution of the Michigan delegates, which delegates termed a mild denunciation of the Klan, was almost unanimously adopted.

St. Paul was selected for the sixth annual convention of the American Legion in 1924 by the Legion convention here today. Paris, France, was recommended as the convention city in 1928 on the tenth annual anniversary of the signing of the Armistice.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, declared in his address to the convention today that one of the greatest obligations the Unitel States Government owes to ex-service men is the belated compensation. He received a big ovation.

The greatest outburst of the American Legion convention thus far came this afternoon when the original Ku Klux Klan resolution was read by Thomas W. Miller of Delaware.

Kansas delegates moved that the Ku Klux Klan resolution be taken out of the resolutions report and tabled.

Washington delegates said that if any part of the resolutions report was tabled the whole report would have to be tabled.

The Kansas motion was seconded by Indiana, but was lost by a tremendous roar of no.

Delegates Boo Owsley.

However, Commander Owsley said he was "in doubt" and the delegates began to boo the Chairman.

Chairman Miller of the committee then moved that the entire Resolutions Com- ...t be adopted. This was ...ves."

...ew his motion ...s a whole, and asked that the report be adopted with the exception of the Ku Klux Klan resolution. This was carried, leaving only the Klan resolution before the convention.

Major Charles Kendrick of San Francisco took the floor and asked for a substitute resolution for the Ku Klux Klan resolution, known as "Resolution 467." The substitute resolution which he then offered called for a complete denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan.

Major Kendrick, in offering his substitute resolution, said:

"Far be it from me to see injected into this convention a religious issue. But there is a religious issue here and has been for two years. [Loud cries of 'No.']

"We cannot pussyfoot here. Let us tear the mask off things and face them as they are.

"We all know that when Deegan's name was proposed for Commander that he was defeated on account of his religion."

This was greeted by cries of "No," and Kendrick withdrew the words. His substitute resolution was then voted down, 815 to 142, with thirty-six absentees not voting.

Thereupon Oklahoma delegates offered another substitute resolution which called upon the Legion to adhere to its original position and stand for the legionnaire irrespective of a man's belief or his membership in any society. This also was lost.

Finally the original Michigan resolution was put to a vote and carried.

Texts of the 3 Klan Resolutions.

The resolution of the Michigan delegates condemning the Ku Klux Klan, which was adopted, was as follows:

"Whereas the fundamental law of our country guarantees to all peoples equal rights and equal opportunities and the right to worship their God as they see fit; and,

"Whereas it is provided that our laws shall be made and enforced by representatives of our people, chosen under the law to do so; * * * therefore be it

"Resolved by the American Legion, * * * That we consider any individual, group of individuals or organizations which creates or fosters racial, religious or class strife among our people, or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt or infliction of punishment to be un-American, a menace to our liberties and destructive of our fundamental law; and be it further

"Resolved, That we consider such action by any individual group or organization to be inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion."

The drastic anti-klan resolution, submitted by Charles Kendrick of San Francisco, which was defeated, was as follows:

"Resolved, That the Ku Klux Klan is an organization destructive to American principles and ideals and was unfair to hundreds of thousands of American soldiers during the World War.

"Therefore this convention denounces the Ku Klux Klan as an organization of disloyal citizens."

Oklahoma's resolution, which was submitted by E. W. Whitney, who stated to the press that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and was lost by a roar of "no," was as follows:

"Resolved, That the American Legion adheres to its original purpose and stands for the service man irrespective of belief in religion or politics, and welcomes all such to its fold. That within this fold such queston or affiliation be never raised to the prejudice or hurt of any one, but the spirit of tolerance and good-will be extended to all, irrespective of their belief in or adherence to any society or organization whatsoever as long as the same does not conflict with allegiance to God and the Government of the United States.

Gompers Calls Labor Ally of Legion.

In his address President Gompers declared that "the American Federation of Labor stands side by side with the American Legion in everything.

"First of all, we both want to maintain the integrity of the Republic of the United States. No man is more opposed to war than I am, but after the United States entered the war I threw pacifism to the winds and became a decent sort of fighting man."

He urged the American Legion to help the American Federation of Labor obtain a child labor law.

The American Legion Rehabilitation Committee's report to the fifth annual American Legion convention, urging that first consideration be given for the hospitalization and rehabilitation of disabled ex-service men, was unanimously adopted this afternoon.

Legion and Ku Klux

The American Legion, in convention at San Francisco last Thursday, adopted after bitter debate a resolution from which we quote this salient pronouncement:

"We consider any individual, group of individuals or organization which creates or fosters racial, religious or class strife among our people or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt or infliction of punishment, to be un-American, a menace to our liberties and destructive of our fundamental law."

Ku Kluxism, forcing itself upon the legion convention, produced there the same bitterness of feeling and dissensions that have marked its invasion of church circles, law enforcement fields and community life pretty much the country over. The phrase "100 per cent Americanism," adopted as a legion slogan under an interpretation acceptable to all of its members and approved by all patriotic Americans, has been "borrowed" by the new ism and given a twisted significance offensive to many legionnaires. The sinister discriminations worked by the "invisible empire," under cover of that borrowed and twisted watchword, evidently have penetrated the ranks of the world war veterans as they have provoked strife and division in the ranks of American citizenship generally. So the legion convention was summoned to face the issue squarely and in the open.

The resolution from which we have quoted constitutes as we think an adequate and manly response to that summons. It has been criticized as weak because it does not go the full length demanded by some of the legionnaires. Yet without naming Ku Kluxism specifically, it condemns clearly and forcefully all the evils identified in the popular mind with that masked and secret order. It draws a straight and ineradicable line between true Americanism and the Ku Klux substitute therefor. The klan contingent within and without the legion, try as they may, cannot break the force of this pronouncement nor twist it from its plain and straightforward meaning.

But the fight on the convention floor will leave scars upon the legion itself that may be worn proudly and honorably. Men who fought shoulder to shoulder in France, serving the same flag, the same country and the same cause with equal valor and devotion, are thrust apart by the cult that has rise nto plague their country and break their comradeship. The bitterness of the debate in the legion committee room and convention hall adds one more to the already too numerous examples of the evils Ku Kluxism is bringing upon the American republic and the American people and upon the klan's own misguided membership.

A. L. KLUX STRADDLE

DIRECT ANTI-KLAN RESOLUTION AT AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION VOTED DOWN BY OVERWHELMING MAJORITY—RESOLUTION NOT NAMING ANY ORGANIZATION ADOPTED—CONN. SOLID FOR ANTI-KLUX AND MOST OF MASS.

San Francisco, Oct. 18, 1923—The American Legion was shaken well-nigh to its foundations today over the issue of Ku Klux Klanism, but the advocates of a middle course finally prevailed.

For the first time in the history of the veterans organization, the question that has been the bone of bitter contention in many an individual post was brought into the open for full consideration by the convention and for clean-cut decision.

That decision was to support those who believe that "any individual, group of individuals, or organization which creates or fosters racial, religious or class strife among our people, or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt or infliction of punishment, to be un-American, a menace to our liberties, and destructive of our fundamental law," as well as "inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion." 10-20-23

Such is the wording the resolution adopted by the c ntion today by an overwhelming It names no organization.

Kendrick Aim Klan

The vote on this tion came after the crucial de Klanism had been met. That fight was one which the delegates will long remember, and one in which Massachusetts and Connecticut as States, and Charles H. Kendrick, formerly of the 26th Division, as an individual took leading roles.

"I cannot equivocate," said Maj. Kendrick in effect, as he offered a concisely worded resolution aimed directly at the Klan. Massachusetts backed him, 31 to 4, and Connecticut to the last man.

It was a right royal fight among the New England delegations. For the Kendrick resolution, Connecticut stood as a unit. Massachusetts cast 31 for the Kendrick resolution and four against it. Maine's vote was 12 to one against the Kendrick resolution. Vermont voted five in favor of the resolution and four against, New Hampshire and Rhode Island were solid against.

St. Paul For Convention Next Year, Paris In 1928

San Francisco, Oct. 18, 1923—St. Paul was selected for the sixth annual convention of the American Legion in 1924, by the Legion convention here today. Paris, France, was recommended as the convention city in 1928 on the 10th anniversary of the signing of the armistice.

The report on Americanism, unanimously adopted, included recommendations for a budget of $33,500 for the Americanism work and $10,000 for community work; demanding cessation of all immigration for five years; control at source of immigration; annual registration of aliens in the United States; raised standards of admission; demanding exclusion of conscientious objectors and slackers; denouncing the Third Internationale; commending the American Federation of Labor for its condemnation of radical groups; opposing the recognition of Soviet Russia; indorsing the Boy Scout movement and urging Legion posts to adopt Boy Scout troops.

KLAN CONDEMNED NOT DENOUNCED BY LEGIONNAIRES

St. Paul Chosen as 1925 Convention City.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 18.—A bitter anti-Ku Klux Klan resolution, submitted by Charles Kendrick of San Francisco and a pro-Ku Klux Klan resolution, submitted by E. W. Whitney of Oklahoma, were both lost when put to a vote at the fifth annual convention of the American Legion here today after one of the most bitter fights in the history of the legion.

The resolution of the Michigan delegates, condemning the klan in milder terms, was almost unanimously carried before adjournment was taken.

St. Paul was chosen as the 1925 convention city.

A general argument by many delegates from all sections of the country followed the introduction of the Oklahoma substitute resolution eliminating all reference to the klan.

Say Legion Is Threatened.

Many speakers said that for the first time the question of religion and class bodies and class organizations was threatening the life of the legion.

Kansas delegates' motion to table the Ku Klux Klan resolution was seconded by Indiana, but was lost by a tremendous roar of "No."

Chairman Miller of the committee then moved that the entire resolutions committee report be adopted. This was greeted by a roar of "Yes."

Resolution Voted Down.

Maj. Charles Kendrick took the floor and asked for a subresolution for the Ku Klux Klan resolution in the committee report, after which Chairman Miller withdrew his motion and asked that the report be adopted with the exception of the Ku Klux Klan resolution. This was carried, and Kendrick introduced his resolution, which was voted down, 815 to 142.

This brought back on the floor the original "resolution 407," which is termed "a mild denunciation of the klan." This was passed almost unanimously.

In sponsoring his resolution Kendrick said:

"Far be it from me to see injected into this convention a religious issue. But there is a religious issue here and has been for two years. We cannot pussyfoot here. Let us tear the mask off things and face them as they are.

Denounces the Klan.

"Therefore I offer a substitute motion as follows:

"'Resolved, That the Ku Klux Klan is an organization destructive to American principles and ideals and was unfair to hundreds of thousands of American soldiers during the world war.

"'Therefore this convention denounces the Ku Klux Klan as an organization of disloyal citizens.'"

Voted by Legion.

The Michigan resolution, which was adopted, follows:

"Whereas, The fundamental law of our country guarantees to all peoples equal rights and equal opportunities and the right to worship their God as they see fit; and,

"Whereas, It is provided that our laws shall be made and enforced by representatives of our people, chosen under the law to do so; and,

"Whereas, Membership of the American Legion is made up of those who served our country in time of great national stress without distinction as to race, color, creed, or class; and,

"Whereas, The American Legion is pledged to the orderly enforcement of our laws through lawful agencies therefore be it

"Resolved by the American Legion That we consider any individual group of individuals, or organizations which creates or fosters racial, religious, or class strife among our people, or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt, or infliction of punishment to be un-American, a menace to our liberties and destructive of our fundamental law; and be it further

"Resolved, That we consider such action by any individual, groups, or organization to be inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion."

The Oklahoma Substitute.

Oklahoma's resolution, which was lost, called for the Legion to adhere to its original position and stand for the legionnaire irrespective of a man's belief or his membership in any society.

Other resolutions adopted:

Indorsing French occupation of the Ruhr.

Denouncing the third internationale.

Commending the American Federation of Labor for its condemnation of radical groups.

Oppose Soviet Recognition.

Opposing the recognition of soviet Russia.

Creating a committee of the national Americanism commission charged with bettering relationships between Americans and nationals of Latin American countries.

Thanking the American Legion auxiliary for its coöperation in Americanism work.

Indorsing the Boy Scout movement and urging Legion posts to adopt Boy Scout troops.

Asking laws in each state providing for the display of the United States flag at all public gatherings

RELIGION DEFEATED DEEGAN, IS CHARGE

Delegates "Boo" When Owsley Expresses Doubt on Vote.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—A bitter anti-Ku Klux Klan resolution, submitted by Charles Kendrick of San Francisco and a pro-Ku Klux Klan resolution, submitted by E. W. Whitney of Oklahoma, were both lost when put to a vote at the fifth annual convention of tht American Legion here today after one of the most bitter fights in the history of the legion.

The resolution of the Michigan delegate condemning the klan in milder terms was almost unanimously carried before adjournment was taken until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The greatest outburst of the fifth annual convention was recorded when Resolution 407, the Ku Klux Klan resolution, was read by Thomas W. Miller of Delaware.

Kansas delegates moved that the Ku Klux Klan resolution be taken out of the report and tabled.

Washington delegates said that if any part of the resolutions report was tabled the whole report would have to be tabled.

New Orleans

Delegates "Boo" Owsley.

Kansas delegates' motion to table the Ku Klux Klan resolution was seconded by Indiana, but was lost, by a tremendous roar of "no."

However, Commander Owsley said he was "in doubt," and the delegates began to "boo." The chairman of the committee then moved that the entire resolutions committee's report be adopted. This was greted by a roar of "yes."

Major Charles Kendrick took the floor an asked for a sub-resolution for the Ku Klux Klan resolution known as "Resolution 407."

Chairman Miller withdrew his motion to adopt the resolution as a whole and asked that the report be adopted with the exception of the Ku Klux Klan resolution. This was carried, leaving only the klan resolution before the convention.

Although Resolution 407 did not mention the Ku Klux Klan, the delegates in their discussion said it referred to the Ku Klux Klan.

Calls for Klan Denunciation.

The substitute resolution offered by Charles Kendrick of San Francisco, calling for a complete denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan, was voted down by a vote of 815 to 142, absent and not voting 36.

This brought back on the floor the original "Resolution 407" which is termed "a mild denunciation of the klan."

Kendrick said:

"Far be it from me to see injected into this convention a religious issue. But there is a religious issue and there has been for two years (loud cries of 'No' greeted him.)

"We cannot pussyfoot here. Let us tear the mask off things and face them as they are.

"We all know that when Deegan's name was proposed for [illegible] then he was defeated on account of his religion."

Times-Picayune

This was greeted by cries of "no" and Kendrick withdrew the words, "Well, I know it," he said, Kendrick resumed:

"Therefore, I offer a submotion as follows:

"Resolved, that the Ku Klux Klan is an organization destructive to American principles and ideals and was unfair to hundreds of thousands of American soldiers during the world war.

"Therefore this convention denounces the Ku Klux Klan as an organization of disloyal citizens."

The question was seconded by Quinn of Maine.

Kendrick told the convention that during the war the country did not know whether a man was a Catholic, Jew or negro.

He said:

"It is high time for the American Legion to stand for what it says it stands for, that we show the courage we had during the war.

"Are we less Americans than the American Federation of Labor? They haven't pussyfooted on the question of the K. K. K. They have as many legionnaires as we have and they have gone on record as opposing the klan. I submit my substitute depending upon the manhood of this legion to adopt my substitute."

Oklahoma Substitute.

Oklahoma's substitute called for the legion to adhere to its original position and stand for the legionaire irrespective of a man's belief or his membership in any society.

The Oklahoma sub-resolution was lost by a roar of nays which swamped the few yeas.

The resolution, which was submitted by E. W. Whitney, who stated to the press that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, reads as follows:

"Whereas, the constitution of the American Legion recognizes the rights of the members thereof of their own free opinion in matters of religious and politics, and,

"Whereas, the basis of membership in the American Legion is service irrespective of the religious or politics of the member, now therefore be it,

"Resolved that the American Legion adheres to its original purpose and stands for the service man irrespective of belief in religion or politics and welcomes all such to its fold. That within this fold the question of such question or affiliation be never raised to the prejudice or hurt of anyone, but the spirit of tolerance and good will be extended to all irrespective of their belief in adherence to any society or organization whatsoever, as long the same does not conflict with allegiance to God and the governme of the United States."

A general argument by many delegates from all sections of the country followed the introduction of Oklahoma's substitute resolution eliminating all reference to the klan.

Many speakers said that for the first time the question of religion and class bodies and class organizations was threatening the life of the legion.

Delegate Good of Massachusetts stated that the adoption of a resolution similar to Oklahoma's caused the immediate loss of 750 members of the legion in one post.

Resolution Adopted.

The famous resolution No. 407 follows:

"Whereas, the fundamental law of our country guarantees to all peoples equal rights and equal opportunities and the right to worship their God as they see fit, and,

"Whereas, it is provided that our laws shall be made and enforced by representatives of our people, chosen under the law to do so, and,

"Whereas, membership of the American Legion is made up of those who served our country in time of great national stress without distinction as to race, color, creed, or class, and,

"Whereas, the American Legion is pledged to the orderly enforcement of our laws through lawful agencies; therefore be it,

"Resolved by the American Legion in national convention assembled, that we consider any individual, group of individuals or organizations which creates, or fosters racial, religious, or class strife among our people, or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of law, determination of guilt or infliction of punishment to be un-American, a menace to our liberties and destructive of our fundamental law; and be it further,

"Resolved that we consider such action by any individual groups or organization to be inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion."

The original resolutions committee report covering "resolution 407," Michigan's resolution on the Ku Klux Klan, was carried by a second roar of "yes."

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 20.—Advices received today by The Arkansas Democrat from its correspondent at Heber Springs included a report that two men had ben whipped there yesterday and ordered from town. The men, alleged strike sympathizers, are said to have been questioned Thursday night by a "citizens' committee."

Virtually every striker or strike sympathizer was reported to have either left that vicinity or was preparing to leave.

A telephone message from Heber Springs today stated that a "railroad labor board" for Cleburne County had been formed there and would supplant the "citizens' committee" which had been conducting an investigation into depredations along the line of the railroad.

HARRISON, Ark., Jan. 20.—The Grand Jury which returned eighteen indictments yesterday in connection with recent bridge burnings and other depredations along the Missouri & North Arkansas Railroad wil reconvene on Jan. 29 to continue investigation of the tying up of the railroad at several points, as well as the lynching near here last Tuesday of D. C. Gregor, a striking shopman. Adjournment of the Grand Jury was ordered today to permit Circuit Judge J. M. Shinn to open court in Marion County.

THE NEGRO RACE VS. ARKANSAS.

Not technically, of course, but actually the case in which the Supreme Court of the United States heard argument yesterday was The Negro Race vs. the Sovereign State of Arkansas. Moorfield Storey was secretary to Senator Charles Sumner in the Reconstruction K. K. K. days, former president of the American Bar Association and now president of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, made a fervent plea for the lives of five negroes, who were among the victims of peonage in the neighborhood of Helena, who attended the meeting to protest against such peonage in a colored church at Hoop Spur, which was fired into by a white mob and who were charged with killing somebody in self defense, according to Mr. Storey's argument. That the violence was begun by the whites was the consensus of the newspaper stories at the time. But white courts convicted these men of murder and a white judge sentenced them to death. Only the United States courts prevented quick execution by writs of habeas corpus.

We suppose the puzzle offered to the distinguished members of the Supreme Court in Washington is in its way graver than any ever faced before. Mr. Justice Holmes is quoted as saying flatly that the situation appears to be one which requires the Supreme Court in the interest of justice to inquire whether it is not warranted in taking jurisdiction "without stopping at technicalities."

Yet is it a serious matter to arraign a sovereign State as controlled by the spirit of mob violence and it is a possibly troublesome precedent to permit future cases of the same sort to be brought up to this court. Technically, as a matter of law, we imagine the State's Attorney General has the stronger case. Possibly, despite the view of Mr. Justice Holmes, technicalities may govern. But if they do, the feeling of the Negroes all over the United States that the courts are no defense to their rights will be markedly emphasized and accentuated.

ORGANIZATION OF MOB REVEALS KU KLUX TOUCH.

Governor, Supported by Invisible Empire, Never Raised Hand to Restore Authority.

By Oliver H. P. Garrett.
(Staff Correspondent of The World.)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 10.—A railroad strike which results in the uprising of an entire community to stamp it out by violence is, to say the least, an unusual event in the history of strikes. Most extraordinary is the strike on the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad, which so embittered the inhabitants of the country around Harrison, Ark., that they descended upon the place in armed numbers, herded the strikers into a bull pen and later lynched E. C. Gregor, himself a striker, but who, in this case, had not taken part in the depredations committed by the strikers upon the road.

Why should a strike upon a relatively insignificant and almost unknown railroad result in the remarkable conditions that confront the authorities of the county and of the State of Arkansas? What does this railroad, a struggling independent line that runs through the heart of the Ozark Mountains between Joplin, Mo., and Helena, Ark., mean to the life of that section? What has been its effect upon that hitherto little developed region that should make the interruption of its service and the destruction of its property so outrage the community that they arose and took human life?

To answer these questions, the correspondent of The World has made personal investigation and study of the whole situation. The result is a fascinating story.

Interview With Governor.

A highly interesting feature that stands out is this:

In an interview with the correspondent of The World Gov. McRae further showed his open sympathy with their seizure of the functions of government. Like everyone else in or out of official life, here or in Harrison, he made a gesture of abhorrence at the hanging of Gregor. And he said he had urged the Legislature to expose every case of violation of the law.

On the other hand he said he had no intention of directing the Attorney General to go to Harrison to investigate and prosecute cases of violation of the law, but would leave that to the local officials. And he insisted that the people of Harrison are honest, law abiding citizens who were goaded beyond their limit of endurance by the strikers.

"What would you do," he asked, "if your life and those of your family were endangered by the depredations of strikers against a railroad which had done everything possible to meet their demands?"

And still another important feature of the matter is that, supporting and inspiring the rioters in their depredations, there looms the organization of the Ku Klux Klan.

In order to understand fully the situation in Harrison and its neighboring towns it is necessary to dip a little into history which has never been told completely.

The Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad was built as an independent line more than fifteen years ago by a group of St. Louis capitalists. For the most part it cuts through the heart of the Ozarks, until then a beautiful but little developed region having as its terminals Joplin, Mo., and Helena, Ark., across the Mississippi from Memphis.

The road consists of a single set of tracks over which run only two trains a day, one northwest and the other southeast. Under the stimulus of this road the Ozark region became more but never better than sparsely settled. Sawmills clung to the slopes of the hills and cut the loveliness, in the form of hard timber, out of the forests, leaving the hills in an ugly state of baldness, scarred with rocks and tree stumps. Farmers began to work the soil, producing corn, and a fruit industry, with strawberries and apples as the basis, began to develop.

But this was a slow development. The road languished. In 1912 it went into the hands of a receiver. The receiver managed to keep trains running, the freight service being the most vital feature. The towns of Heber Springs, in Cleburne County, Leslie, Marshall and Starcy came to life in the form of clusters of huts about the timber yards. They depended absolutely on the railroad for sustenance. The nearest point of the Missouri Pacific, a trunk line, lay from twenty-five to sixty miles away. Harrison, the biggest town of all, with a population of 3,000, alone could in a pinch depend on a branch of the Missouri Pacific which touches Bergman, ten miles from Harrison.

Railroads Had War.

During the war the Government took over the Missouri and North Arkansas, but not until after it appeared that efforts by other lines were being made to wreck it. With the increase of wages to the union workers on all the roads those of the union men employed on this line were increased. In the operation of the M. and N. A. the Government steadily lost money, but as the Government paid the deficit, the farmers of the region did not suffer.

But the road was turned back to the owners a losing property with a high scale of wages in effect. The road sought to cut the wages, but at the time the Railroad Labor Board in Chicago upheld them. Feb. 1, 1921, came the nationwide strike of the railroad shopmen. Those employed on the M. and N. A. walked out with the rest.

Although the Ozark region is singularly weak, so far as organized labor isc concerned, the only international unions being those of the railroad crafts, the residents at first supported the strikers. The strikers were almost entirely native-born men, raised in the same towns and farms in that region as the other residents. The shibboleth of foreigner and Bolshevist connected by the farmers with union labor in general did not apply to them.

Trainmen Walk Out.

Feb. 26, 1921, the trainmen walked out on strike. For a time it threatened to tie up the road completely. But the management brought in non-union labor and paid to them the reduced wages it had sought to apply to the union men in vain. Then began the slow growth of hatred in the Ozark region for all unions and the railroad unions in particular.

Members of the Grand Lodge of the railroad crafts who came to Harrison and stopped off at George O'Neil's Hotel Midway to see how the strike was being conducted, were waited upon by a band of armed men who invited them to get out of town at once and never come back. They left town. The farmers were brought into town, it has since been shown, on a special train provided by the railroad from Leslie, on which some, if not all, of the armed men rode on railroad passes.

At this time P. J., "Pete" Venable, came into Harrison to direct the strike. Mild forms of sabotage began to be noticed. Water tanks were tampered with, blue vitriol being put in the water so that it would ruin the engines. Emery dust was found in delicate parts of the rolling stock, making them impossible to run. Bombs were found in the coal bins behind the engines.

The road struggled along until August, 1921. Then it closed down. For eight months not a wheel turned on that road. Starvation and financial ruin sat on the doorsteps of the little frame huts. The Red Cross was called into Leslie to feed the residents who were without any food. Strawberry crops, apple crops, and a score of other crops rotted. Hard timber piled up in the yards with no means of exit to a market crying for it.

Uses Carts and Trucks.

Desperate efforts were made to cart these articles by truck and wagon over the rutted Arkansas roads, but the dirt roads could not respond to the traffic. They became impassable. Hatred for the strikers, who sat comfortably in their homes drawing strike benefits and doing no work, grew among the farmers. In many cases it developed to a point where brother did not speak to brother. Father refused even to nod to son. And the women became just as bitter as the men.

During the winter hope sprang up for a renewal of the road. St. Louis capitalists who had not been involved in the previous unfortunate venture, bought in the road and borrowed $3,-[illegible],000 from the Government. New rolling stock was bought. Shops were put up in Harrison. J. C. Murray, an employee of the previous administration of the road, was put in as Vice President and General Manager.

Mr. Murray went before the Wage Labor Board in Chicago. He quoted facts and figures for the road, showing the scarcity of travel and the low cost of living to the workers. He also announced that the residents of the region had agreed to higher freight rates than on other roads in order to enable the road to run. The board decided that a 25 per cent cut from the standard union wages was a fair figure for the union men.

Mr. Murray returned to Harrison. He called in the leaders of all the strikers. He told them the Wage Board's decision. To that he added the promise that if the road exceeded the nominal profit—which he named—the balance would be divided pro rata among the workers. Every union leader declined the offer abruptly and left the room.

With non-union men the road resumed operation last April. With its resumption began a more active and vicious period of sabotage. Bridges were burned in the middle of the night. Toward the close of last summer the road, which had been making a profit for the first time in its history, reported that the profit had been wiped out because of depredations. Mr. Murray began serving notice on the citizens that unless the depredations were stopped the road could not continue.

Sheriff Fails in Hunt.

Sheriff Shaddox, a lean, ambling mild-eyed man, tried without much success to trace these attacks on the railroad property. It is noticeable that the evidence on which Red Orr and Albert, Butch, Stevens were finally traced and arrested was produced by McInney, a farmer who had gone to work for the railroad. He found in the mud close by a burned bridge the imprint of four automobile tires, all of different treads.

The mud was dug up and the imprints saved. On the strength of further evidence that Stevens had bought five gallons of coal oil the night before and that Orr had told his wife he was going out in the direction of the bridge, the two men were arrested. Later Louis Wise, a third striker, was found to be the owner of an automobile with the same treads on the tires as were found imprinted in the mud by the bridge. He was arrested.

George O'Neil, one of the most prosperous men in the town and owner of the Hotel Midway, furnished bond for Stevens. As a result Stevens skipped his bond and has never been traced. This action of O'Neil came after he had swerved from a strong opponent to a sympathizer of the strikers. It brought the full wrath of the community down on him—and later a whipping. O'Neil says that the real reason for his whipping was that he had made money where others failed and that he recognized among those who whipped him men who were frankly jealous of his success.

Three Are Indicted.

However, the fact remains that Wise, Stevens and Orr were indicted by the Grand Jury. Later when the trouble flared into action in Harrison. Wise and Orr pleaded guilty. They have since said they did so on the advice of Judge Shinn that unless they pleaded guilty he could not guarantee their safety. This was denied to me by Judge Shinn and by all the other officials of the town who insist that Judge Shinn specifically refused to take anything but an unconditional plea of guilty and told the prisoners he would be glad to give them a trial. When they insisted on the guilty plea he sentenced them to long terms in the penitentiary.

In the meantime, Charlie De Goche and his wife were indicted with a number of other strikers. Mrs. De Goche pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct for swearing at the men who opposed the strikers. Her husband and the others were indicted for disorderly conduct when they gathered and threatened to take Orr and Stevens away from the Sheriff immediately after their arrest.

The climax came in the second week in January last. Six bridges were burned out in as many nights. One train narrowly escaped toppling into a chasm. If the train had been going down hill in the other direction it would have plunged over the charred timbers to the rocks 100 feet below.

400 Armed Men Arrive.

As if by a prearranged signal, two special trains, one from the north and one from the south, arrived in Harrison, the headquarters of the strikers, Monday afternoon, Jan. 15. Four hundred men, seething for trouble, poured into the town. Miraculously a Citizens' Committee was formed from citizens of Boone, Carrol, Newton and Cleburne Counties.

Only the names of a few are known. Principal among them, however, was Walter Snapp, a highly respected citizen of Harrison. Under George McInney, a war veteran who served overseas with the 87th Division, the armed farmers were organized into squads, each with a leader. The committee, beginning work at once, sent out word to each squad to go to the home of strikers they named and bring them in for questioning and to search their homes.

When the strikers were brought in they were herded into what became known as the bull pen, a space surrounded by wire and guarded by armed men next to the big red brick Farmers' Trust Building, in which the committee was closeted in an upstairs room, used ordinarily by the Rotary Club.

While all this was going on Circuit Court Judge Shinn was conducting court across the public square from the committee headquarters. In his court he had a petit jury, before whom Prosecuting Attorney Karl Greenhaw was arguing. Sheriff Shaddox was on the floor below outside the room where the Grand Jury was sitting. The noise of the excited men outside, loaded down with every variety of weapon from immense old rifles and ponderous pistols to modern Winchester rifles, shotguns and automatics, brought the jurors to the windows. The astounded officers of the law gasped as their jurors, responding to the electric excitement, ran out of the rooms and joined the mobs below.

All Harrison Joins.

All Harrison was joining the mob, which became more and more unmanageable. In the meantime, E. C. Gregor, a striker who had been working in Missouri during all the depredations and had a perfect alibi, was waited upon by an armed squad. He fired into them. One man is said to have been wounded in the arm and is now in an Oklahoma hospital recovering.

Finally Gregor surrendered and was taken before the Committee of Twelve After he denied to the committee knowing anything of the depredations he was locked up with other prisoners in a small room beside the inquisition chamber. From the window he looked down at the armed crowds and jeered them as cowards.

All night long the crowds of armed and angry men milled about the streets of Harrison, which resemble cowpaths. The homes of the "best citizens" were turned over to them for shelter. The wives of the "best citizens" made them hot coffee.

And while some gulped down the coffee an unruly mob seized on Albert Raash, who had been elected by the votes of the strikers at the last election Night Marshal of Harrison and whipped him just off the public square. It is generally asserted by the residents of the town that all that night and into the next forty-eight hours of wild disturbance, only one man was noticed to have been drinking, and he was a man from another town, known for his periodic sprees.

At midnight, when comparative quiet had come to the town three black-hooded men forced open the door where Gregor and two other prisoners were seated awaiting another grilling in the morning, under guard.

Drops Guns on Them.

One of the men "dropped" two guns on the men in the little room in the Farmers' Trust Building, the most prominent structure, next to the courthouse, in the town. Another beckoned to Gregor silently. Gregor stooped to pick up his coat, but an order restrained him.

Below, it has been said, a motor car, crowded with other masked men, waited. Into it Gregor was pushed. The car sped down a side street and out of town.

Early in the morning a farmer, arriving in his automobile a little late for the excitement, found Gregor's body swinging to a bridge a mile out of town. While he was telling this news to the already inflamed crowd fifty armed men stormed the home of George O'Neil, owner of the Hotel Midway, but no longer its proprietor.

O'Neil was dragged out of bed and soundly whipped while he stood on the road in front of his home shivering in his flannel nightshirt.

Judge Shinn late that afternoon wired to Gov. McRae, requesting him to send militia to Harrison, as the situation there was wholly beyond control. But the Governor, before referring this request to the Legislature, which has sole authority to mobilize troops while it is in session, telegraphed to Sheriff Shaddox for his opinion of the situation. The Sheriff wired back that he had the situation well under control, meaning no doubt that the Committee of Twelve was controlling things, for as a matter of fact the Sheriff was helpless throughout the disorder.

With the arrival of newspapermen the situation eased noticeably. But it was only a few days later that similar demonstrations began in Heber Springs, under the direction of a town Committee of Twelve. In Heber Springs Mayor Vinson was a member of the committee, according to subsequent testimony, and himself warned strikers to leave town and never come back.

A "Mistaken" Assault.

A group of clean-up men from Leslie, who had previously whipped one striker in their own town, came to Heber Springs, and mistaking a card of the United Farmers for a railroad union card, struck a merchant named Casey over the head with a revolver.

So the clean-up went all up and down the line. After five days Walter Snapp announced for the Committee of Twelve in Harrison that that group, representing the four counties, would adjourn pending call by the chairman. He further announced that the committee had been placed on a permanent basis so that each of eight towns would have two representatives on the committee. He urged that each of these towns form their own local committees of twelve for purely local matters. This was done. And armed men, in many instances unauthorized by any town, county or State authority, are parading the roads in the Ozarks, fully armed, vowing open warfare on any union striker who seeks to come back there.

To quote Sheriff Shaddox, "The situation is well under control." But not his.

The explanation given by members of the Committee of Twelve and by other citizens who worked with them of the cause of the trouble and the excuse for taking the law into their own hands was that the civil authorities were not able to proceed rapidly enough to prevent the depredations against the road and that the citizens had their "bellies full."

Members of the Citizens' Committee assert that they turned over nearly all the evidence they gathered to the Grand Jury. This included, they told me, confessions of strikers showing that a small group of the union men had been responsible for the entire sabotage. It also shows, they allege, that poisoned bullets and large stores of ammunition and firearms were found in the homes of Pete Venable and a striker named Jines.

Identity of Hangman.

W. D. Jackson, attorney for the strikers, has said that he has evidence showing the identity of some of those who hung Gregor. This has not been brought out up to the present time.

The Legislative Committee will call both Mr. Murray and Mr. Jackson, representing the two opposite sides of the dispute which directly led to the trouble, before them when the committee goes to Harrison to complete its inquiry late next week.

The committee is largely made up of men openly in sympathy with the strikers. Senator Jake Wilson, President of the Arkansas Senate, himself holds a card showing his membership in the Order of Railroad Conductors.

The committee is powerless to prosecute any cases of violation of the law. Its only purpose seems to develop the facts for public consumption and to turn them over to the Harrison Grand Jury, and to enact a law providing that the assemblage of two or more persons to usurp the powers of government be a felony. Which will be just another law. That the Harrison Grand Jury or any other Grand Jury in the Ozark region will return indictments against anyone but strikers seems impossible.

Back of all this sinister situation the robed and hooded figure of the Ku Klux Klan is rapidly being revealed as the mysterious force that towered behind the Committee of Twelve during its rule of Harrison, and the other towns along the line of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad, which resulted in the banishment of the strikers, the whipping of strike sympathizers and the hanging of Gregor.

Close upon the revelation by The World that the Ku Klux Klan in full regalia conducted a whipping of a resident of Harrison only two weeks before the strike troubles—the first public appearance of the Klan in that hilly region—came the discovery today by the correspondent of The World that information that the Klan stood behind the uprising has reached official quarters.

Strong intimations that the organization of the Klan was used as the backbone for the Harrison uprising, including assertions to that effect by

(Copyright, 1923.)

CAMDEN, Tenn., April 7.—Bench warrants for a dozen to 1[illegible] men, alleged members of the hooded band that overpowered the sheriff, forced entrance to the Camden jail and slaughtered in cold blood Ed Hartley, 50, a prosperous farmer, and his son, George, 22, the night of last October 19, are believed to be imminent.

Revelations that may rival in thrills the sensational denouement at Mer Rouge are impending.

J. Ben Fuqua, appointed as special prosecutor in the notorious Camden mob murders, who was a chief factor in bringing to justice a few years ago the band of "night riders" that terrorized Humphreys County, knows the identity of every man who participated in the Benton County jail raid.

Assisted by J. L. Smith, sheriff of Humphreys County, successor to the martyred Sheriff Stockard, and who has been selected as the chief aid and bodyguard for Prosecutor Fuqua, the latter has obtained clews, material evidence and affidavits sufficient, the authorities indicated, to send every member of the Camden mob to the electric chair.

Judge Robert E. Elkins, presiding over the circuit court of Benton County, has appealed to Gov. Austin Peay for direct and immediate assistance in apprehending and prosecuting the handful of men who clubbed and shot to death the Hartleys, father and son, while Vuid Hartley, 18, another son, was forced to witness their desperate fight for life.

"The governor has promised to act in the matter," Judge Elkins said.

Will Be Guided by Judge Elkins.

Governor Peay told a newspaper man in Nashville last Tuesday that he intended to take the matter up with Judge Elkins and "be governed largely by the judge's recommendation."

A reward of $5,000 and employment of special investigators to assist in strengthening the evidence at hand are believed to have been asked by the judge, but Judge Elkins has declined to discuss this in detail, other than to say he had appealed to the governor "for direct assistance."

Meantime a mysterious "special attorney" has carried a report to the governor declaring "the evidence to be vague." The identity of this attorney is not known in Camden. Judge Elkins never heard of any "special attorney," and Special Prosecutor Fuqua said the existence of a "special attorney" was news to him.

The people here apparently do not realize that the case has been taken out of the hands of the Benton County authorities, but such is true. Not only that, but a specially selected special grand jury still is on the job—a jury in which Judge Elkins and Prosecutor Fusua have expressed the utmost confidence.

Etheldred Morris, attorney general, was sick abed when the circuit court met in special session at Camden to investigate the mob situation. J. Ben Fuqua was sworn in as special prosecutor and will continue in that capacity until the case is brought to a climax. Practically all the investigation made in the case has been under direction of Mr. Fuqua and Sheriff J. L. Smith. Sheriff Smith has been aided largely by Deputy Sheriff R. S. Warren of Humphreys County, and Deputy Sheriff Allie Pafford, of Benton County.

E. G. Flowers, sheriff of Benton County and who was on duty at the jail the night of the mob murders, practically has been relieved of activity in the probe. Sheriff Flowers, whom the people of his county know as "Lijy Green," testified before the special grand jury.

Sheriff Testifies Before Jury.

He said about 25 men were in the mob and that the leaders evidently were entirely familiar with the jail routine, in as much as they knew where to reach up and obtain the keys, hanging over the door, just above his head.

The Camden sheriff said he does not know any member of the mob—couldn't identify any one of the hooded band.

Special Prosecutor Fuqua and Sheriff Smith say "we know every man Jack of them."

They can describe the leader of the jail slaughter, "with his red shirt, white Texan hat and small beady eyes."

They know those of the mob who came from Humphreys County. They know two who have disappeared recently and whence they have gone.

Prosecutor Fuqua and Sheriff Smith vanished from Waverly last Sunday before daybreak. They returned Monday at daybreak.

"We were absent on a mission which was successful and which promises to yield splendid results," they told associates in Waverly, the county seat of Humphreys.

A statement of startling significance was made by Prosecutor Fuqua when he declared "that when 17 killings have been recorded in family feuds covering a period of less than a quarter of a century it is time to make somebody pay."

What he meant by this is speculative. He didn't attempt to explain it.

New Developments Forecast.

But here are next developments, apparently near at hand, in the mob investigation:

Definite action by Gov. Peay.

Issuance by Judge Elkins of bench warrants for at least a dozen suspects.

Organization of posses by Sheriff Smith of Humphreys County, under direction of the judge and special prosecutor.

Reassemblage of the special grand jury.

Everybody knows, but nobody will tell. That is the manner in which the situation in Benton County is depicted.

Fear, terror, anxiety combine to intimidate the citizenship.

Identity of the mob members is not in doubt. There is no mystery about who composed the black hooded band.

Prosecutor Fuqua knows the men who held the horses over in the Whitfield ball park that night.

He knows the person who purchased the rope, what he paid for it and when he bought it. The rope with which the hands of the Hartleys were tied has been positively identified.

The special prosecutor has a black stocking, woman's apparel, left behind by the mob. Holes were punched in it for eyes of the man who wore it over his head "like a witch with her hair hanging down the back," as the disguise was described.

Friends Talk Too Much.

He has the sycamore club with which Ed Hartley was beaten to death before he was riddled.

Prosecutor Fuqua and Sheriff Smith know the size, caliber and manufacture of every pistol carried by the hooded midnight mobmen.

They know from whom some of the pistols were borrowed.

They know whence the mob came and whence they rode away.

They know the men from Humphreys County who joined their hooded brothers across the river in Benton County.

Murder will out, according to an old adage, and when men become too confidential with their kinsmen and friends—

"Well, sometimes one's kin and friends will let things leak," the special prosecutor said.

"Snitching" is the term applied in the underworld of a metropolis.

That's what's happened in the Camden mob investigation.

The hooded marauders have talked too much and to the wrong people, and once a secret begins to leak—it leaks fast.

A strange phase of the situation at Camden is that no outside newspaper has been able to obtain any information from its correspondent in the capital of Benton County. It was with great difficulty that daily newspapers obtained details of the mob the morning after the brutal affair at the jail. Since that time practically no information concerning the investigation has reached the outside world.

The state officials at Nashville have known little of the situation. Former Gov. Alf Taylor offered $1,000 reward. He could have offered $12,000 to $18,000, under authority of the law, or $1,000 for each arrest and conviction. A reward of $5,000, according to people of responsibility in Camden, would obtain justice for law and order.

Fear and Terror Still Exist.

It goes without saying that a feeling of fear and terror is going to prevail in Benton County until the guilty pay the penalty.

In Camden they will tell you of the recent death of "Wash" Brigance, an old citizen, who, in his delirium, screamed out in terror:

"Take them away! Those black-hooded men are going to mob me! They're slipping up behind me!"

People of Camden were afraid to aid in burying Ed and George Hartley. They feared to go about the bodies. They lay all day, practically nude, in the little frame house of the town undertaker, stretched out on the floor. Nobody to offer sympathy to a weeping, frightened widow and her young.

These are illustrations of the situation right in Camden, a town of perhaps 1,000 population, seven miles from where the mob was formed and where former feuds in the Hartley family were staged.

One witness who testified before the special grand jury later signed an affidavit before Special Prosecutor Fuqua. He said:

"I was afraid to tell that jury what I know. There was one man there who looked to me like a friend of the mob leader. I was afraid he'd tell it and I would be killed."

He has since told all he knew and his affidavit will be produced when the mob members are brought to trial.

"When the men who mobbed the Hartleys are safe in jail where they belong and unable to mete vengeance on informers, then we'll have ample witnesses and evidence to convict," said Special Prosecutor Fuqua.

"The people of Benton County are law-abiding," he added. "They want these men brought to justice, although the mob was an outgrowth of a feud, but they hesitate to come forward and take an active hand in backing up the law."

No Blame Rests on "Lijy Green."

The special prosecutor attaches no blame to Sheriff "Lijy Green" Flowers.

"He has done all he could," Mr. Fuqua said, "under the circumstances."

The special grand jury soon to be ordered back to the Camden courthouse includes 13 well known, law-abiding, responsible citizens. They are:

L. E. Davis, foreman, former county judge; a banker and well-to-do farmer.

Henry McKelvey, Elbert McIver, D. W. Presson, C. A. Cowell, John Eaves, B. D. Furr, W. H. Wimberly, C. B. Nance, Vossie Hubbs, Tom Johnson, G. A. Smith and Jake Farrar.

The officer of the jury is J. H. Belyew.

John Hartley, 65, a brother of Ed Hartley, who was mobbed, lives at Eva, Tenn., six miles from Camden. John and his son, Commie, were shot down in February, 1921, by Ed Hartley and his son, George.

Commie was slain, riddled with lead. His father, John, was wounded desperately. He lingered for weeks, and only a rugged constitution brought him out of the valley of the shadows.

Ed Hartley and his sons, George and Vuid, and Will Conley were arrested. The arrests were made by Sheriff J. L. Smith's deputies from Humphreys County, and the prisoners were taken to the jail at Waverly for safe keeping.

All the Hartleys live down in the Seventh district, on Harmon's Creek, seven miles from Camden. Albert Hartley, brother of John and Ed, who was shot seriously during a feud battle seven years ago, was influenced by his wife to leave the community, after he had recovered. He moved to Oklahoma and has made his home there.

Each Side Has Sympathizers.

Neighborhood feeling over the gun battle between brothers and their sons was aroused to a high pitch. Each family faction had its sympathizers.

Ed and George were tried at Camden, before Judge Elkins. A mistrial resulted. They were convicted of manslaughter at the second hearing and sentenced to serve from two to 10 years. Meanwhile Vuid, son of Ed, and Will Conley were awaiting trial as accessories. The four were in jail.

Ed and George had arranged to give bond pending their appeal to the supreme court, a movement which their attorney opposed. Their lawyer was C. N. Frazier, for whose safety, following the mob, neighbors and authorities were in great fear and even advised him to go away for a period. Mr. Frazier, however, is still on the job and offered his services to the prosecution in the mob investigation, but the court declined to permit Mr. Frazier further to expose himself to bodily harm.

About midnight, Oct. 19, last, Sheriff Flowers, who was sleeping in the residence part of the little county jail, was aroused by knocks on a side door. He was alone, except for the presence of his wife, Mrs. Evva Flowers.

"A tall man, masked, caught me by the throat," the sheriff testified before the grand jury. "There were about 25 hooded men with him. They said:

"'We came after the Hartleys, Lijy Green; give us the keys, quick.'

"I told them I didn't have the keys.

Lijy Green Tells Mob Story.

"The leader reached up over the door, above my head, and got the keys. The mob swarmed into jail. My wife began to scream and started out on the porch. She saw the masked men and came back into the house, although they didn't attempt to bother her. The mob ordered me to quiet her. I went into the room with her while the mob was in the jail. I couldn't hear what was going on in there."

The battle inside the jail when the mob seized Ed Hartley and his son, George, was desperate and to the death. Ed's eye almost was gouged out, an arm broken and his body bleeding from a score of wounds. His clothes were torn off his body in the hand-to-hand fight. A blow on the head just as he had been dragged outside the jail ended the life of the elder Hartley. But his body was dragged back behind the jail, while others were pulling at his son. The mob had tied their hands. The members had rope and evidently had intended to hang their victims.

About 50 yards back of the jail they apparently had intended to negotiate a wire fence, on the other side of which was a sycamore tree. This tree was to have been converted into a gallows. The 10 to 20 minutes delay in the jail when Ed and George were fighting for their lives probably caused the mob to abandon the hanging method. Then the fence was a handicap and in addition to that one of their victims was a corpse.

Ed Hartley literally was dragged out of his underwear.

George probably had become so weak that he dropped before the volley of bullets came.

Pour Lead Into Their Bodies.

The physical evidence showed that the mob then had gone up to the bodies, held their pistols just above them and riddled them with bullets at close range. The earth beneath the bodies was torn up with lead.

The bullets cleaved right through the bodies of the men.

The mob escaped in the rear of the jail which, probably, is about 100 yards from the public square.

A 'possum hunter passed the jail at the time the battle was raging inside. He heard the commotion and the yells for help.

The Hartleys were screaming to Sheriff Flowers for assistance.

"Help, sheriff, help," they yelled. But there was no response.

A fifth prisoner in the jail has testified, but he was not regarded as a good witness.

However, one man whose real testimony, and he identified men in the mob without the shadow of a doubt, never has been put before the grand jury, will tell the whole story when the special inquisitorial body is ordered to reconvene by Judge Elkins.

He testified that he heard Ed Hartley exclaim:

"Take your hand off me, ——— ——— ——— ——— you, you ———!"

This witness is held in reserve. His story is blood-curdling.

In fact, it already has been put into affidavit form and is in possesion of Special Prosecutor Fuqua.

Scores Testify at Inquiry.

Probably 75 witnesses were examined by the special grand jury.

Bob Odle, a mail carrier, who lives about 100 yards from the Camden jail, heard the commotion. He was one of the first citizens to rush to the jail.

Frank Leslie, a Camden attorney, was the first to pick up the stocking mask left behind.

If the constituted authorities of Tennessee safeguard the officers of the law in an investigation and trial at Camden and afford absolute protection to witnesses, every man in that mob will be apprehended and convicted.

If the governor of Tennessee responds to the appeal of the circuit judge in that district, the mob members will be run to earth and punished.

When Special Prosecutor Fuqua first went to Camden, accompanied by Sheriff Smith, his chief aide and bodyguard, he said his investigation was hampered.

"Business men in Camden apparently didn't relish my going into their stores or becoming friendly," he said. "Men from the feud district were swarming about the courthouse every day the special grand jury was in session. Witnesses were intimidated in one way or another, talked to before they entered the grand jury room and approached after they left.

"I received threatening letters. I was told by citizens in Camden to be careful and advised not to go out on the streets after night."

"And this reign of silent terrorism is not going to abate in Benton County until the law compels peace and tranquility."

MASKED MOB ESCAPES.

Two Alleged Members Turned Loose at Camden.

The Commercial

CAMDEN, Ark., Aug. 26.—H. C. Burriss, of Louann, charged with night-riding, was dismissed at the preliminary hearing Thursday before Justice W. F. Chidester; C. M. Hockett, charged with the same offense, was dismissed on motion of the state. Burriss was alleged to have been a member of the hooded and masked mob that ordered Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Schwar, Mrs. Martel Horton and Jim Newhouse, all of Louann, out of the town Monday night. These people were running a joint in the heart of the oil town. It is alleged that the mob made these people leave at once and one of the women had to leave in her night clothes without time to dress. They came to Camden and reported the affair to Sheriff J. B. Newton. Burriss was acquitted on testimony of H. G. Brown, C. M. Hocks, H. H. Reed and H. C. McCoy.

DOWLING IS POSITIVE IN IDENTIFICATION OF ALLEGED FLOGGER

Servant in Home of Birmingham Health Officer Points Out Defendant as Guilty Party

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 14.—Annie Laurie Lightner, negro servant, identified Porter N. Newman from the witness stand late Thursday afternoon as the man who lured Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, from his home on the night of May 17, 1922. When Dr. Dowling was seized, bound, gagged and then whisked away to a lonely spot on the Mount Pinson road and unmercifully beaten by a band of floggers, in the first day of Newman's trial in circuit court here in connection with the kidnapping.

Looking at Newman, she said: "That's the man," and despite a severe cross examination remainded unshaken in her testimony.

The servant followed Dr. Dowling who occupied most of the day in recounting the night of the flogging. Dr. Dowling also identified Newman, testifying that he is positive Newman is the man who called at home on a pretext of summoning first aid for a man he said had been injured in an automobile accident "down the road."

6-15-23.

Dr. Dowling was the first witness called. His acocunt of the flogging was substantially the same as that given at the trial of E. G. Jacks, Ketona dairyman who was tried and acquitted about ten days ago. As to the identification of Newman, Dr. Dowling stated that he was able to get a good vision of the man who called him to his door in the night of the flogging, although he was not acquainted with Newman at the time. He testified that he had heard Newman's voice a number of times since the flogging and that it was the same voice that called him to his door on the night of May 17.

Positive Identifications.

Solicitor Jim Davis asked: "Are you positive that Newman is the man who called you to your door on the night of May 17?". Dr. Dowling answered: "Absolutely positive."

The witness told of conference with the sheriff and police and of testimony given at the session of the grand jury. He reiterated his testimony given at the trial of Jacks that he recognized the voices of several members of the band.

The defense objected strenuously to this part of the testimony, contending that it had nothing to do with the trial of Newman. However, the objections were overruled by Judge Heflin.

Describes Band's Movements.

Dr. Dowling described in detail the movements of the band on the night of the flogging, from the time he was called to his door until he was left in the woods after having been unmercifully flogged. He testified that there were eight or ten men in the band and each of them gave him ten to fifteen blows with a heavy strap. He stated that he was ordered to leave town within thirty days "if he knew what was good for him." He also stated that he first reported the flogging to the board of health but could not recall whether or not he mentioned the names of the floggers.

Under direct questioning of Solicitor Davis, the health officer stated that the porch light of his home was turned on when the member of the band of floggers caled him to the door and that he was able to get a fairly good vision of the man.

Porter N. Newman, Acipco plumber, alleged flogger of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, Thursday was identified by the health officer as the man who lured him from his home on the night of May 17, 1922, when he was unmercifully whipped.

Trial Second of Nine

Newman's trial, the second of the nine men recently indicted for the tack, was called before Judge H. Heflin of the circuit court at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning, with Dr. Dowling the first witness for the state.

Dr. Dowling occupied the stand for a lengthy period, in which he related the details of the whipping and positively identified Newman as one of his captors. He was subjected to a severe grilling by counsel for the defense, and reiterated his recent assertion that the reason he did not mention names of any of his alleged abductors to the June grand jury of 1922 was that he had been advised not to do so by former Solicitor Tate.

Maid Positive

Annie Laurie Lightner, negress, maid in the Dowling home, succeeded Dr. Dowling on the stand and also identified Newman as the man who summoned the officer from his home under the pretext that a man had been injured in an automobile accident nearby.

She was to be followed by C. W. Tison, who has confessed to being a member of the whipping band and identified Newman along with eight others.

Newman is the second man to face charges of whipping the health officer. Ernest G. Jacks was tried and acqiutted of the charge of complicity two weeks ago.

BARBOUR CITIZENS HEAR KLAN LECTURE

Montgomery Man Tells Eufaula Audience Papers Wrong About Mer Rouge

EUFAULA, ALA., June 20.—Special to Tre Advertiser.—A large audience composed of both men and women heard Dr. Parrish, of Montgomery lecture on the Ku Klux Klan Tuesday night at Community Park.

There were no preliminaries to the address, the speaker introducing himself and launching straight into his subject. He traced the origin of the order of Ku Klux organized in 1866 just after the Civil war and said that the present order was like the old one only in name and regalia.

He said that the klan had been subject to much unjust criticism and that only the members really understood the motives and methods of procedure. He declared that the klan was a friend of the negro and not the enemy but that it believed in the segregation of the races in every way. He stated that the white, Jew and the negro all had separate organizations and that the klan also had the right to an organization which said that its members should be white people, Americans and those who owed no allegiance to foreign powers in civic or ecclesiastical matters.

Complains of Newspapers.

He stated, however, that because the organization had excluded the negro, Jew and Catholic, that these people had put out vast sums of money to fight the klan. He said that the klan stood for white supremacy, the protection of womanhood and was against all bootleggers and law violators. He claimed that the klan did not take the law into its own hands as had been said, but that it aided the civil authorities in rounding up law breakers.

He seemed to feel that the newspapers had not treated the klan unjustly and said that already the organization had its own publications and that it was preparing to publish daily papers.

At great length he sought to unravel the Mer Rouge affair and said the final trial in October would prove that the klan had been unjustly accused.

The address was given in an even tone and without any show of bitterness.

Mayor Answers Letter.

Mayor H. H. Conner received a letter a few days ago which he supposed was from a member of the klan and he answered it in Tuesday's Eufula Citizen as follows:

Daily Citizen, Eufaula, Ala.,

Dear Sir:

Please permit me to take this method of acknowledging receipt of an unsigned letter which seems to have been written by a member of the Ku Klux Klan. I appreciate the friendly spirit of the letter and the information it contains. I want to assure the writter and every other citizen that it is my desire to enforce the laws fairly and impartially, and in this I have the hearty and undivided support of the council. I am aware of the fact that there are flagrant violations of the laws but these are not easy to prove as one might imagine. It is also true that suspected violations are not always actual. I want to take this opportunity to pledge my best efforts to a sane enforcement of all the laws and ask the cooperation of all the citizens. I hope that this can be done without resorting to any unlawful act, for it is an old adage that 'two wrongs never make a right'.

Respectfully yours,
H. H. Conner, Mayor.

ANTI KU KLUX KLAN ORDINANCE PASSED

Commissioners Also Adopt Ordinance Proposing to Regulate Traffic Down Town

Ordinance prohibiting Ku Klux Klan demonstrations in the city of Montgomery was adopted by the commissioners at their session Wednesday morning. The vote was two to one, Commissioner Orum opposing the measure.

The commission also adopted the Orum traffic ordinance regulating parking and traffic in the down-town section of the city.

An ordinance was introduced providing for the paving of Second street, Oak Park, between Forest avenue and Mulberry street.

Petition of citizens of Oak Park for installation of a light at the intersection of Mulberry and West Fifth streets was received and referred to the city engineer and city electrician.

The Atlantic Coast Line railroad served notice on the commission for vacation of lower sections of Greyhound and Pine streets and a portion of Clayton Alley. That property is to be utilized when vacated for expansion of the Coast Line shops. The matter was referred to the city engineer.

The Advertiser is departing from its fixed rule against publication of anonymous communications to print the folowing document. The document consists of resolutions purporting to have been adopted by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of Montgomery. They are printed on Klan stationery. They may or may not be spurious—they appear genuine, but are unsigned. We print them for their possible news interest:

Resolution

"Whereas, this organization is a law-abiding organization of patriotic white, Christian Americans, who owe no allegiance to any temporal authority above the government of the United States, and

"Whereas, Commissioner Hardaway introduced an ordinance in the City Commission of Montgomery on last Monday prohibiting the wearing of masks by any organization whose membership is not known, which ordinance was evidently directed against this organization, and

Whereas, Mayor Gunter expressed himself as in favor of such proposed ordinance, and

"Whereas, it was evident from the statements of Commissioners Gunter and Hardaway that they assumed that this organization had done or contemplated doing unlawful acts, and

7-30-23

"Whereas, Commissioner Orum took a stand against the hasty adoption of said ordinance, therefore,

"Be it resolved, by the Montgomery Klan No. 3, Realm of Alabama, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, that this organization express its thanks to Commissioner Orum for the enlightened and statesmanlike stand he took on last Monday; that a copy of this resolution be furnished to Commissioner Orum, a copy to the press, and a copy spread on the minutes of this meeting.

ALABAMAN FLOGGED BY WHITE-ROBED BAND

Called From Home and Driven Across Tennessee Line.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., July 30.—The flogging of Jesse Warren, a young married man in the Hazel Green precinct by a band of white robed masked men nearly three weeks ago, became known to the authorities here today through J. T. Warren, father of the victim.

Warren said his son, with his wife and two children were visiting at the home of the wife's sister when a band of thirty to forty robed in white with masks called during the night and compelled him to come out and accompany them to a place where he was unmercifully whipped, then led to the road leading toward Tennessee and compelled to go across the state border. No reason was given for the flogging nor was there a reason given for the warning sent the wife later that she must leave the neighborhood.

7-31-23

The matter was presented to County Solicitor Addison White today and he declared a full investigation will be made. This is declared to be the first whipping outrage perpetrated by masked men in this part of the state in several years.

FROM THE KU KLUX KLAN.

Answer to the Resolutions Adopted in Selma.

The Advertiser has received the following communication purporting to be from the Ku Klux Klan and printed on the letter head of the Klan. We have no reason to doubt its genuineness and so we publish it as requested:

August 23, 1923.

Editor The Advertiser:

In this morning's edition of The Advertiser there is carried a copy of resolutions adopted by the Selma Post of the American Legion condemnatory of the Ku Klux Klan. Inasmuch as you have given space to this resolution, this organization will appreciate the publication of this letter.

You will recall from your history, Mr. Editor, that there was a nation-wide movement in this country, fostered by the same forces as are now opposing this organization, that waged a war of propaganda against the Masonic fraternity, based on misinformation and ignorance of the principles of Masonry.

Evidently the Legionnaires who voted for the Selma resolution are not members of this organization, as are so many of their comrades. If this organization cannot accept members who are foreign born, nor those who owe allegiance to any foreign power, it is certainly no less American than another patriotic organization, whose membership includes many foreign-born Americans.

You will recall also that the American Legion in Alabama like this organization everywhere, bars the negro. Does either fall short of 100 per cent Americanism on that account? Doubtless some members of the Legion belong to the B'nai B'rith, which excludes Gentiles; is not this organization equally within the rights in excluding the Jew? Some members of the Selma Post may be Knights of Columbus—an organization which excludes both Jew and Protestant. Is not this organization within its rights in excluding both Catholic and Jew?

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, which is composed exclusively of native-born white, Gentile, Protestant Christian American citizens, has the same right to secrecy as any other fraternal organization, and secrecy in varying degrees, is an essential element of all fraternal organizations.

There is so much to be done in America to preserve Americanism that every American organization striving to this end should employ its energy to accomplish this patriotic purpose, rather than dissipating it in misguided attacks on one another.

The Ku Klux Klan, understanding and appreciating the American Legion, bids it Godspeed, and it bespeaks the tolerance of those Legionnaires who are not qualified to be members of this patriotic organization, perhaps, to cease condemning that which they know nothing of.

It is time to stop talking about things of which one knows nothing.

Yours truly,
MONTGOMERY KLAN NO. 3.
Realm of Alabama, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

VAGRANTS WARNED BY KU KLUX KLAN

Mayor is Indignant and Orders Chief of Police to Prosecute Illegal Demonstration

Knights of the Ku Klux Klan awoke the ire of the city commission Saturday morning, when the rising sun revealed the name of the invisible empire on a large number of posters bearing the Alabama Vagrancy law, under the heading "A Warning to Vagrants" tacked to telephone poles and trees in various sections of Montgomery.

Negroes variously employed as cooks, and laborers going early to their work read the signs in bright red ink, and evinced some alarm. Before noon, James A. Hardaway, commissioner of police had issued an order to W. H. Taylor, chief of police to tear down all such signs and to issue warrants for offending persons, if any law was infracted in the posting of the city.

Aside from the warning expressed in the heading of the placards, and the words, "Ku Klux Klan" the posters carried nothing but the Alabama Vagrant law.

Mayor W. A. Gunter was indignant [illegible] the action, characterizing it as [illegible]ffort to terrorize the negroes of [illegible], who, he said, are little enough [illegible]o remain at their work in the [illegible] it is, without such scares [illegible] them.

[illegible]xpressed Saturday that [illegible] designed to intimi[illegible]chief activities are [illegible] and are therefore of a questionable nature.

Discovery of the signs was followed at city hall by the rumor of an impending parade of the Ku Klux Klan. In his order to the chief of police, Commissioner Hardaway referred to this and instructed Chief Taylor to arrest any person or persons who violate the law by wearing masks on the streets of Montgomery.

Text of Commissioner Hardaway's order to Chief Taylor follows:

"I am informed that signs have been placed over the town signed by the Ku Klux Klan. See that these signs are taken down and if there has been any infringement of the laws have the proper warrants issued for the offending parties.

"I am informed that there will be in the near future a masked parade by the Ku Klux Klan or some other organization. Specifically instruct your men to arrest any person or persons who violate the law in going masked on the streets of Montgomery. We do not wish this city terrorized and will hold to strict accountability any officer who permits any infringement of the law. The enforcement of the laws is in the hands of the state, the county and the city, and we propose to keep that law observed."

BIBLE SOCIETY RECEIVES CHECK FROM KU KLUX KLAN

Resolutions of Appreciation Also Received by Organization

Endorsement for the work of the Alabama Bible Society came from an unexpected quarter Thursday afternoon, when at a meeting of the board of directors a resolution of appreciation accompanied by a sum of money was received from Montgomery Klan No. Three, Realm of Alabama, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Dr. W. J. Elliott, superintendent of the Bible Society, from whom this information was received, was instructed by the directors to extend a note of thanks to the Klan for its interest and appreciation of the resolution received by the Bible Society from the Klan follows:

"Whereas: The Alabama Bible Society has for many years distributed throughout this section thousands of copies of the Holy Bible and other religious literature; and

"Whereas the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is founded on the open Bible, and stands for the perpetuation of the civilization produced by the open Bible, now therefore,

"BE IT RESOLVED, by the Montgomery Klan No. 3, Realm of Alabama Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, that this organization most heartily endorse the great work of the Alabama Bible Society; and be it further resolved that in token of the good will of this organization to the Bible Society that a check for ten dollars be donated to said society; that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Bible Society and a copy spread on the minutes of this Klonkave."

Says Ku Klux Warned Him to Keep Off Bill

The local legislation committee of the house late Thursday favorably reported by an overwhelming vote the Griffith bill making the board of revenue of Winston county appointive by the governor. Winston county is republican and the bill will fix it so there will be no more republicans in charge of the financial affairs of Winston. During the hearing on this bill Thursday George Atkins, editor of the Winston county Herald enlivened the proceedings by saying he had been warned by the Ku Klux not to take a hand in opposition to the bill.

This committee also favorably reported two bills by representative Goodwyn of Montgomery, taking into the city the plot of land on South Court street where the new city high school is to be located and abolishing the present jury commission of Montgomery county and substituting therefor as a commission the judges of the court, the clerk and sheriff.

KLANSMEN PARADE AT DEMOPOLIS UNEXPECTEDLY

Fourteen Autos With Fifty-Four Robed Figures In Procession.

DEMOPOLIS, ALA., July 12.—Special to The Advertiser.—The Ku Klux Klan made its first parade here Tuesday night. Fourteen automobiles appeared in procession without any warning. Heading the procession was a car carrying a flame cross. The cross was about six feet high and the beam about four feet. The cars were occupied by from three to five masked and hooded occupants, the tops being down. The parade drove through the principal streets in the business section and around some of the blocks. It was witnessed by many spectators. The visitors stopped nowhere and it is said there was absolute order. It is claimed that they stopped at the ball park after the parade. Close observers say there were 54 persons in the cars.

It is also reported that five other cars filled with klansmen reached town too late to be in the procession. Where they all came from and where they went no one seems to know, neither does anyone offer to explain the purpose of their visit.

A LETTER FROM THE KU KLUX KLAN

The following letter, headed with a fiery cross, was sent me July 23. I handed it to the N. A. A. C. P. The Police Commissioner was notified; he promised protection. The letters reads:

S. Philemon Greene:

In your joke book you said that a Klansman and a louse were alike; no nigger would dare say that in the South and the K. K. K. must be respected in the North. We demand that you take your joke book off the market in 12 days; this is your only warning. BEWARE! The police won't help you, some of them are loyal members of the K. K. K.

I receive hundreds of letters from white and colored people praising "MY LANDLORD," only joke book written and published by a Negro, by mail to any address, 25 cents (coin or M. O.) If justice loving people are not afraid to buy the book, I'm not afraid to sell it; send for a copy, 346 West 16th street, New York City. Thank you. S. Philemon Green.—(Advt.)

FEAR OF KLAN DRIVES NEGROES NORTH, CLAIM

Seibold Gives One Reason Why Farm Labor Is Scarce.

HAS TALK WITH NEGROES

Declares Wages Form One Consideration, But Outrages by Hooded Bands and Fear of Ku Klux Klan Help Depopulate Farms.

BY LOUIS LEIBOLD.

(Copyright, 1923, by the New York Herald.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 8.—To what extent the migration of negroes from Alabama is due to the Ku Klux Klan, is a subject of lively controversy among its citizens.

The problem is proving of greater importance to the state, however, than to any resulting from economic or political demoralization in European countries. Substantial blocks of negroes are answering the industrial call of the north and thereby causing deep concern among the citizens interested in the development of the south. Discussion of foreign politics is purely academic or of casual interest to the element of the population which tries to keep up with the progress of events.

Many Have Left State.

Just how many negroes have left Alabama, for other climes is uncertain. One estimate is that more than 25,000 have left the state during the last two years for Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland and New Jersey. In the same period, 22,750 are known to have left South Carolina. The iron and coal mines and steel plants of the state are finding it increasingly difficult to secure common labor. Agriculturists anticipate a scarcity of labor to collect the cotton, sugar, rice, corn and tobacco crops, and as to the future are apprehensive.

Some farmers are complaining of the shortage of farm hands for the first time in the history of the state. Two or three months ago, recruiting agents representing steel and other industrial plants in Pittsburgh and Ohio manufacturing districts signed up 1,100 negroes in Georgia and Alabama.

The men who have given study to the negro problem in the south admit that higher wages does not constitute the sole reason for the readiness of negro help to move southward. They concede the logic which attributes the movement to other reasons.

One reason is the fear among negroes of the Ku Klux.

Is Apprehension Justified.

Whether there is complete justification for the apprehension among the negroes over the Ku Klux movement is a matter of dispute. That such fear does exist and is deep-rooted and menacing can be easily established by anyone inquisitive enough to seek information on the subject from negro men and women as did the writer. Quest for such information is attended with difficulties. Negro men and women who are approached at first professed complete ignorance of the activities and repressive achievements credited to Ku Klux Klan. It was only by most artful methods that reflection of the view held by colored people regarding the klan could be obtained. One suspicion was allayed however, the negroes who were interrogated by the writer candidly confessed their fear of the secret order which has extended to many southern states and asserted power of discipline legally conferred only upon responsible officials of the state and local communities.

Instances of the activity of the klan in rural sections of Alabama were accounted by these men and women partly due to personal experience but largely based on information that they accepted as reliable and conclusive. The recital of these cases left no doubt of the coercive effort upon the colored people.

The drive of the Ku Klux Klan in Alabama is unmistakable, although its activities are meeting with resistance among the better elements of the population. While officials of the state assert independence of the klan dictation, the assertion is to be accepted in a Pickwickian sense. Before the Ku Klux movement began many citizens of Catholic and Hebrew religious faith not only enjoyed the fullest legal privileges, but were honored with high offices.

Subjected to Indignity.

Many men of Catholic faith were elected to important state, county and municipal offices. At the present time there is not a Catholic holding an important county, state or municipal office. Further than this, citizens who have been made the victims of the klan policies declare that they have been subjected to all sorts of indignities and hazing by groups, asserting allegiance to the klan. Reliable information cites instances of "boycotting" by the followers of the Ku Klux Klan in order to express disapproval of Catholics and Jews.

The attitude of the klan toward the negro in certain parts of the state confirms the declaration of the representatives of the race that the klan had taken into its hands the authority hitherto restricted to official disciplinary agencies. Supporters of the klan in Alabama are not so secretive or furtive as is the case in northern states. Many men of high standing in some of the largest and most important communities are openly identified with the organization and reflect sincere conviction in defending its altruistic pretensions.

Klansmen Deny It.

These men refute the claims of the critics of the klan that the organization is responsible for the outrages credited. There is some haste for their declaration in this respect. Groups of lawless citizens have undoubtedly camouflaged their illegal acts with the hood and klan, but a year ago Alabama was shocked by the flogging of several white men of high repute who were taken from their place of business by mobs that were subsequently proved to have no connection with the klan. The state and city health officer of Birmingham who sought to impose logical sanitary restrictions in the dairy business was one of the victims of a mob.

It would not be wholly accurate to say that the majority of the people in the state endorse the Ku Klux Klan. The opposition, however, is unorganized and in many instances has proved helpless to resist the aggressions of that organization. Many of the leading citizens of the state not only oppose the Ku Klux Klan, but have recently discussed the advisability of organizing a movement to eliminate many features of the state policies which they regard both archaic and damaging to its good name. This fact was recently established through the launching of a state-wide movement to abolish the convict labor leasing system which legalizes peonage attended by evidence of the character espoused in Florida, where the same system prevails.

Only Form of Radicalism.

Ku Klux movement constitutes at present the only form of radicalism in Alabama, and it is not entirely political. The majority of politicians seeking office subscribing to its doctrines for obvious reasons, and also seek its favor by encouraging greater mendacities. By appealing to the emotions of very sympathetic and susceptible constitutents, blatant political demagogues who enjoy wide popularity in some of the southern states attempt to inflame the people to correct evils that are largely imaginary or that should legitimately come within the functions of the constituted officials.

Despite the Ku Klux Klan Alabama is making steady economic progress. The steel, coal, and iron industries are keeping pace with the expanding development in the north and are sharing the resulting wave of prosperity. Agriculture is declared by the authorities to be in a "healthy condition." Sugar, cotton, lumber and corn prospects "were never better." Banking, wholesale and retail trades is brisk. The 1,335,000 farmers of the state are making substantial progress toward the organization of productive units.

Senator Underwood is easily first in the affections of the Democrats of the state. Both houses of the state legislature unanimously adopted a resolution advocating his candidacy. The bar association has paid him the unusual honor of asserting his admirable fitness for standard bearer of his party. Henry Ford has a few friends among the political element, mainly because of his plan to take over the muscle shoals project.

Senator Heflin will have considerable opposition if he aspires to another term. The conservative element of the party will get behind John Bankhead, son of the former governor and senator. The other element will support Congressman Huddleston who is much the same type as Mr. Heflin and quite as resourceful a politician.

BEGINS FLOGGING PROBE

Birmingham Authorities Start Inquiry Into Whipping of Barber.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., April 25.—Special to The Advertiser.—Agents of the department of justice, under the direction of C. W. McPhall, Wednesday afternoon opened a federal investigation into the alleged flogging of Joe DeCardo, 33, barber of Pratt City, who was reported to have been abducted from Wylam, a suburb of Birmingham, early Sunday night, conveyed to a point several miles beyond that place, flogged and afterwards abandoned in a muddy pool of water.

First news of the alleged flogging became known Tuesday, when Mrs. Bena DeCardo, his wife, told City Detective George M. Bragan that her husband had returned at 4:15 o'clock Monday morning and told of having been kidnapped and flogged. Mrs. DeCardo gave a complete version of the whipping, as related to her by DeCardo when he arrived.

ALLEGED FLOGGERS TO FACE COURT ON MONDAY

Three of Men Charged With Whipping Dr. Dowling to be Arraigned.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 26.—Over a year after the kidnapping and flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, and followed by members of the band which is said to have perpetrated the offense are scheduled to face Monday in the criminal division of circuit court for alleged complicity in the affair. W. M. Yerby, Earnest G. Jacks and Porter N. Newman will be arraigned before Judge H. P. Heflin Monday on charges of assault with intent to murder and kidnapping in connection with the flogging.

Judge O. A. Steel, Etowah county, has been assigned to assist Judge Heflin and Judge W. E. Fort for the next two weeks. Effort will be made by Solicitor Jim Davis to have all three men charged with complicity in the flogging of Dr. Dowling tried at one time.

Six other alleged members of the flogging band are scheduled to face trial on similar charges on June 5.

To Whom It May Concern:

WHEREAS, information reaches us that there remains but a small sum of approximately $200,000.00 of the previous bond issue authorized for the erection of public school buildings in the City of Birmingham, and

WHEREAS, it appears, from information coming to this organization, that it is proposed to expend this money for the erection of a high school building for negroes, and

WHEREAS, the condition of school buildings for the accommodation of white children of elementary grades is deplorable and in some cases even worse than conditions of buildings for the accommodation for negroes.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that it is the sense of this organization that white children be adequately housed and cared for and double sessions and poor housing be at least partially relieved and discontinued before any further money is spent in the construction of negro schools, and

We respectfully suggest to the City Board of Education that the people of Birmingham cannot be expected to support future bond issues for school purposes if the money is to be expended for negro high schools before adequate provision has been made for white children.

Leibold Gives One Reason Why Farm Labor Is Scarce, HAS TALK WITH NEGROES

Declares Wages Form One Consideration, But Outrages by Hooded Bands and Fear of Ku Klux Klan Help Depopulate Farms.

BY LOUIS LEIBOLD.

(Copyright, 1923, by the New York Herald.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 8.—To what extent the migration of negroes from Alabama is due to the common labor. Agriculturists the cotton, sugar, rice, corn and tobacco crops, and as to the future are apprehensive.

Some farmers are complaining of the shortage of farm hands for the first time in the history of the state. Two or three months ago recruiting agents representing steel and other industrial plants in Pittsburgh and Ohio manufacturing districts signed up 100 negroes in Georgia and Alabama.

The men who have given study to the negro problem in the south admit that higher wages does not constitute the sole reason for the negro's desire to move southward. They concede the logic which the movement to other reasons.

Is Apprehension Justified.

Whether there is complete justification for the apprehension among the negroes over the Ku Klux movement is a matter of dispute. That such fear does exist and is deep-rooted and menacing can be easily established by anyone inquisitive enough to seek information on the subject from the white men and women as did the writer. Quest for such information is attended with difficulties. Negro men and women who are approached at first have professed complete ignorance of the activities and repressive achievements credited to Ku Klux Klan. It was only by most artful methods of reflection of the view held by colored people regarding the klan could be obtained. One suspicion who were interrogated, however, the negroes who were interrogated their fear of the secret order of disciplined southern states and asserted power of discipline legally conferred upon responsible officials of the state and local communities.

Instances of the activity of the klan were political. The majority of in rural sections of Alabama, women seeking office subscribing to its doctrines for obvious reasons, and also accounted due to personal experience but encouraging greatly partly due to information that they seek its favor by encouraging peonage largely based on conclusive, no amendacities. Only Form of Radicalism.

Discussion of foreign politics is purely academic or of casual interest to the electorate, further than this, citizens who have made the victims of the klan in Alabama are not so secure as is the case in northern states. Many men of high standing and most influential politicians, particularly Henry Ford has a few friends among the political element in the south to take the lead in a "healthy campaign" for the conservation of the former government. The other element is represented by Senator Heflin and Senator Underwood is easily first in the affections of the people of the state. Both have unanimously adopted a candidacy, his adoption has paid him the dividends of asserting his advocating his plan to take the bar association of the standard bearer of the political element, a few years ago Alabama was shocked by the acts of high officials, who were taken from their beds, who have no complicity in the affair. DR. DOWLING IDENTIFIES PARTY OF MEN WHO AIDED IN FLOGGING

Former City Official of Birmingham and Dairyman Among Those Implicated in Testimony of Health Officer Who Says Kidnappers Took Turns in Delivering Blows

Montgomery Advertiser 5-29-23

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 28.—Earnest G. Jakes, Willaim Myerby, G. G. Williams, and George C. Moore, former street commissioner of Birmingham, were identified by Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer as members of a party of men who kidnapped him from his home and flogged him in May, 1922, when the health officer testified this afternoon at the trial of Jacks, a dairy man.

Dr. Dowling, who was the first witness, declared that he had known Jacks previous to the time he was whipped and had visited his dairy, ordering the defendant to comply with the regulations of the health ordinance.

The physician gave a detail account of his abduction from his home at Roebuck, a suburb, and the flogging which was administered by seven to ten men at a lonely spot in the woods.

"See here now, you have been too much like the German Kaiser," Dr. Dowling said one of his abductors, whom he identified as Jacks told him "we are going to put a stop to it."

"We are going to show you now that Birmingham is too small for you to stay in," another voice, identified as that of William Yerby,

"Shut your damned mouth," another of the men is alleged to have said, while Dr. Dowling said George, Moore former street commissioner said:

"Let him holler."

Made To Hug Tree.

The physician asserted he was made to hug a tree while a pistol was pressed to his side and the floggers took turns in delivering blows. He was between 10 and 15 times, he stated, and the flesh was broken in several places.

Three pictures taken soon after the attack in a St. Louis hospital were introduced as evidence by the state to show the seriousness of his injuries.

After Dr. Dowling had concluded his testimony the state placed C. L. Dewes upon the stand. He stated he had seen Jacks on the road near the home of the health officer upon the night of the attack. He was the last witness called during the day.

Defendants In Court.

William Myerby Mount Pinson dairyman and Porter N. Newman, North Birmingham plumber, whose trials growing out of the Dowling attack were set for this week, were in court today. Request of Solicitor Davis to have all three men tried at the same time was denied by the defense. Their trial will follow that of Jacks who is facing a charge of knidnapping. He has also been indicted for assault with intent to murder in connection with the case.

Judge O. A. Steele, of Gadsden, is presiding.

CONFESSED FLOGGER TO TALK

With two witnesses heard, one identifying him as one of four men he recognized in the flogging party and the other as one of several men he saw at an automobile standing near the home of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer on the night of May 17, 1922, when Dr. Dowling was lured from his home and unmercifully whipped, the state Monday afternoon scored heavily in its trial of Ernest G. Jacks, dairyman, in the circuit court, as the first member of eight men indicted in connection with the abduction and attack.

The two witnesses were Dr. Dowling and C. L. Dews. The former, victim of the floggers, identified Jacks as a member of the party of abductors, and frequently in his testimony told of recognizing his voice during the time he was held captive and subsequently flogged.

Dews, who testified as to having passed near the Dowling home at the time of the abduction, declared he recognized Jacks among several other men standing at an automobile nearby. He said he stopped his car, believing Jacks was having motor trouble, spoke to him and later drove away, when assured by Jacks there was nothing wrong.

Dr. Dowling was the first witness to testify. He occupied the witness chair nearly an hour and graphically related his experience in being kidnapped and whipped.

Identifies Members

Jacks, George Moore, former city street commissioner; W. Yerby, Mt. Binson dairyman, and G. G. Williams, former health worker, were identified by the health officer as members of the flogging band. He testified he recognized their voices frequently during the time he was in their custody.

Although the defense subjected him to a severe cross examination, the witness testimony was unshaken. Dews likewise was closely questioned by Attorney Jim Burgin, representing Jacks. The attorney vainly attempted to question the two witnesses regarding a reward fund offered by the Jefferson county medical society and citizens of Birmingham.

Trial of Jacks began shortly after 10 o'clock, after Judge H. P. Heflin had assigned the case to Judge O. A. Steele, of Etowah county, temporarily transferred to the Jefferson county judicial circuit. The entire morning was given over to preliminaries, such as organizing panels, and swearing in witnesses. Promptly at two o'clock the case got under way. The jury was selected without delay and the two witnesses heard and cross examined prior to adjournment for the night.

Sixty Witnesses

Nearly 60 witnesses, a majority of whom are character witnesses, have been sworn in for the defense. Other witnesses for the state yet to be heard are: T. C. Dewes, officer; J. E. Climer, Annie Laurie Lightner, negro; N. L. Pierce, W. P. Elledge, city detective; Marguerite Brisbane, Mrs. E. B. Reynolds, Chief Fred H. McDuff, M. E. McDuff, and Paul Cole, city detectives and C. W. McPhail, head of the Alabama district of the department of justice.

Charlie "Bo" Tison, former dairy hand and confessed member of the band of floggers, is expected to take the stand Tuesday morning.

Jacks was one of the trio of men indicted several weeks ago for the flogging of the health officer. Later, following the confession of Tison, five others were indicted.

SELMA ORDINANCE TO BAR KLANSMEN

City Council Provides Heavy Fine for Wearing of Masks in Central City

Montgomery Advertiser 5-30-23

SELMA, ALA., May 29.—The city council of Selma went on record at its regular meeting Monday night as strongly opposed to the Ku Klux Klan movement started in this city several weeks ago. Following a heated discussion of the matter by members of the council, all united in their determination to keep such an organization out of Selma, and Dallas county, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

"Resolved, that it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to wear any mask or other disguises on any street in the city of Selma, or at any other public place within the police jurisdiction of the city of Selma.

"Any person or persons violating the provisions of this ordinance shall upon conviction be fined not less than $50, nor more than $100, or may be sentenced to hard labor for the city for not more than 180 days."

The first intimation given of the possibility of the klan invading Dallas county and Selma, was brought to the attention of the civic clubs early in April by Judge S. F. Hobbs, who had just returned from Birmingham, where he had been informed of some of the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, and the results in that city.

Every civic club in Selma and the chamber of commerce immediately took decisive steps to thwart the work of organizers coming to this city and the action of the city council has dealt its death blow, it is believed.

There is hardly a man in Selma who has not been approached by a klan organizer, it is claimed.

DEFENSE ATTEMPTS TO ESTABLISH ALIBI IN DOWLING FLOGGING CASE

State Begins Rebuttal Testimony Late Wednesday Afternoon; Arguments of Attorneys to Take Up Practically All of Thursday Morning

Montgomery Advertiser 5-31-23

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 30.—The first of the cases arising out of the kidnaping and flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer in May, 1922, will probably go into the hands of the jury tomorrow afternoon. Testimony in the trial of Earnest G. Jacks, Ketona dairyman, was concluded at 4:55 Wednesday afternoon. Arguments will begin at 9 o'clock Thursday morning with each side allotted two and a half hours which will take the case to mid-afternoon.

Jacks Admits Difficulties.

Rebuttal, contrary to expectations, was brief, only three witnesses being used, and these by the state. Jacks, recalled by the state immediately after rebuttal opened, was forced to admit having been in difficulties with the city and county health department over his dairy, while L. C. Bulmer, chief of the division of food and milk inspection of the health department testified to having written leters to Jacks complaining of conditions at his dairy.

Gave Names To First Grand Jury.

Dr. Dowling also was recalled in rebuttal, testifying that shortly after the attack and before he testified before the first grand jury, he gave police the names of Jacks, W. M. Yerby, and other dairymen; George Moore, former city street commissioner, discharged on account of fraud; Frank Ford, another dairyman, and G. G. Williams, former city health department employee, naming them, at that time as among the floggers. This testimony was to offset testimony of a defense witness, who was a member of the first grand jury, who swore that Dr. Dowling did not know any of the attackers.

The defense closed its case this afternoon and the state introduced its first witnesses in rebuttal. Efforts of Jacks' counsel today were devoted chiefly toward establishing an alibi for the defendant upon the night of the flogging. Three persons and the defendant testified that he attended a theatre on the night of the affair.

Attacks Testimony.

Severe attacks on the testimony of all the witnesses were made by state attorneys. Questioning each man minutely, Assistant Solicitor John McCoy sought to show the memory of the date had been placed in their minds by the defendant.

One admitted Jacks had reminded him of the date five days after the occurrence, the day following the publication of the flogging story in Birmingham newspapers. The next witness examined said he had been reminded of the date by the first man. The third maintained he remembered it of his independent recollection.

The defense counter attacked the testimony of Dr. Dowling, who appeared upon the stand Monday. Two members of the grand jury who made the first investigation of the case after the happening in May, 1922, claimed that Dr. Dowling was unable to identify any of his captors when he appeared before them.

Dr. Dowling had testified that he recognized the voices of Jacks, George Moore, former state commissioner of Birmingham, William Yerby and G. G. Williams.

Introduction of the former members of the grand jury as defense witnesses was vigorously contested by the state, but Judge O. A. Steele ruled for the defense.

Jacks Takes Stand.

Jacks taking the stand this afternoon denied the charges of the state and claimed that he had attended the theatre performance upon the night the attack was made upon the health officer. Upon cross examination he admitted he had difficulties with the health department and that he had gone to the city commission and to the county board of revenue over Dr. Dowling's head to protest against milk measures enforced by the official.

The three alibi witnesses were A. H. Walker, Ketona, commissary operator; R. M. Garvick, Ketona, grocery man; and Newman Thompson, timber man and former dairy associate of Jacks.

DOWLING FLOGGNG PROBE IS RESUMED

Birmingham Grand Jury For April Organized Monday, Begins Work

Montgomery Advertiser 4-10-23

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., April 9.—The April county grand jury, which is scheduled to take up the flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, was formally organized Monday morning shortly after 10 o'clock.

Upon completion of the organization, W. A. Watts, real estate dealer, with offices in the Brown-Marx building, was elected foreman.

Other members of the grand jury are: R. G. Dawson, E. W. Crunk, W. A. Chapman, W. F. Bailey, James B. Broadhead, Arch S. Brown, A. M. Foster, John H. Frye, E. C. Lowry, Adam Myatt, O. L. Bennett, William Brown, J. P. Biggs and William H. Belle.

Judge William E. Fort charged the jury shortly after 11 o'clock. In telling the history of the grand jury, Judge Fort said that it was the duty of every citizen to render his services for the state, as no court is stronger than the will and character of the people, but that the foundation of justice lies in the courts of the land.

TWENTY-FIVE MEN KNEW IN ADVANCE OF PLOT TO FLOG DR. DOWLING, DECLARE OFFICERS PROBING BIRMINGHAM OUTRAGE

Montgomery Advertiser

Six Arrests Made and Four Others Under Suspicion; Confession of C. W. Tison Starts General Crusade; Describes Cries of Doctor Under Lash of Mob

4/3/23

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., April 2.—Approximately 25 men knew in advance the plot which resulted in the flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city health officer of Birmingham last May, it was announced tonight by officers investigating the affair.

This statement followed a day of grilling of Sam Cargo, Tarrant City dairyman, and J. F. Ford, Mount Pinson dairyman, who were arrested Sunday. The officials refused to reveal the measure of success they had met in questioning the two men but declared that C. W. Tison, who is held in jail in connection with the case, had made a clean breast of the whole affair in his statement last week.

Three other men are now in custody and authorities stated that four others are under suspicion.

Prosecution of the alleged members of the flogging party in federal court was practically assured today, officials stated. Dr. Dowling was a member of the United States public health service at the time he was abducted. Agents of the department of justice have been active in the probe of the affair.

The grand jury which convenes Monday will take up the investigation where the grand jury, reporting last Friday, left off, it was said tonight. A federal grand jury is also expected to make a probe.

Tison was quoted by officers as having made a clean breast of the whole affair, signing his declaration in the presence of C. W. McPhail, representative of the department of justice, Solicitor Jim Davis and other officers.

On the strength of Tison's statement, Sam Cargo of Tarrant City, and J. F. Ford, of Mount Pinson, were arrested yesterday. Other men named by Tison as members of the whipping party, according to authorities, were W. M. Yerby, Porter Newman and Ernest G. Jacks, all under indictment by the Jefferson county grand jury in connection with the case.

Tison a young dairyman was said by authorities to have covered every angle in connection with the physical facts surrounding the Dowling whipping. Sufficient evidence had been gathered, they asserted, to support every statement made by Tison, who is said to have related all details in connection with the plot to abduct the health officer and the actual flogging.

Besides Mr. McPhail and Mr. Davis others present when Tison made his statement were R. E. Hunt, federal agent; Sam Arnett and Paul Cole, city detectives; M. E. McDuff of the city bureau of identification and Assistant Solicitor John P. McCoy. The statement was recorded by the official reporter of the Jefferson county grand jury.

Several times during Tison's recital, according to the statement of officers present he broke down and wept. Sobbing bitterly, he evinced much emotion, his questioners declared, in describing Dr. Dowling's cries of agony as members of the mob took turns applying the lash. The instrument of torture Tison is said to have told the officers was a heavy leather strap 2 1-2 feet long by 2 1-2 inches wide. Each man was made to take turns at the whipping, Tison was quoted as saying.

"Did you actually strike Dowling yourself?" was one of the questions officers said was asked Tison.

He was quoted as replying between sobs: "Yes, I struck him twice."

Tison was quoted by officers as declaring Dr. Dowling begged for mercy but none was shown him. Indignities were heaped upon the officer along with the flogging, the statement of Tison declared, as quoted by those present when it was made and signed.

Authorities said they did not offer immunity or hold any promises to Tison of any character to obtain his statement. It was entirely voluntary they asserted.

Dr. Dowling's zeal in enforcing laws that pertain to the public health caused the plot to be formed against him and executed, Tison was said to have declared to officers. Certain dairymen, Tison was quoted as saying, had long objected to the health officer's campaign for better milk.

On several occasions it is a matter of record that Dr. Dowling had caused condemned milk to be poured into the gutter.

Dr. Dowling told officers, in reporting the whipping, that he was told by his tormentors as the lash was applied that he must "stop his Czar-like methods" of enforcing laws.

Backed by the state and county boards of health and the federal public health service of which he is an attache, Dr. Dowling is said to have continued unawed, his efforts to enforce all laws governing the sale of milk and that refer to sanitation.

In catching witnesses with the mob that whipped Dr. Dowling officers assigned to the case have been spending busy days and sleepless nights, it became known today. The chase had led into devious channels, it was admitted and information is in the hands of investigators that has not been disclosed. What were described as "powerful influences" entered inquiry. The dictaphone was used with startling results, officers said, in several instances during the investigation.

In safeguarding Birmingham's milk supply, Dr. Dowling has cut $94,000 annually from the community's milk bill by eliminating water from the supply, according to health officers. Birmingham today, they stated, as a result of Dr. Dowling's "pure milk campaign" has eliminated adulterated milk to the point that the citizens of the city are paying only $2,300 annually for water in milk.

SIX ARE INDICTED IN FLOGGING CASE

4-12-23

Nine Men Are Now Being Held to Face Charges of Having Whipped Dr. Dowling.

Atlanta Constitution

Birmingham, Ala., April 11.—Six men were today indicted by the Jefferson county grand jury in connection with the flogging of Dr. J. D Dowling, city and county health officer on May 17, last year, and capiases will be asked at once in order that the men may be apprehended, it was announced at the solicitor's office. Until the capiases are issued the names of those indicted will not be made public, it was explained.

Latest action of the grand jury brings the number of indictments to nine, three men having been indicted last week. Three other men are under bond in connection with the case, besides the nine indicted by the grand jury.

Dr. Dowling was beaten, according to the theory of authorities because of his zeal in enforcing health laws.

It was announced at the solicitor's office that among the men today indicted were Sam Cargo, dairyman, Tarrant City; J. F. Ford, dairyman, Mount Pinson; George Moore former city street commissioner, and C. W. Tyson, dairy hand. Tyson was arrested several days ago by federal agents who quoted him as saying he and nine other men took part in the flogging.

DETECTIVES WORK ON NEW FLOGGING CASE

Pratt City Barber Kidnapped, Beaten and Thrown on Mud Puddle

Advertiser Bureau,
Birmingham, Ala.,
By Leon W. Friedman.

City detectives and the Wylam police are investigating the kidnapping and flogging of Joe DeCarlo, a Pratt City barber, which incident took place Sunday night, as the victim had disembarked from a taxi at Wylam. Nine men participated in the flogging. DeCarlo is recovering from the bruises he received.

Birmingham Ala. 4-25-23

DeCarlo, who has been a resident of Pratt City for many years, was abducted at Wylam, a stranger asking him his name and at the point of a revolver forced him to a waiting automobile, into which he was placed and driven quickly to Edgewater, some miles distance, where he was assaulted and then thrown into a pool of muddy water. His captors drove away and abandoned him at the scene of the assault. The wife of the victim gave information to the officers today.

"Sunday afternoon Joe left home, telling me he was going to Edgewater to visit a cousin, where his two children by his first wife were living," Mrs. DeCarlo declared. "I asked him when he would be back and he told me at 5 o'clock.

Staggered Home.

"After he left I decided to go to Norwood to see members of my family, with whom I had been living until a few days ago. I returned late Sunday afternoon and Joe was not at home. I waited until late at night and still he did not come in. Early Monday morning, I think it was between 4 and 4:30 o'clock, he opened the door and fell to the floor.

"His shoes, hat and coat were gone, and he seemed to have been walking many hours.

"I asked him what was the matter, and he told me 'the Ku Klux Klan got me.' That was all he said at first, but I continued to ask him questions. Later he said that he didn't know whether they were Ku Klux of not, and that none of the men were masked.

'His feet were swollen and bruised, his clothing covered with mud and his back and side swollen.

"He could scarcely stand up and was in bed under the direction of a doctor all day Monday. His back and side had several long gashes and bruises, and his scalp was cut from the lick over the head. Joe told me someone had hit him over the head with a pistol soon after he was kidnapped and this seems to have made him delirious ever since.

"Joe said he did not know any of the men. When the first man came to him in Wylam, he had just stepped from an Edgewater jitney. The stranger asked him, 'What's your name?' Joe said he did not tell him, but said, 'What do you want to know for?' The man demanded again what his name was and he finally said 'Joe.' The stranger pulled a pistol and pointed it at Joe, he said, and told him to step across the street where the others were waiting."

Mrs. DeCarlo said that her husband had sold her furniture and rented the house where they formerly resided and that on April 5, two years after her marriage, she had him arrested on a charge of non-support and instituted divorce proceedings on the grounds of desertion. Several days ago, however, they had effected a reconciliation and that she had gone back with her husband.

Mrs. DeCarlo resides in a room above he Coker grocery store. She is the nother of one child.

KU KLUX OPPOSED BY SELMA LEGION

Opposition Voiced at Meeting to Organization of Klan in Central City

SELMA, ALA., May 18.—Special to The Advertiser—Opposition to the organization of a Ku Klux Klan in Selma was voiced in strong speeches at a banquet held here tonight by the Selma Post American Legion.

Post Commander Aldyborn Blanton presided and General R. E. Steiner of Montgomery, state commander was the chief speaker of the occasion. The concensus of opinions expressed by both local and visiting speakers were to the effect that there is no need such an organization and it could not serve any good purpose at the present time.

Fears were expressed that this organization might be the means of tearing down associations and relationships and destroying the good will which exists among other organization

Vote Is Unanimous.

Civic organizations and fraternal bodies are upholding the hands of the law it was claimed by all speakers.

When the proposition of opposing the reorganization of a Klan was put to a vote, the Selma Post stood one hundred per cent against it.

Another matter discussed and favorably acted upon was the adoption of a resolution requesting the city school board institute a R. O. T. C. class for the junior male students in the public schools of Selma so that the boys will begin their military training at an early age.

Among the prominent visitors present were: General Robert E. Steiner, state commander, Bert Fitzpatrick, hospitalization officer, Montgomery; Walter Bragg Smith, post commander, Montgomery; Mr. Crockett of the Montgomery University club.

Following the banquet, Post Commander Blanton and other local Legionnaires took the distinguished visitors out to the Country club for further entertainment.

Editor The Advertiser:

The great volume which registers the works of men, the rise and fall of nations, the victories of the strong and the oppression of the weak, is again unfolding itself. The blessing of peace, quietude and inferred progress, has been darkened again by the shadow of a cloud, and a man who aspires to have authority over our democracy, eventually making himself Emperor of the United States of America.

My reference is to Col. William Joseph Simmons, of Atlanta, Georgia, the self-designated Emperor, Grand Wizard and Magic Wonder Worker of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Rightly has the public demanded that this organization explain the purposes of its existence, its creed, disciplived lives, oath and obligations. But escaping this legal inquiry, it has sought to deceive the public in the explanation given to this question.

The Klan has repeatedly stated that it stands for law and order, the constitution of the United States, to aid officers in the enforcement of the law, etc., all of which we have reason to doubt. However, these high-sounding phrases are so excruciating to us that we might expect the very imps to weep for the pity of them. Nevertheless they have appealed to a large class of people through their pretense of upholding "law and order." It is quite natural that people would follow an order that outwardly pretended to do such noble things, but since the best criterion to test the merits of a tree is by the fruits it bears, we have analyzed this apparently beautiful tree. We find it produces very bitter fruit such as the Mer Rouge affair and the Peeler Clayton murder at Austin, Texas.

The broad expanse of our country is laden with countless disappointed victims, which it has left in its wake and a pitiful heart-rending picture it is.

The Ku Klux Klan has debased every ideal known to the American government; it has defamed the good name of the fathers of this nation and has slandered those who wrested us from the barons of the old world. Unless checked by the legal remedies and moral influence of our land, the public will soon be made aware of catastrophic upheavals of our social and political system.

Any organization invites rebuke to itself when it brands non-members as unpatriotic and un-American. This is prima facie evidence that the motives and objects which are contained in its ritual are impure. Delving into this Ku Klux philosophy, we are astounded at the boldness of its intrigues, and the scope of its evil and sinister designs.

The Klan "Oath."

It is surprising to note that they have to a large degree been successful in sowing the poisonous seed of class antagonism, religious intolerance and race hatred through our country; in fact we already have the monarch in the person of that imperial personage, William Joseph Simmons.

I now wish to introduce you to that long and weird oath which the candidate takes when he gives himself body and soul to the imperial wizard.

Please read this carefully and note the shrewdness of the author of this debasing, degrading obligation. Place yourself in the attitude of a recipient who upon bended knee, with a fiery cross upon your head, and facing an open Bible, on whose pages lies a dagger, and imagine the unconditional obligations by which you swear to keep, in an organization which you know nothing about.

I give the oath as follows, and quote as my reference Mr. W. C. Witcher, of Fort Worth, Texas.

"Section 1. Obedience.

"(You will say:) 'I' (pronounce your name in full and repeat after me) 'in the presence of God and man most solemnly pledge, promise and swear, unconditionally, that I will faithfully obey the constitution and laws; and will willingly conform to all regulations, usages and requirements of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, which do now exist or which may be hereafter enacted; and I will render at all times loyal respect and steadfast support to the imperial authority of same, and will heartily heed all official mandates, decree, edicts, rulings and instructions of the Imperial Wizard thereof. I will yield prompt response to all summons, I having knowledge of same, Providence alone preventing.

"Section 2. Secrecy.

"I most solemnly swear that I will forever keep sacredly secret the signs, words, and grips, and any and all matters and knowledge of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan regarding which a most rigid secrecy must be maintained, which may at any time be communicated to me, and will never divulge same, nor even cause the same to be divulged to any person in the whole world, unless I know positively that such a person is a member of this order in good faith and regular standing, and not even then unless it be for the best interest of this order.

"I most sacredly vow, and most positively swear that I will not yield to bribe, flattery, threats, passion, punishment, persuasion, nor any enticements whatever coming from or offered by any person or persons, male or female, for the purpose of obtaining from me a secret or secret information of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. I will die rather than divulge same. So help me, God. Amen.

"Section 3. Fidelity.

"(You will say:) 'I' (pronounce your full name and repeat after me) 'Before God, and in the presence of these mysterious Klansmen, on my sacred honor, do most solemnly and sincerely pledge, promise and swear that I will diligently guard and faithfully foster every interest of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and will maintain its social cast and interest.

"I swear that I will not recommend any person for membership in this order whose mind is unsound, or whose reputation I know to be bad, or whose character is doubtful, or whose loyalty to our country is in any way questionable.

"I swear that I will pay promptly all just and legal demands made upon me to defray the expense of my Klan, and this order, when same are due or called for.

"I swear that I will protect the property of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, of any nature whatsoever; and if any should be entrusted to my keeping, I will properly keep, or rightly use same, and will freely and promptly surrender same on official demand, or if ever I am banished from or voluntarily discontinue my membership in this order.

"I swear that I will most determinedly maintain peace and harmony in all the deliberations of the gatherings or assemblies of the Invisible Empire, and of any subordinate jurisdiction or Klan thereof.

"I swear that I wll most strenuously discourage selfishness and selfish political ambition on the part of myself or any Klansman.

"I swear that I will never allow personal friendship, blood or family relationship, nor personal, political or professional prejudice malice or ill will, to influence me in casting my vote in this order, God being my helper, Amen.

"Section . Klanishness.

"(You will say:) 'I' (pronounce your full name and repeat after me) 'most solemnly pledge, promise and swear that I will never slander, defraud, deceive, or in any manner wrong the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a Klansman, nor a Klansman's family, nor will I suffer the same to be done, if I can prevent it.

"I swear that I will be faithful in defending and protecting the home, reputation and physical and business interest of a Klansman and that of a Klansman's family.

"I swear that I will at any time, without hesitating, go to the assistance or rescue of a Klansman in any way; at his call and I will answer; I will be truly klanish towards Klansmen in all things honorable.

"I swear that I will not allow any animosity, friction nor ill will to arise and remain between myself and a Klansman when same is committed to me in the sacred bond of Klansmanship, the crime of violating this solemn oath, treason against the United States of America, rape and malicious murder alone excepted.

"I most solemnly assert and affirm that the government of the United States of America and any state thereof which I may become a resident, I sacredly swear an unqualified allegiance above any other and every kind of government in the whole world. I, here and now, pledge my life, my property, my vote and my sacred honor, to uphold its flag, its constitution and constitutional laws, and will protect, defend and enforce same to death.

"I swear that I will most zealously and valiantly shield and preserve by any and all justifiable means and methods the sacred constitutional rights and privileges of free public schools, free speech, free press, separation of church and state, liberty, white supremacy, just nature, by any person or persons, political party or parties, religious sect or people, native, naturalized or foreign of any race, color, creed, lineage or tongue whatsoever."

Analysis of "Oath."

You will readily see after having read the above oath that a crime committed by a fellow-Klansman would not be revealed, though it may be an offense in the category of iniquity, except, malicious murder, treason and rape, but in these, by his oath, he becomes the interpreter of his own acts, and as no man will incriminate himself, it is reasonable to suppose that a Klansman is no exception to the rule.

The oath absolutely ignores the fact that our laws are the only interpreter of crime, and any man taking this oath, although actuated by the most lofty ideals, commits treason against that "government of the people, for the people and by the people," namely, the United States of America.

Please consider the section on "Obedience" and note that the candidate pledges himself to obey all "laws, regulations and requirements of the Klan, which do now exist or which may hereafter be enacted." Can any rational man pledge himself to abide by the dictates of a mere man?

We read in the sacred scriptures where Esau sold his birthright for a mess of porridge, and now I ask any sane man who has breathed the air of this free republic, if he can stultify his conscience to such an extent to sell his right of liberty to "Joe" Simmons or any other man?

In section three he swears to diligently guard and foster every interest of the Klan, there being no exceptions or conditions it makes no difference whether they are lawful or unlawful, right or wrong, or whatnot.

In section four we see that a Klansman will in no way whatsoever wrong a fellow member or his family. He will be truly klanish in all things honorable, but please remember that he is interpreter of his own acts. He pledges to rescue a Klansman at whatever cost. Just think what that mean to have a Klansman on a jury. We all know the decision of the Mer Rouge Klansman grand jury. Think of the reign of terror which those inhabitants of Morehouse parish experienced previous to the sending of state militia there by His Excellency, the governor of Louisiana.

It is the first time since the dawn days of creation that a voice has gone crashing through space with such placid and complacent confidence and command. It reminds one of a skunk lecturing on sweet innocence. All America should join in the banishment of this "konfounded konglomeration of Kacodemon."

Oh, if I could command the words of every language; if I could I would weave from them a whip of astral fire with a tail of scorpions, and I would lash the devils naked through the world.

North, east, south and west should unite and in the name of the American commonwealth send one glorious tribute of appreciation to Governor John Parker for so nobly leading the fight which is bound to determine whether we shall be subject to a president at Washington or an "Emperor" at Atlanta.

Very sincerely yours,
HENRY WINSTON BOLTZ.

KU KLUX KLAN PLAN TO DEFEAT NEGRO SCHOOL PROGRAMME IS OPPOSED.

Mr. E. Clyde Ellings thinks the Klan's efforts to discourage the board of education is destructive in writing in the Birmingham News Tuesday he made the following statement:

Birmingham Reporter 5/15/23

"At this time, when all newspapers and public-spirited citizens are worrying over the exodus of competent Negro labor for the North, it is certainly discouraging to see in our papers such ads as that of Sunday by the Ku Klux Klan, criticising the Board of Education of this city for advertising a Negro high school to be constructed.

Birmingham

"The Negro is a valuable part of our population, and as such should be encouraged along educational and other lines, and it is a shame to permit an organization such as the Klan to condemn this good action by the Board of Education.

"Let the Ku Klux Klan leave and go elsewhere; we can get along much better with the Negro.

SELMA LEGION WILL DRIVE OUT KU KLUX

Strong Condemnation of Secret Order by Post With Pledge to Counter Action

Advertiser 8-25-23

SELMA, ALA., Aug. 24.—Special by Leased Wire to The Advertiser.—Strong resolutions condemnatory of the Ku Klux Klan and resenting statements that members of the organization are in sympathy with the klan were unanimously passed by Selma post of the American Legion at its regular meeting and are published here over the signature of the commander of the post. Public opinion is overwhelmingly with the American Legion in the stand they have taken. The resolutions follow:

"Whereas it has come to our knowledge that representatives of the Ku Klux Klan now in Selma are placing the American Legion in a false and derogatory light by repeating statements that the Legion is not antagonistic to the Ku Klux Klan and that certain members of the Selma Post are in sympathy with the so-called 'great secret order,' therefore,

"Be it resolved, that these representations, no matter by whom made, are trumped up and slanderous and constitute an aspersion on the good name of this organization.

"The American Legion in its national council has already spoken in vigorous terms against the benighted and monstrous spirit for which Ku Klux Klanism stands and which it seeks to propagate; and as a subsidiary body of the American Legion we endorse those sentiments and are ready to back them to a man.

"We are convinced that this self-styled body of '100-per cent Americans' does not know what Americanism means. It does not mean class war or religious bigotry, or plotting behind closed doors; it does not mean the hood or the mask; or the enforcement of the law by self-appointed groups, midnight terrorism and the 'invisible empire.' 8-25-23

"It does mean fair play for every class and condition of our people; it means tolerance for religious differences and the fullest freedom to win or lose the battle of life, and for these things the American Legion stands.

"We are convinced that there is no place in this country for this secret breeding, peace-disturbing order and we pledge our efforts and sympathies to any organized movement to prevent the K. K. K. from getting a foothold here.

"G. C. BLANTON,
'Commander Selma Post, American Legion."

KLAN CEREMONIAL HELD AT SNOWDOUN

Mobile Minister Expresses Hope Montgomery Will Never be as "Rotten" as Seaport

Advertiser

One hundred and seventy men were received into the ranks of the Invisible Empire Thursday night, when the first Ku Klux Klan naturalization ceremony ever held openly in or near Montgomery, was conducted in the flickering light of the fiery cross, at Snowdoun.

A crowd reaching into the thousands in addition to the Knights of the Klan heard the speech of Rev. G. I. Griffin of Mobile preceding the ceremony, in which the speaker attacked the press, the Catholic church, the state law enforcement officers, and memorialized the legislature of Alabama to pass the Hudgens public school bill.

8-25-23

Calls for Women

Bert E. Thomas, one of the state officials of the Ku Klux Klan, and the only one who advertises his identity, introduced Rev. Griffin. In his introductory address, Mr. Thomas called for candidates for membership in the order, and also for applications from women of Montgomery, who wish to join The Women of the Ku Klux Klan, as the auxiliary is known.

Mr. Thomas told a representative of The Advertiser that the Women of the Ku Klux Klan has members in all parts of the state, Montgomery included, but no robed and masked women were seen in the field near Snowdoun Thursday night. The Klan official said that a similar ceremony will be held in Birmingham within a short time and that there will be for it approximately 2,000 candidates.

It was understood from some of the masked Klansmen present at the ceremony at Snowdoun, that another ceremony will be held near Montgomery in the near future, and it was predicted that the list of candidates at that time will be much larger than that Thursday night.

Rev. Griffin's speech was a defense of the Ku Klux Klan, was pitched along patriotic lines in keeping with the teaching of the Invisible Empire.

Urges Hudgens Bill

He advocated a law that would make it compulsory for all children between the ages of seven and fourteen to be educated in the public schools of the state, where he said the principles of patriotism and citizenship can be inculcated.

Declaring that the Klan seeks to cooperate with public officials, the speaker went on to say that the state of Alabama would be better off if 90 per cent of its law enforcement personnel should be fired. Rev. Griffin did not indicate any members that the state would be better off without.

Roasts City of Mobile

Bringing the activities of the Klan home to the people of Montgomery, Rev. Griffin expressed the hope that Montgomery would never be as corrupt as Mobile. At this point he branched off into a discussion of the rottenness he says exists in Alabama's seaport town.

The remainder of Rev. Griffin's address was devoted to an attack on the Catholic church, and a discussion of the principles of the order.

The ceremony followed, when half a dozen or more fiery crosses were lighted. The candidates, blindfolded but without robes were brought into a circle of Klansmen for the reading of a ritual which could not be heard from the bar placed for the spectators.

K. K. K. COVER SAYS GRAND JURY

Advertiser

Dallas County Body of Inquiry Sees Possibility of Other Malignant Forces

10-8-23

SELMA, ALA., Oct. 7.—Special to The Advertiser—Doubt as to whether all communications signed "Ku Klux Klan" really emanate from that organization is expressed by the Dallas county grand jury in their report submitted to Judge Samuel F. Hobbs here Saturday.

The report of the grand jury says, however, that the existence of the Klan provides a cover for injurious and malignant forces to work under. That part of the report in answer to Judge Hobbs charge relating to the Invisible Empire follows:

"We regret to say that he have had brought to our attention some very serious and dangerous efforts on the part of persons under cover to intimidate persons in the county. In one instance there was a written warning to all negroes on two plantations to leave this county and a time limit set for their leaving. This warning was signed Ku Klux Klan, Selma, Ala.

"We have no evidence other than the signature, to this letter to indicate by whom this communication was sent. There can be no mistaking the fact that the sender intended to convey the convictions that it was sent by the Ku Klux Klan. Frankly we have doubts that it emanated from this source, though we have no way to ascertaining this fact.

"This instance however, is startingly illustrated of one of the many evils that may come from even a supposed presence of such an organization in our midst. The existence of such an organization—or even its supposed existence—opens the way for any person to resort to such cowardly and dangerous practices as this, and gives an added significance and an added effect to such deeds. As a body, we fail to see any necessity or excuse for any such organization as the Ku Klux Klan among our people in this day of law and enlightment."

'Crimson' Warns Harvard of Big Klan Drive And Assault on Discrimination Bar

New York

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 22.—The Harvard drive for a large Ku Klux Klan branch is to start shortly, declares The Crimson, the college daily, which adds that the entrance into the university of a Klan organization is already a fact and that it is ready to give the university authorities information as to the membership of this body.

Moreover, The Crimson declares this Klan branch "has lately looked with no aversion on the scheme of founding a branch of the Kamelia (the women's section of the Klan) at Radcliffe College." 10-23-23

Matthew Luce, the university regent, said tonight that so far as he knows there is no Ku Klux branch at Harvard. It is admitted, however, that there may be a number of members of the Klan in the university.

The Klan has been holding forth in the yard for the past two years, according to the Crimson.

There are indications, the paper continues, that the next few weeks will see the largest drive yet for Klan membership in the yard. As yet the branch has worked under considerable secrecy, but in this drive the Harvard public may expect to see the Klan pursue a more open policy, leading probably to a formal statement of its aims.

The Crimson's editorial declares the best way to kill the Klan is to laugh at it.

The article goes on: "Whether or not the action of the university last year in decreeing the policy of non-discrimination tended to increase Klan membership is an open question. The plank in the Klan's national platform bearing on the subject is well known, and what part of it the Harvard branch stands for may be only a question of degree.

"But it is certain that the decision of last Spring was a signal for violent demonstrations in meetings of the Harvard Klan. Yet in the final test the decision was reached to attempt no active participation in the domestic issues of the university.

"Such policy has apparently been pursued during the first few weeks of college. The Klan as such has not interfered with social or religious organizations, and the Harvard public lulled possibly into a false sense of security has wondered at the apparent inactivity."

Dallas Negro Preacher Shows Up With Letter While Jury in Session at Selma

Montgomery Ala.

SELMA, ALA., Oct. 4.—Special by Leased Wire To The Advertiser.—William Jefferson, a negro preacher who is also employed at the McWilliam place on the Rangeland road, five miles from Selma, appeared at the office of Sheriff Percy Dawson today with a threatening letter purporting to have been written to the negro by the Dallas County Ku Klux Klan. 10-3-23

The letter was turned over to the grand jury now in session here, which was charged on Monday by Judge S. F. Hobbs to indict members of the Klan if their names could be obtained.

The letter was delivered in the mails to Jefferson and the reporting of the incident to the sheriff created a good deal of excitement at the court house, although the contents of the missive were not made public, the letter being given immediately into the hands of the grand jury.

Report Twenty-Five Bills.

The grand jury made a partial report to Judge Hobbs this evening, showing twenty-five true bills, including four indictments for murder. As far as known no action has yet been taken by the jury against any members of the Ku Klux Klan. It is expected that the grand jury will conclude their work on Saturday.

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL DRIVEN OFF BY KLAN

Montgomery Advertiser

Wilcox County Community is Thrown Into Excitement by Hooded Horsemen

SELMA, ALA., Sept. 28.—Special by Leased Wire to The Advertiser.—The little town of McWilliams, on the L. & N. railroad in Wilcox county, was thrown into a fever of excitement a few nights ago with the appearance at a late hour of hooded and masked horsemen on the streets coming, it seemed, from every section and quarter of the community. 9-29-23

The mysterious horsemen centered about a residence in the town surrounding it and after delivering a sealed communication at the front door rode away into the darkness. The letter was addressed to a young woman who had recently been re-elected as principal of the local school in opposition to a strong denominational feeling that existed among the patrons of the school.

The morning following the visitation the young woman tendered her resignation as principal and left the town on the first train.

Following the opening of the McWilliams school, on Monday, September 17, the principal is alleged to have received several threatening communications warning her to surrender her position, which were ignored by the principal, the school board and the young woman's friends.

So far the McWilliams school is without a principal, although it employs ten teachers and is one of the thriving educational institutions of Wilcox county.

NEGRO EXODUS FROM DALLAS AGAIN ON

Fear of Klan Given as Reason for New Movement North Although Negroes Silent

SELMA, ALA., Oct. 2.—Special by Leased Wire To The Advertiser—City ticket agents of local railway offices stated Tuesday that they had been busy all morning issuing tickets to negroes from Selma and Dallas county to points in Michigan and Illinois principal among the destinations of the travelers being Chicago, and Detroit with a sprinkling for Baltimore, Md., and Toledo, Ohio.

The exodus of negroes all at once this week is being attributed to letters purporting to be from the Ku Klu Klan, that have been sent out from Selma recently.

The negro race is known to be intensely susceptible to the influence of all mysterious organizations and easily excited and demoralized. While they have made no protest nor has violence occurred so far, they appear to have been discussing the Ku Klux and some of its acts and are freightened by the reports of the organization's activities elsewhere over the country.

Ticket agents state that it is impossible to get a satisfactory reason from the negroes buying tickets as to the cause of their leaving this section. They are averse to talking and will say nothing except that they are going to visit relatives.

Ku Klux Klan to Hold Open Air Ceremonial

An open air naturalization ceremony will be conducted, it is said, by the Knights of Ku Klux Klan on the Norman Bridge Road Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock. Feature of the event as announced will be an address on "Aims and purposes of this Order" by Rev. G. I. Griffin of Birmingham. The ceremony will be in charge of the Montgomery Klan. Members of the order from difefrent parts of the state are also expected to attend.

The exact site of the meeting has not been announced but guards will direct all persons to the place it is said. The public is invited to attend the ceremony.

Letters to Editor

JUDGE HOBBS REPLIES.

He Answers the Communication of the Montgomery Ku Klux Klan.

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 5, 1923.

Editor The Advertiser:

Enclosed herewith is original copy of a letter received today from Judge Hobbs, in answer to one sent to him, which was published in today's Advertiser. In justice to him, as well as to this organization, it is requested that this letter of Judge Hobbs' be published, since he states the report of his charge to the Dallas county grand jury was garbled.

Yours very truly,
MONTGOMERY KLAN NO. 3,
REALM OF ALABAMA,
KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN.

Selma, Ala., Oct. 4, 1923.

Montgomery Klan No. 3,
Knights of the Ku Klux Klan,
Box 23,
Montgomery, Alabama.

Gentlemen:

As a general rule, I do not answer anonymous letters, but because of the very good reason you have for your attitude, the garbled report of my grand jury charge, I am glad to reiterate (this time in black and white) my expressed position with reference to the new and existing Ku Klux Klan.

There is no law in force in Alabama forbidding or discouraging the organization of such an order. Any one who desires to do so may join, so far as the law is concerned; membership being perfectly legal. And it is the Constitutional right of all citizens to assemble, whenever they choose, for any peaceable purpose.

The laws of Alabama against sending threatening letters through the mails, assembling for a breach of the peace, two or more persons abusing another for the purpose of obtaining a confession or his exile, assault and battery, treating or offering to treat diseases of human beings without first having obtained the necessary certificate of qualification, speeding, houses of prostitution, living in adultery, the unlawful carrying of weapons, keeping gaming tables, gaming, and the manufacture, sale and possession of liquors, were those which I stressed in my charge to the Dallas county grand jury on October first.

In quoting from a threatening letter which I had before me, and telling of the alleged posting of a threatening notice, I specifically stated that although it was signed "Ku Klux Klan, Selma, Ala.", I did not believe that the Klan was responsible for it, but thought that its author was probably some one forging the name of the Klan in order to throw the officers of the law off of the scent, and gain for himself immunity in his violation of the law.

It was, of course, the teachings of the I. W. W., the Bolsheviki, the red radicals, et al., which I denounced as abhorrent to all right-thinking men.

As to your teachings I know nothing, and said nothing.

So far as your principles are concerned I know only what some of the officers of the order are reported as having said, and what some of its literature contains.

What the practices of the Klan are I do not know, and have not attempted to state or intimate.

In my charge I told the grand jury that it was their sworn duty diligently to inquire and true presentment make of all indictable offenses committed or triable within Dallas county, without fear or favor; and that they should not stop until they had found out every one of the guilty persons who were breaking the laws.

As to your suggestion of "debating the Klan," there is in my judgment no ground for debate. I, as an officer of the law, am not interested in the Klan as such. If no law is broken, I have nothing to say. If any one violates the law, he is a law-breaker, and, I think you will concede, is subject to legal prosecution, not debate.

Yours truly,
S. F. HOBBS,
Judge 4th Circuit.

KLEAGLE SIGNS LETTER.

Mr. F. C. Schwend Signs Ku Klux Klan Communication to Judge Hobbs.

The Advertiser announced yesterday that it was in receipt of a letter purporting to be from the Ku Klux Klan of Montgomery, addressed to Judge S. F. Hobbs of Selma, taking issue with the Judge's charge to the Dallas grand jury in reference to the Klan's activity in that county. The letter was refused publication on the ground of being anonymous. Mr. F. C. Schwend came to the offic Thursday and assumed responsibility for the communication by signing it as Kleagle of the Invisible Empire, Montgomery Klan No. 3. The letter follows:

Montgomery Klan No. 3,
Realm of Alabama,
October 2, 1923.

Judge Samuel F. Hobbs,
Selma, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Today's Advertiser prints your charge to the grand jury of Dallas county, delivered on yesterday. It is based, evidently, upon such misinformation about this order and the principles for which it stands, and has been given such publicity, that it is considered fitting to take the matter up with you directly, and to give a copy of this letter to The Advertiser, with request that it be printed.

1st. Have you not been led astray when you make direct charges of crime and statements of fact based upon rumor and hearsay of the rankest kind? Could not anyone have signed K. K. K. to letters? It may be enlightening to you to tell you that the constitution of this order forbids anyone sending anonymous communications.

2nd. By clever arrangement of the subjects covered by your charge, you evidently wish to convey the impression that the Bolsheviki, the I. W. W., etc., are on a parity with the members of this order. Just how this order, or any order, made up exclusively of native-born, white, Gentile, protestant Christian Americans, sworn to uphold and defend with their life's blood if need be, the constitution and laws of the United States against any and all foes within and without can be in any particular like the Bolsheviki, we 100 per cent Americans fail to comprehend.

3rd. You state that the "teachings of this order are abhorent to all right-thinking men." The statement shows on its face to the multitudes who are members of this order that you simply do not know what you are talking about. Therefore, this statement hardly needs refuting. It might be said, however, that you, as a judicial officer, especially, should be on your guard against jumping at conclusions and believing the propaganda directed against this order. It is safe to say that not 1 per cent of the "news" in the daily papers about this order is true. That there have been (for hundreds of years) floggings in this country, is no doubt true. (Perhaps not enough have been administered, if the truth were known.) But it does not follow that this organization is any more responsible for them than the Methodist Church, the Masons, or the Democratic party to which organizations doubtless many of the "floggers" belong.

The Advertiser quotes you as saying "If you find any member of a Ku Klux Klan organization, so-called, it is your sworn duty to indict them." Did you say that? Indict them for violating the law, your honor? Your zeal for the cause of the un-Americans has led you far afield as a judge of the circuit court. Do you really want to know the names of some of the Klansmen, so that you may have the grand jury of your county to indict them for being Klansmen?

You have rendered yourself liable to suit for libel in making statements of fact which are untrue and damaging. In addition to that you have stigmatized as law-breakers, thousands of the finest Protestant Christians in the State of Alabama—ministers of the Gospel, doctors, lawyers, statesmen, public officials, teachers, bankers, editors—every legitimate business—but every one of them was born in America, a believer in the tenets of the Christian religion, a Gentile, a Protestant and white men.

Your zeal is surely worthy of a better cause. You are unknowingly perhaps lending your aid to the propaganda waged by aliens of the most insidious type.

Will you debate the Klan with Dr. Parrish? When, where?

Yours very truly,
MONTGOMERY KLAN NO. 3,
REALM OF ALABAMA,
KNIGHTS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN.
F. C. SCHWEND.

Kleagle of the Invisible Empire, Montgomery Klan No. 3.

ANONYMOUS LETTERS.

The Advertiser has received in recent days two anonymous communications signed K. K. K., which may or may not be authentic. We took a chance in publishing the first which was on general subjects, although in common with other newspapers we follow the policy of not publishing anonymous communications.

The second letter is addressed to Judge S. F. Hobbs of Selma and it purposes to be from Montgomery Realm No. 3, and challenges statements made by the Judge in his recent charge before the Dallas County Grand Jury. The post office address of Judge Hobbs is well known and it is not necessary that The Advertiser be used as a means of communication to convey challenges for debate or to imply that some of his statements are libelous. In that letter, however occurs this significant paragraph:

> Have you not been led astray when you make direct charges of crime and statements of facts, based upon rumors of hearsay of the rankest kind? Could not any one have signed K. K. K. to the letters? It may be enlightening to you to tell you that the constitution of this order forbids anyone sending anonymous letters.

Then if the letter is genuine, The Advertiser cannot be asked by any member to help him violate the constitution of the order. If any responsible member, officer or committee will sign the letter we will willingly publish it.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT EXPECTED TO TRY ALLEGED FLOGGERS

Double Prosecution Planned in Dowling Case With Federal Authorities Getting Priority; Two More Arrests Made Following Confession; Others Expected.

The Birmingham Reporter

Trial of alleged members of the Dowling floggers in United States District Court before Judge W. I. Grubb became a virtual certainty Monday as city, county and federal authorities moved swiftly in the investigation of the kidnaping and whipping of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, last May. 4/7/23

SECTION 19 OF U. S. PENAL CODE

SECTION 19, of the penal code of the United States, on which authorities announce that abductors and floggers of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, probably will be prosecuted, follows:

"If two or more persons conspire to injure, oppress, threaten or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, or because of his having so exercised the same, or on the premises of another, with intent to prevent or hinder his free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilges so secured, they shall be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned not more than 10 years, and shall, moreover, be thereafter ineligible to any office, or place of honor, profit or trust created by the constitution or laws of the United States."

Dr. Dowling, being a United States health official, comes under the jurisdiction of the federal court, and any attack against him is punishable under Section 19 of the penal code of the United States, according to C. W. McPhail, head of the Alabama department of the Department of Justice, with headquarters in Birmingham.

Despite the announced probability of trial in federal court, however, County Solicitor Jim Davis continued to push his end of the investigation, which he announced Monday was practically complete. It will not be necessary to call a special grand jury, the solicitor explained, as the regular April grand jury will be organized April 9. After its organization, the Dowling case will be given right of way and speedy action is expected, the solicitor said.

The only announced.. new developments over the week-end are the arrests of Sam Cargo, Tarrant City, and J. F. Ford, of Mt. Pinson, both dairymen. Cargo and Ford were arrested Sunday on charges of assault with intent to murder and "523-C," the dangerous and suspicious ordinance of Birmingham.

Cargo and Ford, with W. M. Yerby, E. G. Jacks and P. N. Newman, already under grand jury indictment on charges of kidnaping and flogging Dr. Dowling were named as members of the flogging band by C. W. Tison, dairy helper on the Haigler Dairy Farm, who confessed Saturday. This leaves three men named in the confession who have not been taken into custody and two to four others who have been implicated in another way, the authorities announce.

According to present plans, double prosecution will be carried out, with the probabilities that the United States District Court will be given priority, authorities state.

Rumors of new sensations continued to fly as the day wore on, but with the solicitor's office and city and federal authorities clamping down on the giving out of information, it was not possible to confirm all the reports. However, as the authorities dug deeper and deeper into the case it became apparent that it was taking on many ramifications. Efforts have been made to block the work of city and federal officers and the solicitor at many times, it was said, but despite this, authorities disclosed, they have been able to make out a complete case, one they declare will have far reaching effect.

Another startling development, it was said, is that more than the nine men named in the confession of Tyson are said to have had a hand in the kidnapping and flogging, or to have helped plan them, and disclosures of their names are expected to produce a fresh sensation.

From a source high in the conduct of the investigation, it was learned that the case, as it now stands, is regarded as one of the most completely worked up that has ever been handled by city, county or federal authorities locally, some facts of which are known only to solicitor Davis, Detective Cole and M. E. McDuff. Dictaphones have been used in several instances, it was said, with startling results.

"All I can say at the present time." Solicitor Davis declared Monday, in the presence of the three chief investigators, Cole, McDuff and McPhail, "is that we have a complete case. Beyond this the solicitor would make no statement for publication.

Tyson, who is still being held by police and government authorities, whose confession is another link in the chain the authorities declare they have worked up, has made no other statement, it was announced, except to say several times, and once in the presence of newspapermen, that he has lifted a load from his heart—one he described as having weighed him down every since the fateful night of Mry 17, 1922, when Dr. Dowling was lured from his home on a pela of mercy and spirited away and brutally whipped.

As the case now stands, dairymen who were opposed to Dr. Dowling's health measures, particularly concerning milk, are charged with being the ringleaders in the plot to kidnap and whip him, although authorities are said to have evidence of "higher ups" who are said to have aided and abetted in the plot. Dr. Dowling, having reduced the Birmingham public's annual water bill in the adulteration of milk from $94,000 to $2,300, and effected a number of other measures to safeguard the milk supply, greatly reducing the baby death rate and adult death rate on that one score alone, incurred the enemity of a good many dairymen, it is alleged. These advanced steps and others, it is claimed, caused the dairymen to conspire against him.

HUNTSVILLE ROTES OPPOSED TO KU KLUX

Resolutions Declare Against Concealing Identity of Members

The Montgomery Advertiser 4-8-23

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., April 7.—Special to The Advertiser—The Huntsville Rotary club has put itself on record as being opposed to the Ku Klux Klan which has recently entered this territory and paraded the streets of the city in automobiles with numbers hidden so that the identity of the parders could not be determined. Resolutions as follows were adopted:

"We believe that whatever the real purpose of any organization may be, even though the objects intended to be accomplished be praiseworthy, no good purpose or result can be accomplished by any association or organization which seeks to conceal the identity of its members or to accomplish its purpose by means of such concealment of the persons or agents through whom it acts.

"We strongly disapprove of any organization in the United States which attempts to accomplish its purpose by masking, disguising or otherwise concealing the identity of its members, agents or persons through whom it acts."

Authorities of the city, county and nation are called upon to use the laws now existing to put a stop to such organizations and if the present laws are not sufficient for that purpose they are urged to see to the enactment of stringent and efficient laws for the purpose and vigorously and rigorously enforce them when they are enacted.

Victims of Lash Used by Mobs Fear to Testify

Atlanta Constitution 3-31-23

Next to Impossible to Get Evidence Against Birmingham Lawless.

Birmingham, Ala., March 30.—(By the Associated Press.) — Flogging mobs have implanted such fear into the hearts of their victims in this community that it is next to impossible to induce them to appear in the courts, the Jefferson county grand jury said today in a presentment to Judge H. P. Heflin, tenth judicial circuit.

"Of the numerous instances of kidnaping and flogging that have taken place in this county," read the report, "we have had only two presented to us which shows clearly that those guilty of that dastardly practice have been successful in instilling into their victims a fear which prevents their lending any assistance to the authorities in ferreting out and bringing to justice the ones who are responsible for these crimes."

The grand jury called upon victims of flogging mobs to come forward and give testimony, "to come forward with what information they have at their command with regard to these floggings, assured of the hearty co-operation and protection of our courts and officers in helping to bring these criminals to justice."

One of the cases mentioned as having been investigated by the inquisitorial body was the whipping of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, and attache of the United States public health service, according to state's attorneys. Dr. Dowling and numerous witnesses said to have knowledge bearing on that case were before the grand jury on several occasions, it was stated by authorities. No indictments so far have been returned.

The Dowling flogging on May 17, 1922, created wide-spread comment and a searching inquiry has been under way since that date, participated in by city, state and federal authorities. It was the climax to a series of whippings by masked and unmasked mobs that had extended over a period of two years. Dr. Dowling was called to his door late at night and responded to a fake emergency call to attend a man with a broken leg. His abductors carried him to a wood and beat him almost to death. The tormentors told him, according to his statement, that his czar-like methods in handling city health affairs had to stop. Dr. Dowling, with great effort, made his way to a farm house and was carried back to his home just before daybreak. He immediately reported the case.

Since that event the whippings have been sporadic in nature.

Persons of almost every walk in life have been victims of the flogging mobs.

DOWLING FLOGGED BY INVITATION, CLAIM

The Montgomery Advertiser 4-5-23

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., April 4.—Flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer on May 17, last year, was an invitation affair, it was disclosed today by authorities who admitted that at least six other men not previously mentioned in the case were linked with the alleged plot.

Irrespective of the outcome of the case in the state courts, it was stated that federal authorities would seek indictments before the grand jury of the United States district court under section 19 of the penal code covering conspiracy "to injure, oppress, threaten or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the constitution or laws of the United States."

Six men have been arrested in the case.

Three Indicted in Jefferson For Flogging of Dr. Dowling Last May; Two Dairymen Are Among Accused

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., March 30—Indictment of two dairymen and a plumber today by the Jefferson county grand jury marked the first announced result of the investigation of the flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer, last May. The indictments were returned in circuit court in a supplementary report following the reading of the regular, formal presentment of the inquisitorial body, and named W .M. Yerby, a planter and dairyman of Mt. Pinson; E. G. Jacks, dairyman of Ketona and P. N. Newman, a plumber of Acipco.

C. W. Tyson, employe of a dairy near Ketona was arrested by agents of the federal government and today held in the city jail in connection with the Dowling case, authorities announce. This was the first arrest in the case and the action was said to be independent of the inquiry conducted by the Jefferson county grand jury.

Tyson was arrested at the instance of C. W. McPhail, secret service attache, who is said to have been engaged on the Dowling case for several months.

Montgomery Advertiser

Authorities stated that inquiry had been conducted on the theory that the flogging of Dr. Dowling resulted because of his zeal in enforcing health laws that pertain to darying and plumbing. The health officer's standards were described as "high" and the requirements were said to often conflict with ideas of individuals touched by the health ordinances.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., March 30—Flogging mobs have implanted such fear into the hearts of their victims in this community that it is next to impossible to induce them to appear in the courts, the Jefferson county grand jury said today in a presentment to Judge H. P. Helflin, tenth judicial circuit.

The grand jury called upon victims of flogging mobs to come forward and give testimony, guaranteeing full protection of the courts.

"We would urge each and every one of those interested," continued the report "to come forward with what information they have at their command with regard to these floggings, assured of the hearty cooperation and protection of our courts and officers in helping to bring these criminals to justice."

One of the cases mentioned as having been investigated by the inquisitorial body was the whipping of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer and attache of the United States public health service, according to state's attorneys. Dr. Dowling and numerous witnesses said to have knowledge bearing on that case were before the grand jury on several occasions, it was stated by authorities. No indictments so far have been returned.

The Dowling flogging on May 17, 1922, created widespread comment and a searching inquiry has been under way since that date, participated in by city, state and federal authorities. It was the climax to a series of whippings by masked and unmasked mobs that had extended over a period of two years. Dr. Dowling was called to his door late at night and responded to a fake emergency call to attend a man with a broken leg. His abductors carried him to a wood and beat him almost to death. The tormentors told him according to his statement, that his Czar-like methods in handling city health affairs had to stop. Dr. Dowling with great effort made his way to a farm house and was carried back to his home just before daybreak.

Since that event whippings have been sporadic in nature. Persons in almost every walk of life have been victims of the flogging mobs.

Other principal points in the report of the grand jury follow:

Recommended registration of all men between ages of 21 and 65 for jury service and scored the present jury system as obsolete.

Urged abolishment of grand juries, or that grand juries be called only on extraordinary cases, and that matters usually handled by grand juries be handled on complaint of the solicitor.

Made the usual complaint of the court house as "entirely inadequate for carrying on the business of the tax payers" and "a reflection on the intelligence of the citizenship of the county."

Recommended the creation of a Birmingham county, taking in the city of Birmingham and the present northern end of Jefferson county, and consolidation of city and county governments under one set of executives in one building.

Called for a "strong public sentiment" against liquor violations to back up officers.

Praised all city and county institutions, their officials and methods, but condemned, in a number of instances, lack of facilities and dilapidated buildings, due to lack of money.

Alabama Boys' Industrial School: We found conditions at this institution to be satisfactory in every respect. The boys are given a regular course of study through the tenth grade and special attention is given to vocational training. When a boy leaves this school he should have no trouble in making his way in the world. All buildings and equipment seem modern and to be in good condition. On December 17, 1922, there were 381 boys enrolled, 74 of whom were from Jefferson county. The assets of the school are as follows:

Real estate $81,600.

Building and improvements $223-563.24.

Equipment and furnishings $67-448.80.

The annual appropriation from the State of Alabama to take care of all incidental expenses is $240, for each boy. However there has been a special yearly donation from the state for the hospital during the last four years.

In the judgment of the grand jury the only recommendation necessary is that a special appropriation be made for the dental and other treatment that cannot be given at the hospital unless outside assistance is received. We find however, that a number of doctors and dentists have gladly donated services to this cause.

Alabama vocational school for girls: enrollment at this school is 32 girls, practically 50 per cent of whom are from Jefferson county, the annual appropriation by the state of Alabama is $6,000. This is for salaries of superintendent, two teachers and one colored handy man, all clothing, groceries and other expenses of the institution.

The grand jury thinks that appropriation for medical and dental services should be made. Money is also needed for new equipment and clothing. New window shades are required and the building needs paint, inside and outside. A special appropriation by the city and county for the girls from this institution who attend high school is suggested. This school needs equipment for the garden. If a mule or plow and other necessary equipment could be occasionally furnished by the county from the court house or county farm, this condition would be greatly improved. Miss Bachman, the superintendent, deserves a great deal of credit for the work she is doing, considering difficulties she has to face. The interest manifest in their work by both teachers and pupils, as well as the general neat appearance of the building and premises appealed to the grand jury. This is a worthy cause and anything the county can do for the Alabama vocational school for girls will be worth while. We found that the work of this institution is unique in that it is taking care of the dependent rather than the delinquent girls. We believe that a substantial appropriation by the state will be well placed, in order that this institution may be able to provide for approximately 100 girls rather than 30 or 35 as at the present time.

TRIAL DATE SET ALLEGED FLO

Three Birmingham Men to Face Jury May 28 For Dowling Whipping

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., April 7.—Porter N. Newman, W. M. Yerby and Ernest G. Jacks, under indictment on kidnapping and assault with intent to murder in connection with the flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city health officer of Birmingham, will be tried in circuit court here on May 28, it was announced tonight.

The Montgomery Advertiser 4-8-23

Indictments against at least five other persons are expected by officials when the Jefferson county grand jury is organized Monday to make further investigation of the case.

Officials who have been aiding county and city authorities in their probe of the attack upon the health officer have stated that the case will be brought before a federal grand jury if the state court fails to convict.

Ku Klux Band Leaves Church

The Montgomery Advertiser 4-8-23

TROY, ALA., April 7.—Sunday afternoon at the special service for men, conducted at St. Mark's Episcopal Church by Dr. Frank J. Mallett, of New Albany, Ind., who had been conducting a mission here for a week, just as the services were about to begin four members of the Ku Klux Klan, robed in white, silently entered the church and walked down the central aisle. They stopped at intervals and the leader approached the pulpit and handed to Dr. Mallett an envelope. Then the band as quietly disappeared.

On opening the envelope, it was found to contain a donation of a $50 bill and a letter to Dr. Mallett from the more than 100 members of the Ku Klux Klan of Troy, complimenting his splendid services in Troy and saying that in appreciation of the great good he had done while here they wanted to give the $50.

Guardsmen's Trial is Set for This Month

The Montgomery Advertiser Ala.

Judge Horace C. Wilkinson, employed by the state as special assistant attorney general to prosecute the cases of the nine former Alabama National Guardsmen charged with complicity in the lynching of William Baird, a coal miner, stated Thursday that trial of the defandants has been set for Monday, August 27.

8-12-23

Judge Wilkinson, who resides in Birmingham, and who was employed during the previous administration to represent the state as prosecutor in these cases, was at the capitol Thursday afternoon on business.

Robert L. Lancaster, is the only one of the defendants so far placed on trial. He has been tried twice in the Marion county circuit court at Hamilton, a mistrial resulting both times.

Baird, who was a prisoner in the Walker county jail charged with the slaying of a national guardsman, was removed from the county prison by a mob and shot to death. Arrest of the nine national guardsmen whose trials will begin on August 27 at Hamilton, followed within a short time. Venue in trial of the cases was subsequently changed to Marion county.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 18.—Advertisements in the daily papers and handbills notifying the people of Mobile that the K. K. K. of this city would put on a demonstration of the strength of the "invisible empire" in Mobile December 4, brought quick action from the mayor of the city, Colonel R. V. Taylor, and the chief of police who called attention to the fact that Mobile has had for many years a law prohibiting masking of any kind in the city except on Mardi Gras Day and masquerade balls that might be given in celebration of some event or by some society through permit of the mayor or chief of police.

New Orleans, La.

Wednesday the Kiwanis Club adopted a resolution offered by Leo Zeiman, a Catholic and member of the Knights of Columbus, calling upon the city and county authorities to do their duty and prevent any proposed demonstration. The resolution referred to the fact that the most harmonious relations existed in this city between Protestants, Catholics and Jews and expressing the opinion that the K. K. K. or any other like organizations should be suppressed in a movement that would cause disruption of the present feeling.

It is generally understood here that the klan has about one hundred members and the advertisement calls for one thousand applications for membership to be filed not later than the day of the proposed demonstration, December 4. The K. K. K. proposed to provide a program including fireworks, a klan lecture and music by the klan band, adding that five thousand hooded and robed klansmen from Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana will be here and that one thousand men and women of Mobile will be taken into the order. From what the police say, and they are backed up by the members of the city commission, if the klan attempts to override the present city laws and stage the parade trouble may result.

MONTGOMERY KLAN GIVES COUNCIL $50

Montgomery Advertiser 1-1-23.

Mild Sensation Sprung When Bob Jones Reads Letter to Congregation

Something of a sensation was created at the regular meeting of the Protestant Christian Council at the First Baptist Church Sunday afternoon when Rev. Bob Jones, D. D., the noted evangelist read a letter from Montgomery Klan No. 3 Realm of Alabama, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, enclosing $50 to assist in carrying on the work of the Council.

"We are glad to note that Montgomery has such an organization" the letter stated. "We feel that the work being done by the Council should be given hearty cooperation and a God-speed for even greater and more active work during the coming year of 1923." The letter speaks also of the Klansmen's "great interest and strong approval" of the work of the Protestant Christian Council.

Dr. Jones read a letter written by him in reply to the message from the Ku Klux Klan in which he states "I congratulate you that your Order has fought on the moral side in every political battle in this country."

In commenting on the donation, Dr. Jones stated that he is not a member of the Klan, though he has received an invitation to join. The letter from the Klan was handed to him a day or so ago, he stated. The $50 enclosed was turned over to Walter Shepard, president of the Protestant Christian Council.

Following the reading of the letters, Dr. Jones read verses from the first and second chapter of Romans, and spoke from this text. He declared that it is not the teachings of Christ, but "Jesus Christ Himself," which must be the salvation of mankind. There was a time in the world's history Dr. Jones said, when all men knew God; but they have turned from the knowledge, and he urged that the great need of American today is to "discover God." He referred with regret to a tendency which he said prevails today of turning violations of the law into a joke. "Men today laugh at things which should put them on their knees" he said.

Emphasis was laid by the evangelist on the statement that it is not the teachings of Christ, without acceptance of Him as the Son of God, which should dominate religion. He referred with evident distaste to people who "throw kisses at Christ" and nevertheless refuse to acknowledge in Him the Deity.

The meeting was well attended in spite of the very unfavorable weather.

Tells Story When Facing Assault and Battery, Police Charge

Montgomery Ad.

When John Lewis, negro, 16 years old, appeared in recorder's court Saturday afternoon for a hearing on a charge of assault and battery which had been docketed against him, he asserted that several unmasked white men whisked him out of the city in an automobile earlier in the day, flogged him and issued an oral ultimatum demanding his departure from Montgomery in five days.

He declared that his alleged assailants were present in the court room, but when asked to point them out to policemen the offhand accusation developed into a case of mistken identity.

Lewis was charged with assault and battery as a result of a blow he is alleged to have administered to a white boy on North Court street a few days ago.

The complainant was not in court and the hearing in the case was postponed. Lewis said his alleged assailants, after commanding him to enter the automobile, drove a few miles from the city where, he said, he was beaten. According to reports, the negro boy was left at the scene of the alleged flogging and was picked up by an automobilist on the road while he was walking back to Montgomery.

Carter claims to have recognized one of the men and it is probable that an investigation will be held by the grand jury.

Carter had been charged with making improper advances to a young man living in the community.

Kidnapped Negro Grabs Assailant's Pistol; Wounds One

(Special to The Advertiser)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Feb. 13.—In connection with the kidnapping last night of Ed. H. Daniels, negro, who shot his way to liberty after he had been carried some distance from the city, police are observing a patient in a Birmingham hospital who lies desperately wounded, they announced today. There were four men in the gang that abducted Daniels, he stated.

It was stated at police headquarters that the statement made by Daniels indicated that he had fired upon his captors shortly before the man was brought to the hospital with a wound in the head. The patient told hospital authorities he had accidentally shot himself. 2-14-23

Daniels said he was kidnapped, blindfolded and hustled into a car. While traveling at high speed the car struck a bad road. The jostling gave him opportunity to wrest a pistol from one of his abductors. He told police he immediately leaped from the car and began firing at the four men. He was confident he shot one of them. Soon afterward a man was brought to a Birmingham hospital claiming to have accidentally shot himself.

Daniels knew no reason why he should have been kidnapped. He told police he believed the gang was bent on doing him bodily harm from their actions.

Five Men Implicated in Kidnapping of Dr. Dowling Last May

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Feb. 18.—Indictment of at least five men by the Jefferson county grand jury in connection with the kidnapping and flogging last May of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city health officer of Birmingham, will be asked when the grand jury is called into special session Monday, it became known on good authority tonight.

Dr. Dowling, upon the night of the affair, was spirited away from his home at Roebuck, a suburb, as he answered a call at his front door of what he thought to be an injured man, and was taken into the woods near the city, where he was severely flogged by a party of masked men.

One of the men against whom an indictment will be asked is said to have been positively identified as a member of the band by a maid at the physician's home who answered the call at the door.

Investigation of the case has continued since last May, department of justice agents aiding local and county authorities in their work. First announcements that new developments might be expected were made last week when it was said at the solicitor's office that the matter would be brought to the attention of the grand jury now in session.

A number of similar floggings preceded and have followed the whipping of the city official, the latest of which was an attack upon Herman Daniels, negro, last Monday night. Four men are under arrest in connection with this case.

R. O. Darling Makes Affidavit Whipping Was Administered by Klan

2-20-23

(Associated Press)

TAMPA, FLA., Feb. 19.—R. O. Darling, of Kissimmee, Osceola, Fla., today filed an affidavit with the Osceola county court declaring that high officials of his county were members of the Ku Klux Klan which attacked him and threatened to take his life if he made known their names, according to an official copy of the affidavit published in the Tampa Daily Times.

The affidavit charged that Darling was seized near where a klan meeting was being held on February 8. It further charges that Darling was whipped and told if he revealed the names of those he saw at the meeting he would be killed.

Darling admitted in the affidavit that he went in search of the klan meeting place with a companion because he had heard that some of its members held a grudge against him and he wanted to know just what was the cause. Darling's affidavit is accompanied by one filed with the county court and signed by George Davy, a fireman of St. Cloud, a nearby town, who claims that he went with Darling to the meeting. The Davy affidavit corroborated that of Darling.

The affidavit signed by Darling charges that Marshal Driggers and Mayor May, of Kissimmee, and others were his captors.

Darling is said to be living in the woods near Kissimmee guarded by his friends since he signed the affidavit.

The men named in the affidavits issued statements denying the accusations.

Florence Officials Are Not Daunted by Mysterious Note Received

(Special to The Advertiser)

FLORENCE, ALA., Feb. 20.—Threats received in a note signed "K. K. K." will not deter the city commission of Florence from carrying on its program to enforce a plan for collection of delinquent assessments for street and school bonds made against property here. This statement was made by the officials soon after the receipt of the note today, the belief being expressed that it was the strong tax collection campaign that had prompted the threat.

The note which threatened the commissioners unless they cease what was termed "tyrannical acts" read:

"Where law ends, tyranny begins—and the tyrannical acts of this administration plainly show that the law has ended. Unless this organization of kinsfolk is disbanded and replaced with cool headed, fair minded honest and agreeable men, we the K. K. K.'s at a time when no man knoweth will wait upon thee."

If the Ku Klux is organized here city and county authorities have never been advised of it.

FLOGGING PROBE IN BIRMINGHAM STARTS

Dr. Dowling Appears Before Grand Jury; Adjourns to Friday

2-20-23

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Feb. 19.—Following the appearance of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer and attache of the federal government and members of his household, the Jefferson county grand jury which is making a probe of the whipping of this official by a mob last May, adjourned late today until Friday afternoon.

Dr. Dowling was the first witness to appear before the jury this morning and was followed by Annie Laurie Lightner, a negro maid at his home, Chief of Police Fred H. McDuff, C. W. McPhail, department agent, City Detective Paul Cole, Special Officer Woodie Sandifer, and N. L. Pierce, private detective. The nature of their testimony was not disclosed, but court officials had previously stated that the maid had identified the spokesman of the mob which abducted the health official.

Developments in the Dowling case this week are said to have resulted from investigation of the flogging of Ed H. Daniels, negro, last Monday. Two men are under bond in connection with the case, and two others are under surveillance in local hospitals, where they are recovering from pistol wounds. Daniels stated that he shot his way to freedom, after having been kidnapped by the band of men.

One of the men arrested in connection with the Daniels case was released this afternoon upon a writ of habeas corpus by Judge Roger W. Snyder, and subsequently appeared before the grand jury at his own request. Officials have refused to reveal in just what way the Dowling and Daniels' cases are connected.

It was indicated today that federal officials might assume charge of the Dowling case following the grand jury investigation, by reason of the fact that Dr. Dowling was an employe of the federal government at the time of the assault.

KU KLUX STRONGLY CONDEMNED BY CIVIC CLUB OF HUNTSVILLE

Montgomery Advertiser

(Special to The Advertiser)

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., March 24.—The Huntsville Kiwanis Club has adopted strong resolutions condemning the Ku Klux Klan and calling upon city, county, state and national officials to enforce every law that may be invoked to suppress the klan, and if there are not enough laws to accomplish the desired objective, to enact new ones and put them into effect. Action was taken by the Kiwanians following the organization of a klan unit in Huntsville, which paraded the principal streets in full regalia on last Friday night. 3/25/23.

The Kiwanis resolutions declare that no good is ever accomplished by an organization which conceals the identity of its members and seeks the accomplishment of its purposes by concealment of the person or agents through whom it acts.

KU KLUX HOLDS PARADE

Montgomery Advertiser

HUNTSVILLE, March 17.—The first parade of Ku Klux Klan staged in Huntsville since reconstruction days following the civil war was seen on the streets last night when members of a newly organized chapter of the klan paraded in automobiles. With number plates covered with cloth so that no one could recognize the cars, the klansmen in full regalia rode through the business section and scattered among the curious throngs, thousands of red tags on which were printed the principles of the organization.

REPORT ON DOWLING FLOGGING EXPECTED

Montgomery Advertiser

Evidence Presented to Grand Jury Involving Many Men in Case

Alabama.

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., March 29.—According to well defined reports current around the county court house this afternoon the Jefferson county grand jury will make a report late today or early tomorrow in the Dowling flogging case, in the opinion of authorities.

It was said evidence had been presented to the grand jury involving nine or ten men in the case.

Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer and attache of the United States public health service was beaten nearly to death by a mob on May 17, 1922. Since that time the case has been under investigation.

FOR PRIVATE VENGEANCE, NOT PUBLIC MORALITY.

The brutal kidnapping of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer of Birmingham and Jefferson county, and the flogging administered to him, was a crime that horrified the State. If he had been assassinated, it would not have created the general horror at the idea that a small group of men could tear a professional man and a public official from the heart of his family, rush him off after he had been beaten into half unconsciousness into a remote woods, and administer a brutal flogging did. Montgomery Advertiser

Jefferson county has vindicated itself by an earnest and thorough search for the men guilty of such a grave crime. As a result of the determined effort to probe the outrageous crime to the bottom three men have been indicted by the grand jury of Jefferson county for participating in the outrage. The Advertiser has no desire to forestall the courts to try to convict the men before they have had their day in court, but it is particularly interested in the theory on which the prosecution is based. And we think that this theory is altogether plausible and would serve as a basis on which to proceed against other persons suspected of administering floggings and perpetrating other outrages by small groups of masked men in the darkness of the night—a purpose not to vindicate public morality, but to wreak a private vengeance and feed a personal hatred. Dr. Dowling as public health officer had secured the passage and their enforcement of ordinance regulating and restricting the business operations of dairymen and plumbers. This had given grave offence to men engaged in both classes of work. What was to be done about it? How were the men to feed their private hatred and get their private vengeance? Flogging was because of its apparent immunity by secretiveness from prosecution perfectly safe in Jefferson county. The public official should be both humiliated and flogged. 3-31-23

Now we do not know what evidence the State has accumulated against the accused men and we do not know that they are guilty, but we do know that the theory of the prosecution is quite plausible. And too often men permit themselves to be led into such wrongs by the specious plea that they are sustaining morality and high standards, when they are resorting to illegal and cowardly acts to feed personal hatred and a desire to get personal vengeance.

TISON CONFESSES TO FLOGGING DR. DOWLING IMPLICATES 9 OTHERS

Special Grand Jury Called to Meet on Monday, April Ninth

(Special to The Advertiser)

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., March 31. Confession of C. W. Tison, suspect, obtained Saturday morning, has completely cleared up the flogging of Dr. J. D. Dowling, city and county health officer last May, it was announced here Saturday night by city, county and federal authorities who have worked on the case for nearly a year. Tison broke down, with tears streaming down his face, and told the whole story, according to announcement of the authorities, giving the names of nine other men, besides himself, all of whom had a hand in the kidnapping and whipping, he said. Three of the men named by Tison are W. M. Yerby and E. G. Jacks, dairymen, and P. N. Newman, a plumber, who were indicted in the flogging Friday by the Jefferson county grand jury.

Names of the other five men were withheld, pending action of a special grand jury to be called this week by County Solicitor Jim Davis for service Monday week.

Tison was arrested Thursday night by C. W. McPhail, government agent, and lodged in the city jail on a charge of "hold for government."

Another confession, reported to have been made earlier in the day Saturday, was not obtained, police later announced. The statement of Tison, however, made in the presence of Solicitor Davis, McPhail, City Detective Paul Cole, Assistant Solicitor John P. McVoy, newspaper men and others, was said to be the complete story, on the basis of which authorities say they have a complete case.

Solicitor Davis will ask for indictments immediately after the special grand jury is called, but in the meantime the government also is expected to act, as Dr. Dowling was, and is, a federal officer.

Dr. Dowling was lured from his home on the night of May 17, 1922, at Roebuck Springs, and taken out on the Mt. Pinson road and unmercifully whipped.

Mashburn of Atlanta Lectures at Theatre

Montgomery Advertiser

EUFAULA, ALA., MCH., March 27.—An effort to organize a Ku Klux Klan was made here Monday following a Ku Klux lecture which was given here Sunday afternoon at the Vaudette Theatre, by Dr. Mashburn, of Atlanta, a lecturer for the Klan. 3/28/23.

Dr. Mashburn defended the organization from much of what it has been accused and told of its growing influence in the political life of Georgia and other states. He spoke of several reputable newspapers as "dirty sheets," which refused to give much space to the Ku Klux. His talk was along the lines of all lecturers for the "invisible empire," and did not create any great impression here. .....

Deplores Promoter as "Dangerous and Undesirable"—Masks Are Banned.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 12.—Deploring as "undesirable and dangerous" the organization and promotion in this community of what is known as the Ku Klux Klan, the city commission today passed a resolution serving notice that "it is opposed to any agency of this kind," and that "this board does not propose to permit the Ku Klux Klan to take over unto itself any of the functions of city government." The resolution was introduced by Commissioner Crawford, seconded by Commissioner Hartwell and unanimously passed. 10-24-23

At the same time the commission drafted an amended ordinance on masks in the city of Mobile and made the new ordinance read that it shall be unlawful for any masked person to appear in the streets or other public place, the ordinance excepting the carnival societies and the masking during Mardi Gras festivities.

Action by the city commission follows recent published advertisements of the local branch of the Ku Klux Klan, announcinng that a demonstration will be held in this city Dec. 4.

The resolution in opposition to the Ku Klux Klan concludes with this paragraph:

"Be it resolved that this board hereby calls upon law-abiding peace-loving and fellow respecting citizens to refrain from lending aid or encouragement to the promotion of the Ku Klux Klan and thereby remain 100 per cent loyal to our common country as founded by our forefathers and as protected by the constitution of the United States, the state of Alabama and the general laws of the land."

Anniston Klansmen Plan Great Meeting

Birmingham Ala.

ANNISTON, Ala., Oct. 17.—Members of the local Ku-Klux Klan are making arrangements for a huge open-air naturalization ceremony to be staged at Oxford Lake early in November. At least 1,000 white-robbed and hooded figures will be present to take part in the exercises, it is said, Birmingham, Montgomery, Gadsden, Goodwater, Sylacauga, Alabama City and other towns of the state being expected to send large delegations. 10-18-23

About 250 aliens will be naturalized, it has been stated. The affair will be started with a barbecue at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A parage will follow and at the close of the initiation ceremony a fireworks display will be given.

DALLAS GRAND JURY CHARGED TO INDICT KLAN MEMBERSHIP

Judge S. F. Hobbs Declares Criminals Given Opportunity to Vent Hate Under Cloak of "Invisible Empire"

MENTIONS ATTEMPT TO DRIVE NEGROES FROM JOB

Oklahoma and Birmingham are Pointed to as Examples for Dallas to Avoid

Montgomery Advertiser 10-2-23

SELMA, ALA., Oct. 2.—Special by Leased Wire To The Advertiser.—Circuit Judge S. F. Hobbs, made a vigorous attack on the Ku Klux Klan and asked the grand jury to find out the members of the Klan and bring true bills against them if it shall be determined they are holding unlawful meetings or conspiring to take the law into their own hands, at the opening of the fall term of the Dallas circuit court today.

A number of threats have been made here recently against negroes and letters have been sent through the Selma postoffice signed "K. K. K."

The following is the personel of the grand jury:

Charles P. DeBardeleben, Leslie G. Sims, Emmet Mosely, Abe Isaacson, W. L. Lardent, James S. Mauldin, George A. Underwood, John D. Anderson, Lewis Wise, Theodore Laffre, Robert H. Seymour, J. Ernest Carter, Hunter S. Kendall, Joseph I. Sadler, William A. Marshall, John E. Tate, foreman; Thomas Bender and H. Eugene Kendrick.

In Jury Vested All Power

Judge Hobbs began his charge by saying "You, the grand jury of Dallas county circuit court, have come into power at a very critical period of our nation's existence. You are constituted a jury to make investigations of all reports of violations of law and to do your sworn duty in all cases brought to your notice."

Judge Hobbs continued: "While I do not believe that Dallas county is in the danger that some other parts of the country are in, there are dangers of a serious sort threatening. The grand jury is the fountain head of justice and on you is laid the responsibility and in you is vested the power—all the power—of carrying out the law. We have laws, but the grand jury will at this term of court start the ball rolling for law enforcement, as you diligently inquire into all reports of violations of law and order with the greatest secrecy, so that no intent or purpose of your investigations shall be learned outside of the jury room.

Stop Poison Before Too Late

"There are at present according to authentic count seven million bolshevists, Reds, socialists and what-not of kindred organizations over the country. A part of these represent the I. W. W. operating in America. These believe in hate and in exterminating all men like you who stand for law enforcement. These organizations are autocrats unto themselves, as they believe in taking all properties into their hands and then to let the lawyers grind out the right and wrong of it.

"I am told that there are a few in Dallas county who believe in this mode of procedure, who are a law unto themselves, overriding the rights of others. If you find any sort of that stuff going on, report it and let's stop it before it grows any more. To any one speaking this sort of rot apply the law in full force and quickly stop the poison before too late.

10-2-23

Pays Respects to Ku Klux Klan

"Another class of men I want to bring before you, the grand jury of Dallas county, is the order of the Ku Klux Klan, that I am told has been organized in Dallas county and is holding meetings in Selma. This is a band of men who have started their propaganda and teachings that are abhorrent to all right thinking men.

"They say that the Klan has gotten a foothold in Dallas county. That being the case, it gives any body of thugs and criminals the opportunity to vent their hate and to commit unmentionable crimes under the name of the klan, where there is a klan organized in any community. The sheeted, hooded, masked Ku Klux will be held responsible for any and all crimes committed by these thugs and criminals and the real perpetrators of the deeds go unfound and unpunished.

"The Ku Klux Klan gives to criminals a cloak under which they can do evil things. The klan has as its excuse for lawlessness that the law is not doing its duty—absolutely doing away with the principles that our forefathers fought for and in blood tried to establish in this land of ours. All citizens have the right to be tried by a jury, but the teachings of the klan and its high-handed way of handling things does away with the right to jury trial, with courts and witnesses. The important factors in determining the guilt or innocence of persons count for nothing with the policy pursued by the Ku Klux organization.

Refers to Oklahoma Trouble

"You have just been reading about the Oklahoma trouble, where the judge found that more than 2500 cases of whipping had been done in that state in the past year, and all was laid at the door of the Ku Klux Klan. That any body of men should undertake to apply the lash to any person is against all laid down rules of law and order. Since the Klan began operations in Jefferson county there have been more than a thousand whippings, men and women, the perpetrators pursuing a cowardly and brutal method in their ideas of law enforcement and punishing innocent persons of whom no wrong was known, for personal venom, and hate, or lawless intimidating of persons not of the Klan. Good citizens of Birmingham have suffered undeservedly at the hands of the organization, have felt the sting of the venomous lash applied by lawless and cruel hands.

"I do not want to be misunderstood in this charge. I and all other loyal Southern men and women know that just after the war of the sixties conditions were so threatening in the South, that when our men came back from the bloody field of battle, they found their lands overgrown with weeds, homes in ashes, a wave of crime and persecution going on that had to be curbed. Virtue itself held no place of regard in the minds of those in control of affairs in the south, and the men had to organize to protect those they loved of their own households, the weak and the helpless, so it was then that the first klan was organized for protection, not punishment.

Old Klan Long Disbanded

"But as soon as matters were adjusted; as soon as the white people were represented by their own race in the halls of justice; as soon as life, property and the virtue of their women were safe, the order was abandoned, and the men who were organized under its symbol once more entered the ranks of civil life, supporting all laws and upholding the principles of law and order.

"There is no excuse whateyer now for such an organization, that calls itself "The Invisible Empire"; a law unto itself, masquerading and disgracing the old order of the sixties that had no venom in its policy or principles.

"Letters have been sent out in Selma to parties and signed the Ku Klux Klan. One was received recently by a man in Dallas county, mailed at the Selma post office, telling him that if every negro laborer was not discharged from two places in a certain length of time, that the result would be upon his head and that the Ku Klux Klan would get them.

"This is standing for law and order according to the strange ideas of that organization. 'Where is the law, and where the order?' asked Judge Hobbs of the grand jury.

"Another instance of the high-handed arbiters of law and order was the placing of a notice on the front of a house being built in Selma, under cover of the darkness after the contractor and his workmen had completed a day's work, saying 'If you do not discharge all negro labor employed on this house the Ku Klux Klan will.' A coward screwed up his courage to visit the house being built when it was too dark for any one to see him and placed the notice on the door. This in a land where the Constitution says there shall be no difference in the rights of the races to work and make a living; the same laws to govern all to live and work under them.

Indict Members If Found

"I charge you that if you find any members of a Ku Klux Klan organization, so called, that it is your sworn duty to indict them. We can't stand for that sort of thing. I don't know that there is such an organization in Dallas county, but I do know that letters are being sent out in the name of the Ku Klux Klan. Cards and notices are being posted over the county."

The next issue taken up by Judge Hobbs was the Chiropractors in Selma. "The law is plain," said the judge, "there is no getting around it, and local chiropractors will have to answer to the present circuit court for the practice of their profession in Selma and vicinity, if they are treating diseases without the required medical certificate licensed physicians operate unde

Resolution Calls Upon City Authorities to Prevent Advertised Demonstration

MOBILE, ALA., October 17.—Special by Leased Wire to The Advertiser.—At the weekly luncheon of the Mobile Kiwanis club today, the organization unanimously passed a resolution calling upon the city authorities to prohibit an advertised parade, lecture and initiation by the Ku Klux Klan here on December 4.

An advertisement has been running in a local daily paper announcing the demonstration by the klan, stating that 5,000 klansmen will be here from points in Alabama, Mississippi; that 1,000 persons will be initiated and inviting applicants to address a post office box. The place of meeting is not given in the advertisements.

The matter came before the Kiwanis club on the motion of Leo Zieman, who said that all religions and races were living in Mobile in harmony and that nothing should be permitted to disturb that harmony.

The resolution was a consequence of the short address by Mr. Zieman.

Persons who are said to be informed on the situation here declare that the advertisement purporting to be from the "Klan" is the work of a local former oil-stock salesman and that the threatened demonstration is not taken seriously by the city authorities.

W. L. LeFlore Whipped by Unmasked Men for no Reason That He Knows

Montgomery Advertiser 11-11-23

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Nov. 10.—Special to The Advertiser.—Floggings by gangs whose identity remains unsolved such as worried police in the summer of 1922, were feared again today, when it became known that W. L. Leflore, 29, of East Thomas, had been whipped Thursday night by unmasked men.

Leflore is quoted as having told police that two men seized him about 8 o'clock Thursday night as he sat in a soft drink stand two blocks from his home, handcuffing him in the presence of the storekeeper with the statement that he was under arrest. Taken into a suburban stretch of woods, he was flogged by three men, police were told and left to walk home.

No reason for the whipping was given by the victim who denied rumors that he works irregularly and that his family suffers for the necessities of life. He is married and has four all children

Four Principles of Ku Klux Klan are Outlined by Speaker at Selma Meeting

Montgomery Advertiser
12-17-23

SELMA, ALA., Dec. 16.—Special by Leased Wire to The Advertiser.—Claiming belief in white supremacy, penants of Christian religion, closer relation between American capital and American labor, and the undefined protection of pure white womanhood, as the four principles of the Ku Klux Klan, Dr. Minor, an official of the organization, from Dallas, Texas, impressed a gathering of more than 500 people, including about 25 women, with an address in the Dallas county court house Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Minor who is a prominent protestant minister was introduced to the gathering by T. W. Schwend of Montgomery. Out of the vast throng none of the ushers or those who participated in the program were residents of Selma.

Dealing first with the organization the speaker explained the use of the regalia and asserted the white robes were to be worn only in the Klavern and when they appeared in public parades and in churches and other public places to make donations or do charitable acts. Dr. Minor gave a short resue of the mask and claimed that since the Christian era secret membership and the mask had been in use in many different organizations.

The Ku Klux Klan according to Dr. Minor is not in favor of foreign elements filling the country. It was said that more than 6,000,000 foreigners invested this country and that many of them were children and unnaturalized. The Klan was described as 100 per cent American and the speaker asserted that they stood for all that was just and upright in American ideals and faith.

Belief in teaching of Christian religion and duty to God was embodied as one of the principles of the Klan. In talking of white supremacy, Dr. Minor declared that the white race should be the leaders and that he believed white should be white and black should be black and that brown should be brown and that the intermingling of races could never be.

He also urged a closer relationship between American capital and American labor for the sanctity and harmony of America. In talking of the protection of white women the Klan, it was said, believed also in the protection of the negro women and would defend one of them just as quick from the white man, as they would a white woman from the negro man.

A glowing tribute was paid to the American flag at the close of Dr. Minor's address.

ST. LOUIS, MO., FEB. 3.—R. S. Jordan, a Negro, aged 46, of Osceola, Ark., is in the city hospital here suffering from severe lacerations about the body and internal injuries, resulting from a whipping administered to him Thursday night at Osceola by a band of men said to have been led by Frank Conway, town marshal, according to a story he told hospital authorities tonight.

Jordan said he was taken to the court house and flogged with an automobile spring, after which he was deported.

Marshal Conway, over the long distance telephone, tonight confirmed Jordan's story. He declared to newspaper men that Jordan was flogged because of his alleged relations with a white woman, who also was deported from the town.

Sally Tally, Negro woman, was also whipped by the band because, Marshal Conway stated, she refused to divulge information regarding Jordan's alleged relations with the white woman.

holding his hands and feet.

Jordan said Conway demanded to know why he had written a letter to a white woman. He denied he had done so and challenged them to produce the letter. Then another of the men remarked, according to Jordan, "You did say that you would shoot 16 Ku Klux, didnt' you?" and with that began beating him with what he believes was a leaf of an automobile spring.

After being beaten with the metal instrument Jordan was taken from the court house to the yard below and while putting on his clothes was struck in the face with fists. Then he was taken to the railroad station, where Conway bought him a ticket to St. Louis and admonished him not to leave the train in the state of Arkansas or he would be lynched.

Jordan also stated that Mrs. Sally Tallie also was flogged in the court house that night because she refused to acknowledge that Jordan had associated with a white woman. Conway, according to reports in Osceola, has often been accused of violating the color line after night falls.

Arkansas Barber Flogged by Ku Klux in Courthouse; Town Marshal Present

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 8.—In City hospital No. 2 here lies R. S. Jordan, barber, 46 years old, of Osceola, Ark., suffering from internal injuries and severe abrasions on his back and abdomen. He says they were inflicted Thursday night in the court house at Osceola by members of the Ku Klux Klan, led by Frank Conway, white town marshal, who bought him a railroad ticket to St. Louis and compelled him to leave the town on threats of being lynched.

Jordan for 12 years had conducted a barber shop in Osceola, but did not permit a member of his Race to enter it. He is married and owns his home, where his wife remained to sell their property.

He said his first intimation that anything was wrong came when his porter, Otis McMurray, was whipped and deported. The following night Town Marshal Conway took him from his shop and, without explanation, locked him in a room in the court house, he said, and two hours later, about 10 o'clock, returned with four other men. They took him to an upstairs room, removed his clothing and laid him across a bench, several men

WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

"Trial Jury Mainly Klansmen, Kluxers Crowded Courtroom and Threatened Him," Claims Convicted Arkansas Murderer.

(By The Associated Press.)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 2.—Charges that K. K. K. was responsible for the conviction of Herbert Sease, Baxter County farmer convicted of the murder of R. B. Davidson, a neighbor, and sentenced to die Friday in the electric chair, formed the basis for a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed by attorneys for Sease in the federal court late this afternoon. Judge Jacob Trieber set a hearing for 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The state supreme court has affirmed Sease's conviction and denied a rehearing.

Says Jury Mainly Klansmen.

The petition set forth that the "klan submitted to the sheriff the names fro mwhich the grand jury was to be drawn and also the trial jury, and both juries were made up largely of klansmen."

It further charges that "klansmen attended the trial in a body and applauded when unfavorable testimony was introduced ad wet to the jail during the trial i their official regala addtold Seas that f he took the stand in his own defense and denied his guilt they would hang him."

At the preliminary hearing, the petition states, the klan attended the hearing, crowded the court room and hissed and when attorneys asked a private hearing that the justice of the peace refused, following a threat by klansmen that they "would kick the door down."

Working Class Union and One Big Union Are Also Included in Ban Adopted at Annual Convention in Little Rock.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 10.—The Arkansas Federation of Labor in its annual convention here today adopted an amendment to its constitution barring members of the Ku Klux Klan, I. W. W., the Working Class Union and One Big Union from membership in future conventions of the organization.

5-11-23

The amendment provided that any delegate disqualified by it shall be debarred from a seat in the conventions of the Arkansas Federation of Labor and any officer so disqualified shall vacate his office automatically and his successor be immediately elected.

The amendment adopted is as follows:

"An amendment to the constitution of the Arkansas State Federation of Labor:

Amend Constitution.

"Whereas, it is an admitted fact that the organizations have been formed and equally certain that others will be created in the future having in view, wholly or in part, the purpose of disrupting the organized labor movement in the United States, and especially that part of it known as the American Federation of Labor, and

"Whereas, some of the members of these organizations are also members of bona fide labor organizations where they have opportunity of acting in the double roll of spies and creating dissension, and

"Whereas, it is necessary to overcome this serious evil by weeding out this dangerous element as far as possible and guarding against its admission in the future, be it

"Resolved, that the constitution of the Arkansas State Federation of Labor be amended by the adding of a new section to be known as Section 7-B, Article 3.

"Section 7-B—No person shall be eligible as a delegate to any convention or officer of the State Federation of Labor who is a member of or holds membership in any organization whose principles are antagonistic to the principles of the American Federation of Labor, or who discriminate against a fellow worker on account of creed, color or nationality. Any delegate disqualified by this section shall be debarred from a seat in the conventions of the State Federation of Labor; and if any officers are or shall be disqualified by this section, the office which he holds shall be declared vacant and his successor immediately elected."

The federation adopted a resolution recommending that the United States recognize Mexico and killed a resolution by tabling for recognition of the Russian soviet government.

A resolution for the repeal of the Esch-Cummings law, providing for a 5½ per cent dividend for railroads irrespective of net receipts, was concurred in by the convention, as recommended by the resolutions committee.

FIGHT OVER KAMELIA CENTER OF INTEREST

Klan Officials May Organize Woman's Order, It Is Rumored in Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., May 14.—With the organization work in connection with the founding of a lodge of the Kamelia women's order founded by W. J. Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, in full blast in Little Rock and a conference of Arkansas klan officials with Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans scheduled at Hot Springs, interest in the disagreement of Emperor Simmons and Imperial Wizard Evans over the formation of the women's order was at its height in the state today.

Charges of "money grabbing" made by J. A. Comer, grand dragon of the realm of Arkansas in connection with the organization of the Kamelia, were answered by similar charges by Emperor Simmons who referred to several deals in which Comer is said to have profited. Among other things Emperor Simmons charged that Grand Dragon Comer held four salaried klan offices.

Announcement of the formation of a rival woman's organization to be backed by Imperial Wizard Evans and Grand Dragon Comer was expected here to result from the klan conference at Hot Springs.

According to Emperor Simmons, "the women's organization which the Evans faction contemplates establishing under thhe name of "the ladies of the invisible empire" will be launched by the Evans forces as klan officials, claiming that it has the backing and indorsement of the kaln. This, Emperor Simmons stated in a telegram, is in defiance of the recent order of a Georgia court.

The organizers of the Kamelia, according to their statements here, do not claim that the Kamelia has the backing of the klan.

EVANS' PETITION ASSAILS SIMMONS

Suit for $100,000 Instituted Against Emperor of Klan—Defamation of Character Charged.

Little Rock, May 24.—William J. Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, against whom suit was filed here today by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, asking $100,000 for alleged defamation of character, arrived in Little Rock at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. When informed of the action against him he said he had not read the petition and had no comment to make at present. He had not been served with notice of the suit early this afternoon.

The basis for Dr. Evans' suit was a telegram which Emperor Simmons is alleged to have sent to local newspapers for publication on May 13. According to the petition filed today, the telegram charged that Dr. Evans, during a period six months prior to the telegram, received money in excess of $100,000 belonging to the klan and deposited it to his personal credit and appropriated it to his own use.

The telegram, it was set forth, was an answer to charges against Emperor Simmons by James A. Comar, grand dragon of the realm of Arkansas, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, that the Kamelia, a women's organization founded by Simmons, was a "fee-grabbing scheme."

Another statement in the telegram, the petition sets forth, alleged that Dr. Evans charged to the klan his personal living expenses, including house rent, grocery, light and fuel bills, and that he was splitting fees with his personal representatives in several states.

Dr. Evans in his petition states that the charges made against him by Emperor Simmons are false, and alleges that they weree composed by the emperor with the malicious intent of injuring his character and attacking his reputation for honesty and integrity.

As a result of the charges, widely published, Dr. Evans states that his name and reputation have been damaged to the extent of $100,000.

The suit was filed for Imperial Wizard Evans by J. A. Comer, who is an attorney. A statement covering the entire situation was issued by Mr. Comer immediately after the filing of the suit.

Statement in Part.

The statement in part follows:

"From time to time I have been asked about the disturbance at the imperial palace between Dr. H. W. Evans and Col. William Joseph Simmons. Evidently this inquiry comes from the fact that on the first day of April, 1923, a suit was brought by Colonel Simmons against Dr. Evans seeking to set aside the action of the klonvokation held in November, in which suit he averred that the proceedings were irregular and that on account thereof that he was still the imperial wizard. That controversy has been disposed of and there are no differences in the imperial palace, the controversy being settled and gone to decree, fixing the rights of all parties.

"When the klonvokation met, same was convened and called to order by Colonel Simmons.

"There was much discussion of a woman's organization on the floor of the klonvokation and a resolution was finally adopted to the effect that all klansmen would be requested to refrain from supporting, recognizing or in any wise taking part in any woman's organization whatsoever and, following this action of the convention, a resolution was adopted to the effect that a committee be appointed, of which E. Y. Clarke was to be chairman, with direction to investigate the needs of a woman's organization and the advisability of creating one which the klan would recognize and support as an auxiliary to the K. K. K. and to make its report on or about the first of May. This committee met on the 28th day of February, 1923, and E. Y. Clarke, the chairman thereof, submitted his report to the imperial wizard and the committee, furnishing them with such information as he had assembled and recommended that an organization for women be created.

Organization Discussed.

"The details of such an organization were discussed at some length and the committee finally adjourned until the 26th day of March, when it again convened and recommended that the organization of a woman's division which should be an auxiliary to the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan be created.

"It again adjourned to meet again on the second day of April on which day the committee again met and proceeded with the further discussion of the ways and means for the organization of a woman's department of the klan which would operate in conjunction with the klan.

"Colonel Simmons, finding himself morally bound to await the action of the committee created by the klonvokation in relation to the formation of a woman's organization, and in an effort to relieve himself of the obligation which rested upon him to abide by the acts of the said committee, brought the suit mentioned above and came forward with an order called Kamelia. This order as such never has been chartered, but H. Tom Kight and his wife, Blanche Kight, and C. W. Beeson and his wife, Rowena Beeson, applied to the courts of Oklahoma for a charter in the name of W. A. P. Study club and later filed an amendment asking that the name be changed to Kamelia. Colonel Simmons was morally bound, by the action of the klonvokation, just as all other klansmen were bound, and especially those men who were present and participated in the klonvokation, and he should have kept faith with the klonvokation just as all other klansmen and especially those participating in the klonvokation did do.

Kamelia Recognition.

"Colonel Simmons, finding an opportunity to enrich his private estate, made a contract with the W. A. P. Study club, and later styled Kamelia, whereby he is to receive for his acts in this regard and co-operation in the future the sum of $750 per month and it is now being advertised through the offices of the Kamelia and acquiesced in by Colonel Simmons that the order as Kamelia is known as a companion order to the klan and is recognized by the klan. This of course is not true and the colonel should not press the matter after this fashion.

"There is no trouble in the klan any where. The several klans of the nation are functioning in the most admirable way. There is no dissension among klansmen and the only dissension that might be said to exist at all is the dissension between Colonel Simmons and Dr. Evans, which has been brought about as hereinbefore indicated, but this does not in any way affect the operations of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

Unwilling to Comment.

In the absence of Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans, who was said to be in Virginia, attaches of the imperial palace of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan were unwilling to offer comment on the dispatches from Little Rock relating to the suit of Evans against Colonel Simmons.

Attorney Paul S. Etheridge, general counsel for the klan, stated that he had not been aware of the suit until informed of it by press dispatches.

"Red Shirts" Organized for Protection Against Klan

TEXARKANA, Ark., July 14.—The latest in the war of secret societies in this section is the order of "Red Shirts" which, according to reports reaching here, has been orgaized at the town of Touke, 16 miles south of here.

Details are lacking, but it is said the organization already has a large membership and that it is rapidly growing. One of its chief objects is said to be the protection of its members against the Ku Klux Klan which has had a strong organization in the community.

Knights of Kamelia Active in Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 12.—A campaign has been started here by supporters of William Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, to organize as a described by an advanced degree of the order of the Knights of Kamelia, according to stories printed today by local papers. The source of the information is given as men who have been asked to join it.

According to the newspaper the campaign has been carried on quietly by local klansmen who oppose Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, and J. A. Comer, grand dragon of the klan in the State of Arkansas, one of Evans' chief supporters.

The new order, it was said, was to be a higher degree but separate and distinct from the Ku Klux Klan.

KLAN GIVES WARNING

With Fiery Cross and Hooded Robes, Klansmen March Thru Colored Section With Huge Banners Bearing Words: "Negroes, Stick to Your Jobs or Watch Out" to The Sun.

SKIPWITH IN THE CROWD

Ark., July 26.—Dressed in "regalia," some mounted alking, more than 600 vmpathizers of the Ku aded through the last night carrying which were inscrib- ences as: "A twig then, an oak now. Loafing Negroes, where are your jobs" "Farm hands are needed, get on the job or get out." "Negroes, stick to your jobs or watch out." "White blood and black must not and SHALL NOT mix." The marchers took care to parade through every section of the city occupied by colored people.

The darkness of night gave the flaming cross spectacular conspicuousness, together with the white robes.

The mob of klansmen was orderly except when going through the section of the city occupied by Negroes. There they are reported to have all sounded the horns on their automobiles to awaken those who had retired for the night. The parade took place about 10:30.

Many of the Negroes came to their front doors and calmly watched the men pass by, while some, frightened, remained indoors or in bed.

A Move Against Migration?

This parade of the Klan is seen as a move against migration northward of Negroes who are needed in the Southland. Many Negroes, in leaving this city and surrounding towns in Arkansas, must give a reason for leaving for points up North, and many of them have said that they were unable to find jobs, while others said that the jobs available were insufficient to maintain them and their family. As an answer to those who stated they "could find no jobs" the Klansmen are believed to have written the banner, "Farm hands are needed. Get on the job." Negroes have left this city in big numbers, some even going to other points in the South, due to pressure from the Klan and its sympathizers.

Skipwith With Paraders.

The Klansmen, after the parade, gathered near Abbot field, a point about one mile east of town, to celebrate the occasion and to fete "Captain" Skipwith of Louisiana, who merited considerable notoriety by the disclosure of the Mer Rouge murders in which Daniels and Richards were the victims. Their bodies were found in a lake, head crushed and arms, legs and ears dismembered. Skipwith is the head of the Klan there. They made no effort, after the parade, to hide their identity, and many prominent citizens were reported to have been in the crowd.

Emperor "Amazed" Over Organization of "American Krusaders."

8-28-23

Following announcement in dispatches from Little Rock by the Associated Press that incorporation papers have been issued for the organization of the American Krusaders, Col. W. J. Simmons, imperial emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Monday night, after asserting that he was greatly surprised by the report, intimated that he saw in this action acknowledgment by the present administration of the klan that its reign is nearing an end.

He pointed out that the incorporators of the Krusaders, which, it is stated, will be along similar lines the order founded in Atlanta, are a officers of the klan in high standing, and all, he stated, are friends and supporters of Imperial Wizard Hiram Wesley Evans.

"It may be," he said, "that these men are discovering with one of ancient and classy settings that the bed upon which they now lie is too short for them to stretch and the covering is too narrow with which to wrap them about.

"I am driven to the conclusion that the present administration has begun to make for itself other and more comfortable beds upon which to lie."

Krusaders Get Charter.

The Associated Press dispatch from Little Rock, telling of plans for organizing the American Krusaders, follows:

Little Rock, Ark., August 27.—Incorporation papers for a new organization to be known as the American Krusaders, said to be similar to the Ku Klux Klan, were issued in circuit court here today. The petition was filed by H. L. McCall, Fred L. Gifford, Martin W. Rose and James A. Comer.

Mr. McCall is a resident of Texas and Mr. Gifford is from Oregon. James A. Comer, of Little Rock, is grand dragon of the realm of Arkansas Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

A copy of the by-laws of the new organization was not filed with the petition and its purposes were not made known. According to the petition, however, the organization is to be solely for men and the membership is to be limited to "white male citizens of sound health, good morals and high character."

BREACH IN KLAN RANKS BECOMES WIDE CHASM.

8-28-23

Breach Now Chasm.

The breach between the imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan and the order's founder and emperor became a wide chasm Monday as the result of the rioting attending the breakup of the klan parade in Carnegie, Pa., Saturday night.

Atlanta Ga.

Bitterly attacking Hiram Wesley Evans, the imperial wizard, and intimating that Evans and members of the klan involved in the Carnegie riots had placed themselves in such a position as to "forfeit American citizenship and all rights in the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," Colonel William J. Simmons, founder and emperor, declared in a public statement that the order had "crumbled at the top" and that the better elements of the klan "are all gone or are going."

Simmons, who has frequently differed with Evans before and split openly with the imperial wizard when Evans protested his organization of the Kamelia, referred to the latter as imperial wizard "for the time being." And declared that he was surrounded in the imperial palace by "gunmen."

"As alleged, evidently he invaded Pennsylvania bristling with guns and daggers," said Simmons, "and his very presence was an offense against peace and order and a challenge to peaceful and law-abiding citizens to either intercept or expel him and his followers.

Challenge to Police Power.

"A company of men, purporting to represent any cause, however patriotic or Christian, invading a sovereign state and bearing arms, is a challenge to the police power and to the self-respecting American citizen of their state to restrain them and to resist them.

"If such company is carrying the name and the insignia of klansmen, they are not only in the position of forfeiting American citizenship but they have also at the same time forfeited all rights in the Knights of the K. K. K.

"The stabilizing element of thoughtful, conservative, peace-loving and law-abiding men that I built into the order are all gone or are going. This great American organization has crumbled at the top and is now being so directed as that all of the fundamental principles are being subverted and all of the original purposes are being thwarted."

BIG KLAN MEETING IS HELD AT HELENA

Pastor of First Baptist Church Presides.

Appeal 8-14-23

HELENA, Ark., Aug. 13.—An audience estimated as high as 10,000 people heard Dr. Moore of Pine Bluff, national speaker of the Ku Klux Klan, deliver an address in Helena. The lot on Rightor Street, between Walnut and Cherry Strets, was literally packed with men, women and children of all races and religions. The flaming cross, standing behind the speaker's platform, cast a soft light over the entire scene. Streets and alleys adjoining the lot were full of people and automobiles.

Assembling at the Klavern on Ohio Street, local and visiting klansmen donned their robes and marched silently down Ohio to Market, then over to Cherry, down which they marched to Missouri then turning west to Walnut. It took almost half an hour for the parade to pass a certain point, the klansmen marching with folded arms, two by two, moved north on Walnut to the meeting place, where the robed figures took up their positions behind the speaker's platform. All along the streets, as the robed and hooded figures passed in the parade, hand-clappings greeted them, automobile horns honked, and occasional shoutings from the crowds lining the streets contrasted noticeably with the silence of the marching figures. Each klansman wore a band of crepe on his arm in memory of the dead president, and the staff of the flag carried at the head of the parade also bore the sable emblem of sorrow. The speaker's stand was decorated with bunting, and the national colors, draped with streamers of crepe, flanked the speaker's table on both sides. The meeting opened with robed klansmen and the great audience singing "America," which was followed by a brief prayer, delivered by Rev. O. C. Wilcox, pastor of the First Baptist Church, who remained on the platform with the speaker. Dr. Moore was introduced by a robed klansman, whose regalia indicated that he held a high office in the organization.

After paying a splendid tribute to President Harding the speaker launched into a spirited, but friendly and highly interesting discussion of the Ku Klux Klan. "The Klan is anti-nothing," he declared, "but it stands for certain high principles, among which are pure Americanism, honest elections, supremacy for the Protestant religion, and absolute separation of church and state. Holding these principles worthy and legal," he said, "the Ku Klux Klan had applied for and secured a charter under which it operates. There is nothing unlawful in the Klan's organic law," Dr. Moore said "and the attorney general of the United States has so declared. Congress, after a week of careful inquiry, declared that there was nothing about the Ku Klux Klan calling for investigation. It holds the same rights under the law as every other secret fraternal organization."

Dr. Moore declared that in spite of the bitter opposition of the klan that it was growing stronger every day and that in ten years their principles woud be completely vindicated. Dr. Moore explained why the Ku Klux Klan did not admit Jews or Catholics to membership by citing some Jewish organizations who do not allow gentiles to become members and Catholic organizations which are exclusively Catholic. He declared that well behaved and law abiding negroes had nothing to fear from the Klan. Dr. Moore paid high tribute to the women of America and said that an organization was being formed for women to work with the Klan. He said that within a few years there would be five million members of the ladies of the Ku Klux Klan working side by side with the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan for more public schools, better government, sensible and safe immigration laws, ond other things now so badly needed in the United States. At the close of his address, Mrs. Davis of Shreveport, imperial treasurer of the Ladies of the Ku Klux Klan, spoke briefly to the women in the audience, advising them that an organization for women in Phillips County would begin at an early date. The meeting was attended by klansmen from Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee. Half a dozen counties in Arkansas were represented among which were Phillips, Lee, Monroe, St. Francis and Cross.

Wizard's Suit Against Emperor to Be Reset.

Memphis Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 16.—Attorneys representing Dr. Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku-Klux Klan, and Col. Wm. J. Simmons, emperor of the klan, today agreed upon a continuance of the $100,000 damage suit instituted by Dr. Evans against Col. Simmons. The case was scheduled for trial in the Pulaski circuit court this week. Floyd Terral, attorney for Simmons, stated today that he would attempt to have the case reset for trial at an early date.

The suit is the outgrowth of a statement alleged to have been made by Col. Simmons and published in newspapers during the height of the Klan-Kamelia fight here several months ago. The statement accused Dr. Evans of diverting klan funds for his own personal use and with seeking to subvert the order for his own personal gains.

The suit was filed by James A. Comer, grand dragon of the Arkansas klan organization, and a local attorney.

DOCKET LIGHT, KLAN BUSY.

Post-Dispatch

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 18.—The fall term of Washington County circuit court will open Monday, Oct. 22, with the lightest criminal docket in years.

No murder cases are scheduled and there are only 68 criminal cases listed, 95 of the 163 cases being civil.

Judge W. A. Dickson of Bentonville will preside and has been in Fayetteville this week arranging his docket. Six prosecutions for selling cigarettes to minors will be made, and it is understood that local salesmen are prepared to fight the charges instead of paying fines imposed, as some of them have done heretofore.

10-19-23

It is understood that the Ku Klux Klan has entered largely into the fact that the criminal docket is lighter "by putting wholesome fear in the hearts of some offenders," and also that the order is responsible for bringing several of the cases before the court.

Muskogee Lawyer Says He Was Ordered Out of Harrison.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—Oscar W. Hudgins, a lawyer of Muskogee, Okla., formerly of Harrison, Ark., in a communication to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch today asserts the "citizens' committee" is still functioning in Harrison. He states he was ordered out of town by the committee July 26 when he went there to visit his invalid father, and was told the committee "could flog" him "at will."

The committee was formed last January to drive striking employes of the Missouri & North Arkansas Railroad out of town. One man was lynched and several flogged in the disturbances. Subsequently Hudgins was a witness at Little Rock in a habeas corpus proceeding to obtain the release from jail of two strikers, Luther Wise and Verlen Orr, who alleged they pleaded guilty to burning railroad ties merely to escape punishment at the hands of the "committee." Hudgins declares the "committee" ordered him out of town because he was a witness for Wise and Orr.

PINE BLUFF, Ark., Dec. 27.—A great stir in church circles here has followed in the wake of the recent visit of a hooded band of Klansmen to St. John A. M. E. church during a meeting on the eve of the Central Arkansas A. M. E. Conference which was presided over by Bishop I. N. Ross.

St. Louis

St. John church has been rent almost asunder because of dissention among the members. Some say the purse which was presented the pastor
Rev. G. T. Sims, by the klasnmen contained $50.00, and that the money was not intended for Rev. Sims per sonally, but so far as is known Rev
Sims has put the money in his pocke

Blood Money Arouses

A recent editorial in the St. Louis
Argus under the caption, "Blood Money From the Klan," has been circulated in the city and has become an interesting topic for general dis cussion among white and colored
There is a faction in the church which is strong in its condemnation of Rev
Sims for taking the money from the Klansmen. Some say that they believe it to be a "pre-arranged" affair for the Klan to visit the church and that Sims is only playing into the hands of the Klan, and that he is trying to please the white people at the expense of the Negroes.

Sims Denounces N. A. A. C. P.

It is now recalled that recently
Rev. Sims denounced the N. A. A. C. P notwithstanding what that organization has done for the colored people of this state, and especially what has been done to save the lives of the men in the Elaine riot cases.

Bishop Ross Blamed

Many members of the church are outspoken in their condemnation of Bishop Ross for his action following the Klans visit to the church. They cite that he (Bishop Ross) saw the Klan present the money to the pastor, and that he knew, or should have known, the moral effect it would have on the community. He was also warned by members of the church of their displeasure over the acts of Pastor Sims in what they called "selling out,." Yet the Bishop reappointed Sims to this church over their protest, and in the face of what the Bishop himself had seen.

Charges Will Be Made

Some of the leading members of the church declare that charges will be made against Sims, and if Bishop
Ross does not remove him for the "good of the church," the matter will be taken to General Conference.

WARN NIGHT RAIDERS TO LET NEGROES ALONE

Hot Springs Officials Take Prompt Action.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Sept. 1.—Circuit Judge Earl Witt and Sheriff W. R. Downen yesterday took emphatic stand in the matter of the protection of negro laborers employed in clearing land for the Ouachita Power and Development Company and declared that nothing whateevr would be tolerated to intimidate these laborers and cause them to leave.

The action was taken following viist made to the camp some time night by four white men, when siles were thrown into the t[illegible] which the negroes were sleepi[illegible] negro was struck in the face, but not seriously injured.

When news of the visitation reached Sheriff Downen last night he hurriedly assembled deputies, took a bloodhound, and went to the scene, but the trail of the culprits was lost about two miles from the camp.

"It was the work of sorry white men, few in number, who won't work themselves, and who will not be permitted to keep others from working," said Sheriff Downen after his investigation. When the negroes were first landed at the camp two weeks ago, the prediction was made that they would not be permitted to remain there, but aside from threats dropped to make them uneasy no overt act was committed until last night. Sheriff Downen informed the camp foreman that there was absolutely nothing to the report scattered for the negroes to hear, that the Ku Klux would not let them remain there and work, and added, "if the Ku Klux take any action in the matter, whatever, it will be to protect people who are pursuing an honest vocation, rather than to molest them."

Hamilton Moses, attorney for the development company, arrived here today, investigated the situation, and reported to President Couch of Pine Bluff that he had the full support of this community in protecting the negroes and permitting them to carry on their work unmolested.

MASKS SHOULD BE BARRED

Bassett, Ark., Sept. 18.

To The Commercial Appeal.

I have been reading with a great deal of interest the reports from Oklahoma and Gov. Walton relative to the K. K. K. I admit I admire the stand Gov. Walton is taking and I believe every state in the Union should pass a law making it a felony for any one to wear mask unless it be a purely social or fraternal feature.

The K. K. K. has no doubt some good teaching, but the danger lies behind the mask. And I can see no reason for such an organization existing in this age. So many men are cowardly in their general makeup, they are dangerous foes to society if permitted to hide their wrong doing behind a false face. Remove this veil from their faces, and robe from their apparel and we have the reign of terror removed.

If these self-constituted law enforcers want to do the right thing, they can do it in the open. Even our officers of the law have no right to call people out of their houses, kidnap them, or whip them. Then for what purpose is the K. K. K.? If it is purely political, then it is not necessary to wear a mask. If it is for advancing the morale of the country it is not necessary to wear a mask. Where the danger lies is in their robes and mask. Take that from them, and they will disband of their own free will and accord.

I have been asked to join this invisible empire on several occasions, have been told of some of its purposes but there lies a danger behind the mask, and I was taught from earliest infancy to fight any fight in the open. I know lots of men who are as good as ever lived, who believe as I do, and who never thought of having firearms around their home until a year or so ago. Today most houses are equipped with a young arsenal. Why? Just because men have a right to put on a mask and come to your home at any time and question you, or whip you if they see fit.

God pity the poor souls of those who would do this unto me, and I am sure there are countless numbers more who feel the same way. Do you suppose a thing like that that happened at Mer Rouge, La., would have occurred if the robe and mask had not been permitted?

Let the K. K. K. remain but let the mask go. There is no need for such an invisible empire at best, as long as the original constitution of our country stands. There is certainly no need of the mask. And I hope every state will take immediate action on this issue, and pass a law making it a felony to possess or have in one's possession or upon one's person a mask that will forbid identity.

Yours very truly,

ANTI-MASK.

Arkansas Weekly Newspaper Force Waited Upon by Mob of Unmasked Men

STUTTGART, ARK., Dec. 6.—A mob of 16 unmasked men late today invaded the offices of the Free Press, a weekly newspaper published here, administered a beating to the editors, scattered type and metal over the floor, smashed several windows in the building and threw the "forms" for this week's edition of the paper out of the building.

Neither of the editors, R. A. Berry and his assistant H. A. Lawson, was seriously injured, although Lawson was given a severe beating. Berry was struck over the head with a board, but was not seriously hurt. Both men were ordered to leave town within 24 hours.

The town was quiet tonight and no further violence was feared.

The trouble is believed to have been the outgrowth of a series of articles which have appeared recently in the newspaper, which is recognized as the organ of independent rice growers and an insurgent faction within the Rice Growers Cooperative association. These articles dealt with various affairs of the growers' organization, including the damage suit recently filed here against Oak H. Rhodes, president of the Stuttgart Rice Milling company, in connection with the alleged theft of large quantities of rice from a mill at Dewitt.

Feeling has been tense here for several days. Officers of the rice growers organization yesterday petitioned Circuit Judge G. W. Clark to convene a special grand jury to investigate the alleged theft of rice from several mills.

A meeting of the rice growers was held here tonight.

After the attack the mob dispersed. Editor Berry went to his home where he remained tonight. He refused to make a statement, explaining that his attorney had advised him not to talk. Lawson also went to his home, but could not be reached tonight. Lawson lives at Almyra, about fourteen miles south of Stuttgart.

The New York Times.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 11.—Only six of the twenty-one witnesses scheduled to appear today in the open hearing held to determine the torturers and slayers of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards were heard. Nearly all were reluctant to give testimony involving the Ku Klux Klan in this and other outrages in Morehouse Parish. The notable exception was R. L. Dade, Mayor of Mer Rouge, and himself a former Klansman. In his testimony he repudiated the Klan, assailed its deeds, denounced it and declared he was through with it for all time. 1/12/23

Mayor Dade, in a voice heard throughout the courtroom and which fell on the ears of many Klansmen, asserted that before the advent of the Klan in Morehouse Parish, Mer Rouge was a quiet, peaceful and contentetd village, a village that was safe to live in and upon which there was the blood of no citizen.

Lay Terrorism To Klan.

"And what is Mer Rouge now, in what sort of state is the town at present," the Attorney General asked.

"Mer Rouge is in a critical condition," was the reply. "Lifelong friends have become enemies, whole families have been separated and a bitterness hitherto unknown has come into existance. Since the Klan came into the parish there have been disorders, disturbances and atrocious murders."

He pictured the little town as being in a state of chaos and terrorism.

"That is what the Ku Klux Klan has done for us," he cried.

The crowded courtroom was strangely silent. A few Klansmen or Klan sympathizers scrowled openly. Others grinned derisely. Here and there a man or woman looked approval.

Mayor Dade paid scant attention to the spectators. His sole object, it seemed, was to tell all he knew about the depredations of the Klan. He answered questions in a straightforward manner, with visible emotion at times. He seldom hesitated.

He told of joining the Ku Klux Klan and of resigning after learning that the organization was not what he expected it to be and stated that he had attended only two meetings. Asked about Dr. McKoin and the alleged attempt to assassinate him, the Mayor declared he believed Dr. McKoin had done the shooting himself and that the majority of the residents of Mer Rouge wereof the same opinion.

The witness laid bare the story of the "peace conference" held at Monroe between citizens of Mer Rouge and Bastrop.

Mayor Dade admitted that to a large extent the Klan had superseded the parish and State Governments, that the Sheriff, District Attorney and other officials were known as Klansmen and that the Klan took the law into its own hands instead of permitting the duly constituted authorities to mete out punishment to lawbreakers. He pledged his support to the Attorney General to help remedy these conditions.

Klan Let Girl Return.

It was broubht out that Mayor Dade had received two threatening letters after the kidnapping of the five men of whom Daniel and Richards were two on Aug. 24. He told of the ordering of three residents of Mer Rouge to leave the town.

Hugh Clark told of visiting Addie May Hamiliton at the home of her sister in Little Rock, wither she had been banished from Mer Rouge by the Klan. Clark, who admitted that he joined the Klan after returning from Little Rock, testified that he circulated a paper among Klansmen on his return and that twelve signed it, agreeing to let the girl return. Captain Skipwith also gave his permission and the girl returned to her home. Clark said he believed Dr. McKoin was one of the signers.

Despite the admission that he had joined the Klan and had attended two meetings, at one of which many of the Klansmen were unmasked, Clark insisted he was unable to remember the name of a single Klansman he saw at the meetings.

Fred Higginbotham admitted being a Klansman and declared the Klan is "a good thing still for Morehouse Parish." Sullen and taciturn he seemed determined to say nothing that might reflect on the Klan.

Tries to Shield Fellow Klansmen.

The first witness of the day was Higginbotham, who, according to the testimoney of Neelis yesterday, was implicated in the first kidnapping of Thomas Richards. Higginbotham was a sullen, relutant witness and his "I don't knows" and "I don't remembers" were obviously evasions of the questions. He admitted that he was a charter member of the Ku Klux Klan, but could not remember the name of any of his fellow members except Captain Skipwith. He was examined by Assistant Attorney General Guion as follows:

Q.—Were you acquainted with T. F. Richards and Harry J. Neelis? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember about Aug. 17, when it was said Richards was taken out of Bastrop by a band of masked men? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where were you at that time? A.—On may way to Mer Rouge.

Q.—Why were you going to Mer Rogue? A.—To buy a Ford car.

Q.—Did you go to Mer Rogue? A—No, I was stopped by a band of masked men.

Q.—How many masked men held you up? A.—Two, at first.

Q.—Were they armed? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did they say? A.—Told me to go back to Bastrop.

Q.—Were there others beside the two men? A.—Yes, there were four or five others out in the woods.

Q.—Did you see any one not masked? A.—I saw Harry Neelis; he was not masked.

Q.—You didn't recognize any of the men? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What did they say to you? A.—They told me to go back to Bastrop.

Q.—No other conversation? A.—None.

Q.—In what kind of regalia were they? A.—They had black hoods over their heads, long hoods.

Q.—You didn't recognize any voice in that party? A.—No.

Q.—Are you a member of the Ku Klux Klan?. A.—I am a charter member.

Q.—Who are the officers of the Klan? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You are a member of the Ku Klux Klan and don't know the officers? A.—Well, Captain Skipwith is the Cyclops.

Q.—You don't know any of the others? A.—No.

Met With Klan in Court House.

Q.—Have you ever been delegated to investigate the conduct of persons objectionable to the Klan? A.—No.

Q.—Have you heard the conduct of people anywhere in the parish discussed in Klan meetings? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where does the Klan hold its meetings in Bastrop? A.—Once I attended a meeting at the Court House. They meet at various places. No certain place.

Q.—You have no recollection, none whatever, of anything discussed at meetings of the Klan? A.—None.

Q.—After you returned to Bastrop, where did you go? A.—To my restaurant.

Q.—Whom did you see after you returned? A.—I met Neelis, and he asked me what I was doing out there. I told him I was going to Mer Rouge, and they stopped me.

Q.—Did you know Richards was being taken away that day? A.—Yes, I saw them taking him.

Q.—The hooded band committe got in behind you and got Richards? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many cars were there following you? A.—Just one, a Ford touring car.

Q.—Did you know the car or who was in it? A.—No.

Q—And when you saw these hooded men drive in behind you and go to Neelis's garage anud take a man away whom you knew, you were not attracted? A.—No.

Q.—Why didn't you help him out? A.—I didn't know. There was a lot of people who didn't help him out. I stood at the curb utnil they got away.

Q.JHow far away were you? A.—About 75 feet.

Q.—Who were some of the poeple who didn't help Richards? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you see them blindfold Richards? A.—I can't remember.

Q.—Did you see Skipwith at this time? A.—I did not see him.

Q.—Didn't Neelis ask you if you hadn't got Captain Skipwith and where you had taken him to? A.—No.

Mr. Guion wanted to know about the witness's movements on last Tuesday night. Higginbotham said he went home at 8:45. He was called on the telephone and his mother told him there had been a previous telephone call for him. He last attended a Klan meeting six or seven months ago. "Held here in the Court House?" asked Mr. Guion. "I reckon so," replied the witness. He did not remember who presided nor the names of any of those present except Captain Skipwith. Mr. Guion persisted, but the witness stubbornly refused to admit remembering the names of any who had attended Klan meetings at which he was present, other than Skipwith.

"Who asked you to join the Klan?" Mr. Warren asked.

"I don't know."

"How did you know there was a Klan?"

"I heard it around."

"And you don't know who asked you to join?"

"A stranger asked me."

Slowly and with bad grace Higginbotham told of a drive to Spyker yesterday after court had closed and also of an automobile trip to Mer Rouge when he carried a "drummer" to that town. The State apparently was trying to link the "drummer" with the Ku Klux Klan, a report being that the alleged salesman was a Klan official.

The examination went on as follows:

Witness "Can't Remember."

Q.—Did you know T. F. Richards? A.—Slightly.

Q.—Were you friendly with Watt Daniel? A.—I knew him just to speak to him.

Q.—You knew Richards and Daniel had been missing since Aug. 24? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you think of the kidnapping? A.—I didn't know what to think.

Q.—Do you know any reason why they should have been kidnapped? A.—I do not.

Q.—You don't condemn kidnapping, do you? A.—The witness shook his head.

Q.—Did you know they were looking for Richards? A.—No, sir.

Q.—They permitted you to go on to Mer Rouge? A.—No, they ordered me back to Bastrop.

Q.—Were they Klansmen? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Recognize any? A.—No, sir.

Q.—How many spoke to you? A.—Just one.

Q.—Do you know Jeff Burnett? A.—Yes, when I see him.

Q.—Do you know Horace Rogers? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see either at Bastrop before or after the hold-up? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see the Sheriff on your return, or did you report it to the Sheriff? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Were you excited over it? A.—Well, a little bit nervous.

Q.—Why didn't you report it? A.—I don't know—I had no reason to.

Q.—What more reason would you want? A.—I don't know. I told my father. I thought Neelis would report it.

Q.—Did you reach town firs? A.—Yes.

Q.—Ahead of Neelis? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know he was coming back? A.—I did not know.

Q.—Richards was your friend, wasn't he? A.—Yes.

Q.—And a neighbor? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you wouldn't report such a happening? A.—No, sir, I didn't.

Q.—You didn't know whether your friend and neighbor was alive or dead, yet you didn't report it? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You didn't have any conversation with Neelis; just left him there? A.—Yes.

Q.—How soon after you got back did you see the Sheriff? A.—That evening, but I didn't say anything to him.

Q.—You just told your father? A.—Well, I told several people I was held up, but no one in particular.

Thinks Klan Good Thing.

"Don't you know," said Senator Warren, "that you went out there voluntarily with those hooded men?"

"No, I was going to Mer Rouge," the witness insisted. He said he was not excited when they stopped him and told him to go back to Bastrop. He denied that on the day of the disappearance of Daniel and Richards, on Aug. 24, he met Sidney White and told him three of the five men kidnnapped had got back to Mer Rouge.

Attorney General Coco asked the witness about the Klan. Higginbotham said he was in the first class to join and that there were about thirty or forty others. The Attorney General proceeded with the examination as follows:

Q.—Do you think now the Klan is a good thing? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When was it that initiation took place, the first one? A.—About two years ago.

Q.—Tell me about the good things the Klan has done here. Has it warred on bootleggers, regulated people, put down concubinage and regulated communities? A.—I'll say they have done good things.

Q.—You heard about the attempted assassination of Dr. B. M. McKoin? A.—Yes.

Q.—It brought great indignation? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know any good things the Klan did? A.—They made several bootleggers leave.

Q.—Were they niggers or white men? A.—Both white and niggers.

Q.—Were these bootleggers sent out of the State? A.—I don't know. They were run out.

Q.—Did you ever hear of any flogging around here? A.—Just those after the kidnapping.

Q.—The Klan has started things nightly in this parish? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—On the occasion when you were held up on the way to Mer Rouge, did they give you any reason why they wanted you to go back to Bastrop? A.—No, they first told me to stop.

Q.—Did they pull guns on you? A.—No, but they had guns strapped to them.

Q.—Why didn't you ask them to let you go on to Mer Rouge? A.—I thought it best to go back and not ask any questions.

Q.—Did you go there to tell them Richards was in Bastrop? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did Neelis talk to you when he reached Bastrop after being held up? A.—He did, and I told him I had nothing to do with it.

Q.—Didn't he ask you if Skipwith was at the bottom of it? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did you say to him, "I couldn't help myself; I had to do what I did"? A.—I did not.

The Attorney General drew a word picture of the busy Bastrop street, of a citizen being kidnapped and taken away in broad daylight and no excitement over it. The witness squirmed.

"Now, was that a comman sight?" asked the Attorney General.

"No, sir," was the reply.

Mr. Sompayrac, Assistant Attorney General, asked Higginbotham why the Klan superseded the local court in meting out punishment to lawbreakers.

"You saw a masked man operating on the public road, yet you didn't report it," said the examiner.

"No, sir," replied the witness.

"Then you're not a good Klansman?"

"I don't know, sir."

"What oath is superior to you, the one you have taken today or your Klan oath?"

"The oath today."

"Yet you say you don't remember what you said to Neelis on that day?"

"No, sir."

"Now, as a Klansman, Mr. Higginbotham, it is your duty to help enforce the law, isn't it? Why didn't you appeal to your fellow-Klansmen?"

The witness flushed and became more sullen and reluctant. It was obvious he was attempting to shield the Klan.

"Is the black hood a part of the Klan regalia?"

"I don't know."

"Did you know Richards was at Neelis's garage?"

"I did not."

"What room in this Court House was that Klan meeting held in?"

"In the courtroom."

"You said in previous testimony that you knew Harry Neelis was released before you got back to town. How did you know that?"

"Neelis was here five or ten minutes after me. I don't know when he was released."

Mer Rouge Mayor Tells of Terrorism.

Robert L. Dade, Mayor of Mer Rouge, was the first witness of the afternoon session. He succeeded Dr. McKoin as Mayor. Before the examination began Judge Odom called attention to a story published in The Shreveport Times that an attempt had been made to assassinate W. C. Andrews, one of the witnesses and one of the men kidnapped on Aug. 24. The Attorney General said he had heard the report but did not consider it important. He did not believe any attempt was being made to intimidate witnesses nor that an attempt had been made to assassinate Andrews.

Judge Odom ordered that subpoenas be issued for A. E. Farland, Secret Service chief; Meigs O. Frost, author of the story, and W. C. Andrews, to determine the source of the story. The Attorney General asked that the subpoenas be not issued. Judge Odom said:

"Farland has been quoted in this article and I want to see what he has to say. Issue the subpoenas."

The examination of Dade was then begun by the Attorney General as follows:

Q.—Are you a member of the Klan? A.—I was.

Q.—How long? A.—About two months.

Q.—Why did you join? A.—I thought it a good thing, but later I learned different, and I resigned. After its advent friends became enemies; it separated the people and brought about disorders.

Q.—Was the parish in a state of terrorism after the Klan came? A.—Yes, and a bad state.

Q.—What is the condition of Mer Rouge today? A.—Critical, sir.

Q.—Do you recall the report on the occasion of the shooting at Dr. McKoin? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did it create a feeling of terror? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What do the people think? A.—The general opinion is that he did the shooting himself.

Q.—Why? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you examine the car? A.—Yes, sir; it looked like buckshot marks on it.

Q.—Did many Mer Rouge people think Richards, Watt Daniel and W. C. Andrews had anything to do with it? A.—Very few thought that.

Q.—Do you know of specific cases when men were driven away from the parish or punishment inflicted? A.—The only ones I know are those of old man Daniel and Andrews.

Q.—Did you ever hear of bootleggers being taken out? A.—I understand there was a white man put in jail in Bastrop on complaint of the Klan. I understand there were two niggers beaten.

Q.—Do you know A. H. Davenport of Mer Rouge? A.—Yes, known him all his life.

Q.—Do you know A. L. Smith of Ouachita Parish? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—In a conversation with Leon Davenport, also of Mer Rouge, did Mr. Smith state to Leon Davenport that A. H. Davenport was said to have been connected with the attempted assassination of McKoin? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it reported that A. H. Davenport was the brains of the anti-Klan element in that parish? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did Smith, as a friend of Davenport, say to you? A.—He said he had come as a friend of the Davenports and he wanted me to straighten things out and bring about peace—to clear the Davenport family of these charges. Smith advised a meeting at Monroe, and we went there a few days later.

Q.—Who attended that meeting? A.—John Parker, Joe Davenport, Captain Skipwith, Dr. McKoin, Dr. Barham, Flood Madison, A. H. Smith and myself. A. H. Smith acted as spokesman and said the object of the meeting was to clear the Davenport family.

Q.—What did Flood Madison have to say at this meeting? A.—That the meeting was not only to clear the Davenports but to restore peace in the entire community.

Q.—What did Skipwith say to that? A.—He gave assurance that the Davenport family would not be molested by the Klan.

Q.—Who did you meet in Bastrop? A.—Pugh Clark, Flood Madison, Skipwith, Williams, Smith and others.

Q.—What was the purpose? A.—To discuss Milner Whipple, Campbell and Governor Parker. I am almost positive the Governor was mentioned at some of the meetings.

Says Klan Superseded Law.

The witness said Smith or Davenport told the others they would vouch for Milner keeping his mouth shut about the Klan. He was not positive that Skipwith had said, "Ignore the Governor."

"Didn't Skipwith give Davenport assurance that there would be no further raids on Mer Rouge as long as he (Skipwith) was head of the Moorehouse Klan?"

"I think so," replied Dade.

The examination then continued as follows:

Q.—Isn't the Klan responsible for an intolerable condition here? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that the Klan has superseded the constituted authorities here? A.—Yes, sir, to a great extent.

Q.—Aren't your officers Klansmen? Your Sheriff, the Clerk, the District Attorney A.—I have heard so, but I'm not sure.

Q.—Didn't the Klan take the law into their own hands? A.—Largely, yes, sir. Mer Rouge was once peaceful and contented, but after the Klan came people grew bitter and suspicious. I want to see the guilty punished.

Q.—Will you do all that you can to restore peace and order? A.—I will.

Q.—You will help us in every way to restore order and peace in the parish? A.—Yes.

Q.—Are there any people leaving your town as a result of these conditions? A.—I think not. They're hoping for a solution.

Q.—After the kidnapping of Daniel and Richards did you receive threatening letters? A.—Yes, two shortly after the kidnapping.

Q.—Who did you give these letters to? A.—I gave them to Mr. Farland.

Q.—What was in those letters? A.—One of them said that we were wallowing in a cesspool of lawlessness. That was in the first letter. The second, a few days later, said if I didn't clean up the town they'd swamp down on us, a thousand of them, and clean up the town for me.

Q.—How were the letters signed? A.—One was signed "100 per cent. Americanism," the other by the "Vigilance Committee."

Q.—Did one of these letters say it was known who plotted the assassination of Dr. McKoin? A.—Yes, it said they knew who sat at the round table and plotted.

Q.—What did you do about these letters? A.—I came to Judge Odom with them and he advised me to call in some of the good citizens and discuss the letters.

Q.—Were you in a party that called on Dr. McKoin in regard to the letters? A.—Yes, we went to McKoin.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—A. L. Smith and Davenport and Captain Skipwith.

Q.—What was done? A.—I showed the letters and Skipworth said if I would clean up the town I wouldn't get such letters.

Q.—Are you positive Skipworth said that? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Who is Tom Milner? A.—He works for a Mer Rouge concern.

Q.—Who is A. C. Whipple? A.—A blacksmith.

Q.—Who is Campbell? Is he a gambler? A.—Not that I ever heard.

Klan Foes Ordered Out.

It was brought out that at the Monroe peace conference a message was drafted ordering Whipple, Milner and Campbell to leave town. Dade agreed to deliver the message but stated he gave no guarantee that the men would actually leave. Whipple, Campbell and Milner were known enemies of the Klan.

Mrs. Hugh Clark when called to the stand did not deny remarking at a Bastrop picture show that "Richards needn't be so smart. They got him once and will get him again." "If I did make it, I meant nothing," she said. "I was like all the rest of the women—talking and not knowing what I was saying."

Mrs. T. Charriss described an auto ride taken by her and a Mrs. Groves on the Mer Rouge road on Aug. 17. "We met Harry Neelis, who asked us for a ride," she said. "He came in with us."

"Have you ever seen the Ku Klux in operation around here," she was asked.

"I saw them the day they got Richards."

"After you had brought Neelis in?"

"Yes."

"How many men were in the car that got Richards?"

"I don't know, but they were masked."

"Did you know any of the men who wore the masks?"

"I did not."

Intercoded 'With Klan for Girl.

Hugh Clark testified that on a business trip to Little Rock, Ark., he called on Addie May Hamilton after she had been driven there from Bastrop by the Klan. The girl was living with her sister. Clark was accompanied by W. E. Hopkins. The girl told them the story of her being driven from Mer Rouge by the masked men. She called the masked men "Ku Klux," and said she recognized "Pink" Kirkpatrick, Dr. McKoin and another man, but wasn't so sure of the last. "Her positive statement was she recognized Kirkpatrick and Dr. McKoin," said the witness. "She wanted to return home, and she asked me and Mr. Hopkins about it. I told her that I would try to make it possible for her to come back."

The examination then continued as follows:

Q.—When you got back to Mer Rouge, what arrangements did you make? A.—I talked to several I thought were Ku Kluxers to see if it was satisfactory for her to return, and they seemed to think it was all right. Later I got a paper authorizing the return to her mother. The paper was signed by about twelve Klansmen. I sent this paper on to her and went to see Captain Skipwith, who said it would be all right—he had no objections. I gave this word to her and she came home.

Q.—To whom did you talk—that is, the men you thought were Klansmen? A.—I talked to Mr. L. T. Snider, Mr. G. M. Sims and Mr. W. P. ("Pink") Kirkpatrick. I talked to several others, too.

Q.—Did any of these or any one else tell you how she had been sent away? A.—I didn't ask them. They didn't mention it.

Q.—When did you join the Klan? A.—After I got back from Little Rock, where I saw her.

Q.—After these people acquiesced in your proposal that the girl return she was still fearful, wasn't she? A.—Yes, she wanted to be sure she would not be harmed.

Q.—To whom did you present the petition for her return? A.—There were six or seven I met.

Q.—Who signed it—did Dr. McKoin sign it? A.—I think so. I can't remember all the names. Sims, Kirkpatrick, Snider signed it.

Q.—Whom did you find to be members? A.—I don't know. There was Sims. Doggone it, there is so many I can't remember them.

The witness said he attended two Klan meetings, but didn't remember the faces he saw. One meeting was in the woods about four miles from Mer Rouge. The second meeting was in Bastrop at the oil mill.

"Who presided?" he was asked.

"I don't know; there was too many there for me to notice any in particular."

"Were they masked?"

"Some of them."

"Can't you give us some names of Klan members?"

"No."

"Is Mr. Kirkpatrick a member?"

"I think so."

"How about McKoin?"

"I think so. I believe I saw him at my first meeting."

When asked how many Klansmen were present at the first meeting he attended, he replied:

"I don't know, maybe three or four hundred—the woods were full of them."

Klansmen Allowed Girl's Return.

The examination then went on:

Q.—Wen you passed this petition around giving acquiescence for the return of Addie May Hamilton you passed it only to Klansmen? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then afterward you went to Captain Sqipwith and showed him the petition of the citizens of Mer Rouge? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you go to Captain Skipwith? A.—To make sure everything would be all right with the proper party. He was supposed to be the head of the Klansmen.

Q.—You went to Captain Skipwith as a Klansman? A.—I am sure I had joined the Klan then.

Q.—You signed the petition, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—As a Klansman? A.—Possibly. I'm not positive.

Q.—Where were you on Aug. 17, the day Richards was kidnapped by the Klan? A.—God knows—I heard about the kidnapping of Richards about 5 o'clock, maybe 4:30, that evening.

Q.—Had you information it was contemplated? A.—I had not.

Q.—You heard about the attempted assassination of Dr. McKoin? A.—Yes, the same night, about a half hour after it happened.

Q.—Where did you see McKoin? A.—At the home of Dr. Clark. It was between 10 and 12 o'clock Dr. Clark telephoned me.

Q.—Who did you find there? A.—Dr. Clark, Dr. McKoin and Kirkpatrick.

Q.—How did McKoin describe it? A.—He said he was given a false call and was shot at after he was returning.

Q.—Did you see the car? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it shot? A.—It was. There were marks showing. There were several shots. One went through the car from the front. I first thought some one had shot to scare him, but afterward I got a searchlight and examined the car. Then I saw there had been several shots. There was evidence of a charge of buckshot. Some of the shots struck the frame on top. The curtains showed the effects of the fire too. There was evidence that some one had fired after the car passed.

Q.—What was McKoin's position? A.—He said he was leaning on the wheel; that was his explanation for the shot not striking him.

Q.—Would the bullets that struck the back curtain and the back o fthe seat have struck the driver if he had been sitting up straight? A.—Yes, I think so.

The testimony offered by the witness at this juncture bore out the assertions of Dr. McKoin that he had been fired on from ambush.

"Had you formed any suspicions?" the witness was asked.

"Yes, against the bootleggers who had written him threatening letters."

"Had you ever heard him intimate that his suspicions were directed against any cetrain person?"

"No, I asked him and he said he didn't know who was responsible.

At the suggestion of Mr. Warren the witness traced his movements on the day Richards was kidnapped in broad daylight in Bastrop. He was certain on some points but extremely vague on others.

Klansman Contradicts Himself.

Clark was insistent on establishing his presence at a lodge meeting on the night Daniel and Richards were slain. His examination proceeded as follows:

Q.—Did you have any fear of arrest? A.—No.

Q.—Well, why did you want to know for sure where you were that night? A.—I just wanted to know. There were all sorts of rumors. Every one in Mer Rouge was going to be arrested.

Q.—But why should rumors that many were going to be arrested arouse you? You weren't afraid, were you? A.—No, but I wanted to know where I was.

Q.—Some one told you you were at the Masonic lodge that night, didn't he? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was that man? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—The lodge records show you were there that night? A.—Yes.

Q.—You have no positive recollection of any one there that night? A.—No positive recollection.

Q.—Were you in Bastrop on the night of Aug. 24? A.—No.

Q.—Did you make the statement in the streets of Bastrop that you could name six men responsible for the shooting of Dr. McKoin? A.—I may have.

Q.—Why? A.—I think you are making it too strong. I don't remember saying that.

Q.—Whom did you suspect? A.—I won't say, it was only suspicion.

Q.—Then your suspicion was based on your imagination? A.—I guess so.

Q.—Were you on good terms with Daniel and Richards? A.—Yes, I never had any trouble with either.

Q.—Did you make any move toward an investigation? A.—No, sir, we were kind of used to shooting and disturbances.

Q.—Then it was a common thing? A.—Not exactly.

The witness denied that he had taken any part in raids of the black masks and that he had seen them in action. He did talk to Captain Skipwith about the kidnapping at committee meetings—two, he thought—"to straighten things out." He denied any knowledge of the identity of the masked men in the two kidnapping bands. He admitted he was incensed at the alleged shooting at Dr. McKoin and did not like Watt Daniel and Richards. After the disappearance, he admitted he said it was the result of bad local conditions.

"Is Mer Rouge restless now," he was asked.

"The people are restless."

"You are in sympathy with the State in this hearing?"

"I am."

He considered it miraculous that Dr. McKoin escaped death when his auto was shot at.

J. C. Nettles, a fisherman at Lake La Fourche, was the last witness of the day. He told of being stopped in his car on Aug 24 about a mile out of Bastrop by about fifteen masked men. All were armed and masked. Two with pistole showed him where to park his car and then ordered him to get out. He heard some one say they had gotten Watt Daniel and old man Jim Daniel. Soon afterward he was allowed to go.

Associated Press reports of Ku Klux activities.

"Most of the information as to the Klan, as you well know," said Mr. McLean, "is obtained from the daily press, which gets its reports from The Associated Press, and it is generally recognized that The Associated Press is controlled by the Catholic organization. The local press obtains its information from The Associated Press. It means to be fair and believes that it is printing news, but it is printing propaganda pure and simple."

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 17.—Attorney General Coco announced tonight that what the State believes to be positive identification of members of the hooded band which spirited Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards to their death will be offered soon at the open hearing.

Two important witnesses for whom the authorities have been searching since the investigation began have been located and have signified their willingness to appear in court, it was learned tonight. They are the traveling man in the stalled automobile who saw the death truck pass with the bodies of Daniel and Richards on the way to Lake La Fourche and the man who sold the truck and the touring car used by the murderers. The latter witness, it is said, has supplied the authorities with license numbers and the numbers of the motors and other parts.

The Attorney General made a public statement to newspaper men soon after the open hearing adjourned for the day. The evidence to be offered, the understanding is, will definitely connect five men with the nightriders who kidnapped the two men.

According to semi-official authority Berry Whetsone, the youth who declared he could identify members of the mob, will be brought here tomorrow and he may be placed on the witness stand at once. Whetstone is considered one of the star witnesses for the State. He told the authorities he had been drafted into service as a "waterboy" for the hooded band and that he was present when Daniel and Richards were kidnapped.

Attorney General Coco has admitted he is holding some of his best witnesses for the end of the hearing. Those to be heard tomorrow will testify on subjects not previously brought up in court while those to follow will corroborate that testimony. There are about fifty more witnesses to be heard.

Klan Tries to Block Hearing.

Charging that the State's attorneys were using illegal methods and the "third degree" in the examination of witnesses, the Ku Klux Klan, through W. C. Barnett, its counsel, today caused the withdrawal of E. M. Gray, a Klansman as a witness. When Gray, who was a witness yesterday, was recalled today Barnett renewed his objections of the day before. He asserted that Gray's name has been connected with the case in published reports and claimed constitutional rights for the witness. Judge Odom ruled that objections could not be entered by attorneys representing persons who might be involved in the prosecution, and said that witnesses would have to testify but need not incriminate themselves. The court was to be the judge of the questions.

Barnett asked if he could consult with witnesses. The Court yielded on that point and when Barnett asked for permission to consult with Gray, permission was granted. Gray left the Courtroom with his attorney and did not return. The State's attorneys intimidated that he would not be recalled. It was hinted by the State that the alarm manifested by the Klan's attorney was entirely satisfactory to the Attorney General and his aids.

Following up its investigation of Gray's movements on Aug. 24, the State called witnesses who had been with him on the night of the kidnapping. Tom Higginbotham, reported by Gray as the man who drove him to the home of William Higginbotham, Tom Higginbotham's cousin, on that night, stuck to the story told by Gray. He testified that he picked up Gray at a point not far from the spot where the masked raiders held up the Bastrop picnickers.

William Higginbotham, who testified that he had received an alarming letter, substantiated Gray's testimony that he had asked Gray to go to his house and spend all or part of the night wtih him, fearing an attack.

Try to Trace Gray's Movements.

State's Attorneys admitted that Rufus Eubank, nephew of Gray, who drove him to the point where he was picked up by Tom Higginbotham, would be called as a witness at an early day. Eubank is depended on to describe the exact time which Gray was landed at the lonely spot on the Mer Rouge-Bastrop road, and will be asked whether there were any masked men in evidence when he got there. Eubank is expected to clear the mystery as to why Gray did not use his own car to go to the home of William Higginbotham.

William Higginbotham testified that Gray and Tom Higginbotham, arriving at his home, were provided with revolvers and remained outside the house until midnight of Aug. 24. He went to bed and slept, though fearing an attack. He admitted that he was a Klansman and that he had seen Klansmen wear their black hoods. He had seen Captain Skipwith, "Tom" Higginbotham and "Pink" Kirkpatrick in white regalia. Dr. McKoin had told him it had been reported that Leon Daniel, a brother of Watt Daniel, had said that Watt Daniel had threatened to kill him.

T. Semmes Walmsley, First Assistant Attorney General entered the court room while the hearing was in progress this afternoon, carrying a bundle which, he stated, contained black hoods, which had been worn by Morehouse Klansmen and which would be introduced as evidence.

Former Deputy Sheriff "Jeff" Burnett, accused of the murder of Daniel and Richards, will be brought back to Bastrop Friday, it was announced today by Sheriff Carpenter. He has been in a Shreveport hospital for treatment for pleurisy.

Klan Counsel Fights Calling Gray.

Sheriff Carpenter, the first witness of the morning session, was asked only three questions. In reply to the last he testified that it was not until the morning after Alonzo Braddock had been released, after having been dragged from his home by a Ku Klux band led by Captain Skipwith and taken to the Sheriff, who kept the farmer in his house over night, that a warrant was issued for Braddock's arrest. Sam Conger, the next witness, testified to seeing the black-hooded mob on Aug. 24, but was unable to identify any members of it.

When Gray's name was called W. C. Barnett, counsel for Dr. McKoin, "Jeff" Burnett and the Klan generally, objected, as he had done yesterday, on the ground that Gray "was in a sense accused of being implicated in the Mer Rouge crime." He further stated that Gray had engaged counsel, of which Barnett was one. "In his behalf I say that he declines to give any further testimony on the ground that it might incriminate him," said the attorney. "The Constitution of this State provides that no man can give evidence against himself.

"As a representative of others in this matter," he continued, "I want to say we have permitted the State to go ahead in this hearing, but for the State to subject this witness or any other witness to cross examination or the third degree is in violation of the Constitution."

"These matters have been submitted to a Grand Jury in this parish, to the District Attorney, to other officials and no one has been charged by them," replied Senator Warren. "The State has some evidence tending to show that some individuals have knowledge of the transactions which led to the death of two citizens of this parish. The sole purpose of this investigation is to get the true facts in the matter. The attorney of the State is not cross-examining, there is no third degree in this hearing. Every witness has been guaranteed protection and there has been no intimidation on either side, I think. The truth is all the State wants in these matters.

"The witness in this instance is free to refuse to testify. The court has told him so. The accusation against Mr. Gray, as published by an overzealous newspaper, is unfortunate. It was a wild story and the State had nothing to do with it."

Mr. Guion cited Supreme Court decisions to show that the State was entitled to this hearing. He contended that if a newspaper writer had connected Gray with the accusations, it did not alter Gray's status as a witness in view of the fact that there had been no affidavit filed against him.

Court Rules Against Klan.

Barnett rejoined that the Constitution provided that Gray might not give evidence in any proceedings that might incriminate him. He contended that a witness who feared that his testimony in any way might lead to his being accused had the right to refuse to testify. He insisted that the witness and his counsel were the best judges as to what the witness should testify to. He repeated his objection to Gray's being used as a witness after asserting that the material on which the Attorney General was working had been furnished by agents.

"Will the gentleman tell us the names of his prospective defendants?" Senator Warren asked.

"We'll be here and let you know whenever they are called," Barnett replied.

Attorney General Coco insisted that Barnett's position was untenable, that if he were permitted to object in this case he might object to every witness called by the State.

Judge Odom said that if there was an affidavit against Gray he would not permit him to testify. "But there is no complaint," said the Court. "I now reiterate to you, Mr. Gray, that you don't have to answer questions that may implicate or involve you in these alleged crimes. I now want to state a policy, I am not going to tolerate objections from attorneys. If an attorney wants to tell a witness of his rights under the Constitution, that will be all right, but I don't want objections. A witness here has the same right that he has before the Grand Jury.

"I am going to permit the witnesses to come here and I shall require them to tell what they know so long as it doesn't incriminate them. That a witness might possibly say something that might incriminate him doesn't mean that he shouldn't testify at all. I think now we understand each other."

The Court then instructed the witness that if he were in doubt as to any question put to him, he should appeal to the Court. Barnett asked whether, in the case of future witnesses, counsel would consult the Court publicly or privately as to objections. Judge Odom said he would prefer that it be done privately.

The Court then permitted Gray to consult with Barnett in an ante-chamber. The State decided to examine Tom Higginbotham in the meanwhile.

Tells of Picking Up Gray.

Tom Higginbotham is a cousin of Will Higginbotham, with whom, according to Grays' testimony yesterday, he spent most of the night of Aug. 24. Higginbotham was examined, as follows:

Q.—Do you know E. N. Gray? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Where is his home in relation to yours? A.—About three miles across the swamps.

Q.—What road do you take? A.—Just a crossroad.

Q.—Where were you on Aug. 24? A.—Baling hay with Mr. Montgomery on the bayou.

Q.—Did you go to Bastrop the day before? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you talk with any one? A.—My Cousin Will. He told me that he had received a threatening letter signed "Not Your Friend," warning him to keep away from negroes and to quit making white lightning.

Q.—Did you see the letter? A. Yes.

Q.—What else did he talk about? A.—Well, I told him that I'd better go back with him.

Q.—Who else did you see? A.—J. D. and Fred Higginbotham.

Q.—Are you related to them? A.—Second cousins.

Q.—Are you a member of the Klan? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you know Watt Daniel? A.—Tolerably well.

Q.—Did you know T. F. Richards? A.—Yes, sir, about a year, I think.

Q.—Did you know J. L. Daniel, W. C. Andrews and Tot Davenport? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you hear rumors that they were in bad with the Klan? A.—No, sir.

Q.—When you quit baling hay where did you go? A.—Home.

Q.—Did you come through Bastrop? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Stop there? A.—No, sir.

Q.—And you picked up Mr. Gray at Washburn's place? A.—Yes, sir. I was glad to have him along.

Q.—He was standing there alone? A.—Yes, sir; out in front of the gate.

Q.—How many cars passed you? A.—Two or three.

Q.—Any prisoners in them? A.—I didn't see any.

Q.—You didn't halt when they passed? A.—No.

Q.—How far was it from the point where you picked up Gray and where you met the masked men? A.—About a quarter mile.

Q.—You had just about reached the Cooper Lake Road when you met the masked men? A.—Yes.

Q.—Whom did you next meet? A.—Earl Andrews, I believe.

Q.—You passed him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Whom did you see next? A.—Nobody I recognized.

Met Masked Men.

Q.—You talked to no one you met by the road? A.—No, I was in a hurry to get home.

Q.—After seeing the masked men? A.—Yes.

Q.—You saw a car standing with people in it? A.—Yes.

Q.—You didn't know them? A.—No.

Q.—How many were standing outside the car? A.—Three, I think.

Q.—In the car? A.—The car was crowded.

Q.—You didn't know them to talk to them? A.—No.

Q.—Were any of them masked? A.—No.

Q.—Then you proceeded on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge road for quite a way? A.—Yes.

Q.—Pass anybody? A.—Yes, several cars, but I didn't know any of them.

Q.—Did you pass any cars before you reached the fork in the road? A.—I passed all of them before I reached the swamp at Red Hill.

Q.—After you passed the road where the large car was standing, did you pass other cars before you reached the fork? A.—Two or three, I think.

Q.—Had you passed Gray's car, driven by Rufus Eubanks, you would have known it? A.—I think so.

Q.—Or Tom Butler's car? A.—Yes, sir. I would have known it.

Q.—What did you do when you got home? A.—Went in and had dinner.

Q.—What did Gray do? A.—Waited outside with my cousin.

Q.—What time did you leave there? A.—After midnight.

Q.—Did you take Gray home? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—See any one on the way? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see any of Mr. Gray's family when he got to his house? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You went home? A.—I went to my cousin, Will Higginbotham.

Q.—Why did you and Gray think all danger was over? A.—Well, it was midnight.

Q.—Midnight would be a good hour for trouble, wouldn't it? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—You have been Will Higginbotham's only companion to stay with him? A.—Yes.

Q.—How much have you stayed with him? A.—I've stayed there for a week at a time.

Q.—You don't stay there now? A.—No.

Q.—You decided the danger was over? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had he any enemies? A.—None that I know of.

Q.—Have you ever heard any one threaten him or Tom? A.—No.

Q.—Had he been a good citizen? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When you came in to get your dinner, did you see John Lang or Jeff Burnett? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you know "Jim" Vaughn or Dean Ashcraft? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see Captain Skipwith? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Were you ever suspicious of any one having fired at Dr. McKoin? A.—No, sir; I didn't think he had an enemy.

Q.—Was the community excited over it? A.—No, sir, it was very quiet.

Q.—Do you mean to say people were not interested in it? A.—It looked that way to me.

Q.—When did you hear the news? A.—On the morning of the shooting.

Q.—And you went to Mer Rouge and inquired? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—So far as you know, there was mighty little effort to find out who did the shooting? A.—So far as I know.

Q.—Did you see either Richards or Watt Daniel the day you came in from the Montgomery place? A.—I don't remember.

FEDERAL INQUIRY OF KLAN ACTIVITY LOOMS

Investigation Centered in Five Southern States.

EVIDENCE IS STARTLING

Special Membership Campaign Is Being Conducted Among Railway Mail Clerks and Postmasters in Southwest.

Commercial Appeal 1-28-25

BY. A. G. BROWN.

(Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 27.—The federal government at Washington is reported here tonight on good authority, to be about ready to conference openly a most searching investigation of its own into the activities of the Ku Klux Klan. This probe is to be centered in the so-called klan states of the southwest, Georgia, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana and Alabama.

Agents to Southern States.

Federal agents have already been dispatched to Dallas, Little Rock, Atlanta and Birmingham. Some of the operatives, who have been at work on the Morehouse Parish atrocity, will remain here to investigate the situation, from the federal standpoint, existing in Louisiana.

A. E. Farland, chief of the federal staff, which did the work at Bastrop and Mer Rouge, was in New Orleans a few hours today, following a most important conference at Baton Rouge with Gov. John M. Parker. He was accompanied by his chief aid, James Rooney.

Neither would make any comment on the nature of the conference with Louisiana's chief executive, or amplify the report that Washington is about to strike at klan activities in the southwest.

It is known, however, that they are ready to present to officials of the Department of Justice at Washington some very startling documentary evidence bearing on the activities of the invisible empire throughout the southwest.

Part of this evidence was presented to the federal operatives by Gov. Parker. The remainder has been developed by the government men from leads secured while they were investigating the situation in Morehouse Parish.

The evidence already gathered, according to Gov. Parker, reveals violation of federal statutes of the most startling character. It is alleged to establish the following facts:

Campaign Now In Progress.

That a special membership campaign is now being conducted by the klan among railroad mail clerks and postmasters throughout the entire southwest. Evidence in the hands of operatives, it is said, tends to show that mail already has been tampered with.

That a similar campaign is being conducted by klan emissaries among the telegraph operators in five states, for the purpose of tapping at first hand this source of iformation.

That the same character of activities are being conducted throughout the telephone offices of the southwest.

That attempts have been made to enroll newspaper men on the klan roster in an effort to control news sources and the publication of news, as well as editorial matter.

Attorney-General A. V. Coco is still at his home in Marksville, but one of his assistants, T. Semmes Walmsley, tonight confirmed the fact that evidence of the klan's activities as outlined above had been placed in the hands of the federal authorities.

"Startling as it may seem," said Mr. Walmsley, 't'he klan has not only actaully made progress in its efforts to secretly tap the telephone and telegraph lines of the southwest, but evidence has been secured that tends to show that United States mail has actually been tampered with.

"The Morehouse Parish outrages were startling enough, but in reality their revelations only skims the surface of klan activities in this whole section of the country."

Will Blow Lid Off.

Gov. Parker is ready to "blow the lid" off the national klan campaign at the Chicago conference, to be opened at the Coliseum on Feb. 26. He so announced today, after accepting an invitation to be one of the principal speakers.

By that time he will have carefully digested the voluminous record of the Bastrop hearing and will be ready to give to the world the inside story of the investigation. He is expected to outline what he believs the nature of the anti-kluz campaign should be.

Q.—Are you sure they did not pass in a car while you were sitting out under the pecan trees at Will Higginbotham's? A.—I don t now; several cars passed.

Q.—When did you first hear of the kidnapping of Daniel and Richards? A.—I met the mob that night.

Q.—What did you think about the mob? A.—I felt they were after some one, and I hurried on at a good clip.

Q.—Did any one else get threatening letters that you know about? A.—Captain Skipwith got some.

Q.—Did you see them? A.—No, but I heard about them.

Q.—You are not sure Skipwith got them—you never read them? A.—No, sir.

Q.—The night you picked up Gray, it was by accident? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You didn't know which way he was going? A.—No, sir.

Witness Misquoted "Threat."

When Will Higginbotham was called he presented the so-called threatening letter, which, on its face, gave little reason for expecting the attack he said he feared. The letter read:

"Why don't you tend to your own business? It is no matter to you about our negro women or making whisky. We intend to do as we please, and your bunch can't stop us. We know you and we are going to stop you. Take this for what it is worth and get close together. You can guess the rest. Not Your Friend."

"As I understood your cousin (Tom Higginbotham), the letter was a reprimand to you for immoral conduct and making whisky," said Senator Warren. "Instead of that, I find the letter reminds you it is none of your business if the writer is immoral and makes whisky. Is that right?"

"Yes."

"Nobody was accusing you of immorality or making whisky, but they objected to you interfering with their immoralities?"

"Yes."

"You didn't interfere in such ways with other people's business?"

"No."

Higginbotham is a typical farmer and apparently a peaceful, quiet old man. His droll manner made the spectators and even Judge Odom smile.

The examination went on as follows:

Q.—Whom did you show that letter to first? A.—To "Jap" Jones when I met him at Bastrop. He advised me to get somebody to stay with me. Afterwards I met "Newt" Gray and asked him to stay with me all night or half the night.

Q.—Did you have any idea who sent the letter? A.—No sir, but I thought it might be some of them fellows at Mer Rouge selling Whiskey.

Q.—Who were they? A.—Well, I heard that Watt Daniel and Will Bradlock were making and selling it.

Q.—Did you hear that Jim Norsworthy had been making it but had quit? A.— Yes sir.

Q.—Had you and Watt ever talked about making whiskey? A—No sir.

Q.—You and Braddock? A.—No sir.

Q.—Why did you think Braddock was making whiskey? A.—I had heard it around.

Q.—Did you suspect that anybody had cause to write that letter exept those who made whis ey and sold it? A.—No sir.

Q.—When was the last time you saw Watt Daniel? A.—At Bastrop, the day of the ball game.

Q.—Who was with him? A.—I don't know. There was some one with him but I didn't know the other man.

Q.—You saw him no more? A.—No, I started home after that.

Q.—Did you show that letter to your wife? A.—She read it before I got to the house.

Q.—Did you ever hear that the Vigilance Comfittee was after Watt Daniel or any one else? A.—I ehard they were after J. L. Daniel on account of the poker game at his house.

Q.—Any one else? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Had you heard of trouble between the Klan and people of Mer Rouge? A.—I had heard there was some.

Q.—Are you a member of the Klan? A.—I am a member, but I am too old to get out with them. I work all day and don't go out at night.

Saw Blindfolded Men on Truck.

Q.—Did you have the hood and regalia? A.—Yes, sir, a white one.

Q.—Did you havea black one? A.—No, sir, I never tried to get one. I know the others had them, but I didn't feel that I needed one. I don't just remember where I got the white one.

Q.—You didn't have any idea of taking any pjart in night expeditions? A.—No, sir.

Q.—And you didn't have any need for a black hood? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see any men who had black hoods? A.—I saw them. I didn't know them. I did see Jim Norsworthy.

Q.—Did he have a haad on? A.—No, he was sttanding out in the road.

Q.—When you told "Jap" Jones aboupt the letter, you addressed him as a Klansman and a lifelong friend? A.—Yes.

Q.—Yop told him there was no reason for the letter? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you get Gray? A.—He came up to me in a car.

Q.—He heard you were looking for him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you talk to any one else about the letter? A.—No.

Q.—Did Tom know about it? A.—Yes, I told him at dinner.

Q.—What did he say? A.—Said he would be back by dark.

Q.—About what time did he get to Bastrop? A.—About 6:30 P. M., I guess.

Q.—After dinner, now, Newt Gray came looking for you about this very thing? A.—I think Tom Higginbotham told him.

Q.—Gray made it clear to you that he had already been told about this letter? A.—Yes.

Q.—And he offered to stay all night or part of the night with you. A.—Yes.

Q.—He asked you if you had any way of getting him out to your house? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Gray tell you that he'd have to get somebody to drive his car home? To take his wife and party home? A.—No, he didn't. I just told him he could come out to my house with Tommy Higginbotham.

Q.—Did you think Gray was taking any chances on missing Tom as Tom came back from the ball field? A.—No; Gray said he'd catch him. I told him if he watched the street he'd be sure to catch him.

Q.—Did you bring any men up from Mer Rouge? A.—Yes, Jim Wemble.

Q.—Did you go home by the Mer Rouge road? A.—No, Grabball road. I wanted to get away from that crowd.

Q.—You wanted to get home? A.—Yes, I wanted to get home before sundown.

Q.—You were at home more than an hour before the arrival of Gray and Tom? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You left town with the main crowd? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you got out on the road the hooded men were there? A.—Yes, part of them.

Q.—And they had stopped some cars and taken some prisoners? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see two men blindfolded on the truck? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many cars did you see? A.—About eight or ten.

Q.—How did you pass? A.—A masked man indicated the right, and my girl drove the car to the right.

Q.—What kind of hoods did you see? A.—Black.

Q.—Where was the truck? A.—On the side of the road. There were hooded men around it.

Q.—About how many in hoods did you see? A.—Eighteen or twenty.

Q.—You were not halted? A.—No, sir.

Q.—No one overtook you? A.—No, sir, but I passed Frank Bell and John Jones coming this way.

Q.—How far beyond the holdup did you meet Frank Bell and John Jones? A.—About half a mile.

Q.—Were they driving fast? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you meet anybody else? A.—Nobody.

Q.—Didn't overtake "Newt" Gray's or Tom Butler's cab? A.—No I did not.

Q.—You drove east? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why couldn't you take Gray home in your car? A.—Well, I didn't want to crowd my wife and the girls.

Q.—Have you ever heard that Tom Higginbotham was a member of the Vigilance Committee? A.—No.

Q—Had he talked about things they were setting out to do? A.—Not to me.

Q.—Did he want you to attend any meetings? A.—One in the woods.

Q.—Do you remember any one there? A.—Tom was there Captain Spikwith and "Pink" Kirkpatrick.

Q.—Was Dr. McKoin there? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know him? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What did you hear at Mer Rouge about the shooting? A.—I heard that Dr. McKoin passed two men on the roadside and grew suspicious of them. Dr. McKoin toldl me this and said he didn't know how he escaped with his life.

Q.—Did he say how far they were road? A.—They were in the ditch o road.

Q.—When he saw them he squatted down in the car, and that is why he was not hit? A.—Yes.

The witness then related that Dr. McKoin had told him that he was called to a negro cabin, found no one there ill, and passed the same two men going and coming. The shots, McKoin said, were fired after he had passed them on his return trip. The examination then continued:

Q.—Did you ever hear any one say they suspected any one of shooting at McKoin? A.—Leon Daniel said he had heard Watt Daniel was planning to kill Dr. McKoin. Dr. McKoin also told me that weeks before the shooting.

Q.—Did Leon Daniel tell that or did some one say he had said it? A.—Some one told me he said it.

Q.—Do you know why Dr. McKoin carried a bale of hay on the side of his car the night he was shot at? A.—Didn't know he carried a bale of hay.

Q—You know whether Tom Higginbotham ever went out on any Klan raids? A.—He never did.

Says Gray Guarded Home.

Q.—Has he a Klan regalia? A.—He's got a white suit.

Q.—Not a black one? A.—I know he didn't have a black one.

Q.—Now what did Gray do when he got out to your house that night? A.—He stayed outside and would not come in for supper because he said he didn't want to get the women folks worried. I brought him a gun and left him and Tom there. Gray went home about midnight.

Q.—Did Gray take your gun down with him? A.—Think he did. I suppose he did.

Q.—Could they see anyone coming on the road? A.—Yes sir.

Q.—Did you see any cars pass? A.—No sir.

Q.—Tom went in the house and told you Gray was there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Gray enter the house? A.—No sir, I took the pistol out to him.

Q.—What conversation did you have with Gray? A.—I told him to watch and not to shoot until he found out who it was; that I didn't want him to shoot an innocent man.

Q.—About how long did you stay out the first time? A.—About ten minutes.

Q.—What them? A.—Tom and I went to supper.

Q.—How long did you stay out after supper? A.—Till about 10:30 P. M.

Q.—When was that letter opened—the threatening letter? A.—The day we got it, the day of the barbecue.

Q.—Your wife opened the letter? A.—Yes, she read it and showed it to me.

Q.—Did it scare you? A.—It bothered me. I was just mad, pardner. It would make anybody mad. If a man't going to shoot me, I want him to shoot me in the face, not in the back.

Q.—And you don't want him to have a hood on, with eyeholes in it? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Are you in favor of this investigation? A.—I am.

Q.—Did you tell Judge Odom or Sheriff Carpenter? A.—I think I showed Carpenter the letter.

Q.—Did your wife or girls see Gray that night? A.—No, sir.

Says McKoin Accused Daniel.

Q.—You went to Dr. McKoin when you heard he had been shot at? A.—I went right away.

Q.—Is that when he told you that Watt's brother had said Watt had threatened to kill him? A.—Yes; he told me after the shooting and before the shooting, I think.

Q.—Did you ever go to Watt Daniel's brother? A.—No, I didn't go to him.

Q.—Did you go on to Bastrop? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who did you see there that you talked with about it? A.—J. D. and Will Higginbotham.

Q.—Why did you see J. D.? A.—Because he is Town Marshal.

Q.—Can you identify any of those masked men you saw in the mob that day (Aug. 24)? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you make any effort to find out who was responsible for the kidnapping? A.—Well, I asked several people about it.

Q.—Did you go to Captain Skipwith? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What Klansmen did you talk with? A.—I'll be honest with you, sir, I don't remember.

Q. (by Attorney General Coco)—Did you think the writer of that threatening letter intended to do you bodily harm on the night of Aug. 24? A.—I didn't know, so I played safe.

Q.—Didn't you go to bed and leave your friend Gray standing guard with your nephew? A.—Well, sir, I was tired, worn out and miserable.

Q.—You didn't know what took place outside the house? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Were you asleep in the house? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Why did you think the danger was over? A.—I thought if anything came up my nephew and friend would let me know.

Q.—What time did they leave? A.—About 12:30, I think.

Q.—Don't you know that if a man wanted to do you harm he would come in the early part of the morning, when people generally sleep, and not before midnight? A.—Well, I was sitting up in the house with a gun until late.

Q.—Why did you say you feared Captain Skipwith? A.—I didn't fear him, but he was a man not to be opposed.

Thomas W. Butler, who lives on the Collinston-Mer Rouge Road, told of seeing masked men in cars while driving home from the Bastrop ball game on Aug. 24. Frank L. Flewellyn, Bastrop barber, admitted he is a Klansman, "didn't remember" anything he had heard in discussions of the disappearance of Daniel and Richards.

J. D. Higginbotham, Town Marshall of Bastrop, said that he was on duty ug. 24. He heard of the kidnapping about dark, being told by Mrs. Earl Andrews. They had started for Mer Rouge, but came back and reported the kidnapping. She said W. C. Andrews had been taken, but didn't know the rest. Earl Andrews told the witness the names of all five.

"What effort did you make to find out about it?" he was asked.

"None; I'm only Town Marshall."

He saw the Sheriff but didn't report the kidnaping to him. He went to the dance hall to hunt for bootleggers, and up to 10 o'clock just moved up and down the street. He knew nothing about a crowd in Thomas's hardware store, although the rumor was rife in town that there was to be an attack by Mer Rouge citizens.

WILL PERMIT KLAN TO HOLD MEETINGS

Unless They Conspire to Commit Crime, Prosecutor Dodd Won't Interfere.

New York City

HE DEFINES HIS POSITION

Replies to a Manufacturer Who Protests Against War on the Society.

1-31-23

District Attorney Charles J. Dodd, of Brooklyn, made it clear yesterday that the right of peaceable assemblage would not be denied to the Ku Klux Klan, conspired to commit a crime or take the law into its own hands.

Mr. Dodd's explanation of his position was contained in a reply to a letter from John H. Barker, of 466 East Seventh Street, a manufacturer of electrical and railroad equipment, and followed the recent arrest of eight alleged Klansmen after a meeting at 182 Clermont Avenue and the flight of seventy-two supposed Klansmen from Young's Hall, 2,126 Fulton Street, upon the approach of the police Monday night.

Magistrate Harry Howard Dale, before whom the eight alleged Klansmen were originally arraigned, declared at the time that actual and prospective members of the Klan must get out of Brooklyn; and Mr. Barker's letter was apparently for the purpose of learning how far the District Attorney intended to go in the fight against the Brooklyn Klansmen.

"I note in the papers a report of the arrest of several men for belonging to the Ku Klux Klan," Mr. Barker wrote the District Attorney, "and a report in today's World saying that Magistrate Dale, after a talk in your office, held them because they belonged to the Ku Klux Klan.

"I do not belong to the Klan, and I understand that I am not eligible. But as a plain matter of common sense and respect for the rights of citizens, I am writing to protest against any citizen being arrested because he belong to a certain society. If a man violates a law, all well and good, but it is certainly dangerous to allow any vote-seeking Magistrate to curry favor by sending men to jail because they belong to a society which is unpopular with a certain clas of citizens.

"The course being pursued by certain papers and officials in this city is doing more to boost the Klan than any other thing which could be devised. I certainly think that you should make a public statement disclaiming any attempt to punish people for belonging to a society and, if these men have committed a crime, make it plain that they are after them for the crime and not because they belong to the Ku Klux Klan."

Mr. Dodd, who did not mention the Klan by name, made the following reply:

"The right of peaceable assemblage cannot be denied, nor should any attempt be made to prevent the meeting of any organization for a lawful purpose. If, however, any organization or body of men shall meet in this county for the purpose of conspiring to commit a crime or take the law into their own hands, upon evidence of that being brought to this office, a vigorous prosecution will be instituted. The principal work of this office is to prosecute persons charged with the commission of crime, and while I am in charge it will be kept within its legal bounds."

Arthur Young, one of the owners of Young's Iall, said the police made a mistake in assuming that there was a Klan meeting there on Monday night. Mr. Young said that two meetings were in progress, one of the Brooklyn Council of the Independent Order of Odd fellows and the other of the Foresters of American. He added that he thought there should be some method of redress.

Attendants at the Gates avenue police court denied yesterday the charge that they had intimated or played pranks on the eight alleged Klansmen while they were awaiting arraignment last Friday morning. It was said that the alleged Klansmen received all possible provileges and were treated no differently from other prisoners.

Captain D. A. Cooper, head of the Yonkers Detective Bureau, continued yesterday his investigation of Klan activities in that city and questioned Charles Klein of 411 Bellevue Avenue, who is employed by an elevator manufacturing firm. Klein said that he had applied for membership in the Klan, but had not been admitted. He promised that if he did join and learned of anything illegal he would resign and inform the police. Klein added that he believed stories printed and told about the Klan had been exaggerated.

GOVERNOR WARNS PEOPLE

1/26/23.

Last Witness Saw Hooded Men Taking Blindfolded Victims to Lake La Fourche.

N. Y.

New York Times

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 25.—The open hearing into the Morehouse Parish outrages ended today. Lawrence Leon Jones, the State's last witness and the only witness today, gave sensational testimony which revealed that the hooded slayers took their victims to Lake La Fourche about midnight on the night of Aug. 24. Whether Daniel and Richards were dead or alive when they passed Jones on the Oak Ridge-Lake La Fourche road within a short distance of the ferry station he was unable to say.

Approximately one hour elapsed from the time the hooded men and their victims disappeared from view until the same men, occupying a Ford touring car and a Ford truck, returned and passed Jones on their way back. Jones's testimony established that Daniel and Richards were kidnapped, tortured, murdered and their bodies thrown into Lake La Fourche within less than twenty-four hours.

When the examination of Jones had been completed, Attorney General Coco made the following statement:

Coco Charges Klan With Crimes.

"The State has decided to discontinue these proceedings, for the present at least, and for such time as conditions may justify their resumption. The hope is expressed, however, that this may not become necessary.

"Before taking our leave of your Honor and of this parish, I desire to express my gratification at the orderly and dignified manner in which these proceedings have been conducted, and my pleasure in the assistace we have received from the officers in obtaining the prompt attendance of our witnesses and in preserving order.

"On the other hand, it is my very painful and humiliating duty to refer to the deplorable conditions in this parish, as revealed by the evidence. The proof is convincing that since the advent of the Ku Klux Klan in this parish there has graduatlly arisen a condition of disorder and lawlessness, which has ripened into a supersession of constituted authorities by the Ku Klux Klan and the establishment of a government of its own, from which a reign of terror and chaos have resulted, and the parish was on the brink of riot and bloodshed when the Governor sent the militia here and these proceedings were initiated.

"While it may be conceded that many Klansmen did not actually participate or encourage these acts of lawlessness and crime, which finally culminated in the murder of Watt Daniels and T. F. Richards, they may nevertheless be deemed responsible therefor by reasons of their silence and inaction. These offenses and crimes werec ommitted in the name of the order, under the protection of its regalia and in the use of its recognized methods and practices and under the leadership of its officers, the principal of which has, for the last six months at least, brought about a condition in this parish which is a blot upon our civilization and brings into question the proud title of American citizenship.

"The flogging of citizens, their deportation and banishment and other kindred offenses were but mere pastimes and of such frequent occurrence that they were accepted as common-place things, the protest against which was itself sufficient fround for deportation.

"Without going into detail, we beg to say that the conclusion we have reached is that many persons have been identified and connected with these many acts of violence and crime, leading to and including the kidnapping of Aug. 24, 1922, and the murder of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, and it is the purpose of the State to present this evidence to the grand jury for its consideration and action as soon as we can get a transcript of it."

Court Rebukes Klan Counsel.

Judge Odom then thanked the spectators for the orderliness that has prevailed throughout the hearing, and continued:

"I think the following allegation made in the statement of Mr. W. C. Barnette, chief counsel for the accused parties, calls for a statement from me:

"'And many of these citizens have been subjected to the most grueling cross examination, and the method of cross examination has been of such a nature as to amount to the administration of what is commonly known as the 'third degree,' which is in direct violation of section 2 of the bill of rights of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana.'

"It is not true that witnesses were put through the third degree. It is true that some of them were put through a close questioning, but the officials who did the examining did not go beyond what should be permitted in a judicial proceedings. With reference to that part of his statement which implies that witnesses were required to give evidence against themselves and that he made objection on behalf of one of them and that his objection was promptly overruled by the Judge, I have this to say:

"When E. N. Gray was on the stand, W. H. Todd asked that he be not required to testify inasmuch as he could not be required to give evidence against himself. I at once informed Mr. Gray, the witness, that under no circumstances should he be required to make any statement or give any testimony which might in any way incriminate him or connect him with the alleged kidnapping and murder of Daniel and Richards, and stated to him that he might refuse to answer any and all questions which he thought might incriminate him. The witness stated to the Court that he had no objections to testifying and was at that time further examined. On the following morning Mr. Gray was recalled, at which time Mr. Barnette made the objection on behalf of the witness that he should not be called upon to testify. I again informed Mr. Gray, the witness, in open court and in the presence of his attorneys, of his constitutional right to refuse to give evidence against himself, and I then suggested to the witness that if there was any doubt in his mind as to whether he should testify further, he should consult with his attorneys, whereupon I excused him from the stand and he left the courtroom with his attorneys. He was not again called to the stand by the State. At this time htere was no charge to the witness standing."

Klan Counsel Attacks Hearing.

Mr. Barnett arose and said that no offense had been aimed at the presiding judge and that he was pleased with the fairness with which the judge handled the proceedings.

In the statement to which Judge Odom had taken exceptions Barnette had said:

"This whole proceeding in my judgment is a nullity, and the testimony adduced cannot be legally used in any proceedings whatever. It cannot be used legally before a grand jury. It would be hearsay any bill of indictment upon this testimony would be quashed by the court. . . .

"The corpus delicit has not been established to a reasonable certainly, to say nothing of the rule that it must be established beyond a reasonable doubh. There is more than a doubt as to the identity of these bodies, which is entertained in the minds of the people generally. The testimony showed every earmark of having been worked up by agents of the Department of Justice and so conflicting that it destroyed itself. It was manifest from the very beginning that the real motive behind the prosecution was to convict the Ku Klu-Klan in the forum of public opinion, without regard or not the perpetrators of the crime would be uncovered.

Without exception there was no material or vital point against any individual established, except by the most partisan testimony and testimony which could not stand the fire of cross-examintion or the test of character necessary to give it verity. The activities of the Ku Klu Klan were gone into with great pains and in my judgment, the evidence does not sustain the charge that they are responsible for this crime or had anything to do with it. There are other activities of minor importance in which morality and lawlessness were being practiced, that they perhaps did take some part, but in no case is a crime or misdemeanor disclosed where it is definitely shown that the Ku Klux Klan took any part and in no instance has any actually been shown except in furtherance of the enforcement morality. From all of the evidence of the hearing and the manner by which it was conducted, it impresses the reasonable mind that a great stage play has been given the public with other motives behind it, rather than the desire on the part of the Governor to really bring the guilty parties to trial.

Saw Victims Saken to Lake.

Jones, who is a resident of Moselle, Miss., testified that, with his wife and child, he was forced to stop near Lake La Fourche while driving home from Breckenridge, Texas, where he had been working in the oil fields during the Summer, because his car broke down in the middle of the road. He was held up there for two days while repairs were being made. About midnight of the first night, while he was in his bed in his car, his wife called to him and said' "Look, there goes some Ku Klux." Tnere were two cars, a Ford touring car and a runabout with a truck bed. The men in them wore black masks, save for two, one in the touring car and the other in the truck. There were two or three masked men beside the man in the truck, who was sitting down. These two were blindfolded. The cars were going toward Raysville. They seemed to be going to the ferry. There was a turn in the road, and Jones could not see whether they go to the ferry.

For a time the lights on the car disappeared. Then they reappeared as one of the cars started back. "My wife got scared and we got out of the car and hid in a potato patch," said the witness. The car stopped about seventy-five yards from his car and then the other came along. This was after three-quarters of an hour or an hour. He saw the same number of hooded men on them as before, but none blindfolded.

"There seemed to be from four to six in the touring car and four or five in the truck," testified Jones. These were the only hooded men he saw that night.

Parker's Message to Morehouse.

Adjutant General Toombs personally delivered the message of Governor Parker to the people of Morehouse Parish and to Captain Skipwith today. General Toombs met Skipwith on the street and drew him to one side while he repeated the words of Governor Parker—the warning that martial law would be proclaimed if there were any more Klan depredations in the parish.

Captain Skipwith, immediately afterward in an interview said there would be no disorders or disturbances in Bastrop, but could not speak for Mer Rouge. The last of the militia departed today.

MONROE, LA., Jan. 25.—Witnesses who testified for the State at the open hearing are in need of protection in the opinion of Mayor Dade of Mer Rouge who declared in a telephone message this afternoon that the situation in Morehouse Parish was far from being normal

"There is a rumor current that indicates that, it would be advisable to give protection to all of the State's witnesses until, after the Morehouse Parish Grand Jury holds its session," he said. "Conditions may be normal for a few days after the soldiers leave but this condition is not likely to remain because of the bitterness engendered by the investigation."

Atty.-Gen. Coco Unable to Locate Teegerstrom.

"WE THINK HE IS DEAD"

Memphis, Tenn

State Questions Genuineness of Letters Purporting to Come From Missing Youth to His Father. Was Important Witness.

1-23-23.

A. G. BROWN.

(Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

BASTROP, La., Jan. 22.—Have the black hoods of Morehouse Parish added the name of Harold Teegerstrom, important state witness, to their list of "unwanted men," and sent him on the long silent journey that they bade Watt Daniel and Tom Richards to embark upon in that now historic wood of torture on the night of Aug. 24, last?

This is the new great mystery of the Morehouse tragedy; a mystery which gives promise of climaxing the state's present open hearing with sensational new developments before the probe is ended some time this week.

Believes He Is Dead.

Attorney General Coco said to this correspondent tonight:

"We are coming to the conclusion that Teegerstrom is dead, despite developments of today. I cannot tell you why we are inclined to this viewpoint, but I think there will be some very important developments in this phase of the case before we conclude our hearing."

The developments of today, referred to by General Coco, were brought to the witness stand by Victor S. Teegerstrom, father of the missing boy.

He read into the record another alleged "communication" from his absent son. It came Friday, a week ago, he testified, but today was the first time that the state had been aware of its receipt. Like the "message" which Henry Jones last week testified he had received some 10 days before, it only added mystery to the whole affair.

The state questions the genuineness of the letter; the father does not. But forged or unforged, the communication has only added mystery to the case. Teegerstrom is still missing.

The fast aging father is "broken," physically. Sobs racked his body today as he testified. He was compelled to stop frequently as tears streamed down his cheeks. He is still full of hope; but he is a father; not a state prosecutor, or federal detective.

He told how the letter was received by his son Clarence a week ago last Friday. They couldn't make out the post mark. But on the letter, itself, was the inscription, "Somewhere in the U. S. A.," and it read in substance, as near as the father could remember, something like this:

"Dear Brother—Tell dad not to worry. I'm safe. I hope to be home about Jan. 20, or whenever the state authorities are ready for me to testify. Have been bothered by newspapermen and detectives, and wanted to get some rest."

Just Waited and Waited.

And the old man sobbed as he continued the story:

"So, so, I looked for him last Saturday; I though sure he'd come. I just waited and waited. But the boy is not here yet; I don't know what to think."

Prosecutor Guion tried to comfort him with these words:

"I want you to know, Mr. Teegerstrom, that the state has no evidence whatever to show that your son is implicated in this affair."

"Oh, I'm glad to hear you say that, sir; I know my boy couldn't be mixed up in this," the father brokenly answered.

The father testified that he was sure the writing was that of his son; he couldn't be mistaken. But still he didn't understand "Where the boy could be. I know he would communicate with me if he could," he continued. "Sometimes I've thought that maybe the state or the federal people were intercepting his letters, but I guess that couldn't be true; you surely wouldn't do that."

And Mr. Guion told the old man that nothing of that kind had been done, of course. The father went back home to watch. He promised to send his son, Clarence, to the stand tomorrow. And Clarence has been instructed to bring the letter.

Teegerstrom disappeared the night of Dec. 29. He was called from his shack at Spyker by some men, the testimony has shown. Henry Jones has testified that a few days later he appeared at his home, alone and borrowed $40, gave him his initialed watch and borrowed his shoes, a hat and a coat.

The watch was returned, Jones says, with a note, written "Somewhere in the U. S. A." It said he was safe. Jones later said it was post marked at Monroe. Teegerstrom left some of his clothes at Jones', the latter testified. But in a few days they were gone. Jones thinks Teegerstrom got them. That is the story of Teegerstrom's disappearance, as far as allegations go. He was an important witness, a Spyker friend of Jeff Burnett, now under charge of murder in this case.

Robinson Charges He Was Kidnaped and Beaten by Mer Rouge 'Black Masks.'

Atlanta Ga.

1-25-23

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, Staff Correspondent of the I. N. S.

COURT HOUSE, BASTROP, La., Jan. 24.—Tom Robinson, chorister, told Wednesday on the witness stand at the open hearing of the Mer Rouge tragedy of being kidnaped from church by a "hooded mob" and beaten on a June Sunday morning.

Robinson declared the "black masks" had invaded the church to get him, taking him away from the side of his children.

The alleged attack occurred in the Sunrise Methodist Protestant Church, Robinson said. It was just before service was to be read, he added. A little girl was playing the church organ, while he read a song book.

"The little girl made a remark: 'I wish they would come on, it's getting late,'" Robinson added. "The little girl ran to the window She came back wringing her hands, saying, 'Oh, Uncle Tom, it's the Ku-Klux Klan, its the Ku-Klux.' I told her not to worry, that they would not bother us. One man then came into the church with a gun. I walked toward him and I saw two men behind him.

"They ushered me outside and one said in a low tone, 'Get in the car.' I didn't hear any other talk and I got in the car and they drove me quite a distance to where they administered my punishment."

"Were you blindfolded?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were they hooded men?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you recognize them?"

"No, sir, not one."

"What kind of hoods did they wear?"

"They wore black hoods."

"How many were there in the car?"

"From 25 to 50 were in the church yard. After they stopped, I heard a rustling in the leaves around the car. I got out and the first word I heard spoken was, 'Where do you want him?' and someone said, 'Here across this log.'"

"They laid me down across the log, and I heard someone say, 'Put it on him,' and they put it on me. They whipped me awhile and then stopped. Then someone asked whether I could stop going with a lawless crowd and be a man. I said I could. Then someone said. 'Put it on him some more,' and they did. At last they stopped and took me up. They said if they had to come back again they would hang me. Someone then said, 'Let him go.' They pulled the veil off my eyes and said if I looked back, they would shoot me, and so I didn't."

SECRET SERVICE MEN STILL TRACK KLAN

Continue Investigation of Mer Rouge Outrages and Klansmen Implicated at Hearing.

Attorney General Coco and Staff Begin Preparing Evidence for March Grand Jury.

New York City

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 28.—With Attorney General Coco due to arrive here tomorrow his staff prepared today to proceed with briefing the testimony taken at the recent open hearing on the Mer Rouge outrages and to formulate a definite program for presentation to the new Morehouse Parish Grand Jury, scheduled to begin its sessions on March 1. A month will be required to transcribe the stenographic report of the testimony, which will approximate 1,000,000 words, it is believed.

New agents of the Department of Justice are taking up where their predecessors left off with continuance of the investigation of the activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Morehouse Parish. Testimony at the open hearing paved the way for a solution of the mystery concerning the dynamite explosion at Lake La Fourche which raised to the surface the bodies of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards, but there still is need of evidence to determine where the dynamite was obtained and the identity of the men who actually discharged the explosive. The torture machine is still undiscovered and Secret Service agents, it is known, doubt seriously whether it ever will be found.

The record of Captain J. K. Skipworth, Exalted Cyclops of the Morehouse Klan, is to be thoroughly scrutinized. Much information regarding his career had been handed voluntarily to the Attorney General's office. Legal transactions in which he is alleged to have appeared in an unfavorable light are being thoroughly investigated.

The career of Dr. B. M. McKoin, charged with being one of the slayers of Daniel and Richards, and who killed another physician a few years ago, is being traced as is that of E. N. (Newt) Gray, identified as a member of the hooded mob that kidnapped the two victims.

Oliver Skipworth, son of Captain J. K. Skipworth, and according to testimony one of the men who was on the Ford truck that carried Daniel and Richards to their death, is offering an alibi that half a dozen persons saw him in the Cooper Lake section on the day of kidnapping and that he was actually engaged in a fight with the pilot of the Cooper Lake ferry boat at the time it is testified he was seen on the murder truck. Federal agents have already begun to investigate his story.

Hospital Cook Warned By Ku Klux Klan

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 16.—Charity Hospital may need a cook soon. New York News

Joe Randino, the cook at the institution, is convinced that he has received a warning from the Ku Klux Klan. New York

The warning, in the form of a note laboriously printed in pencil, reached Randino yesterday. It was addressed to "Joe Ranzo," which led to the faint hope that maybe the Klux didn't know so much about the cook after all.

The contents, however, were to the point. "You had better stay off the streets at night or we will get you. We give you one week to leave town. If you don't comply with this request you had better tell your friends good-bye, because we'll get you and a few others."

"Ku Klux Klan," followed by KKK in parenthesis, was the signature.

Randino sent the note to city detective headquarters for investigation. Police were not inclined to view the matter as anything more than a practical joke.

He Testifies He Saw Hooded Band Carrying Off Two Blindfolded Men.

SPENT NIGHT WITH FRIENDS

Developments Expected to Lead Attorney General to Show Full Strentgh of Hand.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 16.—While hundreds in and out of the Bastrop Court House today were discussing excitedly a published report that four men had been definitely identified as members of the black-hooded mob that kidnaped Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards, E. N. Gray, a Klansman and one of the men mentioned in the sensational story, was called to the witness stand.

Attorney Genetral Coco, neither denying or affirming the reported indentification of the four men, called for the witness. George Seth Guion, assistant to the Attorney General, deploring the currency of the rumor, said that he would call Gray nevertheless.

Gray, the object of every eye in the Court House, appeared unconcerned as he took the stand. Nor did he wince when R. L. Todd, counsel for Dr. B. M. McKoin and Jeff Burnett, already under murder charges in connection with the Mer Rouge outrage, objected to Gray's being subpoenaed as a witness. Todd asserted that Gray, in view of the published reports directly connecting him with the crime, might incriminate himself. Judge Adom ruled that Todd, admittedly counsel for the Klan, had no right to object, but that Gray need not answer any questions relative to his whereabouts on the night of Aug. 24.

Saw Victims Kidnapped.

Gray, a man of nearly sixty years of age, according to the witness who preceded him, was not in attendance at a church service on the night of Aug. 24. Mr. Guion, who began the examination, indicated that he was thoroughly familiar with the career of Gray.

The witness testified that after he had attended the ball game in Bastrop on Aug. 24 he had sent his wife and others of his party home before the ball game was ended in a car driven by his nephew, Rufus Eubanks, and that Gray himself went to the home of a friend, Willie Eldridge, living on the outskirts of Bastrop, and not far from the scene of the kidnapping, there to wait for a car, which was to take him to the home of his friend, William Higginbotham. Tom Higginbotham, William Higginbotham's brother, was to call for him.

Gray testified that this was before the ball game was over. Guion tried to connect Gray's wait at the Eldridge house with the raid of the masked men, but the witness averred that he was not present at the kidnapping. He admitted, however, that he saw the black masked procession after it started toward Bastrop but asserted that he knew none of them.

He testified that he saw a car filled with hooded men preceding a Ford truck which was driven by a hooded man, and in the back of which, seated, were two men who were blindfolded. He said he could not identify these men as Richards and Daniels. There was a car following, containing other hooded men.

Asked as to why he sent his own car home so that he could spend the night with Willie Higginbotham, Gray said that Higginbotham had told him that he had received a threatening letter and wanted Gray to be with him. On the long ride to the Higginbotham home, five miles out of Mer Rouge, Gray said he passed cars but could not remember recognizing any one. He asserted that he remained outside the house when he reached the Higginbotham house and did not eat supper there or anywhere. He said that Higginbotham provided him with a gun, and an extra of cartridges and that they waited in the yard but his testimony was in no way clear as to why he awaited outside.

Leak Disturbs Attorney General.

Gray admitted that he was a Klansman, but Captain J. K. Skipwith was the only man he was able to identify as a fellow member. He said he was initiated into the Klan at a meeting held in the courthouse but he was unable to give the name of a single member or officer whom he met at this meeting or at other conferences. It was said that he would be recalled tomorrow morning.

With startling rumors abroad early this morning that it had become definitely known that the State was ready positively to connect four avowed Klansmen with the murders of Daniel and Richards. The Attorney General and his staff were plainly disappointed when the ope nhearing began. When it became known at noon that the report of the four indientifications had been published, Mr. Guion, thoroughly exasperated, said that if the leaks were not halted immediately the State's attorneys might as well drop the open hearing and go home.

Later, however, and after Gray had been on the stand for nearly two hours, Mr. Guion appeared to be more confident than at any time of the State's success.

Smith Stevenson, the first witness of the day, was on the stand all morning. His examination showed that the State was trying to bring out three definite points. These were:

That there were many Arkansas Klansmen in Bastrop on the date of the kidnapping of Daniels and Richards.

That the State was on the track of the movements on Aug. 24 of a motor truck owned by Stevenson.

That the State was anxious to know just how much Stevenson knew about the use of the dynamite and whether there was any large amount of dynamite stored near Bastrop.

Stevenson, appointed a Deputy City Marshal for Aug. 24, constantly evaded questions. Admitting that he was a Klansman, he said that he knew no others except Skipwith and "Jap" Jones. He said that he had let "Lucky" Evans have the truck to haul water and supposed that Evans returned the car on the night of Aug. 24. He was sure the car was in his front yard the next morning.

Saw Arkansas Klansmen at Bastrop.

Stevenson admitted that he saw some Arkansas klansmen at the Bastrop ball game on Aug. 24. He declared he had never used dynamite himself. He went by the Thomas hardware store on several occasions during the night of Aug. 24, but could not recollect the name of a single man he saw there, and, contradicting "Tap" Jones's testimony of yesterday, said he could not remember taking a message to Skipwith from those in the store.

G. W. Walker, a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, near Collinston, described how one night early last Summer a band of hooded men, among whom he recognized Dr. McKoin and "Pink" Kirkpatrick, had read a notice to the congregation, telling them that disorders would have to be abandoned.

Robert Lee Harkness, a resident of Collinston, who saw the hooded men who are believed to have taken the kidnapped men into Collinston, said he had an idea of the identity of one of the men, but he refused to reveal it.

Bastrop was thoroughly aroused when the afternoon session came to a close. With evidence leading and excitement mounting high, it was believed that the State would show its hand quickly and divulge all it has within the next forty-eight hours.

Marshal's Aid a Klansman.

Smith Stevenson, a Klan member and an employe of the Bastrop Pulp Mill, the first witness of the day, was examined by Senator Warren as follows:

Q.—Were you in Bastrop on Aug. 24, the day of the barbeque and ball games? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Were you acquainted with Watt Daniels? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know Richards? A.—I know him to see him; he was pointed out to me.

Q.—Who pointed him out to you? A.—J. D. Higbith, Richards and Kelly Harp. They seemed to be drunk.

Q.—Was there anything about Richards, his name or reputation, that gave you a peculiar interest in the man? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know J. L. Daniel? A.—Yes.

Q.—And W. C. Andrews and Tot Davenport? A.—I knew them when I saw them.

Q.—Where were you the day Richards was said to have been taken out of the garage by masked men? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—When did you hear of that occurrence? A.—When I got back to town that day, I guess.

Q.—On Aug. 24 what was your first knowledge of the kidnapping of these five men? A.—Mrs. Earl Andrews told me about it while I was in the street. She had come in from the direction of the Bastrop road.

Q.—You were assisting the Town Marshal that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see Earl Andrews come in ahead of her? A.—I think I did.

Q.—Earl Andrews didn't tell you about the kidnapping? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where did you go after the ball game? A.—I came uptown.

Q.—Do you recall any particular conversation with anybody besides Mrs. Andrews? A.—I do not.

Q.—There was a jam of automobiles here that day? A.—Yes, it was the biggest crowd I ever saw here.

Q.—Mrs. Andrews told you the kidnappers were a band of hooded men? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I went looking for Earl Andrews.

Q.—You knew W. C. Andrews was kidnapped? A.—Yes, Mrs. Andrews told me.

Q.—Did you see any of the hooded men in town after that? A.—I did not.

Q.—Could these hooded men have come through the town to get to the Monroe road? A.—They could have, but I did not see them.

Q.—Did you hear they passed out near the railroad? A.—I don't think I heard it that evening. I heard, though, they did go out that way.

Q.—Did you hear about the hooded crowd being seen at Collinston? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Did you take such a report to Thomas's hardware store? A.—I don't remember that I did.

Q.—When you heard there had been a kidnapping did you join in any effort to locate the kidnappers? A.—I did not.

Q.—Why not? A.—I can't say.

Paid No Heed to Kidnapping.

Q.—Did you feel like it was becoming of public officers like yourself to locate these kidnappers and protect those who might have been kidnapped. A.—I was only a special deputy. There was nothing I could do.

Q.—You heard that Watt Daniel and others had been kidnapped, that five of them had been taken away? A.—I remember that I heard that others had been kidnapper. I don't know when I heard it.

Q—.Did you know there was any ill feeling against these five persons? A.—I knew there had been talk against them.

Q.—What talk? I'd heard talk about Richards.

Q.—Did you know of any bitterness between these men and the Ku Klux Klan? A.—I didn't know.

Q.—You are a member of the Klan? A.—I am.

Q.—You heard that some of these men had been accused of shooting at Dr. McKoin? A.—Yes, I heard something.

Q.—Did you stop in Thomas's store the night of the kidnapping? A.—I passed there several times."

Q.—Who did you see? Who did you talk to? A.—I think I talked to "Jap" Jones. I don't remember the others.

Q.—Did you know the men there were armed? A.—I don't know. I think I saw some guns.

Q.—Did you see these men around this store with loaded guns beside them? A.—I think I saw guns there.

Q.—Were you invited to stay there and help out in case of trouble? A.—I was not.

Q.—Why did you go out to get Captain Skipwith? A.—I was asked about Skipwith.

Q.—Did you go out and get him? A.—I can't be positive. I think I did.

Q.—You don't know whether you got Skipwith? You can't be positive? A.—No, not positive. I think I did.

Q.—Why do you think you did? A.—I don't know. I have a faint recollection.

Q.—Did "Jap" Jones ask you about Skipwith, tell you that he would like to see you? A.—That's my faint recollection.

Q.—Do you know whether Skipwith came? A.—I think he did.

Q.—How long did you stay there? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you stay ten minutes, thirty minutes? A.—I don't know.

Witness Loses His Memory.

If Stevenson ever had a memory he apparently had completely lost it. He answered nearly every question with "I don't know." He said he had heard that whisky was to be brought into town and he went to a dance hall looking for a bootleggers but he could not remember where he was at any particular hour of the night, or who he saw. His examination proceeded as follows:

Q.—Did you see Thomas, Jim Harp and Will Loney at the Thomas store that night? A.—I can't say.

Q.—What did you suppose those men were sitting around there for till midnight? A.—I did not know.

Q.—What did you suppose they sent for Skipwith for? A.—I did not know what they wanted with him.

Q.—Was there any talk about the Klan or the suspicion that the Klan had been mixed up in the kidnapping? A.—I did not hear anything.

Q.—Wouldn't you regard it as unusual for a hardware store to be open and crowded with men, armed, until midnight? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Do you know the license number of your motor car? A.—I do not.

Q.—How long have you had the car? A.—Well, I don't think I'd had it over thirty days.

Q.—Did you see the car on Aug. 24? A.—Yes, the car was used. I let a fellow named "Lucky" Evans use it to haul some water.

Q.—Was the truck back when you got home that night? A.—I think it was.

Q.—Do you know it was? A.—Well, I suppose it was. It was there the next morning.

Q.—But you are not sure it was there when you got home the night before? A.—No, but I just suppose it was there.

Q.—Are you positive you saw Mr. Skipwith in Bastroy the night of the kidnapping? A.—I saw him around the street.

Q.—At what time; was it as late as 9 o'clock? A.—I have no idea.

Q.—Would you like to see the men who murdered Daniel and Richards brought to justice, regardless of whether they are Klansmen, Masons, Pythians or what not? A.—Yes, sir.

Witness Also a Mason.

Q.—Are you a Mason? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—There is nothing in Masonry to keep you from assisting the State in finding the men who committed the crimes? You know as a Mason that you can answer "yes" to that question? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see Watt Daniel at the ball game Aug. 24? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you see any one point out Watt Daniel that day? A.—I did not see any one point out Daniel.

Q.—I ask you the same question in regard to J. L. Daniel and T. F. Richards. Did you see any one point them out? A.—No, sir.

Q.—On your honor as a man? A.—I saw no one point them out.

Q.—Is there anything in your Klan oath to keep you from telling us all you know about this affair? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you know Will Carron of Oak Ridge? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know H. E. Blankenship? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know Will Laney of Crossett, Ark.? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you spend Christmas with your relations in Crossett, Ark.? Yes.

Q.—Did you see Will Laney there? A.—I don't think I did.

Q.—Did you see him at the baseball game in Bastrop on Aug. 24? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Were there many people from Arkansas at that game? A.—I don't know. I saw some people from Arkansas.

Q.—Have you ever talked to Will Laney or got letters from Will Laney about this kidnapping? A.—No.

Q.—Who told you that Watt Daniel was peddling liquor? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Are you a pretty good friend of Dr. McKoin? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You heard about the attempt on his life? A.—Yes.

Q.—As a good Klansman did you try to find out who tried to murder him. A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever ask the doctor who tried to murder him? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever make any effort to find out who kidnapped Daniel and Richards? A.—No, sir.

Q.—There was talk and excitement all over this town about that kidnapping, wasn't there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Weren't people everywhere blaming it on the Ku Klux? A.—Yes.

Q.—As a good Klansman did you regard it your duty to help other officers in ferfeting out this crime? A.—I don't understand your question.

Q.—You'll admit there was a kidnapping? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You know that two men were spirited away and that it is a lead pipe cinch they've never been seen since, don't you? A.—Yes.

The witness admitted that he was afraid a stigma might be placed on his name as the result of the kidnapping and that the Klan was generally planned for the disappearance of Daniel and Richards, but his mind was a blank as to what occurred in Thomas's hardware store and he insisted he had heard no discussion of the possibility of a raid on Bastrop by mer Rouge citizens, who were incensed against the Klan. The examination then began on a new angle as follows:

Klansman Asked About Dynamite.

Q.—In your experience in railroad work did you become familiar with the use of dynamite? A.—I've seen it used a whole lot.

Q.—You never set it off yourself? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know anybody around here who carries a supply of dynamite? A.—I do not.

Q.—Have you been to Lake La Fourche since the bodies were found? A.—No.

Q.—Where were you the night before the explosion? A.—I was at home, I think.

Q.—Have you no definite recollection? A.—No.

Q.—Were you running a repair shop before Christmas about the time of the explosion? A.—Yes, a blacksmith shop.

Q.—Did you miss any tools just before the explosion? A.—I don't know, the boys in the shop could tell. I guess.

Q.—Who did you take over the shop from? A.—Jim Day.

Q.—Did Day complain of missing any tools? A.—I believe he said he had missed a rip saw.

Q.—Have any hacksaws been missed from your shop? A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—Did you see Skipwith before you came in here this morning? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you discuss this case with him. A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where were you initiated in the klan? A.—Down on the road toward Mer Rouge.

Q.—Did you attend a klan meeting in the country? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Where was your klan regalia on the night of Aug. 24? A.—I've never owned any regalia.

Q.—How many klan meetings have you attended? A.—Several. I was at one held on the road to Monroe.

Q.—Who did you see there? A.—Lots of people.

Q.—Name one. A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Who was your presiding officer? A.—I don't know, he had a robe on.

Q.—Do you realize the only two things you conspicuously remember are that you saw Richards once when he was intoxicated and that you didn't see any hooded men in Bastrop on the night of Aug. 24?

The witness said he could not understand the question. It was read to him twice by the stenographer but he still insisted that he could not understand it. Judge Coco asked him if he understood the meaning of the word "conspicuous." He said he did not and was dismissed.

Saw Daniel on Truck.

Robert Lee Harkness, a witness yesterday, was recalled to the stand and efforts were made to get him to identify some of the hooded and masked men to whom he sold gasoline for a car and truck at Collinston on the night of the Kidnaping. He declared he saw Daniel on the truck. It was evident that he could name some of the masked band but that he feared to do so, and all attempts to draw out what he really knew were futile. He was examined as follows:

Q.—What time did the masked men come up? A.—About 8 or 9 o'clock.

Q.—What did they do? A.—Stopped and got gasoline.

Q.—How many cars? A.—One was a Ford and one a touring car.

Q.—How many men? A.—Two in the truck, may be three, and four or five in the touring car.

Q.—You say a man in the rear of the truck? A.—Yes, blindfolded and sitting there.

Q.—Was anything said to indicate it was Watt Daniel? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did the masked men get out of the cars? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What did you do for the men? A.—Got them a pail of water and all of them drank.

Q.—Were you close to them when they drank? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you know any of the masked men? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see a torn mask on one man? A.—Yes, he was the one that bought a bottle of beer.

Q.—You did not recognize any voices? A.—No, sir. One man spoke to m eand said they had been on the road all day and wanted som ewater.

Q.—Were they there when "Tot" Davenport came in the store? A.—I think so.

Q.—You say one of the men on the truck was Watt Daniel? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Your recollection is that there were four or five men in the touring car and one or two hooded men in the truck? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Any of them armed? A.—A man on the truck had what looked to be a pistol.

Q.—What road did they take? A.—The Mer Rouge road.

Q.—How far is that from Bastrop? A.—About five miles.

Q.—If you knew any of those men would you tell us? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did any one in that crowd resemble any one you know? A.—Maybe, but I am not sure.

Q.—Did you have any suspicions that they may have been some one you knew? A.—I am not sure.

Q.—But you did have an idea as to the identity of two or three? A.—I wouldn't swear to it.

Q.—Will you tell the Court? A.—I wouldn't like to.

Q.—Why? A.—Because I am not certain who they were.

Q.—But in your heart you are satisfied as to their identity? A.—I am not sure about that.

Q.—Has any one since then asked you if you identified any one in the cars? A.—No one but a Government agent.

Q.—You mentioned names to him? A.—I told him my own thoughts.

Witness Hides Names of Kidnappers.

The Government agent to whom Harkness referred was Mr. Guion, the Assistant Attorney General. Mr. Guion himself tried to ascertain the names. The witness evidently was keeping back in the following examination:

Q.—You did give me thename of a person whom you thought might have been one of the masked men. Now, if another witness should testify as to the name of the man would you be willing to testify as to your belief in his identity? A.—No, sir, I wouldn't.

Q.—Don't you remember making a statement in the butcher shop at Collinston that you recognized the man? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Didn't you make that statement and some one there told you to keep your mouth shut? A.—I don't remember making such a remark.

Q.—Are you afraid to mention the name of the man you thought it was? A.—No, I don't think I ought to.

Q.—Because you just think you know the name? A.—I don't think I know it now.

Q.—When did you quit thinking that you knew the man? A.—About a month ago.

Q.—You have reached the conclusion you were mistaken? A.—I don't think he was the man.

Q.—Did somebody make you think you were wrong? A.—I just don't think he was the man.

Q.—You want to see the murderers of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards brought to justice? A.—I do.

Q.—You intend to live here always? A.—No, sir, I don't.

Tells of Klan Descent on Church.

C. W. Walker, the next witness, a member of the Fellowship Church, Missionary Baptist, described a visit made to the church by masked men several months before August last. There were four, and they wore black hoods. The witness thought he recognized two of them as Dr. McKoin and W. D. Kirkpatrick. Kirkpatrick had guns.

The examination went on as follows:

Q.—What was done? A.—Something was said about a third warning and what might happen the next time.

Q.—What was the warning about? A.—It was some trouble about public worship in the church I thought they had reference to. They didn't mention any names.

Q.—Dod you recognize the other masked men? A.—No. They were near the door and I did not have time to see them.

Q.—You did not recognize any masked men on the outside? A.—I saw only the four who came in.

Q.—Did Dr. McKoin or Kirkpatrick belong to your church? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Was McKoin your family physician? A.—He was.

Q.—Are you friends now? A.—We are. That is, there's no feeling but of good between us, but if McKoin is implicated in things charged against him, that may make a difference.

Q.—Have you ver had any difference with him? A.—A little quarrel once over a barn that he was to rent to me.

How long ago? A.—Last September.

Q.—You have been on speaking terms with him? A.—Oh, yes; we are good friends.

Q.—Did the men entering the church say what they represented? A.—I believe the warning read was signed by "The Vigilance Committee."

Q.—Was it left behind? A.—No, he read it and took it away. It was typewritten, I believe.

Q.—That was in May or June, on the fourth Sunday night in May or June? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Who are some of the other members of your church? A.—Clarence Ford, "Ed" Braddock, Jack Hayden and Jessee Carpenter

Q.—Was E. N. Gray in church the night of Aug. 24? A.—He was not.

Q.—Gray is a deacon in your church? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did any of th ladies recognize the masked men? A.—Yes.

Q.—Name some of the ladies. A.—I'd rather not.

Q.—When did you first hear of the kidnapping of Aug. 24? A.—At church that night.

Q.—About what time? A.—About 7 P. M.

Q.—Who brought the word. A.—Rufus Eubanks, I think.

Jack Hayden wore a deep grin, as if highly amused, when he was called to the stand. Throughout his examination the grin never left his face. He was asked about the masked band's descent on the church.

Q.—How many men did you see? A.—Three.

Q.—What color were their robes and hoods? A.—Black.

Q.—What did they do? A.—One took out a paper and read for about fifteen minutes.

Q.—What did he read? A.—He read about a disturbance in the church.

Q.—What was that? A.—A fight they had off from the church.

Q.—Who read the warning in the church? A.—I took him to be Dr. McKoin.

Q.—Who was the man with the guns? A.—Kirkpatrick, I think.

Edward Morris testified that on the evening of Aug. 24 he saw a truck with men in the rear and men wearing black masks drive up to a filling station at Collinston and buy gasoline. He also saw a touring car with masked men in it. The touring car was old but the truck was new. He did not recognize any of the men.

Gray Called to Stand.

The next witness was Gray, the witness whose appearance created the sensation of the day. After saying that he had had resigned as deacon of the Fellowship Church seven years ago and corroborating Walker and Hayden as to the visit from the masked band, save that he insisted that he was unable to recognize any of its members, although in conversation with others he heard mentioned as being the masked men Dr. McKoin, Kirkpatrick, Sam Walton, George Sims and others. Tthe witness was asked where he was on Aug. 24.

R. L. Todd, attorney for Dr. McKoin and "Jeff" Burnett, objected to the question, asserting that Gray had been mentioned in the newspapers as one who would be charged with murder in connection with the killing of Daniel and Richards.

Judge Odom told the attorney that he had no right to object unless Gray was giving damaging testimony against himself. Mr. Todd objected to Mr. Gray giving any testimony as to his whereabouts on Aug. 24. The examination then proceeded as follows:

Q.—What time did you come to Bastrop that day (Aug. 24)? A.—That morning.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—My wife, her sister and Walter Butler and the Rev. L. M. Holmes.

Q.—Did you attend the barbecue? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you spend the afternoon? A.—Just about the time the game started my wife wanted to go home, so I went down to see the other folks, who were at the ball game and I carried them home and came back.

Q.—Who did you carry home? A.—My wife and her sitser, Mrs. Eubanks, and the Rev. L. M. Holmes.

Q.—Which way did you go home? A.—Over the gravel road, east, toward Mer Rouge.

Q.—Then you did go on the Bastrop- Mer Rouge road? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you go immediately to your home? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Who came back to Bastrop with you? A.—I came alone.

Q.—What kind of a car were you driving? A.—Ocerland.

Q.—What time did you get in Bastrop? A.—I would guess 4:15 or 4:30.

Q.—Did you see any masked or hooded men on the road? A.—No.

Q.—Did you speak to any one coming from your home to Bastrop? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where did you park your car in town? A.—On the south side of the square.

Q.—And then you waited for your crowd to come from the ball game? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have a conversation with some oil well men? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How were they dressed? A.—One as a laborer, one as a well-dressed man.

Q.—Know their names? A.—No, sir.

Q.—How long did you talk to them? A.—I don't recall.

Q.—Did they seem interested in a certain section of land? A.—Yes, and we talked about it.

Q.—Who? A.—The two men, myself, "Jap" Jones and Willie Higginbotham.

Q.—Well, what did you say to Mr. Higginbotham about going home with him? A.—I said I would if I could get somebody else to take my car home, as I had people with me.

Q.—Who did you have in your party? A.—Walter Butler, Addie May Eubanks and Erma Murdock.

Q.—Were there other members of the Eubanks family in Bastroop? A.—Yes, Rufus Eubanks, my nephew.

Friend Got Threatening Letter.

Q.—Why did Higginbotham want you to go home with him? A.—He had received a threatening letter and was afraid.

Q.—Did he fear trouble on the road? A.—There or at home.

Q.—You went to Willie Higginbotham's that night? A.—Yes.

Q.—How far is his house from yours? A.—About three and a half miles.

Q.—Who are some of his neighbors? Q.—Dave Michie and J. B. Courtland.

Q.—When did Higginbotham tell you he had received a threatening letter? A.—That morning.

Q.—When had he received it? A.—In the mail, that morning.

Q.—What did he say were the contents of the letter? A.—He said he had gotten a very threatening letter, h ehad gotten two, but the first was not so severe.

Q.—What was the nature of the threats? A.—He had been warned to leave; to get out of the country; it read that he might expect trouble soon.

Q.—Jasper Jones is the only one that you knowof that Higginbotham told about this letter? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—He really expected that if any trouble came it would come to him at his home, not on the road? A.—I think so.

Q.—Can you give me the names of the persons to whim you referred those two oil men who asked about land owners? A.—L. L. Davis, Judge Madison, John Jones, "Bill" Bevy and others.

Q.—Did you ever see the oil men again? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You can't remember the names and you can't say whether they visited the owners of the land? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did Higginbotham indicate whom he suspected of writing the notes? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did he call any names? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Hod he done anything to aouse the indignation of others? A.—Not that I know about.

Q.—How large are his children? A.—The oldest daughter is about grown, I think. He has three other children.

Saw Masked Men iWth Prisoner.

Gray testified that Rufus Eubanks, his nephew, took his car and his family home. Gray rode with them to the fork of the Cooper Lake Road, leading to Mer Rouge. Then he went to the home of Mr. Eldridge where he found a Mr. Griffith, who works in the pulp mill. When Tom Higginbothaw came along Gray joined him and they went to Willie Higginbotham's house, where he stayed until 11 or 12 o'clock. He did not go in the house, but stayed outside and watched while the others ate supper.

Hiss tatement continued as follows:

Q.—Where did you stay? A.—Well, we parked the car under some pecan trees. Sometimes we sat in it and at other times we walked around.

Q.—Did Tom Higginbotham go into his house for a gun? A.—I think Tom had a gun, but I never did see. Willie Higginbotham went into his house and got a gun and gave me one after I got there.

Q.—What kind of a gun did he give you? A.—A large pearl-handled six-shooter.

Q.—Was there some traveling on the road—any disturbance? A.—There was some traveling but no disturbance.

Q.—No one attempted to turn into the yard? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Were those the only two men whom you saf that evening? A.—Well, we passed four or five cars on the road.

Q.—Do you remember an yof those you passed? A.—I took one of them for one of the Andrews. He was going from Mer Rouge. It was Earl Andrews.

Q.—Did you see any masked men? A.—Yes, I saw several of them.

Q.—How many cars were there with masked men? A.—Threeor four.

Q.—Did you know any of the men? A.—No.

Q.—Did any of them seem to be prisoners? A.—Yes, I saw two in a Ford truck; they were in the back. They were blindfolded with handkerchiefs.

Q.—How many hooded men in the truck? A.—Two men in black masks were on the front seat. There were others in the back of the truck besides the blindfolded men.

Q.—Did the truck lead the procession? A.—No, I think there was a car ahead of it.

Q.—And cars behind it? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was said? A.—Higginbotham asked me what it meant. We did not know what it meant.

Q.—Did you know Watt Daniel? A.—I've seen him a few times. I could figure him out, I think.

Q.—Haven't you seen Watt Daniel often in the last two years? A.—I don't think so. I recognized him when I saw him.

Q.—Didn't you know T. F. Richards? A.—I did not.

Q.—Didn't you recognize Watt as he passed on that truck? A.—No.

Q.—You didn't recognize either of those blindfolded men? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Are you a member of the Ku Klux Klan? A.—I am.

Q.—Where were you initiated? A.—Here in the courthouse.

Q.—Who was in the building at that time? A.—I don't believe I remember.

Q.—Was Skipwith, Grand Cyclops, present? A.—Yes.

Q.—Can't you remember other officers, the Secretary, or any of them? A.—No.

Q.—What other meetings of the Klan have you attended? A.—Just one, the public parade in Monroe.

Q.—Do you know who your fellow-members are? A.—No, sir I never attended any meetings and eventually I declared myself out.

ADDITIONAL TROOPS SENT TO MER ROUGE; BODIES RECOVERED

Montgomery Advertiser 12/23/22

Find Made Following Dynamiting of Lake by Unidentified Men

DISCUSS MARTIAL LAW

Resistance Is Anticipated When Attempt Is Made to Effect Arrests

(Associated Press.)

MER ROUGE, LA., Dec. 22.—Bodies of two men blown from the bottom of Lake Lafourche early today by unidentified dynamiters were lying at an undertaking establishment here tonight while military men stood guard pending the arrival of additional troops from Alexandria and New Orleans, ordered here today by the adjutant general.

The bodies badly mutiliated and bound by wire are believed by the authorities to be those of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards, members of a party of five prominent Mer Rouge citizens who were kidnaped last Auguse by white robed and hooded men and who have been missing since and the object of three days of raking of the lakes of Morehouse parish by national guardsmen, federal agents and professional divers.

Authorities here state they are satisfied the bodies were the ones sought. Relatives and close friends of the missing men viewed the bodies during the day and tonight and it was reported bits of clothing found on the men were recognized.

The coronor announced tonight an inquest would be held over the bodies, probably tomorrow. The arrival of the attorney general of the state and two prominent pathologists of New Orleans is awaited.

It was not known tonight whether the inquest would be held here or at Bastrop, the parish seat.

In the absence of official information, the next move on the part of the state was not known here but it was the concensus of opinion the inquest would be followed by the arrest of at least twenty persons, alleged ring leaders of the August mob. The names of these men will be presented the military or civil authorities by the four department of justice agents who for four months have been conducting secret investigations it was stated here.

Mer Rouge citizens expressed themselves tonight as believing martial law would be declared here and the arrests made by troops.

Everything was quiet and peaceful on the surface here tonight but those informed are authorities for statements that there is an underlying feeling of bitterness.

With the arrival of additional state troops tomorrow the military strength in the parish will be more than two hundred men. The troops have a large complement of machine guns.

It is generally believed open hearings will be instituted following the anticipated arrests. All persons will be free to come into this court of justice, under the Louisiana laws, and tell what they know of the case.

Prominent persons in Mississippi and Arkansas as well as Louisiana are believed by the state as having been members of the hooded mob. Arrests in all three states are anticipated.

A bunch of keys and a hack-saw used to cut the chain that held the ferry at eastern landing was found on the banks of the lake near where the explosion occurred. Department of justice men declared tonight these will prove valuable clues in tracing the identity of the men blasting in the lake last night.

Government agents declared not less than a thousand pounds of dynamite was used by the mysterious visitors. The explosion was declared to have been terrific and houses in the nearby vicinity was rocked by the concussion. A large part of the bank was blown away.

The evident purpose was to cover up the bodies at the bottom of the lake as that point the depth of the lake is sixty feet, agents said, but instead the jar released the bodies from the weights to which they were attached and permitted them to rise to the surface.

The bodies were late today placed by the coronor of Morehouse county in the hands of A. E. Farland, chief investigator of the Department of Justice and brought here tonight under military guard to await the arrival of a pathologist from New Orleans enroute here who will determine whether the men were killed before being bound and thrown into the water or whether they were thrown in alive and drowned.

The coronor announced an inquest would be held here. Fifty additional members of the Monroe National Guard ordered out this morning to reinforce the troops now here marched into this town tonight.

The order for the mobilization of the Alexandria company followed closely on the heels of the establishment of the authenticity of the report that Lake La Flourche had given up the bodies, after having been dynamited by men of unestablished identity.

Governor Parker, in the state house at Baton Rouge, directing operatings of the military forces, refused to divulge the significance of the call for reinforcements or the next move of the state in the program he has outlined to ferret out and punish the members of the hooded mob responsible for the abduction of five prominent Mer Rouge citizens last August and the alleged murder of two of them.

The governor in his executive office, the attorney general at New Orleans and Captain Cooper, in charge of military operations, at Oak Grove, were reported to have been in frequent conversation over the telephone today but not an inkling of the dicisions reached was allowed to be made public.

Martial law was considered tonight by those in touch with the situation as a possibility over an area in Morehouse Parish. Large stocks of guns and ammunition has been reported stored in residences by citizens of Mer Rouge and the surrounding community resulting from the reported establishing of hostile camps during the four months since the kidnapping.

Some resistence is expected when the state's warrants calling for arrest of a number of men believed to have been the ringleaders of the hooded men are served, it was indicated here. The presence of an additional body of state troops was believed will serve as a precaution against a probable outbreak.

Special investigators of the Department of Justice working under the direction of the governor are said to have a partial list of members of the hooded band. Many names were secured several months ago when the investigators reported an attempt was made during the night by a group of men to reach a spot on La Fourche Lake guarded as the probable resting place of the bodies.

The opinion is advanced these same men returned in the dead hours of last night and placed the charges of dynamite that wrecked a part of the bank near the eastern ferry landing and released the decapitated, wire-bound bodies from the weight that for four months had held them snugly to the bottom of the lake. Divers spent the afternoon seeking to locate the rusty wagon wheels that were missing from the banks of the lake simultaneously with the disappearance of the men, the only missing link in the chain of evidence the investigators had submitted to the governor as their solution of the mystery.

While LaFourche was being blasted, what was believed as a decoy of eight or ten men were active in Lake Cooper, 20 miles away, drawing the fire of the state guards and bringing the entire military company from Mer Rouge to the banks of the lake.

The military captain announced the investigattors were not responsible for the blasting last night and a search is under way to identify those responsible.

With diving operations concentrated chiefly on the ferry landing where a chart indicated the bodies of the missing men most likely were hidden, it was declared the guilty men feared the bodies would be eventually located and decided to recover them and remove them to another burial place in the interior. The dynamiters evidently became frightened or failed to find their quarry and ran away, the story goes. A ferryman who heard the blasts, reported the finding this morning.

The bodies were viewed by many during the afternoon including J. L. Daniels, 70, one of the victims of the masked men and father of Watt Daniels, whose body is believed to be one of the two found. Positive identification of the bodies was lacking this afternoon but investigators declared they were satisfied the bodies found were those sought.

The state, several weeks ago decided to establish a court of justice somewhere in Morehouse to hear testimony of those who were believed to be in a position to identify the guilty and the recovery of the bodies is heralded as the signal for the opening of the hearing under protection of troops.

Governor Parker has charged that hooded men from Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana were responsible for the outrages

THE KU KLUX KLAN IN LOUISIANA.

New York Times 12-25-22

Whether the Ku Klux Klan of the Louisiana-Arkansas border was responsible for the murder of F. W. DANIELS and T. F. RICHARDS of Mer Rouge in the end of August may soon be determined in the courts of Louisiana, which would seem to have sole jurisdiction. The Department of Justice could give Governor PARKER no encouragement when he went to Washington recently to obtain the aid of the Federal Government in his campaign against the Klan in Louisiana. Only the question of jurisdiction could be considered, and on no statement of facts laid before the department did the Attorney General find any ground for intervention. But he promised vigorous prosecutions in case it could be shown that any Federal law had been violated by the Klan. Four detectives from the Bureau of Investigation were put at the Governor's disposal. Their first task was to find the bodies of the missing men. No one doubted that they had been murdered. It was already known that DANIELS, RICHARDS, the father of DANIELS, who was a war veteran, and two other men were taken in broad daylight, and in the presence of many people, from an automobile on Aug. 24 by "masked men in the "white-hooded regalia of the Ku Klux "Klan," and that DANIELS senior and another of the men seized were carried into the woods and savagely beaten, the abductors afterward driving off with young DANIELS and RICHARDS, who were never afterward seen.

In the neighborhood the Federal investigators found clues enough indicating that the missing men were victims of the Klan. There was much local feeling against that secret organization, especially at the little village of Mer Rouge, where the missing men had lived. Bastrop, the county seat of Morehouse Parish, was largely pro-Klan, a fact that embarrassed the work of the detectives. No real progress in the case could be made until the bodies were found. It was the systematic dredging of Cooper Lake that provoked an undertaking by those interested in concealing the crime that may lead to their undoing. If the investigators should be foiled in their efforts to recover the bodies the murderers would be safe. It had been decided that Lake La Fourche as well as Cooper Lake would be dredged. On the night that nothing was being brought up from the bottom of Cooper Lake there was a tremendous explosion of dynamite at La Fourche, twenty miles away. Two torsos rose to the surface. One of them has been identified, by a belt attached to it, as that of DANIELS. The vigilance of guards prevented the removal of these ghastly relics of murder.

As soon as the discovery was reported to Governor PARKER at Baton Rouge he realized that he would have desperate men to deal with. Accordingly, he ordered reinforcements of the State troops to Morehouse [illegible], a machine gun company and [illegible]pany of militia. The Attorney [illegible]eral, his assistant and two physi[illegible]s to hold an autopsy accompanied [illegible]e troops. Trained in the school of [illegible]OOSEVELT, who was a personal friend, Governor PARKER does not believe in half measures when it may be a question of dealing with grave disorders. In Morehouse Parish there is a feud between the Klan and those who hold out against it and combat it. By occupying Bastrop and Mer Rouge [illegible] a large body of troops the danger [illegible] conflict should be averted. When [illegible] Governor was in Washington he [illegible]timated that the Ku Klux Klan had become a menace to the State Government. So there are two issues to be settled in Morehouse Parish, of which the greater is whether the State's authority is supreme.

FORMER MAYOR OF MER ROUGE ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH DEATH OF 2 MEN KIDNAPPED BY ROBED MOB LAST AUGUST

Montgomery Advertiser

Murder Is Charged to Dr. B. M. McKoin Taken Into Custody at Johns Hopkins Yesterday; Declares Victims Belonged to "Bad" Element

12-27-22

(Associated Press)

BALTIMORE, Dec. 26.—Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge, La., who is wanted by the department of justice agents of that place in connection with the Morehouse parish kidnappings and the finding of two mutilated bodies in Lake LaFourche was arrest' here today at the Johns Hopkins [illegible] "sity-Brady Institute, where he [illegible] ng a post graduate course. Th[illegible] st followed receipt of a tele-gr[illegible] om Governor Parker of Louis-i[illegible] equesting the police to arrest [illegible]n on a charge of murder. After [illegible]ioning by police officials, Dr. [illegible]koin was locked up to await further [illegible]ion by Louisiana authorities.

Other than requesting the arrest of McKoin, there was nothing contained in Gov. Parker's telegram. It read:

"Important. Arrest Dr. McKoin for murder. Hold him for Louisiana authorities."

Dr. McKoin denied knowledge of the killing of the two men. "All I know," he declared, "is that both men who were killed were on the bad side—the side of bootleggers, gunmen and men who associated with women.

The discovery of Dr. McKoin here and his arrest came about by accident. Word was received here several days ago that Dr. McKoin was a student at Johns Hopkins, and department of justice agents sought to question him. However, university officials denied McKoin was registered as a post-graduate and stated several letters had been received there for him, but, unable to locate him, the letters were turned over to the postoffice as "unknown."

Early today a policeman was found on the water front unconscious. He was removed to a hospital. When the hospital report reached police headquarters, it was signed by Dr. McKoin. It was then that newspapermen went to the hospital and interviewed him. At that time, the telegram from Governor Parker asking for his arrest had not been received. Dr. McKoin spoke freely and insisted he was not a fugitive and that he had made no attempt to conceal his identity.

He stated that he has been in Baltimore since October 1, and had left Mer Rouge after an attempt had been made to assassinate him.

Dr. McKoin insisted he was not a member of the Ku Klux Klan. He praised the organization, however, saying "the members did much to hold down bootlegging and immorality while I was mayor of Mer Rouge." He also stated that lawlessness is a common occurrance at Mer Rouge and that he was among those who started to clean up the place. The result, he said, was a hard battle with bootleggers, moonshiners and men of bad repute.

"Just before I left Mer Rouge, a boy of a good family was shot in the back. What did the sheriff and governor do? The case was dismissed after a jury filled with bootleggers and the vicious element declared the alleged murderer innocent.

"Now, however, when a bootlegger and some one else is killed, the governor joins in the investigation. This affair, in my opinion, will decide whether the decent and good element of the town will control."

Dr. McKoin stated he had received threatening letters a long time before he left Mer Rouge and asked the sheriff to investigate, without success. "Just as I left the mayorship, and the successful candidate went into office," he continued, "gangs that paraded the streets fired shots around my house. I asked the sheriff to take matters in hand but nothing was done."

BASTROP, LA., Dec. 26.—The second arrest in connection with the Morehouse kidnapping of last August occurred late today when Dr. B. M. McKoin, until a few months ago mayor of Mer Rouge, was taken in custody at Baltimore at the instructions of Governor Parker who charged him with murder. The physician was taking a post graduate course at Johns Hopkins.

The former mayor is expected to reach here within a few days to join a former deputy sheriff who is now being held on a similar charge in the Bastrop jail.

While the arrest was being made, a detachment of national guard was reconnoitering along Lake Lafourche, for evidence to lead to the arerst of dynamiters responsible for the blasting at a ferry landing last week when the bodies of two men, believed to have been tortured and murdered by masked and robed men, were blown from the bottom of the lake.

The company was also to act as a body guard for the sheriff, who was to make arrests in the event his suspicions justified them.

During the day Adjutant General Toombs, suddenly called back from Washington by the governor, arrived in Morehouse to direct the operations of the three companies of state troops encamped here and at Mer Rouge.

It was persistently reported during the day that all preparations had been made to call out two additional state companies if conditions warranted.

Soldiers are on guard duty at the jail here and encamped in the heart of Mer Rouge, where the situation is such that the governor does not want to let the townspeople to themselves in the fear that there will be bloodshed because of the friction among them following the August event. Many of the populace are armed.

The military was also at the disposal of the civil authorities to take in custody many members of the hooded mob whose identity are known to the state, according to department of justice men.

Attorney General Coco yesterday announced that at least six or seven more arrests would be made before the open hearing in connection with the case which has been set for January 5th here.

It is reported the number of arrests will be increased in the event the identities of the dynamiters are established. Federal agents declare they have the name of the ring leader and his arrest is imminent.

Attorney General Coco was expected to arrive at New Orleans tomorrow in preparation for the conference there Thursday at which time plans for the hearing will be outlined and the report of the coroner's jury that conducted the inquest over the headless bodies of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards will be discussed.

Citizens were gathering on the street corners tonight, discussing the arrest of two of their former law officials. The arrest of the man who had been their mayor until he resigned last August came as a complete surprise. Dr. McKoin was born and grew to manhood at Monroe and later moved to Mer Rouge where he was a practicing physician. His friends induced him to make the face for mayor and during his incumbercy he fearlessly upheld the law and attempted to rid the community of moonshiners and other law breakers, it was said.

On August 2 he reported assassins fired two loads of shot into his moving automobile as he was answering a sick call. He later received persistent warnings to leave the community and he did so. This event led to the tragedy of the 24th, in the theory of the state.

T. J. Burnett, arrested last Saturday, is denied visitors except under military surveillance. Today he grew sullen and restless and repeatedly gripped the iron bars in which he is enclosed. His battery of attorneys spent several hours with him.

It was recalled here tonight that four murders have been charged to hooded men since last May along the Arkansas-Louisiana border.

At Wilmot, Arkansas, E. L. Gills, a farmer, was lured from his home and shot to death and his body burned. Following his death the Louisiana-Arkansas Law and Order league was formed to secure evidence in the case but no arrests were made. The league was said to have been made up of 5,000 citizens of the two states and recently disbanded.

The kidnaping of five prominent Mer Rouge citizens on a highway last August is believed to have resulted in the death of Daniels and Richards. Two others were severely flogged, and J. L. Daniels, 70-year-old father of Watt Daniels, was at the point of death for several weeks because of the cruelties inflicted upon him.

The Smackover invasion, the third event of the year, occurred last month and resulted in the death of J. G. Woods, 25, a Mississippian. He was riddled with shot after he had fired on a party of several hundred masked and white "sheeted" men who marched into the new oil field of South Arkansas to clean out the undesirables. One man was flogged and a gambling house, a two-story frame structure, torn down. An exodus of more than 2,000 people from this region resulted. Officials made no effort to learn the identity of the mob as far as known.

HYLAN PRAISES PARKER FOR FIGHT ON KLAN

New York Times

Mayor Wires Governor of Louisiana Calling Organization "Venomous Reptiles."

12-24-22

A telegram to Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana, commending him for his fight against the Ku Klux Klan was sent to him yesterday by Mayor Hylan. The Mayor referred to the discovery of the bodies of two supposed Klan victims in Lake La Fourche and characterized the Klan as "a slimy brood of venomous reptiles." The telegram follows:

"Hon John M. Parker, Governor of Lousiana,

"Baton Rouge, La.

"On behalf of the people of the City of New York and every other man and woman in this American Republic who are determined that law and order shall be maintained by the duly constituted authorities without interference on the part of a slimy brood of venomous reptiles, squirming in an invisible empire, I most heartily congratulate you on your bold, vigorous fight against the Ku Klux Klan organization.

"The newspapers this morning tell of the discovery in Lake La Fourche of the mutilated bodies of a World War veteran and of a law-abiding citizen, known to have been marked men by the Ku Klux Klan, who were dragged from their homes four months ago by a murderous gang of masked and hooded night riders and done away with without moral right or legal authority. Thus it would appear that murder, barbarous and cruel, is one of the objects of this organization, which has always been a liability to our nation, and whose professions of brotherly love hark back to the days of Cain and Abel.

"Can the Ku Klux Klan assert that the wearing of masks by its members is for the purpose of concealing virtuous intentions or honorable motives? Are they not actuated by the same motives as the common highwayman who hides his face and prowls in ambush that he may take life and property and through concealment escape possible detection? If not, why does the Ku Klux Klan n[illegible] operate in the full light of God's sunshine before the eyes of the world? The answer has come to us from the b[illegible]n of Lake La Fourche.

"I believe that every man and regardless of race, creed or c[illegible] you an undying debt of gra[illegible] your heroic American fight to infamous outrages to which the [illegible]en of the Ku Klux Klan will resort in nefarious schemes to overawe the courts, seize the reins of government and trample upon the constitutional rights of the people.

"Fair-minded Americans acknowledge that there are good and bad in all races and all religious denominations. The thing to do is to get the good people, regardless of race, color or creed, to work together for the peace unity and good-will and the honor and safety of the most beneficent form of government ever bequeathed to man. As a step in this direction we must stand together for the elimination of the outstanding menace in our Republic. You have blazed the trail in the march for the preservation of our dear motherland. All God-fearing Americans who appreciate the priceless heritage of our traditions and institutions cannot fail to be enlisted in this good cause and to form behind you a solid phalanx.

"JOHN F. HYLAN."

PEOPLE DRIVEN OUT OF SMACKOVER MAY SEEK VENGEANCE

Authorities Declare However Will Be No Further Trouble

Houston Post

Houston, Tex.

Associated Press Report.

MONROE, La., Nov. 30.—Many of the 2000 persons who fled from the Smackover oil fields following raids by "vigilantes" are congregating in Union county and at El Dorado and are threatening to return to seek revenge, according to a dispatch received from El Dorado. 12-1-22

However, Ouachita county authorities have given assurances there will be no further disturbances.

Sheriff Ed Harper at Camden, Ark., declared today the man killed by "vigilantes" Tuesday night was J. G Woods, 25, a Mississippian, who was riddled when he refused to halt. Twelve shots were fired into his body when he resisted an attempt to whip him.

A resort operated by "Slim" Sanders was raided and the building torn down. It was a two-story frame structure. Sanders had previously been warned to leave and he was not found.

Sheriff Harper reported that the clean-up was thorough and that approximately 2000 persons had departed, including 400 who were on the payrolls of the various oil companies. He said that he does not think the Ku Klux Klan was responsible for the raids, but that the better element of oil field workers who resented the recent series of murders and robberies conducted the raids.

LOUISIANA KLAN HITS SNAG WHEN IT KILLS WHITE MEN

By BUD SAMUELS

Bastrop, La., Jan. 5.—What will it all come to? When did ever the towns and villages in Morehouse parish witness such events as have swiftly unfolded themselves in the last few days in this district? What is going to be the outcome of all the hullabaloo against the masked night raiders who have spread terror among peaceful farmers and laborers and women? Is the Ku Klux Klan going to be destroyed, or shall it come out more than conqueror in this test of strength with the state?

If the Klan whips the state, if the state is unable to convict the hooded mobbists of the crimes charged against them and they stand vindicated in the eyes of the parish and the state, what then? What influence will such a situation have on the nation? Shall Louisiana be the bloody birthplace of a new reign of terror that shall grip the great American nation and make of it a hotbed of religious and racial struggle for the rest of the world to gaze at in wonderment?

Slay Two White Men

All this speculation and conjecture has been born of the alleged implication of the Klan in the slaying of two white men of the parish, Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards. Prior to the murder of these planters everything had gone on more or less smoothly with these outlaw keepers of the law. The Klan had had its way because it had disturbed or harmed no one of influence.

Their efforts had been directed against men of a different color. Of course it mattered some to the white farmers, planters, manufacturers, etc., that their Race help should be driven off. But they hoped for a better day. They were not sure that the Klan's activity would serve to deplete their working forces to effect a disastrous result. It was just a matter of losing a man now and then. These losses could be replaced. There was always somebody new coming to town. What mattered it if a few "niggers" were driven away.

Too, the exodus hadn't begun. At least it had begun so that the planters in Morehouse parish and in most of Louisiana could notice it. They heard about it, probably, but that was all. It had touched them deeply. Maybe it would come to them, they'd admit, but they were willing to banish worry until such an occurrence swamped them.

No Sympathy for Victims

Never for once was there any sympathy, any welling patriotism for the victims of the mob as human beings or American citizens. Never was there any regret that a "nigger" was killed. Lake La Fourche hides in its muddy waters the body of many a dark-colored servant. The loss of these men did not matter. Neither did it matter so long as the dark consorts of white men were sufficiently punished for clandestine association with these men. Punish the women was the word. And so, for months and months, things went along just like that. There was too much Roman Catholicism in the parish and the state for the Klan to thrive on religious objections. Their arrows had to be directed against Race. As a consequence, Race men and women caught it.

Little has been said in the news dispatches of white papers about these silent sufferers. They are hopeful now. They are glad that white men and women have become involved. They see light for them. They know that the white man is going to work hard to destroy that which is hurting him. Those who have always been persecuted by the Klan are now praying that the whole of the Klan may be knocked out in one fell swoop.

Superstition

There has never been any superstition in their fear of the Klan. Nobody is afraid of a white sheet or pillow case. Those are mere trifles. But they have meant so much more. The sign of these white and black hooded men coming to one's door has meant the loss of a father, mother, daughter, son. It has meant the burning of a home that cost the savings of a lifetime. It has meant the destruction of a church or lodge hall. It has meant intimidation. It has meant possible bloodshed at all meetings, no matter how innocent in character.

The Klan has frowned on progress. It has blocked in every way that it could the tendency among some of the fairer elements to give the Race workers of the state and parish a chance. It has sought to mold a restricted place for the Race and to press the Race into it.

There has been no relief from the so-called better people because they, as a rule, were in league with the Klan, being either members or sympathizers. Many Race men who had worked for white planters or storekeepers for years appealed to these men for protection.

"Mister Dick," one said he complained, "them Klansmen come to my house last night. They wanted Tom. What for? Tom ain't never done nothin'. What am I goin' to do?"

Mister Dick never said a word, though he knew all about it. That is the vicious way in which the whole matter works itself out.

The government has a real case against the hooded organization. Federal secret service agents have worked with care and caution to gather evidence that would result in convictions in ordinary courts. However, they face an extraordinary situation around here.

There is a peculiar psychology actuating the minds of the people. This mental attitude has been built up through several generations. It has made the parish here a unit all to itself.

Birth of Parish

Originally, the parish was settled by the Davenports, the Bastrops and Daniels. They have played colorful parts in the history of the parish growth. Most parish lands have been their lands. Most of the parish traditions have been their traditions. In some way or other they have been a part of most of the parish business. Too, as has been noticed, the parish nor the villages were too large to prevent almost everybody in them knowing everybody else. There seemed to be just one great big family.

Probably the biggest rift in the loot has been 70-year-old Capt. Skipworth, cyclops of Klan 34, located here. Skipworth is autocrat, czar, divine ruler. He openly permits it to be known that he cares little for the constituted forces of law and order. He is willing to do what he pleases. He tells the governor to "Go to Hell." He recognizes no law as in any way limiting anything he proposes to do. He believes, strangely enough, that other people should act in a certain manner. As a consequence, he sees it as all right that he should interfere with the liberties of his fellow citizens in this parish.

The Klan officials of the state could not have selected a better man than "Old Skipworth," as he is known, to carry out their work. It is a job he enjoys. He would like to do it on his own hook. As it is, he is glad to have the backing of an organization and he will fight to the proverbial last ditch to keep his end up.

He has ruled Mer Rouge and Bastrop with an iron hand. As was noted, the first machinations of the Klan were against Race men and women. The Klan was emboldened to go a little further. It seemed as though they might be traveling in the right direction when they sought to break up clandestine night meetings between white men and women of the Race. Looked as though they might be trying to protect the women. But such was not the case. They caught the white men, all right, but they did not bother them. At least not at first. In the beginning they whipped the women.

There was a peculiar reaction there. Strange as it may seem, the white men who were consorting with these women showed a tendency to protect them themselves. They would not stand by and see these defenseless women whipped. This was doubtless because the Klan worked in secret and because they had a chance to fight back at the Klan in secret. However it was, this activity formed the basis of strained relations. The Klan found itself compelled to resort to extreme measures against these associates of "nigger" women. That was the spark that set off the powder.

Each Side Holds Ground

Neither side would give in. Later, in order to confuse the issue and to get more groups of people in on their side, the Klan put more features into the fight. They said that these men were bootleggers, cutthroats, gamblers and all sorts of things. They said that the men were a scab on the otherwise clean body of the community.

As a matter of fact, the men were no such thing. They were fewer in numbers than the Klan, but they, too, represented the better elements of the citizenry. There were among these so-called lowbrows professional men, business men and farmers. They were not the ones to give in easily, once they were put on the densive.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, about whom all the trouble precipitated, was elected mayor of the town of Mer Rouge. McKoin denied membership in the Klan, although he admitted being in sympathy with the purposes of the masked murderers. He was chosen mayor on a reform ticket. He became old Skipworth's lieutenant, captain. McKoin didn't know all. He worked under directions. He was placed in a position of some influence. He was popular. It was figured that he would use his influence and popularity on the side of the Klan. He was told that the town needed cleaning out. He was ordered to do all he could to effect this cleaning. McKoin tried it.

Met Opposition

Naturally he was expected to meet opposition.

One night he said he got a call to attend a patient in the country. On the way he was attacked, so he claimed, when he returned to his home with the rear of his car shot through. Report of him having been ambushed brought matters to a sort of head. Certain of the supposed lawless elements were accused of the crime by the Klan. They were threatened. McKoin never changed his story.

Shortly afterward, on Aug. 24, five white men were kidnaped after a big barbecue that thousands of the people from the country round had attended. The kidnapers were masked. They did their work swiftly and surely. Todd Davenport, Jim Andrews, J. E. Daniels, Watt Daniels, his son, and Thomas Richards were the men seized.

They were spirited away in automobiles. According to their story, some half hundred men surrounded them and helped in the flogging they received. The government has information showing that the Klan had imported outlaws from Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee to do the dirty work. It is said that these men, seven of them, were the ones to apply the torture. While one man would sit on a victim's head and two others on his feet, others would strap the captive's back to a pulp. In this way Davenport, Andrews and Old Man Daniels, 70 years of age, were beaten. Then they were released and given a dollar to help them get home.

Daniels, Richards Later

The younger Daniels and the dead Richards were treated later. Pathologists who examined their bodies after the explosion in Lake La Fourche had thrown them up declared that the evidence showed that the men had been horribly maltreated. Their bones probably had been broken before they died.

At any rate, they never came back. The community was thrown into a furore. Days passed with no word then weeks. Richards' wife appealed to the local authorities to find her husband. They shooed her away. There was nothing doing. Old Man Daniels told his story, as did the other men whipped. They all feared the worst.

In the meantime things got a little warm in the town for McKoin. He fled to Monroe, Ala. This heightened suspicion. He became guilty at once to anti-Klan citizens, and these same ones became more certain of the Klan being mixed up in the dirty work.

As a last resort, Mrs. Richards, wife of one of the missing men, and her daughter called on Governor Parker to find her husband. She told the whole brutal, sorrowful story. The governor was moved. He investigated. He found that things had come to a mighty bad pass. His study of the situation convinced him that he must do something—do it quickly and certainly. His father was a member of the original Klan and an aid to General Forrest. He therefore knew what he was up against. He was unalterably opposed to the masked floggers, particularly because of their masks. He decided that he would ask the federal government to help him run the Klan out of the state. It was with that in mind that he made his memorable visit to President Harding in Wasihngton and laid the matter before him. Not much of the results of that meeting became public knowledge. It was known, however, that Attorney General Daugherty had promised the aid of the department of justice, and that the President had offered to check up on the Klan whenever it interfered with federal interests.

Daugherty's Aid

Daugherty must have given much aid. Morehouse parish and the country surrounding became netted with secret service men. They worked in two shifts, a day force and a night force, a known force and an unknown force. The force working in the open served as a decoy to keep Klan spies off the force working in the dark. In this manner the government worked out its case perfectly. They got the goods on the Klan. They were certain that Daniels and Richards had been murdered and their bodies thrown into the lake.

It was for the purpose of following up this belief that first one and then another company of the state militia was dispatched here to drag the lake. The soldiers came and threw Mer Rouge and Bastrop into a frenzy. The lines of enmity between the two factions in the parish were more marked than ever before. The entire parish took on a fighting aspect. Men carried guns and rifles, women carried guns, the children stayed indoors. Business became more or less stagnant, while groups of men congregated on corners or before the stores and discussed in low whispers the ominous signs seen in the presence of the soldiers.

Arrests Made

Following that there have been arrests. The first man arrested was Deputy Sheriff Burnett. An open hearing for him is set for today. Dr. McKoin, former mayor, who fled to Alabama and then disappeared, was traced to Baltimore, where he was jailed by the Maryland officials. He has fought being returned to this land of lynchings, but Governor Parker is bound to have him.

The government claims to have half a hundred confessions that will be used to get convictions. McKoin and Burnett will both be tried for murder. One of the men, a witness whom government agents had questioned, was kidnaped since Daniels' and Richards' bodies were discovered.

It is expected that Old Skipworth will be arrested also. Early this week a detachment of cavalry was dispatched here to help keep order. The government is prepared for anything when the open hearing begins today. The next week is expected to bring to light a mass of hitherto unheard of atrocities committed by the Klan in this region.

The month of January will see the Klan destroyed or immeasurably stronger. The people have it in their own hands; the white people have it to fight out among themselves. If they help themselves they cannot keep from helping us. The Race people are waiting and hoping.

GIRL NAMES M'KOIN IN KU KLUX CASE

Miss Hamilton Says He and Parkerson Were in Gang of Six to Drive Her From Mer Rouge.

HEARING RESUMES TODAY

State Will Call Twelve Witnesses to Give Details of Kidnapping and Outrages.

1/9/23
New York Times

Special to The New York Times.

MER ROUGE, La., Jan. 8.—Just a year ago six black-hooded men seized 19-year-old Addie May Hamilton on the streets here, forced her to go to the railroad station, and shoved her aboard a train, with the warning to get out of town and not to come back. Today Miss Hamilton, back with her parents again, definitely accused two men of being members of the hooded gang.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, who is also charged with the murder of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, was the first man she accused. "Pink" Parkerson, Mer Rouge liveryman, was the second.

"I can identifyy them positively," the girl said. "I do not know who the other four were, but Dr. McKoin—I recognized him, and I know he was the man whod rove me away."

With thep ublicity thrown on the activities of Morehouse Parish's masked reign of terror, she has been able to return home unmolested.

She was seen late this evening with her mother driving in their little car near Mer Rouge.

"Don't make us talk about it," Mrs. Hamilton pleaded. "We think about it too often as it is. We are afraid—we do not know when they will come back.

"Why for six months," Mrs. Hamilton declared, "whenever any one would pass by our house and call out 'Hello!' my heart would leap to my mouth.

"The doctors tell me I have a leaking heart valve now. They say I'm a sick woman. That all came from this experience to Addie May. I was never sick a day in my life before that."

It was then that Miss Hamilton told of the six men who made up the little gang that drove her away.

"Who were these men? Did they belong to Mer Rouge?" she was asked.

"Two of them did."

"Who were those two?"

"One of them was Dr. McKoin. There's no use for me to hide it. Why shouldn't I talk; they've already done to me as much as they could, and I don't fear anything further they can do.

"The first man was Dr. McKoin and the second was 'Pink' Parkerson."

"I guess they'll be coming around to kill us now," Mrs. Hamilton broke in. "I guess we've talked too much, but I don't care. I believe in law and order, and if we all help by telling what we know maybe we can have it now."

As her mother talked Miss Hamilton started the car.

"'ll be getting back to Little Rock in a couple of weeks, I guess," she said.

"You don't want to stay here?" she was asked.

"No. I hate it here—I hate it! That terrible experience!"

"I wish we could all move away," said Mrs. Hamilton. "But I suppose we must stay here."

Hearing Resumes Today.

Thelma Dade, 13-years-old daughter of Watt Daniel, who, with Thomas F. Richards, was tortured and murdered by a hooded mob, is among a dozen witnesses called by the State to testify tomorrow at the open hearing at Bastrop into the Mer Rouge outrages. She was a witness to the kidnapping of the five men on the road to Mer Rouge last August.

Other witnesses called are Sidney White, who drove the car from which Watt Daniel was taken; Mrs. Nip Eckel and Dr. Wiley of Mer Rouge, who were also riding in the car; E. W. Andrews, a brother of W. C. Andrews, who was also in the Andrews car, and who saw his brother carried away by the masked men; J. T. Norseworthy of Mer Rouge, who is said to have been in the Andrews car; J. L. Daniel, the State announced, will be recalled; Zoe Higginbotham and C. N. Holloway, said to have been the first men to arrive at the scene of the dynamite explosion at Lake LaFourche after the bodies of Daniel and Richards were raised to the surface; a man named Davis, who is said to have arrived at the lake shore where the bodies were discovered prior to the arrival of agents of the Department of Justice; C. C. Davenport, who was kidnapped, but not maltreated, and J. C. Nettles.

With no hearings because of the holiday, Attorney General Coco and his assistants spent almost the entire day in a conference on the evidence already gathered and shaping plans for the testimony tomorrow. It is now the State's plan to build up a complete and positive line of record, which will reveal all the details of the kidnapping and the subsequent atrocities.

Company A of Alexandria and sixteen members of Company D, a machine gun outfit from New Orleans, broke camp and left Bastroy for their homes this afternoon. Sixteen guardsmen were left behind by Company A to take the places of the sixteen excused from Company D.

"The New Orleans soldiers were excused," said Adjutant General Toombs, because they have urgent business obligations, while the sixteen Alexandria men who take their places had no pressing reasons for returning home. The situation is tranquil, nnd we have two companies in Monroe to call upon should occasion require."

Blames First Kidnaping of Richards on Man Now Held on Murder Warrant.

SAYS RICHARDS WAS CARRIED OFF IN CAR

Declares Sheriff of Parish Warned Him to Quit Talking About Their Affairs.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, January 10.—Jeff Burnett, now under arrest on a charge of murder in connection with the kidnaping and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richard, was named today by Harry J. Neelis, automobile man of Bastrop, as one of two unmasked men who held him up on a road near Bastrop August 17 or 18 last—the same day Richard is said to have been first questioned by a hooded band as to an alleged attack on Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge.

It was the first mention of Burnett's name by witnesses at the state's investigation of masked and hooded band depredations and the slaying of Richard and Daniel now in progress.

Mrs. Richard, widow of the slain man, who preceded Neelis on the witness stand, told of Richard being taken into the woods by a band of hooded men whom their 3-year-old child, who was with her father at the time, described as "kluxes." Richard later returned to their home, Mrs. Richard said, told her of the occurrence but treated it as a joke.

Murdered Week Later.

The kidnaping of Richard and Daniel from which they did not return occurred a week later.

Neelis also testified that Richard on the day following the first kidnaping told him he had recognized five or six of the kidnapers.

"Who were they?" Neelis was asked.

"I don't want to call their names. I have forgotten them," he said.

"Who were they?" he was asked again.

"Captain Skipwith, Jim Tisdale, of Monroe; A. B. Campbell, of Jones, and Dr. McKoin," Neelis answered.

"I was on my way to Mer Rouge in a truck being driven by a negro," Neelis said, referring to the occurrence on August 17 or 18, "when I was held up on the road by seven hooded men. They had shotguns and pistols. I was ordered out of the truck. They told us to go on ahead and not to say anything about this. I went on but near Mer Rouge I was held up by two unmasked men. They were Jeff Burnett and a Mr. Rogers. They told me to turn around and go back to where we were first held up. After reaching there we stayed about 30 minutes. We were joined by a masked man. He said 'Do you know me?' I said 'No.'

"I was supposed to walk back to Bastrop, but I hopped a car going to Bastrop and rode into town.

Talked With Men.

"When Burnett and Rogers held me up, I talked with them long enough to know what they were after. It was Richard. I asked Burnett whom they were after. He said he couldn't tell me that, but I said if he wanted Richard he need not resort to any of these measures."

"I beat the masked men into Bastrop. First thing I did was to get Richard. I told Richard the Ku Klux was after him and for us to go over and sit in the sheriff's office where we might have protection. He had his little girl with him and he said for us to wait until his wife came back.

"Now back where I was held up, I saw Burnett and Rogers put on their masks. About that time Fred Higgenbothem came up. He was unmasked. He consulted with Burnett and Rogers and then they said I could go.

"When I reached Bastrop I saw Higgenbothem, I went up to him and said: 'Fred, who is doing all this work?'

Took Man Away.

"I was good and mad, and about that time the auto with the masked men came up to the garage. I went up to them and told them to leave Richard alone. They led Richard out to the car. I was in a state of mind to do almost anything. I again warned them to leave Richard alone. About that time Rogers, who had a shotgun, pointed it at me and told me to step aside. They left with Richard and later Mrs. Richard came up and I told her about it."

"What were the conditions in Bastrop at that time, wasn't the klan very active?"

"Yes, the klan was active, and the courthouse was being guarded by citizens. They didn't ask me to take part. One day I was going into the courthouse and I passed a remark about all these doings and further declared it interfered with my business.

"Sheriff Carpenter overheard my remarks and called me to one side and said: 'Neelis, let me give you a little advice. You quit talking about our affairs.'"

"Did any one suggest to you that it would be better for you not to recognize any one who was in the raids?" Neelis was asked.

Neelis urged that he be not forced to answer, and stated that whatever was said to him in that respect was in no way an effort to intimidate him.

"We do not say that it was to intimidate you, but want to know who talked with you," Howard Warren, special state's attorney, who was conducting the examination, insisted.

"Well, Allen Turpen, of Bastrop, was one," Neelis said, but insisted that Turpen's advice was purely for business reasons, as he was working for him.

Neelis also testified that the parish sheriff was only a short distance away at the time Richard was taken off for questioning on August 17 or 18.

Court recessed after Neelis concluded his testimony until tomorrow morning.

The attendance at the morning session of the hearing did not fill the courtroom, but in the afternoon there were no vacant seats and a number who could not find space within the room remained in the corridors to catch such of the testimony as might drift through the doors. Dr. McKoin, as on previous days, had a seat in a gallery. Captain Skipwith was about the courthouse, but did not enter. He is a familiar figure about the court square.

No intimation has yet been given by the state attorney-general, A. V. Coco, who is directing the inquiry, as to the number of witnesses yet to be heard before the investigation will be passed to a grand jury, the next procedure in advance of prosecution. Nor has there been any from the attorney-general or his forces as to when arrests will be made.

Except for the presentation of testimony at the open hearing, the day virtually was without developments, so far as was apparent. Department of justice agents continued their task of assembling testimony while the military, two companies of state troops, remained in camp here and at Mer Rouge, maintaining the role of bystanders but held in readiness at any moment to come to the aid of civil officials should they be needed. Thus far, it is held, no condition has arisen to make action by the militia necessary.

Jeff Burnett, the only man held in custody, still is in a hospital at Shreveport under guard. Dr. McKoin, the other man named in an affidavit in connection with the slaying of Daniel and Richard, is at liberty under bond.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 13. — How the Morehouse Ku Klux Klan, headed by the Exalted Cyclops, Captain J. K. Skipwith, surrounded the home of a peaceful farmer, aroused the occupants with shouts and curses, beat on the doors with clubs, broke the lock on one door, and entered and dragged the head of the house from under his roof, despite the tearful entreaties of his wife, was told today at the open hearing held to fix responsibility for the torturing and slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards, last August, supposedly by hooded Klansmen.

The story was told by Alonzo Braddock, a lifelong resident of Morehouse Parish, and an industrious. ambitious farmer and stock raiser.

The story he told paralleled the deeds of the Kentucky "Night Riders" or the Klan of earlier days. Brazenly, some without masks, the witness testified, they battered their way into his home, dragged him out in the dead of night and left his wife and small children in a state bordering on hysterics.

Dragged From Home by Klan.

The testimony of Braddock proved the most damaging of the day against the hooded organization charged with reducing Morehouse Parish to a state of terrorism. Calmly, but obviously with fear in his heart, the witness told his story. He fears the Klan so much that he declared that he was willing to sell the farm where he had labored all his life for one-half the actual value, so that he could take his family and move to a locality where citizens need not fear midnight raids of the Ku Klux Klan.

On a November morning, the farmer testified, about 1:30 or 2 o'clock, he was awakened by shouts and curses about his house. Peering out of a window, he saw a mob of men, some beating on the doors. They were shouting his name and demanding that he come out. Braddock called to them to wait until he was dressed. Before he could get fully dressed a door crashed in and the mob entered.

The leader, whom Braddock recognized as Captain Skipwith, said:

"We want you for making whisky."

At that point Mrs. Braddock, in a nervous and fainting condition, entered the room and begged the mob not to molest her husband. The mob and the leader were adamant, insisting that Braddock must go with them. Fearful of his fate, Braddock begged Captain Skipwith to turn him over to Sheriff Carpenter, if they had a charge to make against him. Braddock also begged Skipwith to assure his wife that no harm would come to him. The assurance was finally given and Braddock was told that he would not be whipped or injured, but would be turned over to the authorities.

Released Without Charge.

He was placed in a car and driven to the home of the Sheriff. Despite the fact that none of the mob were officers empowered to arrest Braddock, the Sheriff did not question their act, but took the prisoner in charge and also locked up four negroes the mob had picked up.

The next morning he was released. He was not indicted. No charge was ever made against him. He was set free and returned to his home to find his wife seriously ill and his children badly frightened.

Mrs. Braddock has not recovered. The stopping of a motor car near her home or the appearance of a stranger throws a great fear into her. Repeatedly she has begged her husband to sell the home they have struggled to build, and to move to another section.

"I am anxious to leave this parish for good," Braddock declared. "I no longer feel safe here. I am nervous at night, my wife is afraid, my children are frightened."

Witness Puts Klan First.

A few months ago Braddock was healthy, vigorous and robust. Today he has the appearance of an old man in ill health.

"It is the Klan," he says.

Attorneys admitted after the close of the hearing that under the laws of Louisiana the action of armed men in forcing an entrance into a home at night may be construed by the courts as a capital offense, punishable by death.

The testimony of A. L. Smith of Ouiachita Parish, an admitted Klansman, was another feature of the day. He refused to betray Klan secrets, and said his oath to the organization would not allow him to give testimony against a Klansman accused of a crime.

He impressed the Attorney General and his staff. "If the Klan had more members of that sort and less of Captain Skipwith's calibre, there would be no trouble with the organization and there would be no lawless acts committed," a member of the staff declared during the recess.

After he had stated that he is a Klansman and had taken the Klan oath; Mr. Smith was not asked to reveal any secrets of the order. Once, during the examination, Senator Warren said:

"Mr. Smith, I'm sure you wouldn't violate your roath, but if you could give us any information concerning the commission of crimes by the members of the Klan, you would give it, of course?"

"You would have to force it from me," was the reply. The crowd in the court room applauded so vigorously that Judge Odom called for order.

Skipwith Calls off Conference.

Captain Skipwith, Exalted Cyclops of the Morehouse Parish Klan, this afternoon announced that he had called off the conference with Attorney General Coco, sought by the Klan leader yesterday and set for today by the Attorney General.

"There wi be no conference between mysef and Mr. Coco," Skipwith said. "I could not see where any good could come out of it, and therefore decided to call it off. It hasn't been officially called off, but a conference between the Attorney General and myself will never never be held. The State's attorneys seem to be satisfied in digging into the affairs of the Klan by placing witnesses on the stand at the open hearing, and therefore it is best for them to get their information from that source."

Attorney General Coco appeared surprised at Captain Skipwith's action.

"I have not been informed either by Captain Skipwith or his attorney about this and I will say that the calling off of the arranged interview was not the result of any steps taken by myself or any members of my staff."

Heard Skipwith Threaten Whippings.

The first witness at the morning session was W. B. Stuckey of Mer Rouge, former State Senator, and a lawyer. His examination proceeded as follows:

Q.—Are you a member of the Klan? A.—No, sir. I've always been opposed to it, free and outspoken in my opposition.

Q.—Have you talked to Captain Skipwith about these affairs? A.—No. Captain Skipwith has not spoken to me for a year.

Q.—Have you ever heard Skipwith say anything? A.—Yes. There was a conference that followed the kidnapping and the day after, while talking to John Freeland, I heard Smith Stevenson call out to Captain Skipwith, "Captain, I heard you settled the Mer Rouge trouble." "Yes," said Skipwith. "On what basis?" Stevenson asked. "I told them," said the Captain, "that every man in Morehouse who didn't keep his mouth shut and quit talking about the Klan would get whipped until they couldn't sit down for some time."

Q.—When was this remark made? A.—After the kidnapping of Daniel and Richards.

Q.—After the attempted assassination of Dr. McKoin? A.—After the alleged attempt.

Q.—Why, do you doubt McKoin was shot at? A.—I believe he shot at his own car to create the impression he did.

Q.—Do you mean to say you think McKoin deliberately shot at his own automobile to bring the Klansmen to his aid? A.—I do. It is universally believed that he shot at his own automobile.

Q.—Have you ever looked at McKoin's car since it was shot? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did the examination convince you that McKoin was not in the car when the shots were fired? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did McKoin have plenty of enemies around Mer Rouge? A.—Plenty of them, and before the Ku Klux Klan was ever heard of.

Q.—What made these enemies? A.—His ideas of conduct, his notion of ruling the morals of the people. It was a general community feeling.

Q.—You thought it was possible he was shot at? A.—My first impression was that he was shot at. I knew fifty people who were his enemies.

Q.—But afterward you concluded there had been no attempt on his life? A.—Yes, sir, it was the common belief that he shot his own car out in the woods somewhere.

Q.—Why do you suppose these anonymous and threatening letters were written to McKoin? I reckon that he wrote them to himself.

Q.—What do you know about pistol shots being heard? A.—I heard John Jones of Mer Rouge say he heard shots.

Q.—The shots supposed to have been fired at McKoin's motor car? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know the enemies Watt Daniel and Richards may have had? A.—None that I knew of.

Q.—Do you know Hugh Clark? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Ever hear him make any statement about the alleged shooting at Dr. McKoin? A.—Yes, I heard him say he could name six men in Mer Rouge, out of whom the two could be found who fired on Dr. McKoin.

The witness, in recounting Captain Skipwith's conversation with Stevenson, said the Klan leader's language was too vicious and vulgar to be repeated in open court. He wrote it on a note which he handed to Judge Odom. He spoke highly of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, saying he had known them for years. He asserted that Daniel did not drink liquor and that he had never seen him intoxicated or even take a drink.

Stuckey was followed by A. L. Smith of Ouachita Parish. He is 61 years, white haired and wears a white Vandyke beard. He is President of the School Board, and said his interest in the kidnapping of Aug. 24 was aroused by the report that C. C. (Tod) Davenport was one of the victims.

Spectators Applaud Klansman.

The Davenport family were friends of his and he at once wrote to them warning "Tod" Davenport to be careful.

"A few days later I heard a report of such startling nature that I decided to go to the rescue of my Morehouse Parish friends," he continued. "I heard that a man named Norsworthy was out to kill Dr. McKoin. I had a conference with Leon and J. L. Davenport and my son to get all the information I could. I told Hugo Davenport there was a general opinion that there was a plot in Mer Rouge to assassinate Dr. McKoin and rumor was that he set up the plot.

"Afterward they called in Mr. Dade and he reported that Mr. Norsworthy was in town and they sent out after him. We decided to hold a conference the follwing day to be attended by McKoin and any one he wanted, the Davenport family and several others anxious for a peaceful solution of the situation. This conference was held at Monroe. I asked Flood Madison, John H. Parker and Dr. McKoin to take part. My statement was that the meeting was called to bring about peace in the Davenport family and to Dr. McKoin and his friends.

At the conference Mr. Madison expressed a desire to bring about peace and good will in the parish. Mr. Parker praised the Davenports and Dr. McKoin. Others expressed themselves along the same line. Dr. McKoin stated that if we were seeking peace we had accomplished our purpose. He said that he had left Mer Rouge for all time, and that he left because he found he had no friends after the shooting. He declared that after the shooting many of those whom he considered his friends turned out to be otherwise. He mentioned the name of Joe Davenport, Bob Dade and others. He felt, he said, that he was living in the wrong place, in a place where he had no friends and that this caused him to leave Mer Rouge.

"Everybody looked over to Skipwith. He said if he had known what he had just heard there would have been no trouble from the Klan, which he had the honor to represent. He said there would be no trouble for any one, but three men, Milner, Campbell and Whipple, and he advised that these men would have to conduct themselves better or get out. He wanted them to quit talking about the Klan.

"After that conference for a week or two everything looked all right. Then things began to flare up again. I first heard that the Government had sent detectives into Morehouse Parish and I feared the conditions would be upset again. As a result I went to Mer Rouge and helped to organize Conference 3. in that conference were Joe Davenport, Leon Davenport, Bob Dade, Hugh Clark, Mr. Williams and Flood Madison. I asked them for a plan to restore peace in Morehouse Parish without outside assistance, and I pointed to the possibility of martial law being established here. I tried to impress upon them the importance of getting themselves straight and calling the Governor off. We all felt that martial law would do great damage to the community and decided that it should be averted if possible.

We decided to select a leading man from each ward, irrespective of whether he was a Klansman or not. The Klan was to be represented by Skipwith and ten of his selections and the peace problem to be settled. He would then inform the Governor that all was quiet and peaceful here. I saw Captain Skipwith and he said it was not necessary to hold a conference, that if the other gentlemen felt that way about it he would speak for the Klan. But we met and every one was satisfied and contented. That was the end of conference No. 3, and it ended my connection with the matter.

"Why was the Klan considered as a necessary element to securing peace in Morehouse Parish?" the witness was asked.

"The people in Mer Rouge thought all their troubles came out of the Klan, and they wanted to treat with the people who were making the trouble."

"The Klan was composed of many leading men?"

"Yes, many good men."

"Are you a Klansman?"

"Yes, I'm a Klansman and I'm proud of it."

The court room spectators broke into a wild cheer and loud handclapping. Judge Odom warned them that such disorder would not be tolerated.

"I think the question is unfair, for when a man's membership in the Klan is know it hurts his usefulness as a member of the society," went on the witness.

The examination proceeded as follows:

Q.—In the several conferences following the kidnapping and the murder of two citizens of the parish was there any effort or any steps taken to ferret out that particular crime? A.—No, sir, ours was a peace conference.

Q.—What caused all the agitation and trouble? A.—The kidnapping of Aug. 24.

Q.—The conferences were not for the purposes of investigating the crime of Aug. 24? A.—No, sir.

Q.—It was common talk the crime was committed by masked men? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it thought they were Klansmen or friends of the Klan? A.—No, sir, many thought it was friends of Dr. McKoin.

Q.—You would tell all you know to assist the officers, wouldn't you? A.—I'm not so sure about that.

Q.—What complaint did Skipwith have against Milner, Campbell and Whipple? A.—I'm not sure I can answer but the Klan wanted to regulate the morals of the town of Mer Rouge and straighten out those three men.

Thought McKoin Wrote Threats.

In discussing the threatening letters received by Dr. McKoin the witness said little credence was placed in them as they might have been written by Dr. McKoin himself. The belief was general that McKoin did write the letters himself. The witness had heard the letters had been written on Dr. McKoin's own typewriter.

Where a Klansman was on trial, testified Smith, he might not divulge information concerning the commission of crime by that Klansman. "You might get the information from me," he said, "but you'd have to drag it out, force me to tell."

A. N. Williams, a Mer Rouge merchant, who admitted serving on two committees after threatening letters had been received by Mayor Dade, testified that the committees could not restore peace.

"What is the reason," he was asked.

"Fear, unrest and disturbances."

Walter H. Campbell, Town Marshal of Mer Rouge, was the next witness. He was examined by Mr. Guion as follows:

Q.—Do you know anything about the attempted assassination of Dr. McKoin? A.—I heard only rumors that he was shot at.

Q.—Did you go to Dr. McKoin about it? A.—I did not. He did not come to me.

Q.—What are the relations between you and McKoin? A.—Friendly. He was my family physician.

Q.—You were Town Marshal then? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Was the shooting within the city limits? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Was an effort made by any citizens to find out who did the shooting? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you know Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Were you at the ball game and barbecue on Aug. 24 at Bastrop? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where were you? A.—In Mer Rouge on duty as Marshal.

Q.—Did you assist in any search for Daniel and Richards? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What do you know about the kidnapping of these men? A.—Nothing at all.

Q.—Any one ever communicated to you that you would have to leave Mer Rouge to guarantee peace in the community? A.—Yes. I was told that by R. L. Dade, Leon Davenport and Joe Davenport.

Q.—Who told them to deliver that message? A.—Captain Skipwith.

Q.—Had you ever done anything to deserve such treatment? A.—No, but I was charged with helping in the attempt on McKoin, writing threatening letters to Captain Skipwith and being drunk on the streets. I offered $1,000 reward to any one who could prove them.

Q.—Where were you when Dr. McKoin was shot at? A.—I was with Bill Gold of Arkansas, on the State line. I was with him all evening.

Q.—You know you were suspected in the McKoin affair? A.—Well, I was told that some one said I was on the street that night, and that if they'd give me a whipping they could make me tell who fired the shots.

Q.—Have you any ideas as to who shot at McKoin? A.—I have not.

Q.—Are you going to move from Mer Rouge? A.—No, sir, I'm going to stay there.

Threatening Circulars Distributed.

Campbell denied any knowledge of a "round table" conference to plot the assassination of Dr. McKoin. Dr. McKoin showed him an anonymous letter and asked him to help trace it. "I learned that it was written on McKoin's own typewriter," declared Campbell. "Before I was through I was notified by the doctor that his own machine had been used. His typewriter was easy of access."

His examination was then continued as follows:

Q.—Did you hear any complaints that others had received threatening letters? A.—Some circulars were found at doors and gates.

Q.—Typewritten? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—At whose doors were these circulars left? A.—Not at doors, as I remember, but in the post office and stores and the like.

Q.—Were they threatening? A.—Yes, they threatened bootleggers and other violators.

Q.—Have you seen Klan members in their masks? A.—Yes, on two occasions.

Q.—What kind of masks did they wear? A.—White.

Q.—Did you recognize any Mer Rouge men in the crowd you saw first? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Was it on this same night that Daniel, Andrews and Neelis were held up on the Gallion Road by masked men and relieved of their guns? A.—Yes, it was that same night.

Q.—On what other occasion did you see the Klan in regalia? A.—A couple of automobile loads came from Oakridge into Mer Rouge and visited a nigger restaurant and told them they would have to quit gambling.

Q.—What time was it? A.—About 5 o'clock in the evening.

Q.—What other warnings have you received outside of the first edict from Skipwith to leave town? A.—Well, Leon Davenport told me that Skipwith had reported I was on the Klan blacklist again.

Q.—That was the time the Federal men had begun to investigate? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know of any communication sent to Skipwith by which some one would vouch for you? A.—Yes, the Davenports volunteered to do that.

Q.—What was the word brought back from Skipwith? A.—That it was all right.

Q.—Was the $1,000 ever put up? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Was the voucher accepted? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did Richards recognize any of the men who kidnapped him in Bastrop? A.—Yes; two of them, Jim Tisdale and A. B. Campbell.

Q.—Are you a relative of A. B. Campbell? A.—He is my brother.

Braddock Torn From Home.

Braddock, the farmer, the next witness, was examined as follows:

Q.—Did you have any visits from the Ku Klux Klan? A.—They woke me up one night yelling for me to come out.

Q.—What time was it? A.—About 1 A. M.

Q.—What time of the year? A.—About Nov. 24, 1922.

Q.—What happened? A.—They came whooping and yelling for me to come out. My wife looked out and said there was a crowd of men out in front. They began hammering and knocking and broke the lock off the door and came in.

Q.—Was the lamp lit? A.—No, sir.

Q.—House in darkness? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Who came in? A.—Captain Skipwith, Marvin Pickett, his son Cud, and Ben Pratt, Sam Cox, Sam Hildridge, and there were about eight in the room. I'm trying to remember them all. There was a man named McIntoch, who runs a pressing shop.

Q.—You say these men came into your house and left others on the outside? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How did you recognize them without a light? A.—By the light from the fireplace.

Q.—What did they do? A.—They said they were after me for making whisky. I spoke to Captain Skipwith and told him he was the oldest man there and that I trusted him and would go with him to the Sheriff if he would see to it that I wasn't hurt in any way. I promised, and we started out in the car and we drove to Mr. Carpenter's house (the Sheriff) and woke him up.

Q.JAny one else with you as a prisoner? A.—Four negroes.

Q.—Where did you sleep that night? A.—At the home of the Sheriff.

Q.—Do you know when and where they got the fonur negroes they arrested the same night? A.—I do not.

Q.—Did the men you saw have guns? A.—Yes; I think they all had guns. One man had a shotgut, another had a rifle.

Q.—Did they use any force with you? A.—They hurried meon when I was dressing.

Q.JHow many cars were in the party? A.—There was six I know, but my wife says she counted eight.

Q.—Did they have a warrant for you? A.—They didn't show one.

Q.—Were you subsequently indicted? A.—We came up next morning and fixed bond and went home but I never saw a warrant.

Q.—Did you see Skpiwith before you left Balstrop? A.—Yes, he told me to take things easy and be careful, and that if anybody could handle Judge Odom it would be us.

Q.—Did your wife talk to the men? A.—Yes, she asked them what they were going to do with me. Captain Skipwith told her not to be uneasy, that they were going to take me over to the court, but that I'd be back the next morning.

Q.—Have you had any threats, messages or heard any indicating it would be best for you to move? A.—No, but I've been molested since that time.

Q.—What happened? A.—Well, three of them came over at night and knocked at my door. I got my gun and went down. They said they wanted to know the way to Collinstown.

Q.—How do you know there was three? A.—I could see them.

Q.—Where were you? A.—In my house, with a gun. I looked out at them from behind a curtain.

Q.—What time was it? A.—After midnight.

Q.—Did you tell them the way to Collinstown? A.—No, sir. I told them nothing.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I went over to Mr. Shepard's, a neighbor, and spent the rest of the night.

Fears to Remain in Parish.

The Attorney General himself at this juncture continued the examination of Graddock, who said he would quit Morehouse Parish if he could sell his eighty-acre farm for half its value.

"And yet you were born and raised here, your relatives and friends are here," said the Attorney General.

"Yes, sir, but I'm anxious to leave this parish. I don't feel safe any more. My wife is worried sick. Whenever she hears a motor car she gets nervous. I do, too, for that matter."

Fred Cobb, the last witness of the day, testified that he had been waited upon by masked men near Bastrop on July 12, about 300 feet from his home.

"I was walking along the road, when a car, containing five masked men, came up," he testified. "One of them, armed, came forward after the car stopped and asked me to get in. I began to laugh, but I decided to get in with them."

His examination continued thus:

Q.—What was done then? A.—One of the masked men got on the running board and I was put in with the others. They moved out on the Bastrop road.

Q.—Were they all masked? A.—They had hoods, either black or blue hoods, on their heads but no robes. They wore hats over the hoods.

Deputy Sheriff a Kidnapper.

Q.—Did you know any of them? A.—I knew one—Laurie Calhoun.

Q.—How did you recognize Calhoun? A.—His mask was torn and I could see part of his face. Another thing, I'd seen him in a barber shop and hour and a half before and I had heard his voice. He did most of the talking whn I met him with the masked men.

Q.—You didn't recognize any of the others? A.—No, their masks concealed their faces.

Q.—Why was it funny? A.—I dwon't believe I could explain it; it looked comical in a way and yet was serious. I just couldn't help laughing. I'm from Texas, where it doesn't mean much to kill a man, but it's all on the leval and above board.

Q.—What did they say to you? A.—They said they would kill me; that I was living contrary to the laws of the State. They told me to be a man, and if I didn'tquit, Calhoun said they would kill be. They admonished me to say nothing. An extra pair of shoes I had weer missing, and I was told they would be returned to me. I waited a few days and sent a note to Calhoun asking that the shoes be returned or the money given me.

Q.—When were the shoes returnd? A.—The next day. They were left in Young's drug store.

Q.—You were taken into the woods and accused of immoral conduct? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did they exhibit buns? A.—Yes, all of them.

Q.—Where did you recognize Calhoun? A.—After he got out of the car I saw the torn hood and recognized it.

Q.—You also recognized Calhoun by his voice? A.—Yes, no one can forget that voice after hearing it once.

In adjourning court until Monday Judge Odom made a brief speech thanking every one for the good order that has prevailed since the hearing began. He delivered a kindly, reassuring address to the public full of remonstrances against talk of unrest and of promises for the enforcement of law.

Judge Odom crowned his effort at pacification by directing Sheriff Carpenter to search every man for weapons.

Conspicuous was Capt. J. K. Skipwith, the cyclops of Morehouse Parish. Old Skip studiously avoided the courtroom. Eyes were strained from time to time by nearly every one in the room for a possible view of the old river character, who has been dominating this inland parish for the last year.

Cyclops to Be Arrested.

Under the new plans the arrest of the cyclops will take place after the hearing has established in the public mind the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Sunday has been suggested most recently as the probable time for Skipwith's arrest.

With full knowledge of these plans, however, Skipwith continues to regard the whole affair as of little consequence beyond a reflection upon the honor of Louisiana.

The thrill of the session today was the production by the state of the body, broken as if under terrific pressure, of Watt Daniel.

It opened the way for the evidence that is to be offered to show that Daniel and Richards were subjected to torture in an inquisitorial machine which crushed them slowly to death after their limbs had been hewed off. The only note of opposition was offered when Coroner O. M. Patterson testified that the inquest had been taken out of his hands by the attorney general. But Attorney General Coco made the protest of little effect when he took the lead in the questioning and showed that he had no disposition to sidestep responsibility.

Louisiana's War on Klan Outrages May Reach Climax Today When Evidence of Horrible Torture of Two Victims Is Introduced. Lee Writes Graphic Story of the First Day's Hearing.

BY ROBERT LEE.

(By Chicago Tribune-Commercial Appeal Leased Wire).

BASTROP, La., Jan. 5.—Today, in its famed public hearing, called to expose to the people the evidence of the Klan murders, the state established the identities of the bodies of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards.

Tomorrow it is proposed to carry out the programme arranged for today; to show by the testimony of two eminent pathologists the extremes to which the murderers went in multilating and torturing their victims. This will be the basis for prosecution.

A high light came today when J. L. Daniel, the kindly old man whose son was a victim of the masked band, testified Major Watt Daniel carried into the trenches of France a watch which his father had given him. He brought it back and had it with him the night the masked men murdered him because they could not bend him to their will. The watch was found on one of the bodies recovered in Lake La Fourche.

The old man looked at the watch wistfully.

"I bought the watch in Monroe and had my name engraved on it," Daniel said. "When Watt went to war, I gave it to him. I said, 'Watt, some day this may identify you,' but I had no idea it would be in this way."

Order Rules in Bastrop.

Order ruled today. It was the kind of order that can be enforced when two factions meet under the benevolent protection of a third. The klan men of the Bastrop section were sullen, ridiculing the legal process instituted by Gov. Parker.

The Mer Rouge men, eager for justice, but fearful of its possible failure, were quiet, watchful and ready to go.

The first act of Judge Odom neatly nipped off the chance for hostilities.

Says Burnett Feigns Illness.

New Orleans Times

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 8.—Jeff Burnett, under arrest on the charge of complicity in the murder of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards, who was removed from the jail at Bastrop to the Shreveport Hospital upon the plea that he was suffering from pneumonia, is feigning illness, in the opinion of Dr. Charles Duvall, who examined Burnett just before he was taken from jail.

Dr. Duvall arrived here today from Bastrop.

1-9-23

"It looks like a ruse to get Burnett out of jail," said Dr. Duvall, "I examined him Friday and Saturday and found nothing wrong with him, neither in his appearance nor in his manner on either occasion."

Dr. O. M. Patterson, Parish Coroner, issued the certificate to the court which it permitted Burnett's transfer to the Shreveport Hospital. Dr. Patterson is said to be a Klansman, and so are both the Deputy Sheriffs who are guarding Burnett at Chreveport.

State Regards Matter as Not Affecting Louisiana Alone, But as Something Which Reaches to the Heart of American Government.

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 21.—At least 50 members of the Ku Klux Klan of Morehouse Parish will be charged with grave crimes in connection with the reign of terror of the klan which resulted in the Mer Rouge murders.

The charges growing out of the open inquiry into the torture and killings of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards will range from assault and battery to capital crimes calling for the imposition of the extreme penalty.

No less than 15 members of the klan will be charged with murder and other crimes which in Louisiana, call for the death penalty—hanging. Many others will be charged with night riding under the cloak of the "black hood of terror," the flogging, whipping and deportation of citizens; and house breaking by force of arms in the night.

Indictments Will Be Asked.

The entire Ku Klux Klan of Morehouse Parish, through all its officers—Capt. J. K. Skipwith, the exalted cyclops, and Dr. B. M. "Bunny" McKoin and other members of its vigilance committee will be subject to the charges and indictment as an organization will be sought. The state regards its fight against the klan in its northern parish as a test of supremacy between the state itself and the klan. The state of Louisiana is not in this fight simply to convict for the murders of Watt Daniel and Tom Richards, but in the broader sense that it must win this fight or acknowledge that the klan in Louisiana is stronger that the state. And the state of Louisiana does not regard this klan business in Morehouse Parish as something affecting Louisiana alone. If the Ku Klux Klan of Morehouse Parish can override the administration of justice there it can do it anywhere in the United States. The state officials say they deem this a test case which reaches down to the very heart of American government. All this was learned today at a conference between Gov. John M. Parker and Attorney General A. V. Coco, a conference which, however, was a mere getting togther between the governor and his attorney general as the open hearing in Morehouse draws to a close. This conference lasted all day and into the night and at its end Attorney General Coco made known that at least half a hundred indictments will be sought by the state as a result of its open inquiry into the kidnaping and slaying of Daniel and Richards on the night of Aug. 24 and the subsequent disclosures of the many and varied activities and dictatorship of the klan during the past two years.

Reviews Bastrop Hearing.

The attorney review the hearing in Bastrop.

"Why," he stated, "the veidence clearly shows that the entire klan of Morehouse Parish is, through its officers guilty of the foulest of crimes; everything ranging from assault and battery to murder.

"At least three men have been directly connected with the kidnaping by force of arms and deportation of Addie May Hamilton, the young woman who was taken from her home in the night and sent penniless away from her mother to Little Rock, Ark.

Eight others, including Captain J. K. Skipwith, have been involved in the breaking into the home—also by force of arms—and in the night of Braddock, the farmer. Five have been identified as having been involved in the kidnaping of Daniel and Ricrards, and two of these, one the owner of the murder truck, have been identified.

The hearing at Bastrop will probably be concluded on next Tuesday or Wednesday. The attorney general and his staff will then depart for New Orleans where the evidence will all be briefed for presentation to the grand jury. This briefing process will take, it is stated, from ten to fifteen days and it will then be placed before a grand jury.

HISTORY OF CASE.

Murders at Mer Rouge Revolting in Conception.

(By The Associated Press.)

BASTROP, La., Jan. 21.—The third week of the open hearing into the activities of the black hooded men in Morehouse Parish will begin tomorrow, the state attempting to learn the identity of more of the masked mn alleged to have been implicated in the kidnaping of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard on Aug. 24. Two mutilated bodies found in Lake La Fourche on Dec. 22 were identified as those of the missing men and pathologists who performed an autopsy have testified that in their opinion the victims were tortured to death after one of them had been subjected to a painful surgical operation. A barbecue was held in Bastrop Aug. 24 and residents of the territory for miles around attended the event. Many homeward bound automobiles and wagons late in the day were held up by black hooded men stationed on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway, two miles from this place and searched. Daniel and Richard, Daniel's father, J. L. Daniel, "Tot" Davenport and W. C. Andrews were made prisoners.

How Men Were Killed.

The captives were blindfolded, their hands tied, bundled into a small motor truck and driven away. J. L. Daniel and W. C. Andrews were flogged and released at Collinston, eight miles from here, early in the evening after they had been questioned concerning an alleged attempt to assassinated Dr. B. M. McKoin, former mayor of Mer Rouge. Davenport was released unharmed and without questioning.

Watt Daniel and Richard never were seen alive again.

All persons held up on the highway who have testified thus far, have agreed that the masked party numbered between ten and fifteen men. Witnesses have declared that they recognized five of them as follows: E. N. "Newt" Gray, deacon of the Little Fellowship Missionary Baptist Church of the Thompson section, about four miles from Mer Rouge; Oliver Skipworth, son of Captain J. K. Spikworth, leader of the Ku Klux Klan in Morehouse parish; T. Jeff Burnett, formerly parish deputy sheriff, at liberty under $5,000 bail, after having been arrested on an affidavit charging murder; Smith Stevenson, Bastrop blacksmith and a man known as "Blacksmith" Smith of Bastrop.

The name of Captain Skipworth also was mentioned yesterday, a witness having testified that he saw the klan leader in conversation with a masked man at the forks of the Monroe-Collinston road the evening of the kidnaping. Captain Skipworth was not masked, the witness testified.

Attorney General Coco and his assistants have interrogated witnesses at length concerning the plant of the Southern Carbon Company at Spyker, La., two miles south of here, the operation of the plant equipment and the duties of certain employes.

Bodies Cast Into Lake.

The bodies of Daniel and Richard were supposed to have been weighted and cast into Lake LaFourche. Around each was galvanized wire believed to have been used as an attachment for the weights. On the night of Dec. 21, unidentified persons fired a large charge of dynamite in the lake and it is believed the concussion caused the bodies to break loose from the weights and rose to the surface. A professional diver arrived here Dec. 21 for the announced purpose of exploring the bottom of the lake for the bodies and some officials entertain the theory that the slayers, fearing their discovery, exploded the dynamite in an attempt to bring them to the surface so they might be recovered and disposed of elsewhere.

At the time the entire parish was being combed by military and civil forces for them.

It had been established that the carbon company had on hand several weeks ago a fairly large supply of dynamite obtained for the purpose of clearing land as a site for a new plant. It also was brought out that the plant used in its construction work and for other purposes were similar to that found around the bodies. Harold Teegerstrom, carbon plant timekeeper, disappeared from Spyker the night of Dec. 29. He appeared at the home of an acquaintance two days later and reported that, called from his bed, he had gone into the yard, discovered an automobile full of men and, believing an attempt was to be made on him, had fled.

Teegerstron borrowed $40, a suit of clothes to change his appearance, departed and has not been seen nor heard from since.

Jeff Burnett was an employe of the carbon plant at the time of the kidnaping of Aug. 24 and, according to the testimony of one witness, was supposed to have been relieving a nightwatchman that night.

Will Unmask Klan.

Governor Parker of Louisiana has "dedicated" himself to the "unmasking of the klan in Morehouse parish," and agents of the federal department of justice have been working in conjunction with the state's forces toward that end.

Federal action as a result of developments has been hinted but so far as is known it was not until Friday that testimony was developed upon which the government might possibly act.

R. A. "Berry" Whetstone, the first witness to identify Burnett as a member of the kidnaping party, testified that telephone wires along the highway at the scene of the holdup had been cut and were trailing on the ground.

Mrs. B. D. Carlisle, on the stand yesterday, testified that her horse became entangled in the wires and that one of the masked men whom she said she recognized as Burnett, had released the animal.

It has been stated officially that the cutting of telephone or telegraph wires involved severence of lines of communication and that such an act may be construed as a "federal matter." Federal agents in this vicinity never have announced what leads Bastrop, La., January 6.—That Watt Daniel and Fletcher Richards, put to death on a rack of torture, according to deductions made by pathologists who examined their crushed and mutilated bodies, were victims of a black hooded band was indicated by testimony put into the record today in the state's investigation into masked band outlawry in Morehouse parish.

Exhibiting crushed and broken bones as visible evidence, Dr. Charles Duval and Dr. John Lanford, pathologists, testified that scientific examination of the bodies of the two men showed that they had been tortured on a device "specially constructed for inflicting punishment."

That the men who halted the automobile party of which Daniel and Richards were members wore black hoods was testified to by witnesses who felt the wrath of the raiders but were allowed to return to their homes after being flogged.

These were the outstanding features of a day of sensational testimony investigation undertaken under the direction of Governor John M. Parker to fix responsibility for the slaying of Daniel and Richards and reveal perpetrators of other masked band depredations which the governor has laid at the door of the Ku Klux Klun.

Describing in minute detail the crushed and mutilated condition of the bodies the two, pathologists testified that the men were subjected to torture in what was believed to have been a vice-like contrivance, which broke their bones at equi-distant intervals and that the body of Daniel showed a revolting operation performed before he was put to death.

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 7.—Eight more men will be definitely a ccused this week of having taken part in the kidnapping and murder of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, it was learned here today. The names of more than forty men, said to have been in the black-hooded band, are set forth in the mass of evidence gathered by the Attorney General and his aids.

The prosecution today concentrated on weeding out the volumous evidence on hand, with the object of specifically charging the men accused with being responsible for the torture which ended in the deaths of the two victims without unnecessarily prolonging the hearing.

One of the chief sobjects confronting th eauthorities is the torture machine that was used by the slayers. It is intimated that the officials have a knowledge of the construction of this machine beyond what has been publicly announced and that they are hot on the trail of the men who constructed it. Members of the Attorney General's staff worked throughout Sunday to try to deduce who conceived the rack which slowly crushed the two men to death.

Gives Idea of Torture Machine.

George Seth Guion, Assistant Attorney General, gave his idea of the construction of the machine today. He believes it consisted of two boards, probably eighteen inches wide, with teeth in them which clenched together against the bodies of the men. These boards, he thinks, hinged at the bottom and mashed the feet of the victims first.

All the time, Mr. Guion believes, members of the hooded band stood at the heads of the victims, demanding that they "tell what you know" about the supposed attempt to assassinate Dr. B. M. McKoin who, with "Jeff" Burnett, still ill with pneumonia in a Shreveport Hospital, is accused of being implicated in the murders.

"It was one of the most diabolical devices known to history," added the Asistant Attorney General. "The old-time methods of torture were tame in comparison to the machine these men used. In Nero's time, victims were drawn and quartered. That was exceedingly mild, compared to this, for the victims died quickly. In this case, they apparently weer slowly crushed to death."

Again Search Lake La Fourche.

The authorities believe the torture machine was constructed near Bastrop and today they turned their attention to a forets hut, not far from the scene of the kidnapping, a mile from Bastrop on the Mer Rouge road. In the middle of a woods of old field pine, well shielded by young pine, this hut stands deserted. The authorities are trying to learn when it was last occupie.

The hut is constructed of pine saplings and has a roof patched with pine needles and twigs. Inside are what remains of eight bunks. Assistant Attorney General Walmsley believes it possible that members of the hooded band camped out in the woods, constructing the torture machine out of pine timbers which they themselves hewed. The device may have ben scunk in Lake La Fourche with the bodies.

Dr. Charles W. Duval and Dr. John A. Lanford, the pathologists who testified at the hearing yesterday, today with T. Semmes Walmsley, Assistant Attorney General, and four agents of the Department of Justice, went to Lake La Fourche, from which the bodies of the slain men were raised by a mysterious dynamite explosion. The partp went in a boat to a point where the dynamite was exploled and after making sounding used grappling hooks in an attempt to gather additional evidence.

They hoped to get additional parts of the bodies or parts of clothing, but nothing was found after an hour's search. Drs. Duval and Lanford studied the conditions around the shores of the lake and various measurements were taken at a point where presumably the bodies were cast into the lake.

Teegestrom Still Missing.

Approximately 150 witnesses will be called to testify at the open hearing, Mr. Walmsley said today. About three weeks would be needed to hear the testimony. Neither Dr. B. M. McKoin nor Jeff Burnett will be called. Neither can be made to testify, as both are charged with murder," Mr. Walmsley said.

A report current yesterday that State officials know the whereabouts of Harold L. Teegestrom, the missing timekeeper of the Southern Carbon Company at Spyker, who was mysteriously called from his bunk on a night last week and then disappeared, was branded as untrue by Mr. Walmsley.

"The State does not know the whereabouts of Teegestrom, but we are very anxious to locate him and bring him back here as a witness," he said. "The report that we know where he is and will bring him back to testify at the open hearing is without foundation. If he is found, however, and is within the boundaries of Louisiana, he will be subpoenaed as a witness. We are very anxious to locate him."

Much significance is attached to silence on the part of the parents of Teegestrom, who at first seemed greatly alarmed over his disappearance. They live in Monroe, and when Teegestrom first disappeared they expressed the belief that he had been kidnapped and probably injured or detained. Nothing has since been heard from the father and mother.

Teegestrom is reported to have been seen in Monroe yesterday.

Amplifying their testimony at the hearing yesterday, Dr. Duval and Dr. Lanford said that the autopsy showed that the removal of some of Daniel's organs had been made by a person skilled in the use of the surgeon's knife.

The current issue of Sergeant Dalton's Weekly, published at Winnifield, La., and the upholder of the Klan in this section, arrived in Bastrop this morning, its flaring headlines denouncing the State officials and others concerned in the investigation of the Mer Rouge outrage. Attorney General Coco is bitterly assailed and his alleged Masonic record, purporting to be taken from the proceedings of the grand lodge, printed.

The article asserts that Judge Coco was initiated, passed and raised in the Masonic Order; that in 1901 he was Worshipful Master and that in 1906 he was demitted. The article continues:

"It is now generally known that he is a Catholic but before Rome again received him to her bosom, he was required to go into the Catholic Church and denounce and renounce Masonry, and beg that the ban of excommunication be lifted.

"Is his record such that he can investigate and prosecute Masons, and Protestants of Morehouse Parish and State of Louisiana? Shall he decide the use of sword and bayonet and machine guns in a Protestant's country? and talk of the horrors of the inquisition?"

Governor Parker is denounced, the prosecution is declared to be "bunk" and Dr. McKoin is defended for his efforts to enforce the moral code in Mer Rouge.

"But what are we trying to bring out in this article for the edification of all," says this article, "including old Adolph Coco and John M. Parker, is that when a man's home and his children and his neighbors are outraged and trampled under foot, so to speak, and insulted day after day, and assassination is attempted on the very champion of right, law and order, and the constituted authorities are helpless, something else is liable to happen. And it will happen, just the same, after the Mer Rouge affair is forgotten."

Pope and Catholics Attacked.

Another article assails the Pope and the Catholic Church in America and asserts that the Catholics have always been in politics.

On the same page is a communication, with the name of J. A. Bayett, affixed, attacking Governor Parker. An excerpt from this communication says:

"Due to your (the Governor's) recent actions in the Mer Rouge affair, it is quite evident that you have become an ally to Romanism, 'bootlegging and negro concubinage. Why did you not go to the rescue of Dr. McKoin when this same bunch of law breakers sought to murder him? He was of unquestionable character and was trying to cuppress lawlessness in his home town of Mer Rouge."

Dalton's leading article on his first page virtually condones the killing of Daniel and Richards. Speaking of the masked band, it says "they did the best they knew how to do," and then continues:

"It was either to surrender to the cutthroats and lawless element or take strenuous steps to clean house. Richards was first captured and taken out and questioned a few nights before kidnapping. Then the five men were captured and taken out to be dealt with. The men who handled them were evidently masked and acted secretly, just as was the would-be assassin who attempted to murder Dr. McKoin. They were attending to a serious matter in the name of law and order, and in the name of Christianity and the sanctity of the home, and theyu sed the same methods—fed thec rooks of the same spoon that they were guilty of using in their treatment of the law-abiding people—treated them rough.

"As to the members of the Vigilance Committee being members of the Klan, that is just a pack of bunk, hatched up by the enemies of the Klan. No proof has been offered that any of them were Klansmen, and if such should be forthcoming, it would be no more significant than if it were shown that some of them were members of the Baptist or Methodist Church. One thing iss ure, the Klan did not officially order the kidnapping."

day called upon the Protestant chur — of the United States to drive the Ku Klux Klan out of the country by denouncing it from their pulpits. Dr. Silverman, who attacked the Klan as being composed of pirates and conspirators who were a menace to American institutions, said:

"The Ku Klux Klan is simply a band of pirates who seek to dictate in their own interest. It is a conspiracy and a government within a government. The Ku Klux Klan has been revived and established with a larger membership than in 1866. It is directed against the Catholic, Jew and negro. Its purpose is to make a country in which Protestants shall dominate. It is a conspiracy to boycott and ridicule all others who are not members.

"In certain sections this program has been put into operation. They have sought to destroy the social and business standing of those who do not belong to their organization. They hold session on mountain tops and in the woods and mask themselves. They have established in certain sections of the country an invisible government, which is against the integrity of the nation and destroys the guarantees of the Constitution.

"This group claims to be patriotic. A true patriot does not need a mask, nor does he need to murder to show his patriotism. Just as I have a right to preach this sermon today, let them say what they have to say in public. The Constitution gives them that right. To carry on secret warfare is to resort to the methods of gunmen and murderers. That is not patriotism. It is rebellion.

"Is it their purpose to convert the Jews and Catholics? If so, they are going about it in the wrong way. They are not Protestants: they are not Christians. I hold that every man or woman in the Ku Klux Klan is not a real Christian or a real Protestant. The Protestant Church should denounce the Klan, and if every Protestant pulpit should denounce it, it would not continue."

MER ROUGE WAITING.

MER ROUGE, La., Jan. 3.—With the detraining of cavalry here and the arrival of chief counsel for the state of Louisiana in the prosecution of the Ku-Klux Klan, martial law hangs on the governor's decision.

The atmosphere of Mer Rouge and Bastrop and the surrounding country, on the eve of the open hearing on the murders of Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards appears surcharged with premonitions of danger. It is accepted as the common moral belief that every man who is able to be about goes armed.

Klan and anti-klan, heeled with service revolvers of the heaviest caliber, quietly are awaiting for Friday. Friday in the Bastrop courthouse will see the culmination of the present wave of expectancy.

"I can pick you 20 men out of Mer Rouge," said a determined looking citizen today, "who will jump at the chance to sell out two for one."

This project was mentioned to a number of other citizens. They agreed it was so. That first citizen amplified this Mer Rouge phrase. He said he would be glad "to take a killing if he could be sure of killing two of those klan scoundrels."

"And," said another and older citizen, "when the soldiers and the federal men are taken out of here it will come as sure as hell if it doesn't come before."

Favor Martial Law.

This feeling has been analyzed by the military commanders and the state legal representatives and the analysis is freely reputed as positive in favor of martial law. Perhaps soldiers will be used only to disarm those citizens who enter the courthouse. In any event, it is the determination of the governor to prevent, if possible, any display of violence.

Following the arrival of the cavalry there came Adjutant General Toombs. He met Chief Farland of the Department of Justice squad, and with Col. Guerre, in command of the troops in Morehouse Parish, and Capt. William Cooper. At the conclusion of this conference it was announced that Gen. Toombs would establish his headquarters in Bastrop. The cavalry troop, which is famous for its attachment to the Rainbow Division, numbers many overseas veterans. The troopers are to be used in patrolling roads used by the state in transporting witnesses and to guard witnesses against the intimidation of masked gangs.

"Daughter of the Klan."

The inevitable feminine entered the picture today. She became known to the drama as Miss Ada May Hamilton, the girl, who was sent into exile by the klan and who now is in Mer Rouge to participate in the preparation of evidence against the hooded crew of night riders. One by one witnesses are being rounded up and given assurances of protection. Miss Hamilton talked with the federal investigators for a few moments and drove back to her mother's small plantation near here. She is pointed out as the girl selected by Capt. Skipworth as "the daughter of the klan."

Miss Hamilton has declined the distinction of being adopted by the maskers. "They have done everything to ruin my reputation before the world," she said. "They have worked behind masks to frighten my mother and drive me from home. I couldn't defend myself."

More Arrests Coming.

Arrests are to come any moment. Federal men say that more than 35 are to be arrested at once and locked up. When the upper ring of the klan is behind the bars it is predicted that intimidation will cease and the somewhat mystifying morale of the klan destroyed. Capt. Skipworth, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse klan, is to be one of the first to be seized. Skipworth continues to walk the streets of Bastrop with his usual cold, gray dignity.

Mer Rouge and Bastrop were in something approximating holiday ardor today. Country people came from miles roundabout. Negroes jogged in on all manner of conveyances ranging from automobiles down to rickety one-horse carts. Planters about the streets, their spurs jingling and a glint of gun metal visible at the waistband.

Guns are not conspicuous. The prevailing mode is tucked inside the trousers belt and the handle covered by the vest. A flip of the vest and the gun fairly leaps into alarming activity. All kinds of horses stand tethered to the hitching posts. They vary from the moth-eaten pinto to the thoroughbred with timorous nerves and thin nostrils that quiver for every rude gesture.

The convivial tipple has its ancient charm in the sunny south. A couple of the raging torrents of the city slacked a burning thirst yesterday with nitre cooked down to the alcoholic element. A dose of cooked nitre is guaranteed to make a Ford jump a hundred yards.

Judge MacMahon Says Louisiana Killers Must Be Punished.

An apparent attack on the Ku Klux Klan was made by County Judge J. Grattan MacMahon in Brooklyn yesterday in an address at the reception given in Part I. of the County Court to the new District Attorney, Charles J. Dodd.

"We are living in a very exciting time," declared Judge MacMahon, speaking as chairman of the Board of County Judges. "In the South today men are being tried for the murder of two men who, at the hands of a mob, suffered a cruel death, and whose bodies were only recently dragged from the bottom of a lake. There must be no weakness in the prosecution of scoundrels, vindictive and malignant, whose crimes constitute lawlessness masquerading under the guise of alleged righteousness that takes the law into its own hands and works injustice to the overthrow of justice. Such lawless elements must be stamped out and punished; otherwise, all crime will become law."

MONROE, La., Jan. 8.—The Twin Cities Ministerial Association, composed of the pastors of the Protestant churches of Monroe and West Monroe, in its session late this afternoon adopted resolutions expressing belief in the innocence of Dr. B. The ministers declare that they "concur in the sentiments expressed in the resolution adopted by the First Baptist Church of Monroe on Saturday night," and express their "confidence and faith" in the "character and integrity of Dr. McKoin."

BY A. G. BROWN.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 10.—Sensation after sensation rocked the little Morehouse Parish courthouse today. Louisiana's great inquisition into the reign of terror, which has shook the state, made great progress.

The names of twelve of the parish's best known men were read into the record of the district court as members of "black-hooded" mobs, which spread horror and fear throughout the parish; a terror, which came to a dramatic halt only with the torture and murder of Watt Daniel and Tom Richards.

Practically all, if not all, of these men are known as leaders of the Ku Klux Klan. Many of them were named repeatedly by different witnesses as members of different mobs. All wore the black hood, identified yesterday as the "terror hood" of the klansmen. All wore a hood similar to those worn by the mob, which on that fatal August day, led Watt Daniel and Tom Richards into their wood of terrible torture, and to their death.

Those Actually Named.

The list of these names is as follows:

Capt. J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the parish klan.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, alleged captain of the Mer Rouge kluxers.

Jeff Burnett, former deputy sheriff of the parish; now under arrest for murder, in connection with the deaths of Daniel and Richards.

James Tisdale, prominent resident of Monroe.

A. B. Campbell, leading planter of Jones.

"Pink" Kirkpatrick, well known resident of Mer Rouge.

Earl Rogers.

J. D. Higgenbotham.

Larry Calhoun.

Gus Calhoun.

"Bob" Dade, mayor of Mer Rouge and the husband of a sister of Watt Daniel.

"One of the Harp boys."

So the mask of mystery is being torn aside. The state is working with the precision of a great loom, weaving, shred by shred, a great cloak of circumstantial exidence against some of the best known men in this whole section of Louisiana.

May Identify Mob Leaders.

But that is not all. No identification of men in the mob, which took Daniel and Richards away on their last great journey, has been made. But the state promises to make it before many days.

Secret service operatives; crack men of the federal department of justice, "are ready to make at least 12 or 14 arrests;" for the murder of Daniel and Richards, just as soon as Attorney General Coco says the word.

The parish is stunned tonight at the day's revelations. Well may it be. But the state of Louisiana has further sensational surprises in store.

Identification of black hooded mob members was not the only shock that Bastrop got today.

It heard Harry Neelis, upstanding business man, of this parish, seat, tell on the witness stand how Sheriff Carpenter stood only 100 feet away from his garage when the mob first kidnapped Tom Richards; saw every move the mob made; saw them throw Richards in a car, and start him "for the woods," but made no move whatsoever to protect him, or to enforce the laws of Louisiana.

Sheriff Carpenter's name has been published as one of the charter members and charter officials of the klan.

And Bastropians further heard Neelis testify, in answer to the state's question, "Why did not you make protest to officials about Richards' kidnaping?"

Sheriff's Amazing Actions.

"Why, I started to. I started for the courthouse; stopped to talk to two ball players on the courthouse yard; told them that it was a shame to have things go on like that, and that I was getting tired of it. Sheriff Carpenter had stepped up. He led me aside and said: 'Young man, if you want to get along in Bastrop you'd better forget about the activities of the klan, and not talk so much about what the people here are doing.'"

It was a thrilling day in this little parish seat; a day of shadows and tears; a day of sensation and revelation.

There crept into the record of the court the accusing whisper of a lisping baby, Tom Richards' three-year-old orphan girl, who, through her mother's lips, charged that "The Ku Klux has taken our daddy away."

There came a voice from the grave, the voice of Tom Richards, charging that "Capt. Skipwith led the black hooded men of the first kidnaping party."

There came to the stand Ada Mae Hamilton, the 17-year-old girl of Mer Rouge, who was told to "get out of Mer Rouge and stay out until she got the consent of the klan to come back."

And she told, between sobs, how she had been taken from her home, from her mother, from her Sunday school; how she was put on a train at the point of a gun in the hands of Dr. McKoin, sheltered from the cold only by a gingham dress, hatless, and with only enough money to barely pay her fare to Little Rock.

She told how the doctor, with his gun, at the head of black hooded men,

Many Acts Affecting Automobiles, Indorsed by Tennessee Automobile Club, Are Introduced in State Senate.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 10.—The judiciary committee of the Senate today announced that a public hearing would be held at the Hermitage Hotel next Wednesday night on the two bills prohibiting theaters and professional baseball on Sunday.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 10.—Shea of Shelby today led a spirited but futile attack in an effort to block in the House of Representatives the passage of two of the prohibition measures which a few of the members are determined shall be approved, if passed, by Gov. Peay. Others of the delegation fought with Shea except Miss Griffin, who voted "No" when he voted "Yes," and "Yes" when he voted "No."

The first to be brought up and finally passed after every known manner of blocking had been resorted to was House bill No. 26, making possession of liquor prima facie evidence of guilt of transporting, and the second was House bill No. 27, making it a felony to transport liquor in quantities of one gallon or more.

When the first came up on the calendar Mr. Bratton of Obion, who introduced it, asked that it be placed on third reading for final passage. Representative Adams of Davidson County made an ineffectual attempt to have the bill again referred to the judiciary committee, and that having failed, an amendment was offered by Shea of Shelby which would have required that the liquor so possessed must be on the person of the accused. Arguments in behalf of the amendment were made by Representatives Haynes of Franklin County, Drennon, Adams and Wilson of Coffee, while it was attacked by Candler of McMinn and Bratton.

The latter in his argument insisted that it was very distressing that the effort to kill the bill should have come from among the Shelby delegation, especially since it was largely on account of conditions in that county that the additional bone dry laws are needed. If Shelby County were cut off from the state, Tennessee would not need such a law, he said.

Mr. Shea in reply declared that Memphis and Shelby County didn't need protection from within near as much as protection from the outside. The reputation Memphis has received has been gotten largely, he said, through prohibitionists of other counties and towns who go to Memphis to celebrate. The amendment was killed by a vote of 56 to 30 and the bill was passed by a vote of 71 to 14.

entered her home, and how he sen her old mother reeling across the room with a blow from his fist, when the stricken mother, on her knees, prayed both to the black hoods and to he "Stampley black hood holdup." And he recognized in that party Capt. Skipwith. Larry Calhoun and he thought he recognized Mayor Bob Dade. Later in town, in the same party, he thought he saw J. D. Higgenbotham.

Mrs. W. E. Hopkins was another of the day's witnesses. Her testimony related to the holdup after the Bastrop picnic when she was stopped with women companions, but recognized none of them.

HOODED MOB TO BE FORCED TO SPEAK

Atlanta Ga. Georgian 1/18/23.

Judge Rules Mer Rouge Defendants May Be Compelled to Testify,

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHISON, I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.

COURT HOUSE, BASTROP, La., Jan. 17.—Judge Fred L. Odom, presiding at the open hearing of the "hooded mob" murders of Mer Rouge, announced Wednesday all "prospective defendants" would be compelled to take the stand if called as witnesses. He ruled, however, they would not be forced to answer questions tending to incriminate themselves in the crime.

Judge Odom's decision paves the way for the summoning of Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Ku-Klux Klan, and all other klan officials, as witnesses. It was made on an objection raised by Judge William C. Barnette, chief of defense counsel.

Barnette charged "third degree methods" had been used Tuesday in examination of E. N. Grey, church deason, who was accused of complicity in the crime by a Louisiana newspaper, and declared "he would decline to answer any further questions." When Odom's ruling was announced, Barnette called Grey from the witness stand and the proceedings stopped while defense lawyers conferred.

"Since Mr. Grey was on the stand Tuesday he has learned he is being in a sense accused of having some connection with this affair," Barnette began. "Because of this fact, he has consulted counsel. We decline to answer any further questions because it may lead to incriminate him. He is availing himself of the article of the construction of this state, which provides a man need give no evidence tending to incriminate himself."

Barnette cited the statute in full. "The constitution also forbids use of the third degree and this applies to the third degree in public or private."

Barnette added to subject to this witness or any other witness to the third degree through a cross-examination such as was given this witness Tuesday, the letter and spirit of the constitution of the state is being violated.

Assistant Attorney General George Seth Guion and Senator Howard B. Warren, special prosecutors, declared Grey had not been charged with any crime and therefore could be called to the stand.

"THIRD DEGREE" DENIED.

"This is simply an effort to obtain information," said Guion. "No questions are asked save in a dignified way and in an effort to get to the truth. At the same time, no attorney has any connection with this proceedings and has no right to say what witnesses should talk and what witnesses should not talk."

"We insist no witnesses be brought in here to testify who are prospective defendants or against whom accusations may be made," Barnette replied.

"Tell us who these prospective defendants are and we'll move against them," Guion countered.

"You'll hear from all the rest of them when you bring them in here," said Barnette.

Judge Odom, in his decision, declared no affidavit had been sworn out against Grey and the witness would have to take the stand.

"If he is treated unfairly, I am going to stop the examination at once," the judge added. "So far as the examination goes, however, there is no reason why you should not answer questions which do not tend to incriminate yourself."

Before Grey was called to the stand Sheriff Fred L. Carpenter testified the band of unmasked raiders who broke into the home of Alonzo L. Braddock, a farmer, did not carry a search warrant.

Carpenter told of sending Braddock to a justice of the peace to get bond.

"This was the morning after?"

"Yes, sir."

"When Braddock came before you next morning the search warrant was made out by the justice at the same time?"

"Yes, sir."

"That was the morning after the raid?"

"Yes, sir."

During the time Grey was in council with his attorneys, Thomas L. Higginbotham, Collinston farmer, testified that on the night of August 24 he picked up Grey near the scene of the kidnaping and they both drove home. The witness said he then went to the home of his cousin, Will Higginbotham, who had received a threatening letter and acted as guard for a week. He also corroborated other evidence as given by Grey.

Higginbotham's testimony ended the morning session.

KLANSMAN TESTIFIES.

Will H. Higginbotham, a klansman living near Collinston, was the first witness at the afternoon session. He told of receiving a threatening letter on the day Daniel and Richards were slain.

"You received a threatening letter through the mail on August 24 last?"

"Yes, sir."

"Will you let us see it?"

"Yes."

"Have you any objection to giving over this letter to the court for safekeeping?"

"Not if you let Judge Odom have it."

The letter was then marked and given to the court.

"You understand from the contents of this letter that the writer warned you against interfering with the making of liquor?"

"Yes, although I have never enterfered with anyone."

"Who do you think sent it?"

"I have no idea unless it was some of the fellows at Mer Rouge who were selling whisky."

"Who were they?"

"I don't know for certain."

"Well, whom do you suspect?"

"Some said Watt Daniel and Will Braddock were both doing it."

WATT DANIEL SEEN.

"When did you last see Watt Daniel?"

"While he was returning from the ball game on August 24."

"Are you a klan member?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you have a white regalia?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you have a black hood and robe?"

"No, sir." They didn't give me none and I didn't buy none and so I didn't have a black one."

"You know klansmen have black hoods?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you know any one who has these black robes?"

"No, sir. The only ones that I saw were worn by men who were on the road after the ball game."

"Have you ever heard that Tom Higginbotham took part in these vigilant committee affairs?"

"If I did, I didn't know it. I told him once he could do as he pleased, but I said I wouldn't have anything to do with that kind of stuff."

"Where did you talk about it?"

"Once when he asked me to go along. He said he expected a call that night, but I said I wouldn't go."

MEETING IN WOODS.

"Did you ever attend any klan meetings?"

"Once in the woods."

"Who was there?"

"I saw Tommy Higginbotham and Captain Skipwith. I don't remember any others."

"Was Dr. McKoin there?"

"No, sir."

DENIES BELONGS TO KLAN

McKoin Said by Morehouse Citizens to Be Member and Marched Around Fiery Circle and Subscribed to Its Full Ritual—Watt Daniels Laughed at It and Called Them Idiots—And Now He Is Dead.

BY ROBERT LEE.

(By Chicago Tribune-Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

MER ROUGE, La., Dec. 31.—While soldiers and civilian officials are darting hither and thither among the bayous the moss-clad forests and the cut-off plantations of this ancient Louisiana community, seizing this and that for complicity in the hooded atrocities of Aug. 24 there is a group of government men weaving a net in Mer Rouge with meshes small enough to entrap even such an impalpable thing as hypocrisy.

Rank Hypocrisy.

"It's the rank hypocrisy of the klan," one of these federal agents will say "that glosses over such minor things as broken friendships and added a glamour even to murder. Men who had been comrades from the cradle were rent apart when one joined the klan; for his membership in the klan was his sufficient warrant to commit outrage even upon his old friend."

Arrests are being made and evidence still being gathered for the open hearing on Jan. 5 and for the indictments and trials which are to follow in March and April and chief in this evidence will be the array of facts which establishes the inescapable determination of the klan to possess even the thoughts, to say nothing of the life-long allegiance of the subject member.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, once beloved of every inhabitant of Mer Rouge, has been alienated absolutely from the people who found him a charming champion, a steadfast friend and a devoted citizen. He had clinked glasses many a time with Watt Daniels, the butchered victim of the klan mob. Daniels was a graduate of the University of Louisiana, an intelligent, progressive planter, the son of an old American family, the bearer of a tradition, a soldier of distinction in France, a young man of resource and parish-wide acquaintance.

McKoin Wide Read Man.

Dr. McKoin is called a wide read man, and yesterday McKoin fell under the spell of Captain J. K. Skipwith, an old river character, a hard cursing, steel gray personality of the intolerant patriarchal type, and within a few short weeks had completely destroyed the bonds that held him to his oldest friends. In the Kloran, which is the sacred book of the invisible empire of the Ku Klux Klan it is written that the fourfold duty of a klansman is to "worship God, be patriotic toward our country, be devoted and loyal to our klan and emperor and to practice clannishness toward his fellow klansmen."

Captain Skipwith is clannish and he may worship God; but there is some doubt of his definition of patriotism toward the government when he described Gov. Parker as a "damned old braying jackass."

He claims he did not say it. Evidence to the contrary will be produced.

In the meetings of the klan everything was surcharged with the impressive solemnity of the invisible empire. The wind moaning in the bearded pines, the stark tree trunks, spooky in the peering light of torches and the blazing "fiery cross" all contributed their mysticism to the wierd setting of the forest Klavern.

Creed of Skipworth.

In such a scenic investiture as this old Skipworth, portentious in his hood and gown, uttered such ponderous flap-doodle as this:

"My terrors," (and if any one thinks that word 'terror' hasn't been burned into the soul of this parish he hasn't read well). "My terrors and Klansmen, make ready, prepare the sacred altar, my terrors and Klansmen; in the sacred cause we have entered, be thou faithful unto death. Be patriotic toward our country; be clannish toward our Klansmen; be devoted to our fraternity, we will stand for our blood is not pledged in vain."

All this from the implacable Kloran, straight from the inspired mind of the Imperial Wizard in Atlanta. It is the kind of stuff that weaned McKeon from such men as Watt Daniels. The Kloran says "No invocation (in the ceremonies) will be tolerated, and no frivolity or "horseplay" must be allowed."

The inspired hand of the Imperial Author apparently deviated from the chaste Elizabethan to the Georgian vernacular when it dropped that 'horseplay" into the profound decree of the Kloran.

Also impressive is the charge of Cyclops: "Let them enter the Klavern in quest of citizenship, but keep you a Klansman's eye upon them and if they or any one of them should flinch at duty or show himself a coward, weakling or a treacherous scalawag at this time or in the future, it will be your sworn duty to eject him or them from the portal of the invisible empire." Also "What if one of your party should prove a traitor? He would be immediately banished in disgrace from the invisible empire, conscience would repeatedly revile him and direful things befall him."

All these things are in the secret work of the klan. The tenth question asked of an aspirant to membership is this:

"Can you always be depended on?"

McKoin, the fugitive doctor of Mer Rouge, subscribed to all this. Even the "treacherous scalawag" which flowed so insouciantly from the inspired pen of the wizard struck no jorring note for the intelligent doctor.

organization which had established itself as some surpassing man-made judgment, it is hoped to prove that klansmen became so perverted in their ideas of patriotism that love of friends, community interest and even family ties were subordinated to the will of cyclops. Old Skipworth goes aboard with two broad-hatted guardians lounging in his wake. Mer Rouge men have been heard to say they do not propose to attend the hearing other than well heeled. The issue is clear. All of the respectable citizens, whether klan or anti-klan, want the parish cleaned up, Skipworth and all. The dyed-in-the-wool klansmen want to get past through the crisis.

"And if they do get past," says John Jones, broad of hat and drawling of speech, "all the guns in hell won't stop them from killing us. There's men in this town they will get anyhow. There was a time here a month back when we had all decided to pack a gun and sell out as dear as possible. We knowed we was goners. We was just waiting for the right bullet."

But now there seems a fair chance to clean up.

CHEERFUL UNDERTONE IN NEW YEAR'S OUTLOOK

Economists, Bankers and Others Optimistic at Close.

European Situation Is Regarded as Important and Will Set Price of Wheat—Railroads Are Improving and Labor Shortage Stresssed

(By The Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—As the year closes and the country's leading economists, bankers and business men review the past twelve months, and attempt to forecast the future, a distinctly cheerful undertone is in evidence. It is generally recognized that the past year has been materially better than expected—that the business revival has developed an unforeseen vigor. Thus it is pointed out that the country has enjoyed an unprecedented building boom, that the steel in- outstripped all pre-war

A Declaration Of Principles Upon Which This Great Order Is Built

It Is Unfortunate That For Business Or Political Reasons Some Citizens Of This Country Have Seen Fit To Wage War On This Organization, Which Exists Only To Further The Interests Of America's Ideals And Institutions

In view of the fact that the Times-Picayune of New Orleans, on March 26th, saw fit to publish an arraignment of the Ku Klux Klan in Beauregard parish, and in further view of their base insinuations against the good citizens of Beauregard parish, and the further fact that they attempted to imply that membership in the Klan might interfere with, or otherwise disqualify a man from holding office in the state of Louisiana or the United States of America, we feel that it is necessary to lay before you such facts and information as will refute such insinuations.

We also realize that the public in general is very much in the dark as to the objects and purposes of this great fraternal order, and we, therefore, beg to quote its principles and purposes, for the reason that they are not secret, but evidently have not been given the publicity that, no doubt, they should have had.

Principles and Purposes.

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, as a great and essentially a patriotic, fraternal benevolent Order does not discriminate against a man on account of his religious or political creed, when same does not conflict with or antagonize the sacred rights and privileges guaranteed by our civil government and Christian ideals and institutions.

Therefore, to avoid any misunderstanding, and as evidence that they do not seek to impose unjustly the requirements of this Order upon anyone who cannot, on account of his religious or political scruples, voluntarily meet the requirements, and as proof that they respect all honest men in their sacred convictions, whether same are agreeable with the requirements or not, the Klan requires as an absolute necessity on the part of each candidate an affirmative answer to the following questions:

Is the motive prompting your ambition to be a Klansman serious and unselfish?

Are you a native born white, Gentile American citizen?

Are you absolutely opposed to and free of any allegiance of any nature to any cause, government, people, sect or ruler that is foreign to the United States of America.

Do you believe in the tenets of the Christian religion?

Do you esteem the United States of America and its institutions above any other government, civil, political or esslesiastical, in the whole world?

Will you, without mental reservation, take a solemn oath to defend, preserve and enforce same?

Do you believe in clanishness and will you faithfully practice same towards klansmen?

Do you believe in and will you faithfully strive for the eternal maintenance of white supremacy?

Will you faithfully obey our constitution and laws, and conform willingly to all our usages, requirements and regulations?

Can you be always depended on?

The Klan Oath.

In the oath taken by all Klansmen may be found the following paragraphs, that will serve to illustrate the general purposes of the organizations:

"I most solemnly assert and affirm that to the government of the United States of America and any state thereof of which I may become a resident, I sacredly swear an unqualified allegiance, above any other and every kind of government in the whole world. I here and now pledge my life, my property, my vote, and my sacred honor, to uphold its fla[illegible] its constitution and constitutional laws, and will protect, defend and enforce same unto death.

"I most solemnly promise and swear that I will always, at all times, and in all places, help, aid and assist the duly constituted officers of the law in the proper performance of their regular duties.

"I swear that I [illegible] ly and valiantly shield and preserve, [illegible] able means and methods, the [illegible] privileges of [illegible]S, SEPARA- [illegible]HITE SU- [illegible] happiness, [illegible] any person or [illegible] us sect or people, [illegible] race, color, creed, lineage [illegible] whats[illegible]

"All [illegible] h I have [illegible] y this oath, I will seal with my blood, [illegible] Almighty God. Amen!"

Outside of these par[illegible]phs, the oath of a Klansman is almost identical to that taken by initiates of any of our numerous orders, pertaining to maintaining secrecy of the lodge itself, an oath that all societies require.

The statements frequently appearing in the daily press, to the effect that the Ku Klux are opposed to or fighting any religion, or any person because of his religion, are absolutely false, and are published either by uninformed persons, or by those who have some personal advantage to gain by fostering hard feelings between the various creeds America.

Any one who can answer the above questions affirmatively, and has a good reputation, can join the Klan.

If you are a Native Born, white Gentile, American [illegible]en, having the best interest of your community, City, [illegible]e and Nation at heart, owing no allegiance to any [illegible]ign government, political party, sect, creed or ruler, [illegible]ged in a legitimate occupation, and believe in:—

[illegible]he tenets of the Christian [illegible]eligion, white supremacy, [illegible] relationship between capital and American labor, [illegible]ction of our pure womanhood, prevention of the cause of mob violence and lynching, preventing unwarranted strikes by foreign labor agitators, the limitation of foreign immigration, closer relationship of pure Americanism, the upholding of the constitution of the United States, the sovereignty of our State rights, the separation of church and State, freedom of speech and press, the most needed local reforms, you are eligible to membership in the Invisible Empire.

It is indeed unfortunate that for business or political reasons, some citizens in this country have seen fit to wage

Louisiana

war on this organization, which exists only to further the interest of America's ideals and institutions. The fact that the Klan claims hundred per cent Americanism as it's slogan does not mean that Klansmen claim to be the only hundred per cent Americans. It merely signifies that as members and as a body they are striving to reach a perfect standard of American Citizenship.

Klansmen recognize the rights of their brothers of other fraternities and other faiths to believe and worship as they please. No good Klansman thinks any less of his friends for their varying beliefs. Nor does a good Klansman resent the fact that he cannot join the fraternal societies formed among followers of other creeds. It is their privilege to disbar whom ever they wish.

But the citizens of the Invisible Empire do claim to hold the same privilege of saying who shall join their order, at the same time not disparaging the other man's views.

Waging war on the Klan is like trying to sweep back the tide with a broom. It thrives on opposition. It welcomes "exposures." It is growing by leaps and bounds. The charter list has been multiplied time and again, but in all this rapid growth, never has the standard of membership been lowered.

The Klan is still the hardest order in America to gain membership in.

The crying need of America today is not more laws, nor more restrictions, but greater observance of the good laws we already have. But greatest of all is the need in America today of REAL MEN. Corruption in office all over America fills the daily papers. Graft, disregard for constituted authority, indifference to America's welfare, are the poisons that are eating out the vitals of this great nation. Everyone agrees to that statement.

What America needs most, then, is MEN.

God give us men. The Invisible Empire demands strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands.

Men whom the lust of office does not kill
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have HONOR; men who will NOT LIE;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking!
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking:
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worm creeds,
Their LARGE professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, Lo! freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting justice sleeps.
God give us men!
Men who serve not for selfish booty,
But real men, courageous, who flinch not at duty;
Men of dependable character; men of sterling worth;
Then wrongs will be redressed, and right will rule the earth.
God give us men!

Yours very truly,
The Knight of the Ku Klux Klan,
Beauregard Klan No. 9
Realm of Louisiana.

Mayor of Mer Rouge Backs Up Letter on Klan.

Commercial Appeal

GREENVILLE, Miss., May 14.—Hon. S. V. Anderson, secretary of the Washington County Protestant organization opposed to the Ku Klux Klan received the letter below in reply to an inquiry into the letter about Capt. Skipwith recently printed. The letter follows:

Mer Rouge, La., May 9, 1923.

Mr. S. V. Anderson, secretary.
Greenville, Miss.

5-15-23

Dear Sir:

I have your very kind letter of the 7th inst., and thank you for the kindly interest you and your organization are manifesting in the deplorable Mer Rouge affair. The letter you saw in the Arkansas Gazette was bona fide in every respect. The 59 signatures attached are all bona fide citizens of Mer Rouge and vicinity and represent the very best people in our midst. Some of them are leading citizens and a number our best ladies. The 59 signers were all too glad to denounce the falsehood Skipwith and his klan are using to conceal facts and a hundred more signers could have been obtained had the petition been held over 24 hours, but we thought 59 signers were enough to brand his statement as false and to show to the world how the people here who know the facts in the case feel about the matter. There is not the least doubt that the bodies found were Daniel and Richard and the torture they both endured before being put to death is mute evidence of the brutality practiced. Dr. Duval, the government pathologist, who held the inquest and examined the bodies, says that in his experience of handling over 6,000 cases for the government he has never witnessed such brutality and torture as these two men were subjected to before being thrown into the lake. You are right in fighting the klan. It is the greatest menace our government faces today. In this parish it has assumed control of our sheriff's office, taken charge of our district attorney's office and paralyzed our court.

Our recent grand jury with eight klansmen on it valued their oaths to their klan more than their oaths as jurors, ignored all evidence against the klan and returned "no bills" in the face of positive evidence in a number of cases.

It has disrupted our community. Our people are divided, lifelong friendships in many cases disrupted and even our churches and schools feel its effects. I sincerely trust you and your good people may be spared the ordeal through which we are passing. Again thanking you for your letter and with very best personal regards, I ask to remain,

Very truly,
R. L. DADE,
Mayor.

LA. GOVERNOR AGAIN GOES AFTER THE KLAN

St. Louis Star 10-11-23

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 5—Gov. Parker received a delegation from Jackson Parish last Tuesday to hear their story regarding the alleged domination of that parish by the Ku Klux Klan. It is said that Governor Parker declares that it is his avowed purpose to put an end to the infamous work of the Klan in Louisiana.

St. Louis Mo.

It was pointed out in the report to the Governor that judicial authority had been usurped and that persons known to be opposed to the Klan were being "framed" and punished, while those known to be members of the Klan, guilty of crimes are let go free. The Governor said that if all these allegations are true or even a part of them, the parish of Jackson was in a seething state of anarchy and such a state of affairs must be put down, if constitutional government is to survive.

EACH ASPIRANT SURE OF VICTORY AT POLLS

Klan Is Regarded as Dominant Issue of Campaign

Times Picayune 11-11-23

Satisfaction in the progress made by the three gubernatorial candidates and expressions of confidence in the result of the Democratic primary January 15 came Saturday in statements issued by the city and state campaign managers of Hewitt Bouanchaud, Henry L. Fuqua and Huey P. Long.

Dudley Guilbeau, state campaign manager, and Mitchel Provosty, city campaign manager of Mr. Bouanchaud, reiterated that the Ku Klux Klan is the dominant issue in the gubernatorial campaign, and invite klansmen and klan sympathizers to fight it out in the open.

W. J. Everett, state campaign manager of Mr. Fuqua, refers to the meeting of Mr. Fuqua and Mr. Bouanchaud in joint debate at Natchitoches last week, and declares that Mr. Fuqua scored a triumph there.

It was announced that Charles J. Theard would preside at and address the Fuqua meeting in New Orleans November 16, next Friday.

The publicity department of Huey P. Long, in its statement, asserts that the campaigns of Mr. Fuqua and Mr. Bouanchaud virtually have collapsed and that a North Louisiana merchant made a wager at odds or two to one that Mr. Long will be in the second primary.

Thomas Killeen, city campaign manager of the Old Regular organization, in his statement, asks the voters of New Orleans to give close attention to the candidates for the state Senate and state House of Representatives, as the next session of the Legislature will be "history making."

Bouanchaud Outlines Stand Against Klan

The statement issued by Dudley Guilbeau, state campaign manager of Hewitt Bouanchaud, follows:

"That the Ku Klux Klan is the dominant issue in this campaign has become so evident within the last ten days, that everybody realizes it, except perhaps those of whom it may be said:

There are none so blind as those who refuse to see, none so deaf as those who refuse to hear.

"Nor is this issue localized. The Ku Klux Klan is the topic of political discussion north of the Red river and south of the Red river, east of the Mississippi and west of that big water.

"When the people become divided on a question, in a political campaign, that question is an issue in that campaign.

"When that question involves the fundamental principles of our government, as does the purposes, practices and preachments of the Ku Klux Klan, it becomes the overshadowing issue.

"Hence, it is that we find the pronounced opponents to Mr. Bouanchaud's candidacy loudly bemoaning the fact that the Ku Klux Klan is the great target against which we are directing our guns. They wish to divert attention away from the fact that the ku kluxers and their sympathizers are allied with them and their candidate.

"Mr. Bouanchaud's unequivocal opposition to the klan, his determination to fight it in the open, at every turn, compared with the weak pronouncements of his opponents on the subject is rallying to his support the solid anti-klan vote of the state without reference to locality, and particularly without reference to anyone's religious faith. The klan is not a religion.

"Mr. Bouanchaud has just completed a hand-shaking tour in the Central and Northwest part of the state, where he has been splendidly received. The anti-klan people in those sections are strong for him.

"The developments throughout the state, at this writing, fully satisfies our most sanguine expectations.

"The fight is on! Anti-klan or klan and klan sympathizers. Mr. Bouanchaud has fearlessly chosen the banner under which he will march. Let his opponents do likewise! Come on boys, let's fight on open ground! No trench warfare! No zig-zagging! No side stepping!

"We are for peace, but not at the price of the sacrifice of constitutional provision! We are for peace, but not by the compromise of principles!

"We are for peace, a permanent peace! The sweet and beautiful peace which the Ku Klux Klan has outraged in this state!"

Fuqua Claims Victory in Joint Debate

The statement issued by W. J. Everett, state campaign manager of Henry L. Fuqua, follows:

"Mr. Fuqua's triumph at Natchitoches last Wednesday in his joint debate with Lieutenant Governor Bouanchaud was the outstanding feature of his week's campaign for governor. It was the second time Mr. Fuqua has met the lieutenant governor with the same result.

"State headquarters has had a flood of letters and telegrams from Natchitoches, several from prominent residents who had not previously declared where they stood and representing many creeds and faiths in which they gave glowing accounts of the joint debate and how Mr. Fuqua won the enthusiastic approval of the large crowd.

"Mr. Fuqua has only two speaking dates for the coming week. Monday he has arranged to speak at Springville in Livingston parish, where a parishwide rally has been arranged for him. Friday night, Mr. Fuqua will make his first New Orleans appearance when he will speak at the Athenaeum.

"After speaking in New Orleans Mr. Fuqua will begin a tour of North and West Louisiana that probably will keep him on the road for four weeks. His campaign will be characterized from now on by continued activity as he expects to speak in every section of the state before the January primary."

The statement issued by the publicity department of Huey P. Long follows:

Long Asserts Gains Are Being Indicated

"Personal letters from the Seventh, Third and Sixth Congressional Districts received by Long supporters in New Orleans indicate surprising gains for Long in South Louisiana. The large preponderance of Long posters in all South Louisiana towns prove that the corporate interests and their newspaper allies have failed to divert the public mind from the public record of Huey P. Long. The people know that Huey Long's two opponents are not running on their public records and the feeling is becoming more general that the gubernatorial race virtually is over with Long's success assured.

"Much laughter has been occasioned by Mr. Fuqua's 100 per cent speech-making tour abandonments. He did not complete his widely-advertised North Louisiana speaking program. This week he was to have toured the Seventh District. He spoke at Natchitoches in the Eighth District and then decided to cancel the Seventh District tour.

"Mr. Bouanchaud is shaking hands in North Louisiana and reports indicate his hands will not suffer from candidate's cramp.

"A North Louisiana merchant in New Orleans placed a bet giving odds to two to one that Long will be in the second primary. This explains Fuqua's abandonment of tours and Bouanchaud's handshaking.

"Opponents of Long concede in public statements and privately that Long will carry the Fourth, Fifth, Eighth and Sixth Congressional Districts overwhelmingly. He will lead in the Seventh District and give Bouanchaud a battle for the Third.

"Organization work in the city of New Orleans by Long forces is more than half completed. Meetings will be held for four wards this week in the headquarters, 414 Carondelet street, as follows: First Ward, Tuesday; Third Ward, Wednesday; Seventh Ward, Thursday and Tenth Ward, Friday.

"All the meetings will begin at 8 o'clock. Addresses will be by the same Long oratorical firing squad that spoke to 'curiosity seekers' in the Third District and elsewhere at meetings which the press was compelled to admit were the largest and most enthusiastic in the history of South Louisiana."

Abolish Klan Is Cry of New Regular Group

The statement issued by Michel Provosty, city campaign manager of the New Regular organization, follows:

"The week-end finds the New Regular Democratic organization elated over the New Orleans situation. This week's developments are indeed pleasing.

"In the first place, there can no longer be any doubt in the mind of any citizen of New Orleans that there is a well defined connection between the Ku Klux Klan of Louisiana and the Choctaw-Sanders faction in New Orleans. Mr. Fuqua's boasting admission that klansmen are managing his campaign in his own home town and the 'We are proud of our klansmen' statement from Baton Rouge should settle that question for all time with any sincere opponent of the klan. No amount of noise made by the Choctaw-Sanders faction can detract attention from the fact that Mr. Fuqua and his supporters are working hand in hand with the klan.

"More than fifty precinct meetings were held by the New Regular Democratic organization last week. The attendance at these meetings has been so large as to show unmistakably where the sentiment of New Orleans is. In every precinct of this city we find a tremendous Bouanchaud sentiment and a sentiment strongly in favor of the New Regular candidates for the State Legislature.

"Precinct meetings will continue until every ward is thoroughly organized, and a militant Bouanchaud-New Regular fighting force is perfected. Then ward meetings will be scheduled in every ward of the city. We will carry this fight without any let-up until the Ku Klux Klan is thoroughly crushed in New Orleans and Louisiana."

Old Regulars Praise Candidates in Field

The statement issued by Thomas Killeen, city campaign manager of the Old Regular organization, follows:

"We wish to call the attention of the men and women voters of this city to the candidates for the State Senate and the House of Representatives from the wards and senatorial districts who have received the endorsement of the Old Regular (Choctaw) organization. Each of them are of the highest type of citizenship who have won the respect and confidence of their associates and neighbors and are justly deserving of the high honors to which they aspire.

"The coming Legislature will be called upon to decide matters of the greatest importance to the electorate of this city and the state at large. In many instances the legislation will be of a perplexing nature; in short, it will be a history making session, requiring men who will be staunch and true and ever mindful of the interests of their constituents.

"It is particularly unfortunate for South Louisiana, at this time, that the constitutional convention of 1921 reduced the membership of the House from 118 to 100 members and compelled the southern parishes to bear the major part of the reduction. Orleans parish was reduced from twenty-four representatives to twenty, while the following parishes suffered a cut of one member each:

"Ascension, Assumption, East Feliciana, Iberia, Iberville, Point Coupee, St. James, St. Martin, St. Mary, St. Landry, Terrebonne and Vermillion.

"It can be readily observed that of the total reduction of eighteen members, the southern parishes, including the parish of Orleans, were forced to accept a reduction of sixteen representatives, while the parishes in North Louisiana were cut only two members. It is a pity, but nevertheless true, that this could only be accomplished by and with the aid, support and backing of the Parker-Bouanchaud-Sullivan-Orleans Democratic Association majority of the convention.

"I wish to direct special attention to the Fuqua mass meeting Friday night in the Athenaeum, at St. Charles avenue and Clio street. This meeting will be addressed by Charles J. Theard, who will preside, and by Mr. Fuqua. Other details of the Athenaeum gathering will be an-

Concerning Mr. Thomas

L. E. Thomas, mayor of Shreveport, takes us to task, in a lengthy statement printed Sunday, for concluding that the best way "most surely and speedily to exorcise the klanism and its attendant ills from Louisiana" is to elect Hewitt Bouanchaud and not Henry L. Fuqua. 11-14-23

Times-Picayune

Mr. Thomas is entitled to his opinion, but not to a misreading and subsequent misstatement of this newspaper's utterances.

New Orleans

"This editorial is full of sophistry of the thinnest sort," he says, "and is clearly an appeal to religious prejudice — because some klansmen are supporting Mr. Fuqua and some are supporting Mr. Long, they appeal to the voters to 'draw the line' against them and to unite in supporting Mr. Bouanchaud. I could just as consistently ask that the lines be drawn and call upon all Protestants to support Mr. Fuqua."

It did pose a problem for those who believed, as does this newspaper, that the klan is a pitifully tragic error at its best, that the hold of its fanatic or its vicious hieftains upon thousands of misled Louisianians should be loosened, to the end that the people of this commonwealth may again dwell and work together in the confidence and mutual faith they once possessed.

Unhappily Mr. Fuqua's entry also presented an opportunity for klan leaders.

This newspaper has conducted two of the most careful political surveys which its resources and the time permitted, reaching into every region and parish of Louisiana. From these surveys, and from the open utterances of organs and leaders never disavowed as mouthpieces for the extreme element of the klan, it is convinced of these two facts:

First—That the klan seeks to elect as many candidates for the Legislature as possible, who are either klansmen or sympathetic with the klan; and

Second—That these candidates are seeking to ride into office in the parishes where Long leads, upon the Long tide, and where Fuqua leads by the aid of his strength.

The bald fact presents itself, that helping Henry L. Fuqua will help the klan attain this end, that helping Fuqua, honestly pledged to propose and support laws against the hood and the mask and for publicity of membership—will yet help toward putting enough men in the Legislature who sympathize with the hood and the mask to tie the governor's hands in any effort he would make to fulfill his pledge.

Exorcising the klan from Louisiana is an objective more important to this newspaper than its own preferences among individuals. And so—it reached its conclusion and so it voiced it.

It made, most surely, no "appeal to religious prejudice." The greatly preponderant ownership of this newspaper is Protestant. Its responsible executive direction is in Protestant hands. Upon it work Catholics, Protestants, Jews, with no questions asked of religious or fraternal affiliation. It knows the truth a great democrat once enunciated, that when we know one another better, we love one another more.

It appealed to the liberal citizenship of this commonwealth—and especially to the tolerant and liberal Protestants—to unite in helping toward the end that the evil influence which has developed distrust and prejudice and "political consciousness of religious difference" here among us, be broken and rebuked and so speeded to its ousting.

We repeat from our original commitment:

The klan, like the old man of the sea in the fable, has hung itself about the latter's (Fuqua's) neck. * * * As between Hewitt Bouanchaud and Henry L. Fuqua, the defeat of Fuqua would be interpreted, because of this, as a klan defeat—the defeat of Hewitt Bouanchaud would be heralded throughout the South and the nation, by klan organs and klan spokesmen, as a klan victory. * * * Thus would Louisiana be besmirched and shamed in fame if not in fact, and thus would an ill cause find succor and aid elsewhere, and thus would the promoters of the ill cause in Louisiana assume and pretend to new power here.

The situation as we saw it on November 4, we see in stronger colors today. We repeat our appeal that, for the future peace of this commonwealth, the voters take that action which will most surely record Louisiana "against the klan."

This newspaper has deplored, from the beginning, any step or any utterance in this campaign which would operate to make Protestants or Catholics in this state "politically conscious of their religious differences."

Its first objection to the Ku Klux Klan is that it excites exactly that consciousness. Its appointed spokesmen and its volunteer scribes thrive and batten by feeding latent prejudice into life and in playing upon the ancient fears of the ill-informed or misinformed of other groups.

The editorial in which this newspaper voiced its conclusion was an appeal to all citizens who would rebuke that spirit which the klan evokes. Especially was it an appeal to "liberal Protestants," expressed in precise terms, to unite in that rebuke.

This newspaper preferred that a Protestant opposed to the klan should run without opposition from a candidate who happened to be a Catholic; this, so that no question of religion or creed could be raised; so that the Protestant, in his person, should demonstrate to the ill-informed or uninformed among Catholics the falsity of the claims of klan "propagators" and Dalton and Mayfield "weeklies" that they spoke in their vicious diatribes of intolerance, for the real spirit of Protestantism—and demonstrate the same truth to those, uninformed or ill-informed, among Protestants who in any narrow field of experience might otherwise be imposed upon.

Hewitt Bouanchaud, the candidate who happens to be a Catholic, had yielded a normal and natural ambition to run for governor three years ago. He was an admitted candidate before the klan forced itself as an issue in Louisiana. He held, as he had a right to hold, though against this newspaper's preferences, that he should not be sacrificed to a situation not of his creation.

Into this field, then, Henry L. Fuqua stepped—as he had the right to step—to offer his own candidacy. But his entry did not eliminate Mr. Bouanchaud.

Ku Klux Klan—1923. I

Louisiana.

Proscription is the begetter of bloodthirstiness. I call on the Protestants to stand fore square with me and strangle the beast before it can lift its head.

"And you, my fellow Catholic citizens, when one of your faith in a great political contest, whether he is forgetful of the past or shortsighted as to the future, cries out Proscribe! Proscribe! Proscribe!—though he were a thousand time my friend, I bid you flee from him as you would a leper.

"I again here and now pledge that I will proscribe no man for religion or opinion's sake; that I will commission any man or woman elected by the people; and that I will appoint to office those who are fit to hold them, applying the same test, the same standard, the same yardstick of loyal and competent public service, to all races, all faiths, all creeds and all men—alike."

KLAN CONFIDENT AS MOREHOUSE TRIAL DATE NEARS

Minor Cases Growing Out of Kidnaping Come Up Monday.

Times-Picayune 11-2-23

SKIPWITH SCORES PARKER FOR FIGHT

Members Say Only Light Fines, If Any, Will Be Imposed.

Mer Rouge, La., Nov. 1.—Attorney General Coco is expected to ask for a change of venue Monday when minor charges, growing out of the murder of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards, will come up for trial before Judge Odom at Bastrop. The bills on which trials of seventeen men will be made, it is understood, relates only to floggings and abductions.

The hearings next week will be without a jury and it will be left to Judge Odom to make the decisions. These charges, if conviction is made, carry only fines or jail sentences or both. If all are convicted in every case and the maximum penalty imposed, the fines would amount to thousands of dollars and jail sentences to as long as five years, it was said.

There has been much speculation by both the klan and anti-klan factions as to the stand Judge Odom will take. The judge lives at Bastrop where the sentiment is almost wholly with the klan, although it is reported he is not a member himself. Mer Rouge citizens hold that no matter what evidence is presented or what testimony is brought out he will not convict any one, or if he does, only a light fine will be imposed.

Klan Is Confident.

On the other hand, the klan faction holds that nothing will come out of the trials and that Judge Odom will not convict any one because there will not be sufficient evidence and the trial is just a waste of time and expenditure of the state's money.

If, however, Judge Odom should refuse to grant a change of venue in the cases pertaining directly to the murder of Daniel and Richards and the trial should go to a jury at this term of court, the situation would assume an entirely different aspect for Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse klan, and the outstanding figure of the affair, and the Morehouse klan will be given the opportunity to prove the claims they have made that the bodies found in Lake Lafourche the morning of December 21, 1922, and claimed to have been those of murdered men, were planted there and were not the bodies of Daniel and Richards and that the attempt to place the blame on klansmen was a frame-up.

Captain Skipwith has been quoted recently as saying Richards is alive and has been in Morehouse parish talking to citizens within the last two weeks. Skipwith denies this, declaring what he said was to the effect that he did not believe Daniel is alive but has every reason to believe that Richards is alive and that he took part in the kidnaping August 24 when five men are said to have been forced by a hooded band to leave their automobiles on the Mer Rouge and Bastrop road while returning from a barbecue and ball game at Bastrop and when two men were flogged and told to catch the next train to Mer Rouge, while two men supposed to have been Daniel and Richards were held.

Skipwith declares he knows nothing of the activities of Upchurch and Terrell, the two mentioned in a deposition read in an Atlanta court, or of orders to a "strong arm squad" to get them out of the way. Inquiry in Mer Rouge, however, elicited the information that they were attorneys from Atlanta, employed by persons here to collect evidence on which a damage suit might be based against the klan by those who had suffered injury and loss at the hands of hooded bands. They were never molested, it was declared, and still have the evidence they gathered but that no suit had been filed because the attempt at the open hearing to fix responsibility on the klan failed.

Citizens of Mer Rouge do not hesitate to question the veracity of Captain Skipwith or anyone else who says Daniel or Richards is alive. They do not hesitate to say there is no law or government in Morehouse except that set up by the klan; that all the parish offices and courts are controlled by the klan and that the klan is responsible for every lawless act committed since its organization.

In Bastrop they are just as bitter against Mer Rouge. The klan has never molested the town or any one living in it, they say, and never will, nor has it ever ordered or forced anyone to leave the town, they declare.

Despite contentions of both factions, the mystery remains unsolved. Persons here declare they would give all they have or ever expect to have if the guilty ones could be punished. Klan leaders defy Governor Parker and Attorney General Coco to bring the case into open court, where they can "prove it was a frame-up."

Such are conditions here, a parish is divided into "warring elements" with an open clash, accompanied by the loss of many lives expected if the court does not act.

BOUANCHAUD CLUB FORMED AS KLAN IS CALLED ISSUE

Times-Picayune

Judge Campbell Says Hewitt Is Only One Opposing Practices.

10-20-23 New Orleans, La.

Lafayette, La., Oct. 19.—A well attended meeting was held Thursday night at the courthouse when a "Bouanchaud Club" was organized for advancing the candidacy of Hewitt Bouanchaud for governor. William Campbell, judge of the Eighteenth Judicial District court presided and opened the meeting by declaring the paramount issue is the Ku Klux Klan.

Judge Campbell was the first district judge in the state to sound the call against the danger as the result of the alleged lawlessness of the hooded order, and his warning received wide commendation by the press of the state at the time of its issuance.

The judge reviewed the platform of the three candidates for governor, regarding their stand on the Ku Klux Klan, and stated the conclusion that he reached that of the three announced candidates only one stood flat footed "against the nefarious practices of the hooded klan." Several speeches were made by the attending representatives including the three candidates for sheriff. They declared that they were opposed to the Ku Klux Klan and would support Hewitt Bouanchaud for governor.

A parishwide Bouanchard for Governor Club was then organized to foster the organization in the parish, with meetings to be held in each ward, where ward organizations are to be perfected and ward workers to be chosen. Those attending were: William Campbell, district judge; F. M. Latiolais, sheriff and candidate for re-election; H. L. Bourgeois, assessor; J. Octave Duson, coroner; Robert L. Mouton, mayor; Felix H. Mouton, clerk of court; G. A. Martin, city judge and candidate for re-election; George Crouchet, secretary police jury; Pierrer Landry and A. Wilmot Dalferes, representatives from this parish; Milton Campbell, deputy sheriff; Robert H. Broussard, deputy sheriff and candidate for city judge; Saul Broussard, tax collector; F. Xavier Mouton, candidate for city judge; Ed Meaux, candidate for city judge; Ulysse G. Duhon and J. Dassas Trahan, candidates for sheriff; Joseph E. Burleigh, J. F. Jeanmard, Fred Voorhies, Paul DeBaillon, Albert Trahan, O. F. Comeaux, Sim J. Boudreaux, A. N. Builliard, Joseph C. Chargois, Dr. R. D. Voorhies, Ben J. Voorhies, Louis J. Voorhies, P. J. Voorhies, Sidney Mouton, George Guidroz, G. L. Hebert, Leon LeBlanc, U. S. Hebert, C. G. Zeymour, A. C. Chargois, J. Gilbert St. Julien, Paul Krauss, Alex Duhon, candidate for state representative; rD. M. M. Mouton, Dr. R. G. Comeaux, candidates for coroner; J. G. LeBlanc, candidate for assessor; J. Arthur Roy, George J. Breaux, register of votes; I. B. Bendel, E. G. Arceneaux.

The following were elected as officers of the Bouanchaud Club: F. H. Mouton, chairman; P. Krauss, vice-chairman; A. W. Dalferes, secretary.

KLAN UNMASKING ORDER RESCINDED BY EVANGELIST

Times-Picayune

Excitement Caused by Plan to Reserve Seats for Unhooded Kluxers.

10-17-23

Monroe, La., Oct. 16.—Monroe was thrown into a furor of excitement with Monroe Klan No. 4 as more or less the storm center when it was made known that the preacher at a revival service under way in Monroe had announced that a certain section of the structure in which the revival is in progress would be reserved for klansmen who would not be robed or masked. As this would virtually lead to the identification of members of the Monroe klan, naturally there was keen interest in the proposition. The order was later rescinded because of protests lodged against unmasking the organization.

Superintendent A. R. Taylor of the Missouri Pacific railway, with headquarters at Monroe, was elected grand chief of all boosters on the Louisiana-Arkansas division of the railroad company at the organization meeting of the Boosters' Club in Monroe Sunday. The Missouri Pacific Boosters' Club, which will be the official name of the organization, was perfected for the purpose of making booster leaders efficient. There are now eight Boosters' Clubs on the Louisiana division of the Missouri Pacific. These clubs are at Monroe, McGehee, Ark., Collinston, Alexandria, Glenmora, Kinder, Lake Charles and Smackover.

Supt. Taylor will have authority over all eight clubs organized. E. A. Porter, of Lake Charles, was elected chief booster for Louisiana division, Club No. 1 with four assistants. The assistants are J. M. Marshall, W. Jordon, L. J. Bohn and Ryan Henderson, all of Monroe. Paul J. Newman, of Monroe, was elected secretary of the Monroe club. A. F. Stovall was elected chief business solicitor.

The Missouri Pacific Boosters' Club will give a banquet November 6

KLAN REPORTED TO HAVE TICKET

Times-Picayune

Kluxer's Slate Believed Framed at Secret Meeting.

New Orleans, La.

The Ku Klux Klan has "slated" a complete parochial ticket in Rapides parish, according to letters received in New Orleans from responsible citizens of Alexandria. The personnel of the ticket follows:

For Sheriff, U. T. Downs, reported to be exalted cyclops of the Rapides klan.

For clerk of court, Al H. Hundley, former exalted cyclops of the klan.

For assessor, Trent James.

For coroner, Dr. Marvin Cappel.

For state senator, Grundy Cooper.

For House of Representatives, T. W. Holloman, M. E. Steadman and Bruce Durham.

10-16-23

A klan ticket also was named, including police jurors in every ward in the parish, it is said.

Letters from Alexandria citizens say this slate was framed at a secret klan election a few days ago.

The klan slate, according to information from Alexandria, will have the support of the hooded order in Rapides parish in the Democratic primary January 15.

The facts concerning the klan election and the slate named, letters from Alexandria assert, have become a matter of common knowledge in Rapides parish.

Al H. Hundley, who is being backed by the klan for clerk of court in Rapides parish, was the first cyclops of the klan at Alexandria, when the order was organized in 1921. He is said to have been succeeded by U. T. Downs, mayor of Pineville, who is the klan candidate for sheriff.

"Committee" In La. Whips Man For "Mixing"

HAMMOND, La., Oct. 25.—(By A. N. P.)—White citizens of this place recently compelled the sheriff to turn over a Negro named Charles Cyprian to a committee, who administered a severe whipping and ordered him out of town. The "committee" had addressed a letter to the sheriff, stating that this punishment would have "an effect on others of the black race who entertain ideas of mixing with the white people."

Ku Klux Klan — 1923

Louisiana

Card no. A

Klan, else they'd keep out of it.

One morning there came upon the witness stand at Bastrop a white-haired gentleman of sixty-six, the sort of man who would be trusted on sight, and his associates had honored him for a generation. During the course of his testimony a question was pressed upon him; he answered that he was a member of the Ku-Klux Klan "and proud of it," at which a burst of spontaneous applause uprose from the courtroom audience, composed largely of women. Why do such men join the Klan and why do such women applaud?

The existence of one secret fraternity more or less is of very little moment, but the existence of a popular sentiment is momentous, for upon the belief of its citizens the nation acts. What men think, however erroneous, ignorant and prejudiced, is part of public sentiment and must be reckoned with. Nor is there any sense in trying to beat it out with a club; we'd better seek to diagnose rather than denounce.

Why do thousands of excellent citizens ally themselves with the Ku-Klux? In guessing at an answer it is necessary to make statements that this writer does not believe. It matters not whether they are true; all that matters is that some people believe and act upon them.

World Turmoil Is Felt

The world is upset. We have seen granite empires fall and mushrooms take their places. Hoary institutions of mankind are in a turmoil of readjustment. Everybody knows that some cog is out of gear.

Among the nations we Americans are least law abiding. We have scanty reverence for law simply because it is law. None of us has ever bowed before the will of despotic power. When some fellow in gold braid orders us to do a thing we ask him "Why?" and figure on it for ourselves. It must also be remembered that in this neck of the woods the people are scarcely a generation removed from the pioneer who hit this wilderness with his rifle in one hand and an ax in the other to carve out his destiny. This man had fixed notions of justice. If wrong were done him he righted it himself, on the spot. And this spirit is strong in the blood of his sons.

Add to this the inevitable restlessness of the youth who has grown up in an isolated country and is suddenly thrust into the vortex of human events. Now he has come back home and finds trouble in holding himself down by plowing a yoke of speckled bulls on a hillside. That boy craves action.

Before an audience of such lads stands the Ku Klux agitator with a glib tongue and perhaps sincere. The farmer's boy hears him state his platform as follows:

"No person can be a Klansman until he takes oath that he believes in the Fatherhood of God, the Divinity of Christ and the Constitution of the United States. No Klansman can assume to be a super-force, or supplant the officers of the law. For any act of lawlessness he must be expelled. He must oppose the Bolshevist, the anarchist, the lyncher; and stands pledged to assist the legal authorities."

The Klan declares for white supremacy in its highest sense. The white man must keep his own blood pure and the Klan orator also pleads for justice toward the negro.

The Klan advocates complete separation of Church and State, with a guaranty of religious liberty to every citizen. They plead for better public schools and, as a closing tribute, the Klan speaker commits his organization to the protection of home and womanhood.

All charges of lawless conduct against the Klan or Klansmen he dismisses as a lot of trumpery.

The average audience would come nearer approving everything he said than an average mass meeting of Democrats or Republicans would come to indorsing, item by item, every plank in their party's platform.

The farmer's boy swallows it whole. Thrills are scarce as rooster eggs to this lad who milks his cow before daylight, and scuffles along to make cotton ahead of the boll weevil. That organizer enthuses him. He itches to see what the Klan is like, and "jines." He doesn't know why, just "jines." It gives him something to think about while he's jerking the bell cord over a mule. The High Ideals touch him. Then he's touched again, for twenty-one dollars and a half—ten dollars initiation, six dollars dues paid quarterly, five dollars fifty for a six-bit night shirt with two holes for his eyes to look out. That's higher than the ideals. He grins and also pays—the organizer not accepting grins as legal tender.

Mysterious Notices Received

After that the boy gets mysterious notices to meet the Brotherhood at the Hour of Mournful Midnight beside the Blasted Cypress in the Heart of the Haunted Wood. It seems kinder adventuresome to ride old Beck through the forest, to glimpse other ghostly shapes like himself, to hold a solemn Konklave where the graveyard bordered upon the cedar tree, then go winding in single file among the moss-grown oaks. Ahead is an unknown sheeted figure, behind him rides another apparition. He is not supposed to even guess their names, but each is a loyal Klansman, sworn On the Blood, To the Death. Here's where the farmer boy gets action for his money. He mumbles horrible passwords and practices the Grand Hailing Sign. Of course, he doesn't know why he's riding around in the woods, but High Ideals are slippery things, and a fellow's liable to catch one most anywhere. He loves to imagine himself a Crusader—a sort of romantic cross between Sir Galahad and Carrie Nation.

This is not a bad boy; he has no faintest notion of doing harm to his fellow men. Then where does the harm come in? Maybe it's this way:

Some inefficient person who doesn't amount to shucks gets elected grand cyclops—by acclamation, accident and default—a man who has never held authority or given orders in his life. Before this dizzy elevation nobody ever paid attention to what he said. Now it tickles him mightily to hold Konklaves in the Dreadful Den; gets all puffed up, full of High Ideals and Balloon Juice. He has the right to wear a Nifty Red Hat while the brotherhood kow-tows. Maybe he's an amiable old nonentity with a heart as big as a skinned mule who takes himself more seriously than a sophomore. He reads the sonorous rituals in a voice summoned from the same Cavern where he keeps his Indigestion and calls for a report from the Vigilance Committee.

Grand Cyclops Gets Exalted

"Sire," the chairman of said Vigilance Committee bumps his forehead against the floor—it may be the same grocer who declined to credit the grand cyclops for a dime's worth of chawing tobacco—"Sire, we beg leave to report that old Buster Buckingham refuses to dip his cattle for ticks."

"What?" the grand cyclops inquires, "Buster Buckingham won't dip that muley red heifer of his'n?"

"No sire."

"Ain't that contrary to the statoot in suc' case made and provided? Ain't it agin the peace and dignity of the State of Loozianny?"

"It is, sire. Announce his Direful Doom?"

"Off with his head!" roars the Grand Cyclops, "So much for Buckingham." Then he proceeds to invoke the blessing of the Deity.

It must sometimes occur that local Ku-Klux officials, who were never Solomons to begin with, get drunk upon the sudden possession of power. According to the testimony at Bastrop the head of the Klan could order warnings to be sent. It was done. He could order kidnaping, floggings and deportation. Which take place as per schedule.

It is the farmer's boy, perhaps, who carries out these instructions, at first without intention of doing wrong. He gets deeper and deeper, until some brother lets a foot slip and a man is killed. The boy cannot turn informer, and an inflated notion of loyalty makes him stand by the gang. Perhaps, behind it all, there may be some man of real ability and evil purpose who engineers the affair to gain his own end. This is mere guesswork, but may partially account for much that happened.

Why does an honest member defend the Klan in such case as this? Here may be the answer: Because after enrolling himself he becomes a partisan, stalwart as any Democrat—or Republican—who brands as infamous any charge made by the hireling press of the opposite party.

Religious Issue Used

There is another moving impulse to membership in the Klan that must be touched upon. Although this writer is keenly aware that he may be opening a door to acrimonious dispute on racial and religious prejudice, yet it is more or less a factor, either in the workings of the Klan itself or in what outside people say of it. Therefore let us look at the matter squarely and temperately.

"Even the devout Catholic," contend a certain class of Klansmen "cannot object to our white Protestant organization. The Catholic has his Knights of Columbus. Why shouldn't we also have a Protestant order that sticks together?"

Prejudice—regrettably there seems no better word—prejudice so called, religious and racial, has figured conspicuously in every movement of human kind. As ordinarily used it is a narrow-minded and bigoted spirit, imputed to the other fellow. Yet every human being has it as a part of himself planted there by nature. Nor is it always to be condemned. For prejudice, in this sense, is the converse of loyalty. Every man thinks that his own is the best, his own children, his own country, his own race, his home, his home town, his church, political party and brand of chewing tobacco. Loyalty to America made us hate everything that was arrayed against us in the late war. Loyalty and prejudice, linked together, constitute the instinct that impels a man to defend his own, even to the extent of destroying another's.

Consider the courageously undeviating policy of the Jew: without a home, without a government, without a land of his own or laws of his own making, by this natural instinct the Jew has clung with his kind, and preserved the purity of his blood throughout centuries of oppression. Racial solidarity-prejudice should be a hyphenated word, inseparably welded together for good as well as evil—the instinct that fights for one's own against whatever may threaten.

Suspicion Fosters Belief

It is probably true that in some parts of these United States communties of people see the Pope of Rome behind every bush, ready to grab their government. The moon may not be made of green cheese, but where people think so and act upon it, it becomes to them a fact. Therefore some people may honestly believe in the creation of an active Protestant organization. Opponents of the Klan say that it is based upon prejudice against the negro, the Catholic, the Jew and the foreigner; while pro-Klansmen insist that it is organized to uphold our laws, within the law, and to protect American traditions. Klansmen say that their organizers are working for patriotism; opponents say for $21.50.

Accepting the Klan at its own estimate, certain conclusions are inescapable. Klan leaders in Morehouse Parish boast that nine wards out of their ten, are dominated by Klux, the exception being Mer Rouge, which the Klan speaks of as "disaffected." Then the Klan in that parish has public sentiment behind it. Its members need only do their duty under the law, they need only go upon the grand juries and indict, sit upon the petty juries and convict, to clean up the modern Sodom which, according to their statement, is now called by the name of Mer Rouge.

Kidnaping is a felony under the Louisiana law; yet members of the Klan, being sworn as they contend, to uphold that law—instead of doing their duty as citizens, make felons of themselves in seeking to correct by violence misdemeanors that could have been handled by any justice of the peace.

Americanism Plea Fails

The Klan prides itself upon undiluted, 100 per cent Americanism, while being deficient in the 99 per cent American qualities of openness and courage. If David Crockett, Julius Cæsar, Sergeant York and King Leonidas went masked by night, beating helpless men who had no recourse against them, they would surely destroy the fiber of their own courage. And, if caught unmasked by day, any girl child might take a lightning bug on the end of a corncob and chase the unnerved quartet into the Mississippi River.

To the average right thinking American nothing is more contemptible than an anonymous letter. The Klan denies the use of this as a weapon, but the very existence of a Klan in any community leads to such threats, veiled and cowardly. If the Klan itself does not do this, then others are sending such letters in their name and playing a fear that the Klan creates.

The mask itself is a menace, like concealed weapons or poison laid out at random. Ever since its organization the Klux has been kept busy denying responsibility for outrages committed in its regalia, just as it now repudiates the murders of the Mer Rouge. Granted. But their regalia furnishes a refuge to every marauder.

The present Klan points to the old Ku-Klux, "The Knights of the White Camelia," but fails to sense a crucial distinction. That Klan of the '60s was planned for the express purpose of subverting the Black and Tan government. The Klan of to-day is supposed to maintain our government, and need only have recourse to its existing forms or vote to change them by constitutional provisions.

At the close of the open hearing in Bastrop, according to sworn evidence, the case against the Klan, as a Klan, naturally centers around the chief officer, and seems to be about this:

Captain J. K. Skipworth is their avowed head.

Leader in Kidnaping Party

He was president in the car that kidnaped Harry Neelis and Watt Daniel, it being sworn to by ex-members that the black hooded and black gowned raiding party was "official" with their grand cyclops in charge.

He was present in the car that containing black hooded and black gowned men that kidnaped Richards and released him.

On the afternoon of the last abduction of Daniels and Richards he was in the courtyard conferring with strange men and nodding toward the prospective victim. Richards then remarked, "They are after me. They have got me."

On the night of the murder he instructed telephone operators to make no connections with Mer Rouge in an effort to cut off the home of the victims from all communication.

After the disappearance of Daniels and Richards, he stated, "we meant to give them a trial in the courts for shooting at Dr. McKoin. But the boys decided that they knew too much."

Stated that "there were six men in this parish that they had to get. We have got two of them and must get the other four."

This testimony has been transcribed, briefed by state attorneys and laid before the grand jury now in session at Bastrop. Will there be indictments and convictions? The case is surrounded by so many webs of intrigue, by such a false idea of Klan loyalty, family ties, private animosities and political ambitions that no man can guess the outcome.

And the result of recent trials at Herrin, Ill., makes ominous prophecy as to what may happen here.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TO FILE COMPLAINT

Montgomery Advertiser

Failure of Morehouse Grand Jury to Indict Does Not End Case

3-17-23

(Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—"It is the present intention of the State of Louisiana to file bills of information and proceed with the prosecution of those against whom it has evidence in the Morehouse parish Ku Klux Klan outrages," was the announcement of Attorney General A. V. Coco on his arrival here today from Bastrop, where he went on March 5 and presented to the grand jury the testimony obtained at the open hearing there in January concerning masked band activities in that Parish.

The jury reported yesterday to Judge Fred M. Odom that the evidence submitted was not sufficient to find indictments against any particular individuals.

"We are naturally disappointed because I believed and was confident that the state had made out good cases," the attorney general declared. "But this action by the grand jury does not end the matter by any means"

Mr. Coco said he would issue no further statement until after a conference here probably next Tuesday with his assistants and state Senator H. E. Warren, of Shreveport, special counsel for the state in the case, to determine their future course.

Governor John M. Parker, when reached by telephone at Baton Rouge declined to have anything to say concerning the report of the grand jury or future action contemplated by the state's legal forces.

"Attorney General Coco will make any statements that are to be made," he said.

It was generally believed that any trial of the masked band cases resulting from informations filed by the state authorities would be shifted out of Morehouse Parish on a change of venue to one of the nearby judicial districts, possibly Monroe, in Ouachita Parish.

The Affair at Mer Rouge.

It is not surprising that the grand jury at Bastrop failed to indict any one for kidnaping and beating citizens and for the murder of the two young men whose bodies later were found in a lake.

These alleged murders and outrages were the culmination of a series of feuds and disorders. The Ku Klux Klan became involved. Officers of the court and some of the grand jurors were members of the Klan. The fight has been for the Ku Klux and against the Ku Klux as well as for the law and against the individuals who did the murder. 3/17/23

The investigation of the Ku Klux and investigation of the murder became intertwined. To some minds it appeared that to find indictments would be to condemn the Kluxers. The same people thought to return a no true bill would be to vindicate the Kluxers. The big struggle then was pro-Ku Klux and anti-Ku Klux. The Klan is strong in these parts. It outnumbers the other forces. It is backed by mystery and the notions that animate an order having gobins and dragons and other weird names for its officers. So the findings went along with public opinion in the neighborhood.

It was urged that the young men who were killed were reckless and lawless. It is said that they had little regard for the opinions of others and that human society did not lose much even if they were killed.

This sort of excuse is of course no excuse. It is a crime against the law unlawfully to kill even a bad man.

The crime of murder does not turn on the character of the individual murdered. Friends of the young men in this matter insist that they were not bad citizens. One of them had a magnificent army record. A good army record on the other side in the last great struggle is a guerdon of Americanism which is brighter than all the claims of him who alleges that he is 100 per cent and who has not gone down into the valley and the shadow, when the existence of his country was at stake.

People have been flogged, beaten and deprived of their constitutional rights in the Bastrop neighborhood. Some have been exiled. Two have been murdered in the immediate melee; others have been killed.

Probably there have been killings on both sides. As the case stands today the machinery of the law is unable to reach those who did the kidnaping, those who did the whipping and those who did the killing.

When murder is done in any community it makes no difference whether a masked man does it or whether a masked man is murdered, that murder must be ferreted out and he who did it must be brought to trial.

He should have his day in court; he must answer. If the law demands his life as a forfeit, then the forfeit must be paid. That man should not have thrown around him the protection of any order, sect, party, or racial group. There is one thing supreme in America, that thing is the law. The law is the soul of the nation. No power should be permitted to overcome the law. No group of individuals should stand between the law and what is due to it.

There is only one test for an American. That test is in his obedience to the laws of his country and the man who attempts to set aside the spirit of the Constitution which guarantees certain rights to the individual such as the possession of property earned, the pursuit of happiness both here and hereafter and the independence, that is the privilege of all, is an enemy to the state.

No group of men in any community is bigger than the constituted authorities. No aggregation of individuals has a right to take unto themselves the duties of judges and juries. There can be no such thing as a state within a state or a state above a state. If there are abuses in a community people have a right at the ballot box to put men in control who will see to it that law is obeyed and that disorder is put down.

We hear much about the weakness of courts, the failure of the law and the delay of justice. There are no substitutes. Abolish these things and there will follow chaos and anarchy. The only way out is the strengthening of these various lawful arms which may reach out to control all of us if we are inclined to disorder.

It may be said that nothing has been settled at Mer Rouge. There has been lawlessness in the territory: there has been murder and nothing will be settled until the lawlessness is put down and until the murderers are hunted out and brought to the bar of the courts of their country.

The whole wretched affair is a sad commentary upon the weakness and frailties of men. It shows how a community may thoroughly get out of hand and how that men under the stress of excitement, hysteria and hate may become so embroiled that brother is turned against brother, friend against friend and neighbors look upon one another as fiends incarnate.

There is a hysteria throughout this country. It is the reaction from the tensity growing out of the war. There is a disturbance in moral as well as material values. Some men are sour at the government. Some are resentful under the burden of heavy taxes, much of it goes to pay debts growing out of profiteering and robbing the government.

We have various blocs. Each bloc is for itself first. It demands the right of way in the halls of legislature. If it cannot have the right of way it refuses to let others pass. Men are suspicious of one another. There is more bitterness in the human heart than there should be. Men are quick to anger. There is little spirit of give and take, of compromise. That charity which is the greatest of all virtues is not largely practiced.

We argue for our own position by denouncing the position of the adversary and questioning his good faith.

And yet we are about all the same fundamentally; there is good in all of us, we hope.

If everyone would develop his own good qualities and appreciate the finer qualities of his neighbor, instead of abusing him for his frailties we would all get back more quickly to that serene sanity, gentleness and charity—charity of the patient Christ—in which state we would be better ourselves and our country would be better that we lived and labored in it.

Klan Glamour Lures Dixie Farmer Boys Into Robed Ranks

Sudden Acquisition of Despotic Power Blamed for Crimes Laid to Order

N. Y. C. TRIBUNE
MARCH 11, 1923

Mer Rouge Case Analyzed

The Tribune presents the following article as an interesting and timely picture, from a Southern viewpoint, of the workings of the Ku-Klux Klan. The author, Harris Dickson, is a former lawyer, resident of Vicksburg, Miss., and at one time on the bench in his native state. He created Old Reliable, famous character of magazine fiction, and wrote the celebrated Coffin Club stories.

By Harris Dickson

When that morbid genius Edgar Allan Poe wrote his "Murders of the Rue Morgue" he conceived of no setting more weird and melancholy than that which solemn nature framed for the murders of the Mer Rouge. The Quartier St. Roch, in Paris, is bright and sun-blessed when compared with the lone lagoons of Louisiana; even the narrow Rue Morgue of ghastly name must be far more cheerful than those dismal swamps where Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard met their mysterious death. In striving to imagine what happened, and how, the imagination runs riot, picturing a masked and hooded gang dragging their victims to torture in forest solitudes by some machine of hellish contrivance, then sinking their mutilated corpses to the bottom of Lake La Fourche.

Klan Members Denounced as Slayers

Four months later a blast of dynamite, set off by unknown hands, brought to the surface these grisly remnants of what had once been men. Then neighbors whispered to each other:

"It is the work of the Invisible Empire—the Ku-Klux Klan."

Spokesmen for the Klan immediately denied, and continue to deny, all knowledge of the affair. When people caught their breath, bolder tongues denounced the Ku-Klux as masked cowards, murderers and outlaws.

"We are not," the Klan retorts. "We are 100 per cent Americans, bound together by the highest ideals of patriotism."

It is extremely difficult for any observer in Morehouse Parish to learn what actually did occur. He finds himself bewildered by conflicting rumors, charges, silences and suspicion. People are afraid to talk or contradict each other.

Rarely does this writer intrude his own personality or opinions into a special article. Here it becomes important, because any appraisal of Klan activities must depend largely upon the color of the spectacles through which they are viewed. This writer is a Southerner, who knows the country and the people. He has never been solicited to join the Klan and is not a member.

Illegal Methods Opposed

With many of the Klan's openly avowed purposes he is in sympathy, as most Americans are, but is utterly opposed to illegal methods—to masks, concealment and terrorism. Worthy objects, which the Klan avowedly supports, can easily be attained through forms of established law. He spent some time at Bastrop during the open hearing and listened to much of the evidence. He has had twenty years' experience in criminal courts, for whatever that may be worth in the weighing of human testimony. Lawyers on both sides of the Mer Rouge murders are his personal friends, with whom he talked quite freely. And so are many of the trained newspaper men assigned to this case. He talked with Secret Service operatives, with members and officials of the Klan and with many persons upon whom had fallen the displeasures of the Klan. From such opportunities and point of view these seem to be the best established facts.

Morehouse Parish lies in middle Louisiana, at about the dividing line between "the hills" and "the swamp." Bastrop, the parish seat, is a pretty little village, with a modern courthouse and a high school of which any city might be proud. Its people seem kindly, quiet and no different from those in a thousand American villages. It has never been the scene of public disturbance. But Bastrop is now known as a "Klan town," while the smaller village of Mer Rouge, nine miles away, is spoken of by Klan officials as "disaffected," or anti-Klan.

Mer Rouge Denies Charges

In Mer Rouuge the Daniel family have lived for more than a hundred years, the present generation, father and son, being planters of moderate means. There also dwelt Thomas F. Richard and W. C. Andrews—two of whom were killed and two whipped by masked men in Klan regalia. High dignitaries of the "Klux" usually allude to Mer Rouge as more degraded than Sodom, inhabited by moonshiners, whiskey-selling, poker-playing undesirables, who consort with negro women. Citizens of Mer Rouge insist that they live at peace in their pretty little town, and before these disturbances arose were a happy community.

From every account of him young Watt Daniel—ex-soldier—was a fearless and aggressive character, whom his friends considered a jovial, hail fellow well met and popular. The other murdered man, T. F. Richard, was an automobile mechanic, a boon companion of Daniels, but who otherwise seems to have made little impression as a personality.

The feud between Watt Daniel and the Klan apparently originated with a nocturnal visit by the Klux to regulate one of Daniel's negro tenants, which Daniel resented and followed the crowd to a barber shop, where he gave them a thorough cussing. Then he proceeded at midnight to the home of the grand cyclops, telling that official in vigorous English exactly what he thought of him and his cowardly methods. Young Daniel did not fear the Klan, but publicly jeered and derided them.

Doctor Accused as Raider

At this time Dr. B. M. McKoin was a practicing physician of Mer Rouge. He had formerly been Mayor, applauded by supporters for his efforts to "clean up" the town and roundly denounced by others for what they called his "bull-in-a-china-chop" procedure. This is the same man who was subsequently arrested in Baltimore for the murder of Daniel, who fought extradition and came home voluntarily accompanied by a Klansman deputy sheriff. He denied all knowledge of the crime, but said that both Daniel and Richard were bad men, bootleggers and gunmen.

The doctor also repudiated the charge that he was a "Kluck," while giving the Klan much credit for bettering affairs at Mer Rouge. Later, in the open hearing at Bastrop, it was testified to that McKoin was the Klan captain who commanded certain raiding parties in Mer Rouge.

One night in August the doctor claimed that he was summoned by phone to make a professional call, and while going there somebody tried to assassinate him by firing into his automobile, which the auto plainly showed, being so riddled with shot that incredulous persons declared that no man could have been sitting at the wheel and escaped alive. Some people believed, but scoffers at the story pointed out the fact that it was "Bunny" McKoin's discarded car, which he hadn't taken from the garage in months; that "Bunny" had shot at his own car, choosing the old car because he didn't want to scratch the paint on a new car.

"He did it," they said, "to gain sympathy for himself and rouse the Klux to go after somebody"—specifically so that the Klan would handle Watt Daniels.

Upon the attempted assassination, real or feigned, the subsequent murders hinged, for a small coterie at Mer Rouge were suspected by the Klan.

On the one hand, Daniel declared that he knew nothing of it and could prove an alibi, being engaged in the national game of poker with certain men that he named. On the other hand, it was asserted that he had admitted the shooting to a woman.

Waylaying of Daniel

Very soon after this Watt Daniel was waylaid by masked men in Klan regalia and taken to the woods for questioning. There they remonstrated with him upon the error of his ways and released him with a solemn warning.

Almost simulutaneously T. F. Richard was standing before his garage at Bastrop with his little girl when an automobile loaded with men wearing black hoods and masks took him away. This was in broad daylight and dozens of people saw it. The fact is sworn to and not denied that the Sheriff of Morehouse Parish, an admitted Klansman, stood within a hundred feet of the garage and made no effort to prevent the kidnaping. A young citizen protested to him and the Sheriff said he'd better mind his own business and not talk too much. Talking in Bastrop was a crime and kidnaping a virtue.

Richard returned from his grilling in high glee. He had enjoyed the joke and talked about it. In fact, he talked too much by stating that he recognized the voices of several captors and revealed their identity. Daniels also recognized some of them and made no secret of it.

Connected with this abduction is the most illuminating fact: In the car that kidnaped Richard, side by side with men in black hoods and gowns, rode Captain J. K. Skipworth—"Old Skip"—seventy-five years old, the Grand Cyclops of Morehouse Klan No. 34, Realm of Louisiana. These black hoods and masks gave a decided black eye to the Klan's pet contention, that their order had no such insignia and that all such outrages were committed by ruffians, not by members of the order.

This time dozens of people saw the well-known head of the Ku-Klux organization, accompanied by men in black hoods and black masks, kidnap a citizen in broad daylight before the eyes of their Sheriff and get away with it. Which would seem to give official Klan sanction both to the act and to the black regalia.

Victim Laughed at Klan

The night after Dr. McKoin's car got assassinated, hooded men went flitting amongst the moss-grown trees, concentrating in a grove near Mer Rouge—this being the Terrible Year of the Awful Moon of the Horrible Night, when the Ku-Klux Klan held their Konfounded Konklave. Unawed by all this Fantastic Frightfulness, Watt Daniel, as he laughingly told his friends, followed some of the monkey-shiners into the woods, where he hid behind a bush, not only hearing their mystic mutterings, but identifying several of the white-robed mutterers.

Daniel must have been a difficult man to handle. Although the Konklave discovered and captured him, although he stood alone and they were many, holding him under cover of their guns; although he frankly avowed that he had trailed them to obtain evidence for their exposure—yet they merely added a super-solemnity to their previous warning and let him go.

Daniel continued to talk and to name various members of the hooded mob. Every account and circumstance agrees, Klan or anti-Klan, that Watt Daniels was a festering sore in the Ku-Klux side.

This state of affairs brings us down to the crucial night of August 24. The Parish of Morehouse wanted to issue bonds and build a system of highways. A barbecue and baseball game were being held at Bastrop. To this country-side celebration the crowds gathered from everywhere. Again Watt Daniel talked too much. Late in the evening when the people went home they found their roads guarded by men in Klan regalia, black hoods and black gowns. Silent maskers halted and searched their cars, permitting every person to proceed except young Daniels, the elder Daniel, a man of seventy years; Thomas F. Richard, W. C. Andrews and Tot Davenport. These men, at the muzzle of miscellaneous weapons, they forced from their automobiles, tied, blindfolded and carried them into the woods.

Car Numbers Give Clews

It is said some of the cars bore Arkansas and Mississippi license tags. If so they were but following a precedent set by the old-time Ku-Klux, who brought their strong arm parties from a distance, while local comrades were left free to prepare unassailable alibis.

The three survivors of this kidnaping agree that all five men were driven to a lonely spot and sternly questioned as to who shot at Dr. McKoin. Upon their persistent statement that they did not know, the elder Daniels and W. C. Andrews were soundly flogged and turned loose. Young Davenport was sent home without violence. Watt Daniels and Richards were also whipped, but not released with the others. Still blindfolded and bound, their captors loaded them into a small auto truck, one of the Klansmen stating to their friends, "You may see one of these fellows again, but the other will never come back."

Half of which is true. Both Daniel and Richard were never again seen alive. Friends and relatives made frantic fruitless inquiries, but the silence had closed behind them. The Invisible Empire stood mute. Local authorities did nothing or discovered nothing. The Governor of the state was appealed to.

John M. Parker is Governor of Louisiana. From thirty years of personal intimacy this writer knows him to be an honorable and fearless gentleman. He promptly took up the affair, and Federal operatives got to work in Morehouse Parish. For this action Governor Parker was denounced by Louisiana Representatives in Congress, who proclaimed that he had brought discredit upon their law-abiding state by coming to Washington and invoking Federal aid. Despite this Congressional and other opposition several strangers appeared at Mer Rouge, who advertised themselves as detectives and went prodding into the lakes, searching hollow trees and confiding their business to the wide, wide world. It seemed a cinch for the local sleuths that spied upon these city fellows, and the Klan soon boasted that the government made no move without their knowledge. Certainly not. The first set of agents were decoy ducks, while the real investigators remained under cover, spying upon the spies.

By this strategem the Secret Service got its first line on definite individuals who were concerned in obliterating the tracks of murder. These persons being shadowed, it developed that telegraph, postoffice and telephone employees were giving information to the Klan. Little by little facts were pieced together until a rather clear idea was gained as to a group of men responsible for the killing. But the bodies must be found. Without them it could not be proved that a murder had actually been committed.

The circle of search gradually centered around Lake La Fourche, a deep, narrow, isolated body of water lying seventeen miles from Mer Rouge. Meanwhile a force of state militia had been brought in to protect the investigation and maintain order. These troops were camped in Mer Rouge and Bastrop.

A superficial search of Lake La Fourche failed to locate the bodies, and a detail of troops was posted there to prevent interference until expert divers could arrive from St. Louis.

On the night of December 21 their commanding officer received warning that suspicious characters were prowling around the prohibited area at Lake Cooper, some distance away. Troops were immediately rushed there, and by means of this ruse Lake La Fourche was left unguarded. During their absence a terrific explosion occurred in Lake La Fourche, caving down its banks and strewing the water with dead fish —more than 1,000 pounds of dynamite being set off by unknown hands. It is supposed that their object was to regain possession of the bodies before the essential evidence of guilt could be discovered by divers.

At any rate, they knew precisely where Daniel and Richard had been thrown, for the dynamite jarred loose their fastenings, and at daylight a fisherman discovered two headless, mutilated trunks floating near his trot-line. These horrid relics, bound with wire as if they had been weighted down, were identified satisfactorily to the prosecution as the remains of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richard.

Identification Is Contested

Klansmen, however, strenuously contest this identification and insist that other bodies were planted in Lake La Fourche by the procurement of state authorities as part of a vindictive vendetta against the Klan. Attorneys for the defense point out, with some show of reason, that human flesh could not have remained in that lake for four months without being destroyed by the huge garfish and loggerhead turtles that infest it. The skin was even intact, showing no signs of having been eaten by fish. "Then where were these bodies?" the Klan demand, "from August until December?"

Anyway, two human bodies were discovered, proving that a crime had been committed, and upon this the prosecution might go ahead.

And old statute of Louisiana authorizes the Attorney General of the state in time of disturbance to conduct an open hearing and ascertain its cause. This is in the nature of a grand inquest, similar to that of a coroner or of a grand jury. No particular defendant is in jeopardy and the widest scope is permitted. Rumors may be traced to their source, gossip retailed in the courtroom and hearsay fully sifted. The purpose of the open hearing is to thrash out and make public the nature of testimony to be hereafter laid before a grand jury, so that the world may know whether that grand jury does its duty by the finding of indictments.

Under the Attorney General and his assistants, guarded by the military, the hearing opened in Bastrop on January 5 and lasted for fifteen days; twenty witnesses were examined, willing and unwilling, anti-Klan, pro-Klan and neutral.

Torture Horrors Revealed

In addition to facts given already, which were matters of public knowledge, it was sworn at the open hearing by two eminent pathologists from New Orleans that the bodies, lying in cool water for four months, were in a fairly good state of preservation. The evidence indicated that the men were beaten and their bones broken before they died. The exact regularity with which these bones were crushed at almost even intervals, would seem to show the use of some torture machine, the exact nature of which was unknown. Without going into sickening details, both pathologists were of opinion that the men had been horribly tortured and mangled by some mechanical contrivance before death. One of the bodies was subjected to a nameless mutilation.

At this, however, the normal human being revolts, and in the absence of direct proof refuses to believe that plain everyday country people would grimly feed a living man into such a machine—if one exists. Upon no theory can the observer frame a motive for torture. Yet the bodies were undoubtedly mangled, the bones of both men were broken at regular intervals and these facts are difficult to explain. No vestige of any torture machine has ever been found.

Nineteen individual men admitted under oath that they were members of the Klan. Nine others were testified to as being Klansmen. Six men were positively identified as constituting part of the mob which, in Ku-Klux regalia, kidnaped Richards for his first grilling in the woods at the time when he was released. And five men were sworn to as being of the party which on August 24 carried Daniels and Richards to their death.

Costumes Worn in Raiding

Former members of the Klan testified clearly that the black hood and gown were used by them on raiding parties, and that they themselves wore such disguises; that the black hood and gown were part of the Klan regalia, recognized as such and prescribed to be worn by their strong-arm squad. This the national officials of the Ku-Klux bitterly deny, and assert that their organization has no such property as a black hood or gown But hundreds of persons actually saw them, and upon one occasion Captain J. K. Skipwith, avowed head of the Klan in Morehouse Parish, was recognized, unmasked, in an automobile with a raiding party which wore the black hood and gown. These can be stated as facts.

It was proved that Daniel and Richard were captured on the public road in daylight by a black-masked and black-hooded gang of men, five of whom had been identified, and all five are members of the Ku-Klux Klan. Against this we have the official Klan assertion that it had no connection with the murders, which they contend were committed by ruffians.

This must be said, however: An open inquest is not a criminal trial. Strict rules of evidence do not apply. No defendant is on trial. There is no opportunity for cross-examination or contradiction of witnesses. It is yet to be demonstrated how far the evidence adduced at the open hearing will stand such tests and whether a jury will convict upon it. The testimony was delivered in a straightforward manner by men who seemed to be sincere, and it would have so impressed itself upon any non-partisan observer.

Klan Robs Law of Authority

More sinister than this, it became apparent that in Morehouse Parish the authority of the Klan had practically superseded the authority of the law The Sheriff, District Attorney and clerk of the court are mentioned amongst the Klansmen. The courthouse, sanctuary of law, was made a rendezvous for the Invisible Government to hold its meetings. A vigilance committee reported undesirables to the grand cyclops, who passed sentence. According to creditable testimony this grand cyclops was grand jury, trial jury, jailer and hangman. His word was final.

For example, a young girl in Mer Rouge was deported by six men wearing the black hood and mask and ordered to stay away until their grand cyclops might be pleased to O K her return. Black hoods marched into churches and read their ominous warnings; men were flogged for refusing to dip their cattle or refusing to shut their mouths. To criticize the Klan was an offense against the Holy Ghost. Suspected offenders were whipped by hooded vigilantes, and others driven out of the parish. As a culmination to this reign of terror Daniel and Richard were murdered by men in Klan regalia.

The thoughtful person in New York or San Francisco who reads of this situation immediately concludes that the Klan is composed solely of bloody-minded cutthroats. That is not the fact. Let him come to Bastrop and talk freely with attorneys on both sides; let him talk with avowed officers of the Klan and with their sturdy opponents; let him travel around the country with shrewd agents of the Secret Service and hear what they say; let him listen to testimony as delivered from the witness stand, and unconsciously he gets a modified point of view. He finds himself bewildered by a most baffling human situation.

Many Have Worthy Motives

For fear of being misunderstood let me say right here that I am opposed to Ku-Klux methods. But many of my friends are believed to be members, men whose honest manhood has been tested in the long, long crucible of years, and I know they did not join from unworthy motives.

It is an axiom of history that no theory of religion, no system of government, no political party ever gained its hold upon thousands when founded in unmixed evil and corruption. Good men must think there's good in the

Ku Klux Klan – 1923.

Louisiana Card No II

It is probably true that in some parts of these United States whole communities of people see the Pope of Rome behind every bush, ready to snatch their government. The moon may not be made of green cheese, but where people think so, and act upon it it becomes to them a fact. Therefore some people may actually believe in the creation of an aggressively defensive protestant organization. Opponents of the Klan say that it is based upon prejudice against the Catholic the Jew, the negro and the foreigner; while pro-Klansmen insist that it is organized to uphold our laws within the law, and to protect American traditions. Klansmen say that their organizers are working for patriotism, while opponents say that it is for twenty-one dollars and a half.

Conclusions Are Sure.

Accepting the Klan at its own estimate, certain conclusions are inescapable. Klan leaders in Morehouse Parish boast that nine wards out of their ten are dominated by Klux, the exception being Mer Rouge. If so, the Klan in that parish undoubtedly has public sentiment behind it. Its members need only do their duty under the law; they need only go upon the grand juries and indict, sit upon the petty juries and convict—but the community would then be cleaned up, and the Klan go out of business.

Kidnaping is a felony under the Louisiana law; yet members of the Klan, being sworn as they contend to uphold that law—instead of acting legally and openly as citizens, make felons of themselves by violently correcting misdemeanors that could be handled in the office of any justice of the peace.

Loudly the Klan proclaims its heaven-born mission and high-sounding oath to assist the constituted authorities. Yet Governor Parker, in his speech at Chicago on February 26, said "The records of Morehouse Parish show that not a single one of them ever, in the remotest degree, rendered any help; but, on the contrary, by means of their own information bureau, and by the full power of the Klan, they did all in their power to intimidate witnesses, choke off the investigation and prevent the light of publicity from reaching the American people.

"No; one single time since my inauguration as governor of Louisiana, has the Ku Klux Klan, or the Knights of the Invisible Empire, directly or indirectly, given me the least help in enforcing the law."

The Klan prides itself upon undiluted, hundred per cent Americanism while being deficient in the ninety-nine per cent American qualities of openness and courage. If Davy Crockett, Julius Caesar, Sergeant York and King Leonidas made a practice of going masked by night to beat helpless men who had no recourse against them, they would surely destroy their own courage. And if caught unmasked by day, any girl child might take a lightning bug on the end of a corn cob and chase their unnerved quartette into the Mississippi River.

Mask Is a Menace.

The mask itself is a menace, and a maker of cowards. Ever since its organization the Klux has been kept busy denying responsibility for outrages committed behind the screen of its regalia, just as it now repudiates the murders of the Mer Rouge.

The present Klan points to the old Ku Klux, "the Knights of the White Camelia," but fails to grasp a crucial distinction. That Klan of the sixties was planned for the express purpose of subverting the black and tan government. The Klan of today is supposed to maintain our government, and for the correction of abuses need only have recourse to its existing forms.

At the close of the open hearing in Bastrop, according to sworn evidence, the case aaginst the Klan, as a Klan, naturally centers around its chief officer, and seems to be about this:

1. Captain J. K. Skipworth is their avowed head.

2. He was present in the car that kidnaped Harry Neelis, W. C. Andrews and Watt Daniel, it being sworn to by ex-members that this rading party was "official" with their grand cyclops in charge. They wore black gowns and black masks.

3. He was seen unmasked, in the car containing the black hooded and black gowned men that kidnapped Richards, then remorked, "They are after me. They have got me."

4. On the afternoon of the last abduction of Daniel and Richards, he was seen in the court yard conferring with strange men and nodding towards the prospective victims, Richards and Daniel. Richards then remarked, "They are after me. They have got me."

5. On the night of the murder he instructed telephone operatives to make no connections with Mer Rouge, apparently in the effort to cut off premature inquiries from the home of the victims.

6. He was seen not far from the actual kidnaping, on the road to Monroe, and in a position from which he could prevent interference with the kidnapers, whose route lay along that road.

7. After the disappearance of Daniel and Richards he stated, "we meant to give them a trial in the courts for shooting at Dr. McKoin. But the boys decided that they knew too much."

8. After the kidnaping he stated that "there were six men in this parish that we had to get. We have got two of them and must get the other four."

This testimony has been transcribed, briefed by state's attorneys, and laid before the grand jury at Bastrop. Will there be indictments and convictions? No man can guess. As a dilletante pastime the slippered patriot, lounging in his city apartment clamors for a rigid enforcement of all laws—provided, however, that no meddlesome officer interferes with his personal-liberty supply of liquor. This patriot is perfectly willing to do his bit—of clamor. But suppose he were a petty juror, living five miles from his nearest neighbor. How much would he wobble before voting to hang a klansman, when this might bring down upon himself the black and hooded vengeance? Of course these selfish considerations should never enter into the discharge of a high and noble duty—but they do.

If this same patriot were called upon to sacrifice his ease or jeopardize his safety to enforce the law, he might sidestep a dangerous responsibility. The result of recent trials at Herrin, Illinois, gives ominous warning as to what may happen in Morehouse Parish. Yet with all these lights before them, there are stalwart men in Louisiana, striving to convict the murderers of Mer Rouge, peril or no peril.

MER ROUGE MEN MOVE TO TEXAS

3/17/23

American Forum

San Antonio Tex

A news dispatch brings the information to the American Forum, that a number of Mer Rouge men, prominent in the trouble in Louisiana, have moved to Marfa, Texas. Marfa is one of the most prominent towns along the Southern Pacific lines, west of San Antonio. It is what is known as a cattle man's town, for the reason that it is a ranch country, and little or no farming being available. many of the best cattlemen in that vicinity have moved their families into town in order to avail themselves of the fine schools located there—the women and children living in the little city, while the "old man," just hustles back and forth from the ranch to town—especially when he gets tired of frijoles and bacon, and longs for some real cooking. I think the rule is, to go to the ranch every Monday morning returning to town the same evening.

The American Forum editor lived quite a while at Alpine—20 miles east of Marfa—and is pretty well acquainted with the people of that district, and he can testify to the fact, that there is not a cleaner, better, more generous and whole-souled people on earth, than those of the Marfa section.

At this writing, we are not fully acquainted with the men alleged to have shaken the Mer Rouge mud from their feet, and migrated west. There has been such of a mell of a hess down in the Louisiana town of Mer Rouge, an outsider is always in a quandary, as to who is who, or whether which is which—or vice versa—in that miserable outfit that has disgraced the good old State of Louisiana for so many years.

There is one thing we do know—and that is the fact, that the court proceedings that have heretofore been operating in that bloody section of the woods have been the most gigantic farce, that has ever disgraced any state in this great union. Louisiana is one of the good old southern states, and the real back-bone of her worthy citizenship, has always been 100 per cent white men and white women.

This class of people, are the pure blooded white, American stock—descendants of the old-time slave owners—and without exaggeration, are the cream of pure American citizenship, and patriotic loyalty.

They don't make any better folks, than the old-time southern slave-owning, Louisiana planters—and their descendants. In every instance, where America needed men of iron will, to protect American rights, and face hot lead with a grin, old Louisiana has supplied her quota of men to fill the bill. After the civil war their homes had been wrecked, their property confiscated, and starvation and anarchy romped in rompers all over that devastated territory.

In those horrible days, there was nothing left but the unconquerable spirit of those old ex-Confederate war-worn veterans to save that magnificent state from anarchy and destruction. The writer was at Coushatta, pretty soon after the "break-up," when the country was boiling over with indignation, occasioned by the mutton-headed ex-slaves, led by northern carpet-baggers. There was no necessity for trouble, whatever—but those hell-inspired home-wreckers knew that if they permitted the patriotic men and women to settle down to work, and repair the damage of war, it would only be a short time, until brave old Louisiana would pull herself clear of the mud—and while she would still be poor, she would go up the ladder of Reconstruction, like a squirrel—and be on her feet, in short order. That was what the carpet-baggers didn't want to happen.

Then it was, when miserable men in white skins, and hearts black as hell, sneaked from cabin to cabin of the ignorant ex-slaves, whispering to those mutton-headed descendants of African chimpanzees, that "unless you arm, and put the whites under foot, they will have you back at work inside of twelve months". Work, was precisely what the nigger wanted to avoid. It is a matter of fact, that these miserable hell-cats, even assured the ignorant free-niggers, that by combining their strength, the whites would have to surrender, turn over their property to the ex-slaves, "who really owned it—having done all the work, that had produced such fine property," and of course the blacks rose instantly. You can always count on the American free-nigger to "rise" like a trout, whenever some shrewd white angler dangles a glittering "fly" in front of his eyes, marked "free—it's yours." He'll bite at a red-hot brick, if there's no work, or responsibility attached—especially if it's red as poke-berry juice.

There were many clashes between whites and blacks—with the inevitable result that eternally follows such a contest. The black man has never stood before the white in any contest—right or wrong—and never will, for the very simple reason, the white man won't permit it. Every time he tries it, he hits the grit—and he never even dares an open outbreak, except when led on by some treacherous white man, who merely uses him as a tool to further some lawless enterprise. It is a physiological fact, that the black race when left isolated from the white man for a very inconsiderable period, invariably reverts to the most disgusting forms of barbarism—never pausing on the down grade, until they reach the delectable Ultima Thule of original African glory—roasting the nice fat spare-ribs of his enemy over a jungle fire, and serving it for breakfast.

While it is absolutely no business of mine, I acknowledge a tinge of curiosity, to know just what influences, induced the Mer Rouge citizens to leave Louisiana—and why did they just happen to pick out Marfa, Texas, as an asylum from old-time troubles? Of course there is some reason—just and sufficient to induce the exodus and the selection of the "Promised Land"—but I'd like to know it, and at the same time, compliment the hardy adventurers on their selection of Marfa. The old town is a warm, live, energetic little city—and her population is the best—unless she has changed wonderfully—since I shot antelope inside of her corporate limits.

The telegram from Monroe, Louisiana, states that ten or 12 residents of Morehouse Parish have left within the past few days for Marfa, Texas, to make their homes, it was learned Saturday at the sheriff's office at Bastrop. Among them were several who figure in the Morehouse hooded band investigations, most prominent of whom were Carey and Laurie Calhoun.

Carey Calhoun shot and instantly killed his cousin, John P. Parker Jr., former sheriff of Ouachita Parish, and a Rainbow Division officer, during a drunken brawl at a negress' house following an argument over the Ku Klux Klan. Carey was hostile to the klan while his brothers Laurie and Gus were said to be klansmen. No charges were filed against Carey.

Laurie Calhoun was used by the State as a special deputy to arrest T. J. Burnett, charged with murder in connection with the murder of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard. He also brought Dr. B. M. McKoin, under arrest in connection with the case, from Baltimore to Bastrop. Laurie was mentioned by J. L. Daniel as one of three hooded men his son Watt ran into early in August when a box of cartridges were taken from him. Other Morehouse citizens are expected to migrate to West Texas, it was stated.

EVIDENCE IN CASE NOT SUFFICIENT, DECLARES BODY

Atlanta Constitution

Statements That Friction Existed Between Jury and Attorney General Denied in Report.

3-16-23

FIND LITTLE EVIDENCE OF LAW VIOLATION

Coco and Other Prosecuting Attorneys Fail to Make Statements on Action of Jury.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., March 15.—No indictments were returned by the Morehouse parish grand jury in connection with the slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard on August 24 last and various hooded band activities, which the jury has been investigating for the past ten days.

The jury's report was given to District Judge Fred Odom late today.

In the report the grand jury referred to the masked band case as "the deplorable crime of August 24," and stated that while it had gone thoroughly into the affair it could find no evidence that would warrant the indictment of any individuals.

Not Sufficient Evidence.

"As to the deplorable crime of August 24, 1922, when five men were kidnaped on the highway of Morehouse parish, we have carefully considered all the evidence brought before this grand jury as to the activities of masked and hooded men," the report states in part. "The majority of this body are of the opinion that the evidence furnished was not sufficient to warrant the finding of true bills against any particular party.

"As to reports published in certain newspapers that friction has developed between the grand jury and the attorney general and his assistants we wish to brand same as absolutely false and unfounded. The relations between the individual members of this grand jury and the attorney general and his staff have at all times been pleasant and harmonious.

Seven Minor Bills.

"Some 125 witnesses have been examined during the session and we have inquired into all matters reported to us, having returned seven true bills on matters aside from the mob cases. We find little law violation except in the case of the prohibition law and in several of these the district attorney has already filed bills of information."

Attorney General Coco and George Guion, assistant, left Bastrop today prior to the grand jury's report. Mr. Guion said it was not likely that Mr. Coco would have any statement to make as to the grand jury's report. Senator Howard Warren, of Shreveport, special counsel for the state in the Mer Rouge cases, was present when the report was filed, but left immediately for Shreveport without issuing any statement.

History of Case.

On August 24, 1922, five citizens of Mer Rouge, T. F. Richard, Watt Daniel, his father, J. L. Daniel; W. C. Andrews and "Tot" Davenport were abducted on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge road while returning by automobile from a picnic celebration at Bastrop. The abductors, estimated at from 15 to 20 men, one in a white robe and the remainder wearing black hoods, placed the five in a truck and drove away. Late that night J. L. Daniel and Andrews were released after being flogged, while Davenport was released without punishment Richard and Watt Daniel disappeared.

Relatives of the missing men insisted they had been murdered and enlisted the aid of Governor Parker in the search for them. In September department of justice men appeared in Morehouse parish to investigate the case. Their deductions were that Richard and Daniel had been murdered and their bodies cast from the Eastland ferry landing into Lake La Fourche, 25 miles from here.

In November Governor Parker visited Washington, where he had an interview with President Harding and quested additional federal aid in solving the mystery case.

Troops Ordered Out.

On December 21, Governor Parker ordered a company of infantry of the state national guard into Morehouse to drag the lakes in search of the bodies.

In the early morning hours two days later the troops engaged in a skirmish with a boatload of men on Lake Cooper which was at the time closed to traffic. While this was in progress dynamiting occurred on Lake LaFourche, 20 miles away, wherethe next morning the bodies of two men bound with telephone wires and badly mutilated were found floating on the surface of the lake surrounded by thousands of dead fish. The bodies were identified as those of Richard and Daniel.

More Soldiers Called.

Governor Parker immediately ordered an additional company of infantry and a machine gun company into Morehouse and set January 5 as the date for an open hearing at the courthouse at Bastrop to investigate the slaying of the two men and the activities of masked bands in the parish which the governor attributed to the Ku Klux Klan.

The open hearing revealed stories of abductions, deportations, floggings sending of threatening notes and details of the circumstances leading to the disappearance of the men who were murdered. These crimes were charged to bands of black-hooded men accused of being members of the Morehouse Ku Klux Klan. Names of many klansmen were associated with the crimes. The black hood was identified as part of the "raiding" regailia of the parish klan.

A graud jury was drawn on March 5 and the evidence recorded at the opening hearing was placed before it by the attorney-general and his assistants. Many of the important witnesses appeared for direct questioning.

HOODED MEN ESCAPE INDICTMENT BY JURY IN MER ROUGE CASE

New York Times 3/16/23

But Louisiana Attorney General Will Press Charges Against 45 Who Are Accused.

WILL ASK CHANGE OF VENUE

Grand Jury, Said to Contain Klansmen, Reported the Evidence Was Insufficient.

PARKER STARTED INQUIRY

Investigation Revealed Kidnappings, Abductions, Flogings and Deportations by Masked Bands.

BASTROP, La., March 15.—No indictments were returned today by the Morehouse Parish Grand Jury for the kidnapping, torture and slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards at Mer Rouge on Aug. 24 last and various other outrages committed by hooded bands in the parish which the jury has been investigating for the last ten days.

The jury before which Attorney General Coco appeared with the evidence taken at the hearing into the Mer Rouge outrages held here in January made its report to District Judge Odom, who presided at that hearing.

In its report the Grand Jury referred to the masked band case as "the deplorable crime of Aug. 24," and stated that while it had gone thoroughly into the affair, it could find no evidence that would warrant the indictment of any individuals.

Attorney General Coco, who left before the Grand Jury reported, stated that if no indictments were returned he would file bills of information against certain persons named at the open hearing as having participated in mob activities.

A violent storm raged the greater part of the afternoon and when the jury entered the court room at 4:50 P. M., there were few spectators present. The report was what many had expected and little comment was offered by citizens.

After the report had been made known, Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse Ku Kluz Klan made this comment:

"It is needless to say that I am highly elated. The State has done its duty and I hope it is satisfied and will let the matter rest."

Numerous other crimes charged to hooded lands were not mentioned in the Grand Jury report. More than 125 witnesses were heard by the jury during the ten days' session.

Judge Odom made no comment on the report. He dismissed the jury after saying they had been in session a long time and he knew it was more or less of a hardship, but it was a duty some one had to perform.

This was the third Grand Jury since the first of the hooded band kidnappings in Morehouse Parish, none of them finding indictments for the crimes.

Governor Parker Started Inquiry.

On Aug. 24, 1922, five citizens of Mer Rouge, T. F. Richards, Watt Daniel, his father, J. L. Daniel; W. O. Andrews and Tot Davenport, were abducted on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge Road while returning by automobile from a picnic celebration at Bastrop. The abductors, estimated at from fifteen to twenty men, one in a white robe and the remainder wearing black hoods, placed the five in a truck and drove away. Late that night J. L. Daniel and Andrews were released after being flogged, while Davenport was released without punishment. Richards and Watt Daniel disappeared.

Relatives of the missing men insisted they had been murdered and enlisted the aid of Governor Parker in the search for them. In September Department of Justice agents appeared in Morehouse Parish to investigate and their deductions were that Richards and Daniel had been murdered and their bodies cast into Lake La Fourche, twenty-five miles from here.

In November Governor Parker visited Washington where he had an interview with President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty, and requested additional Federal aid in the case. On Dec. 21, Governor Parker ordered a company of infantry to Morehouse to drag lakes for the bodies.

In the early morning hours, two days later, the troops engaged in a skirmish with a boatload of men on Lake Cooper. While this was in progress, dynamite was exploded in Lake La Fourche twenty miles away, and the next morning the bodies of two men, bound with telephone wires and badly mutilated, were found floating on the surface of the lake. The bodies were identified as those of Richards and Daniel.

Governor Parker immediately ordered an additional company of infantry and a machine gun company into Morehouse, and set Jan. 5 as the date for an open hearing at the courthouse at Bastrop to investigate the slaying of the two men and the activities of masked bands in the parish, which the Governor attributed to the Ku Klux Klan.

The open hearing revealed abductions, deportations, floggings, the sending of threatening notes and details of the circumstances leading to the disappearance of the men who were murdered. These crimes were charged to bands of black hooded men accused of being members of the Morehouse Ku Klux Klan. The names of many Klansmen were associated with the crimes. The black hood was identified as part of the "raiding" regalia of the parish Klansmen.

A previous Grand Jury, composed largely of Klansmen, had failed to take any action on the disappearance of the slain men and it was openly charged that the Grand Jury which reported today numbered among its members Klansmen or their sympathizers.

NEW ORLEANS, March 15.—Assistant Attorney General Walmsley said tonight he believed the State would present at once affidavits against persons suspected of being implicated in the Mer Rouge outrages.

"I am very much surprised at the news," Mr. Walmsley said. "The State had counted on indictments at least for the lesser offenses. The public can feel assured that Attorney General Coco will take prompt action in the matter. There are several courses open to the State."

He believed there was ground on which the State could obtain a new Grand Jury.

In the case of persons against whom affidavits would probably be made, he said, the State would request a change of venue. Decision would rest with Judge Odom.

Mr. Walmsley intimated that affidavits charging more than forty-five persons with such crimes as "lying in wait with a dangerous weapon, assault and battery, deporting persons from the State," and other lesser offenses would be filed immediately.

Ku Klux Klan – 1923 Louisiana card no. I

THE MURDERS OF THE MER ROUGE

Commercial Appeal. Memphis, Tenn. 3/11/23

By Harris Dickson

WHEN that morbid genius, Edgar Allen Poe, wrote his "Murders of the Rue Morgue," he conceived of no setting more weird and melancholy than that which solemn nature framed for the Murders of the Mer Rouge. The Quartier St. Roch in Paris, even the narrow Rue Morgue of ghastly name, is bright and sun-blessed when compared with the lone lagoons of Louisiana where Watt Daniel and T. F. Richards met their mysterious death. In striving to imagine what happened, and how, the imagination runs riot, picturing a masked and hooded gang dragging their victims to torture in forest solitudes, by some machine of hellish contrivance, then hiding two mutilated corpses at the very bottom of Lake La Fourche. Four months later a blast of dynamite, set off by unknown hands, brought to the surface these grisly remnants of what had once been men. Then neighbors whispered to each other, "It is the work of the Invisible Empire—the Ku Klux Klan."

Spokesmen for the Klan immediately denied, and continue to deny, all knowledge of the affair. When people caught their breath, bolder tongues denounced the Ku Klux as masked cowards, murderers and outlaws. Commercial Appeal. Memphis, Tenn.

"We are not," the Klan retorts; "We are one hundred per cent Americans, bound together by the highest ideals of patriotism."

This unsolved murder is the issue now joined before the court at Bastrop, a court so mingled with intrigue, partizanship, courage and fear, as to make well-nigh impossible the even-handed administration of law. To begin with, we accept as a fact that the clerk of that court, its sheriff and prosecuting attorney, all sworn Klansmen; while out of 20 grand jurors, a close guess would be that 12 are members of the masked order which stands collaterally on trial. The Ku Klux Klan being as Sir Edward Coke observed "a corporation which hath no soul," cannot itself be indicted for murder. But its members may. And they will be brought before the bar, while other members, as qualified jurors, take seats in the jury box to decide "Guilty" or "Not Guilty." To the outsider it might appear that the "Klux" rather than the state of Louisiana, were holding the scales, not as a blind justice, but as a justice with at least one eye tolerably wide open.

Attorney-General Coco, who directs the prosecution, realizes this awkward situation. Published interviews credit him with saying, "It is impossible under the law to exclude these citizens because of their affiliation with the Klan." As individuals, selected on account of their high standing and law-abiding repute, he expects them to do their duty, irrespective of Klan influence.

But can they? Will they? Is it in human nature for men to withstand such sinister pressure? Those of them who do not know whether the Klan, or some of its members, actually killed Daniel and Richards—can they be made to believe? And will they measure out retribution to their brothers? Maybe so, but Brutus in the judgment seat, makes himself mighty scarce during these degenerate days.

How Much Proof?

Put yourself in their position, if you be a Mason for instance, or a Knight of Columbus. How much positive proof would you demand before returning a verdict that your own fraternity is an organization engaged in the business of murder?

It is extremely difficult for an observer in Morehouse Parish to learn how these men were killed. Part of the affair is an absolute blank. He finds himself befuddled in a maze of conflicting rumors, charges, silences and suspicion.

Rarely does this writer intrude his own personality or opinions into a special article; here they become important because any appraisal of Klan activities must depend largely upon the color of the spectacles through which their visible manifestations are viewed. This writer is a southerner who knows somewhat of his country and his people. He has never been solicited to join the Klan, and is not a member. With many of the Klan's avowed purposes he is in sympathy as most Americans are, but stands utterly opposed to illegal methods—to masks, concealment, and terrorism. Every worthy purpose, which the Klan advocates, he believes can be attained through channels of established law. He spent some time at Bastrop during the open hearing, and listened to much of the evidence. He has had 20 years' experience in criminal courts, for whatever that may count in the weighing of human testimony. Lawyers on both sides are his personal friends; so are many of the trained newspaper men assigned to this case. With them he talked freely, with secret service operatives, with members and officials of the Klan, and with many persons upon whom has fallen the Klan displeasure. From such opportunities and point of view, these seem to be the best established facts:

Where Morehouse is.

Morehouse Parish lies in middle Louisiana, at about a dividing line between "the hills" and "the swamp." Bastrop, its parish seat, is a pretty little village with a modern courthouse, and a high school of which any city might be proud. Its people seem kindly, right-feeling, and no different from those in a thousand American villages. It has never been the scene of public disorder. Bastrop is known as a "Klan town," while the smaller village of Mer Rouge, nine miles away, is spoken of by Klan officials as "disaffected," or anti-Klan. "Disaffected," in the sense used, is very luminous.

In Mer Rouge the Daniel family have lived for more than a hundred years, the present generation, father and son, being planters of moderate means. There also dwelt Thos. F. Richards and W. C. Andrews—two of whom were killed and two whipped by masked men in Klan regalia. High dignitaries of the "Klux" usually allude to Mer Rouge as more degraded than Sodom, inhabited by moonshiners, whisky-selling poker-playing undesirables, who consort with negro women. Citizens of Mer Rouge insist that they live at peace, and, before these disturbances arose, were a happy community.

From every account of him, young Walt Daniel—ex-soldier, 336th Tank Corps—was a fearless and aggressive character, whom his friends considered jovial and popular. The other murdered man, T. F. Richards, was an automobile mechanic and boon companion of Daniel, but who seems to have made little impression as a personality.

It may be essential here to mention one persistent rumor, evidently from Klan sources, that Daniel was responsible for the ruin of several very young girls. This may never be proved or disproved for if there were victims they will never tell. If false it becomes a fatherless slander of the dead.

Did Not Fear Klan.

The feud between Watt Daniel and the Klan apparently originated with a nocturnal visit by the Klux to regulate one of Daniel's negro tenants, which he resented and followed the regulators to a barber shop, where Daniel gave them a thorough cussing. Then he proceeded at midnight to the home of the grand cyclops, telling that dignitary in vigorous English, exactly what he thought of him and his masked methods. Daniel did not fear the Klan, but publicly jeered and derided them.

At this time Dr. B. M. McKoin was a practicing physician of Mer Rouge. He had formerly been mayor, applauded by supporters for his righteous efforts to "clean up" the town, and denounced by others for his "bull-in-a-china-shop" procedure. This is the same man who was subsequently arrested in Baltimore for the murder of Daniel, who fought extradition and came home voluntarily, accompanied by a Klansman deputy sheriff. He disclaimed all knowledge of the crime but said that both Daniel and Richards were bad men, bootleggers and gunmen. The doctor also repudiated the charge that he was a "Kluck," while giving the Klan much credit for bettering affairs at Mer Rouge. Later, in the open hearing at Bastrop, it was testified to that McKoin was the Klan captain who commanded certain raiding parties.

One night in August the doctor asserted that the was summoned by phone to make a professional call, and while going there somebody tried to assassinate him by firing into his automobile. Which the auto plainly showed, being so riddled with shot that incredulous persons declared that no man could have been sitting at the wheel and escaped alive. Some people believed, but scoffers at the story also pointed out the fact that it was "Bunny" McKoin's discarded flivver, which he hadn't taken from the garage in months; that "Bunny" had shot at his own car, choosing the old flivver because he didn't want to scratch the paint on a new car.

"He did it," they said, "to gain sympathy for himself, and rouse the Klan so that the Klan would handle Watt Daniel.

Upon this attempted assassination, real or feigned, the subsequent murders hinged, for a small coterie at Mer Rouge were suspected by the Klan.

On the one hand Daniel declared that he knew nothing of it and could prove an alibi, being at the time engaged in the national game of poker, with certain men whom he named. On the other hand, Klan advocates contend that Daniel had admitted the shooting to a woman. This the attorney general denies, and there we are again.

Soon after this, Watt Daniel was waylaid by masked men in Klan regalia, and taken to the woods for questioning. There they remonstrated with him upon the error of his ways and released him with a solemn warning. Almost simultaneously T. F. Richards was standing before a garage at Bastrop with his little girl, when an automobile full of men wearing black hoods and masks, appeared and whisked him away. This happened in broad daylight and dozens of people saw it. The fact is sworn to and not denied that the sheriff of Morehouse Parish, an admitted klansman, stood within a hundred feet of the garage and made no effort to prevent the kidnaping. A rash young citizen protested, whereupon the sheriff warned him to mind his own business and not talk too much. Talking in Bastrop had become a crime, and kidnaping a virtue.

Richards returned from his grilling in high glee. He had enjoyed the joke, and gossiped about it. In fact he gossiped too much, by stating that he knew the voices of several captors, and revealed their identity. Daniel had also recognized some of them and made no secret of it.

Old Skip Was Along.

Connected with this abduction is an arc light fact: In the car that kidnaped Richards, side by side with men in black hoods and gowns, rode, unmasked and openly, Capt. J. K. Skipworth—"Old Skip," grand cyclops of Morehouse Klan No. 34, Realm of Louisiana. Appearing in public with these black hoods and masks, Old Skip gave a decided black eye to the Klan's pet contention, that their order used no such insignia, and that outrages were invariably committed by ruffians, not by members of the order.

This time, however, many profane eyes gazed upon the well-known cyclops, assisting at the kidnaping of a citizen, in broad daylight, before the eyes of their sheriff—and get away with it. Which seems to give official Klan sanction, not only to the black act, but to their black regalia.

Another unsired rumor, which sounds like the ravings of a movie thriller, is to this effect:

The night after Dr. McKoin's flivver got assassinated, hooded men went flitting amongst the moss-grown trees, concentrating in a grove near Mer Rouge—this being the terrible year of the awful moon of the horrific night when the Ku Klux Klan held their Kondfounded Konklave. Unawed by all this fantastic frightfulness Watt Daniel, as he laughingly told his friends, followed some of the monkey-shiners into the woods, where he hid behind a bush, and heard not only their mystic mummery, but identified many of the white robed mummers. Although the konklave discovered and captured him, although he frankly avowed that he had trailed them to obtain evidence for their exposure—yet they merely added a super-solemnity to their previous warning and let him go. This yarn has variations, many—and many doubters. It is given merely to illustrate the hysteria of the public mind, or the method of its madness.

Whether it were gospel or gabble, however, Daniel continued to talk, to name and jeer at various members of the hooded mob. Every account and circumstance agrees, Klan or anti-klan, that Watt Daniel was a festering sore in the Ku Klux hide.

This state of affairs brings us down to the crucial night of August 24. The parish of Morehouse wanted to issue bonds and build a system of highways. A barbecue and baseball game were being held at Bastrop. To this countryside celebration the crowds gathered. Again Watt Daniel talked too much. Late in the evening when the people went home they found their roads guarded by men in Klan regalia, black hoods and black gowns. Their movement was carried out with such order and system, as to force belief that it had been deliberately planned for a long time in advance. Silent maskers halted and searched every car, permitting all persons to proceed, except young Daniel, the elder Daniel, a man of 70 years, Thos. F. Richards, W. C. Andrews and Tot Davenport. These undesirables at the muzzle of miscellaneous weapons, they forced from their automobiles, tied and blindfolded and carried them into the woods. Some of their cars are said to have borne Arkansas and Mississippi license tags.

The three survivors of this kidnaping agree that all five men were driven to a lonely spot and questioned as to who shot at Dr. McKoin. Upon their protestations that they did not know, the elder Daniel and W. C. Andrews were soundly flogged and turned loose. Young Davenport was sent home without violence. Watt Daniel and Richards were not released with the others. Blindfolded and bound, their captors loaded them into a small auto truck, while a klansman informed their departing friends, "You may see one of these fellows again, but the other will never come back."

Daniel and Richards were never again seen alive. Friends and relatives made frantic and fruitless inquiries, but the silence had closed behind them. The invisible empire stood mute. A local grand jury whitewashed and buried the incident, parish authorities did nothing or discovered nothing. The governor of the state was appealed to.

Parker a Fearless Man.

John M. Parker is governor of Louisiana. From 30 years of personal intimacy this writer knows him to be an honorable and fearless gentleman. He promptly took the affair in hand, going to Washington, D. C., and setting United States operatives to work in Morehouse Parish. For this action Governor Parker was assailed by Louisiana representatives in Congress, who proclaimed that he brought discredit upon their sovereign state by invoking federal aid. Despite this congressional and other opposition, several strangers appeared at Mer Rouge, who advertised themselves as detectives, prodding into the lake, searching hollow trees and confiding their secrecy to the wide, wide world. It seemed a cinch for the local sleuths that spied upon these city fellows. The cyclops winked at the kleagle and boasted that the government made no move without their knowledge. Certainly not. They knew what the decoy ducks were doing, while the real investigators remained under cover, spying upon spies.

By this strategem the secret service got its first line on definite individuals who were concerned in obliterating the tracks of murder. The persons being shadowed, it developed that telegraph, postoffice and telephone employes were giving information to the klan. Bit by bit facts were pieced together, until a rather clear idea was gained as to a certain group of men responsible for the killing. But the bodies must be found; without them it could not be proven that murder had actually been committed.

The circle of search gradually centered around Lake LaFourche, a deep, narrow, isolated body of water lying 17 miles from Mer Rouge. Meanwhile a force of undesirable state militia had marched in to protect the investigation.

Detail of Troops Made.

The preliminary probing of Lake LaFourche having failed to locate the bodies, a detail of troops was posted there to prevent interference until expert divers could arrive from St. Louis. On the night of Dec. 21 their commanding officer received warning that suspicious characters were prowling around the prohibited area in Lake Cooper, some distance away. Troops were immediately rushed there, and by means of this ruse Lake LaFourche was left unguarded. During their absence a terrific explosion occurred in Lake LaFourche, caving down its banks and strewing the water with dead fish—more than 1,000 pounds of dynamite being set off by persons as yet undiscovered. It is supposed that their object was to regain possession of the bodies before these essential evidences of guilt could be exhumed by the divers.

At any rate they knew precisely where Daniel and Richards had been thrown, for the dynamite jarred their fastenings and at daylight a fisherman discovered two headless, mutilated trunks floating near his trot-line. These horrid relics, bound with wire as if they had been weighted down, were identifed by a watch that Daniel wore, fragments of clothing, laundry marks and other evidence as the remains of Watt Daniel and Thos. F. Richards. Klansmen, however, stubbornly contest this identification and insist that the bodies were planted in Lake LaFourche by the procurement of state authorities as part of their vindictive vendetta against the klan.

Anyway, two human bodies were discovered, proving that a crime had been committed, and upon this the prosecution might go ahead.

Under Old Statute.

An old statute of Louisiana authorizes the attorney general in times of public disturbance to conduct an open hearing and ascertain its cause. This is in the nature of a grand inquest, similar to that of a coroner or a grand jury. No particular defendant is in jeopardy and the widest scope is permitted. Rumors may be traced to their source, gossip retailed in the court room and hearsay fully sifted. The purpose of the open hearing is to thresh out and make public the nature of testimony to be hereafter laid before the grand jury, so that the world may know whether that grand jury does its duty by the finding of indictments.

Under the attorney general and his assistants, guarded by military, this hearing opened in Bastrop on Jan. 5. Many witnesses were examined, willing and unwilling, anti-klan, pro-klan and neutral.

In addition to facts already given, which were matters of public knowledge, it was sworn at the open hearing by two eminent pathologists from New Orleans that the two bodies lying in cool water for four months were in a fairly good state of preservation. Their condition indicated that both men were beaten and their bones broken before they died. The pathologists testified that the exact regularity with which these bones were crushed, at almost even intervals, would seem to show the use of some machine, the precise nature of which was unknown. Without going into the sickening details, both pathologists were of opinion that Daniel and Richards had been horribly tortured and mangled by some mechanical contrivance before death. One of their bodies was sujected to a nameless mutilation.

At this presumption of torture, however, the normal human being revolts and in the absence of direct proof hesitates to believe that plain everyday country folks would grimly feed a living man into such a contrivance—if one exists. It is difficult even to theorize a motive for torture, unless something happened to convert men into fiends. Yet the bodies were undoubtedly mangled, the bones of both being broken in about the same manner, and most puzzling to account for, although no vestige of a torture machine has ever been found.

Nineteen Admitted Klanship.

During the inquiry 19 individuals admitted under oath that they were members of the klan. Nine others were testified to as being klansmen. Six men were positively identified as constituting part of the mob which, in Ku Klux Klan regalia, kidnaped Richards for his first admonition in the woods, on the occasion when he was released. And five men were positively sworn to as being of the party on Aug. 24 who carried Daniel and Richards to their deaths. Former members of the klan testified that the black hood and gown were used by them on raiding parties, and that they themselves wore such disguises. That the black hood and gown were part of the klan regalia, recognized as such, and prescribed to be worn by their strong arm squad.

It was proven that Daniel and Richards were captured on the public road in daylight by a black masked and black hooded gang, five of whom have been identified, and all five are members of the Ku Klux Klan. Against this we have the official klan assertion that they had no connection with the murder which must have been committed by masquerading thugs.

This should be said, however, an open hearing is not a criminal trial. Strict rules of evidence do not apply. There is no defendant contending for his rights, no opportunity for cross-examination or contradiction of witnesses. It is yet to be demonstrated how far the evidence adduced at the open hearing will stand such tests, and whether a jury will convict upon it. The testimony was delivered in a straight-forward manner by men who seemed to be sincere, and it would have so impressed itself upon any nonpartisan observer.

More sinister than this it became apparent that in Morehouse Parish the authority of the klan had practically superceded the authority of the law. The courthouse, a sanctuary of the law, became a redezvous for the invisible government. Their vigilance committee reported undesirables to the grand cyclops, who passed sentence, and his word was final.

Young Girl Deported.

For example, a young girl 17 years of age, in Mer Rouge, was deported by six men wearing the black hood and mask and ordered to stay away until their grand cyclops might be pleased to o. k. her return. Black hoods marched into churches and read their ominous warnings, men were flogged for refusing to dip their cattle or refusing to shut their mouths. To criticize the klan was an offense against the Holy Ghost. Suspected offenders were whipped by hooded vigilantes, and others driven out of the parish. As a culmination to this reign of terror, Daniel and Richards were murdered by men in Klan regalia.

The thoughtful reader in New York or San Francisco who digests this situation concludes that the klan is composed solely of bloody-minded cutthroats. But let him come to Bastrop and talk with attorneys on both sides, let him mingle with avowed officers of the klan and with their sturdy opponents, let him travel around the country with shrewd agents of the secret service and hear what they say, let him listen to testimony as delivered from the witness stand and unconsciously he gets a modified point of view. He finds himself at sea, amazed by a most baffling human situation.

For fear of being misunderstood let me repeat that I am opposed to Ku Klux Klan methods. But many of my friends are believed to be members, men whose honest manhood has been tested in the long, long crucible of years, and I know that they did not join for unworthy motives.

It is an axiom of history that no theory of religion, no system of government, no political party ever gained its hold upon thousands when founded in unmixed evil. High-minded men must think there's good in the klan, else they'd keep out of it, or having joined, they know not where to turn.

Was Proud of It.

One morning there came upon the witness stand at Bastrop a white-haired gentleman of 66, unquestionably a gentleman, the sort of man who would be trusted on sight, and his associates had honored him for a generation. During his examination the question was asked, and he answered that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan—and proud of it—at which a burst of spontaneous applause arose from the audience, composed largely of ladies. Why do such men join the klan, and why do such women applaud? Possibly the class of klansmen who are pointed out as upholding the dignity of their order are never informed of the work of their "wrecking crew." The right hand may not know what the left hand doeth.

In view of developments at Bastrop the situation is far more important than a Ku Klux Klan. The existence of one secret fraternity, more or less is of little moment, but the existence of a popular sentiment is momentous for it is upon the belief of its citizens that the nation acts. What men think however erroneous, is part of public sentiment to be reckoned with, and we'd better diagnose rather than denounce.

Why do thousands of excellent citizens ally themselves with the Ku Klux Klan? In guessing at an answer, it is necessary to make statements that this writer does not believe. It matters not whether they are true; all that matters is that some people believe and act upon them.

The world is upset. We have seen granite empires fall and mushrooms take their places. Hoary institutions of mankind are in a turmoil of readjustment. Everybody knows that a cog is out of gear and tinkers are seeking a remedy.

Are Law-Abiding.

Amongst the nations we Americans are least law-abiding. We cherish scanty reverence for law simply because it is law. None of us have ever bowed before the will of despotic power, so when some fellow in gold braid orders us to do a thing we ask him "why?" then figure on it for ourselves. It must also be remembered that in this neck of the woods our people are scarcely a generation removed from the pioneer who opened this wilderness, with his rifle in one hand and an ax in the other. This man had fixed notions of justice. If wrong was done him he righted it himself on the spot. And his blood runs strong in the veins of his sons.

Add to this the inevitable restlessness of the youth who has grown up in a lonesome country and goes to France, where he is suddenly thrust into the vortex of world-wide events. That boy comes back home and finds trouble in making himself content by plowing a yoke of speckled bulls on a hillside. He craves action.

Before an audience of such lads stands the Ku Klux Klan agitator. The farmers' boy hears him state his platform as follows:

"No person can be a klansman until he takes oath that he believes in the fatherhood of God, the divinity of Christ and the constitution of the United States. No klansman can assume to be a super-force or supplant the officers of the law. For any act of lawlessness he must be expelled. He must oppose the Bolshevist, the anarchist, the lyncher, and stands pledged to assist the legal authorities."

The klan declares for white supremacy in its highest sense. The white man must keep his own blood pure, and the klan orator pleads also for justice to the negro.

The klan advocates complete separation of church and state, with a guarantee of religious liberty to every citizen. They argue for better public schools, and above all, the agitator commits his organization to the protection of home and womanhood. Charges of lawless conduct against klansmen he dismisses as a lot of trumpery.

Swallows It Whole.

The average audience would come nearer approving everything he said than an average mass meeting of Democrats or Republicans would come to indorsing, item by item, every plank in their party's platform.

The farmer's boy swallows it whole. Thrills are scarce as rooster eggs to this lad who milks his cow before daylight and scuffles along to make cotton ahead of the boll weevil. That organizer enthuzes him. He itches to see what the klan is like and "jines." He doesn't know why, just "jines." It gives him something to think about while he's jerking the bell cord over a mule. The high ideals touch him. Then he's touched again, for $21.50—$10 initiation, $6 dues, paid quarterly, $5.50 for a 75 cents nightshirt with spy holes to squint through. Five dollars and 50 cents for a nightshirt, that's higher than the ideals. He grins and also pays—the organizer not accepting grins as legal tender. The mummery of initiation and deep bass phrases please him. After that the boy gets mysterious notices to meet the brothhood at the hour of mournful midnight beside the blasted cypress in the heart of the haunted woods. It seems kinder adventuresome to ride old Beck through the forest, to glimpse other ghostly shapes like himself, to hold a solemn konklave where the graveyard borders upon the cedar trees, then go winding in single file amongst the mossgrown oaks. Ahead is an unknown sheeted figure, behind him rides another apparition. He is not supposed to even guess their names, but each is a loyal klansman, sworn on the blood, to the death. Here's where the farmer boy gets action for his money. He mumbles horrible passwords and practices the grand hailing sign. Of course, he doesn't know why he goes gallivanting around in the dark woods, but high ideals are slippery things, and a fellow's liable to grab one most anywhere. The country boy loves to imagine himself a crusader—a sort of romantic cross between Sir Galahad and Carrie Nation.

Is Not a Bad Boy.

This is not a bad boy; he has no faintest notion of doing harm to his fellow man. Then, where does the harm come in? Maybe it's this way:

Some lifelong failure who doesn't amount to shucks gets elected grand cyclops—by acclamation, accident and default—a man who has never held authority or given orders. Before this dizzy elevation nobody ever paid attention to what he said. Now it tickles him mightily, calling his terrors to klonklave in the dreadful den; he gets all puffed up, full of high ideals and balloon juice. He has the right to wear a nifty red hat while the brotherhood kow-tows. Maybe he's an amiable old nonenity with a heart big as a skinned mule, who takes himself more seriously than a sophomore. He reads the sonorous rituals in a voice summoned from the same cavern where he keeps his indigestion, and demands a report from the vigilance committee.

"Sire," the chairman of said vigilance committee, bumps his forehead against the floor—it may be the same grocery who has just declined to credit the grand cyclops for a dime's worth of chawing tobacco—"Sire, we beg leave to report that Buster Buckingham refuses to dip his cattle for ticks."

"What!" the grand cyclops inquires, "Buster Buckingham won't dip that muley red heifer of his'n?"

"No, sire."

"Aint' that contrary to the statoot in such case made and provided? Ain't it agin the peace and dignity of the state of Looziany?"

"It is, sire. Announce his direful doom."

"Off with his head!" roars the grand cyclops, "so much for Buckingham." Then he proceeds to invoke the blessing of the Deity.

Drunk With Power.

It must sometimes occur that local Ku Klux officials, who were never Solomons to begin with, get drunk upon the sudden possession of power. According to credible testimony at Bastrop the head of this Klan could order warnings to be sent. It was lone. He could order kidnaping, flogging, or deportation. Which take place as per schedule.

It is the farmer's boy perhaps, who carries out these sentences, at first without intention of doing wrong. He gets in deeper and deeper, until some brother lets a foot slip, and a man is killed. The boy cannot turn informer; an inflated notion of loyalty makes him stand by the gang. Perhaps behind it all, there may be some man of real ability who engineers the affair to gain his own ends. This is mere guess work, but may partially account for much that happened.

Why does an honest member defend the Klan in such cases as this? Here may be the answer: Because after joining he becomes a partisan, stalwart as any Democrat—or Republican—who denounces all scurrilous charges made by a hireling press of the opposition.

There seems another moving impulse to membership in the Klan that should be touched upon, although this writer is keenly aware of opening a door to acrimonious dispute on racial and religious prejudices. Yet it is more or less a factor, either in the workings of the Klan itself, or in what outsiders say of it. Therefore, let us look at the matter squarely, and temperately.

"Even the devout Catholic," contends a certain class of klansmen, "cannot object to our white protestant organization. The catholic has his Knights of Columbus. Why shouldn't we also have a protestant order that sticks together?"

Prejudice—regrettably there seems no clever word—prejudice so-called, religious and racial, has figured conspicuously in every movement of humankind. As commonly used, it signifies a narrow-minded and bigoted spirit, always imputed to the other fellow. Yet every human being has it, as a part of himself, planted there by nature. Nor should it always be condemned. For prejudice, in this sense, is the converse of loyalty. Each man thinks that his own is the best, his own children, his own country, his own race, his home town, his church, political party and brand of chewing tobacco. Loyalty to America prejudiced us against everything that was arrayed on the other side in the late war. Loyalty-and-prejudice, linked together, constitute the instinct that impels a man to defend his own, even to the extent of impairing or destroying that of another.

Consider the tenaciously undeviating history of the Jew: without a home, without a government, without a land of his own or laws of his own making, by this natural instinct the Jew has clung with his kind, and preserved the purity of his blood throughout centuries of oppression. Racial loyalty-prejudice should really be a hyphenated word, inseparably welded together for good as well as evil.

KLALN DENIES INTIMIDATION

New York Times 3/19/23

Letter on Burning Crosses at Freeport Explains Policy on Negroes.

A denial that the recent display of burning crosses in Freeport, L. I., and other Long Island towns was intended to intimidate negroes was received yesterday in a letter, signed by the "Freeport Ku Klux Klan," by John E. Robinson of 3 Waverly Place, Freeport, editor of the New Amsterdam Daily News, a Harlem negro newspaper. Mr. Robinson was active in a meeting of Nassau County negroes in Freeport on the evening of Lincoln's Birthday, at which demands were made for negro representation on village school boards and in other public offices. Crosses in half a dozen Long Island towns were burned that night.

"From the press announcements and general gossip, the impression seems to prevail that the flaming cross discovered across the street from the auditorium where you held your celebration and dinner was the work of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," the letter read. "Possibly it was, but I can say truthfully that it was with no intention of intimidating the negro to the extent that the newspapers have tried to indicate.

"The Klan is anti-Jew, anti-negro, anti-Catholic and anti-foreign-born, but its operations against these elements are purely for the sake of the principle for which the order stands. It is against the negro on general principles, but it recognizes his Americansim.

"It would stand between the negro and the mob for the protection of life and limb. The Klan opposes negro participation in government on one point only. Your race being in its infancy, it should be content to be governed by members of a race which has been proven to be your superior."

City Judge Charles W. Boote of Yonkers, in a talk with Frederick Storms, Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan for Westchester County, advised the Klan yesterday to "clean house." Storms, who was convicted of carrying a concealed weapon and received a suspended sentence on condition that he report to Judge Boote every Sunday, said in defending the Klan that it had been unjustly blamed for the Mer Rouge murders in Louisiana, when these crimes were really due to a war among bootleggers.

WREATH FROM KLAN IS AGAIN REMOVED

Mysteriously Disappears From Soldiers' Monument When Replaced by Police.

LEGION MEMBERS JUBILANT

Post Considers It Unlikely That Objectionable Tribute Will Reappear at Memorial.

Special to The New York Times.

The N.Y. Times 6-1-23

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, L. I., May 31. — The wreath of the Ku Klux Klan which was removed on Memorial Day by indignant World War veterans from Memorial Rock and replaced there by the police under instructions of the village President and Trustees disappeared for the last time early this morning. Members of the Rockville Centre Post of the American Legion said it was not likely that the objectionable wreath, which they believed was placed at the base of the monument for publicity reasons, would be replaced there a second time.

The wreath disappeared as mysteriously as it first was laid at the foot of the monument. The veterans of the World War were aggrieved when Village President G. Byron Latimer and Village Trustees Charles E. Richmand and Henry E. Allen instructed Police Chief Tyree G. Bacon to take the Klan floral offering back to the monument after it had been removed by Samuel W. Ellis, Commander of the Rockville Centre Post of the American Legion, and Raymond Murphy.

The village officials after a hasty conference at village hall to consider the complaints of anonymous Ku Klux Klansmen about the removal of the wreath decided the flowers should be returned to their vacant place at the monument. The u Klux card picturing a horseman and inscribed "From the Rockville Centre Ku Klux Klan," had been removed.

"But they didn't consult the veterans," said Post Commander Ellis who was still indignant yesterday when he spoke of the hasty action taken by the village President and Trustees. "They held a meeting at tow nhall and instructed Police Chief Bacon to send the wreath back to the monument while we were parading.

"We didn't know that the obnoxious offering was at the foot of the monument when we held our Memorial Day Exercises there. Members of the American Legion were not informed that the town officials intended to restore the offering. No, on the face of it, it looks like the wreath was slipped back to the monument while we were parading.

"If they had consulted us about replacing the wreath they would have found that the veterans of the World War were dead against having any tribute of the Ku Klux among the many other floral tributes placed at the monument.

"It was our monument, and we thought we might have been consulted in the matter of placing the wreath back against the Memorial Rock. I say it was our monument, because members of the American Legion raised the entire fund to erect it. We didn't ask the village officials or the other citizens of Rockville Centre for a cent.

"When we took the wreath to the Police Station, I left it with Chief Bacon with the understanding that it was my property, and that I would call for it later to dispose of it. But in the meantime, the Village President and Trustees had heard the complaints of the Klansmen, and when I got back to the police station, I learned for the first time that the wreath was placed back on the Memorial Rock."

The American Legion, according to Post Commander Ellis has learned the name of the florist who made the piece and the circumstances under which the order was left with him. They refused to disclose his identity, but said they knew enough to convince them that the wreath was intended merely as a piece of Klan propaganda. They are convinced, however, that the florist who made the wreath, did not know that it was to be used as a tribute to the war dead from the Klan.

20,000 AT JUBILEE OF KLAN NEAR ISLIP

The Sun 9-24-23

Women and Children Are Invited to Attend for the First Time.

N.Y. Morning News 9-24-23

A secret Ku Klux Klan jubilee, fully 20,000 strong, and drawing from virtually every Klan in Long Island, was held Saturday night about seven miles from Islip at Booth's Farm, on the State Road, near the Hauppauge School, according to reports from Islip last night.

Women and children were invited for the first time, and witnessed elaborate initiation ceremonies which attended the adding of several hundred candidates to the order. A little flurry was caused when a Hauppauge resident named Nichols challenged some of the doctrines expressed with, "That's a lie." There was a threatening movement in his direction among the younger Klansmen, but older counsels prevailed and he was merely forced to take a seat on the platform, together with his two sisters, and hear the speaking out. The family group were then paraded across the speakers' stand and escorted from the field amid booes.

The jubilee was staged on a rolling stretch of twenty acres which formed a natural amphitheatre—the rostrum, set off with twin fiery crosses and flanked by a tent for the novices occupying the principal hollow. Thousands of robed figures, holding their children and womenfolk by the hands to steel them against the general spookishness, spread in waves up the slopes. The crest was completely encircled with automobiles, parked twenty deep, their headlights aimed into the hollow and lighting up plain and sky.

Bombs and fireworks were utilized to impart a dynamic quality to the meeting as a partial offset to a heavy rain which fell throughout and drenched the spectators. The motorists came to the rescue of several hundred of the women with small children by inviting them to their runing boards and stretching side curtains over their heads, unbrellawise.

The orthodox Klan doctrines were expounded, interspersed with attacks upon the New York City administration for its failure to provide adequate school facilities. Demand was also made for sealing of the gates of Ellis Island against further immigration and for the closing of all parochial schools. Newspaper editors came in for criticism for pandering to inferior tastee.

One admitted as honorary member was a pastor born in the north of Ireland whose charge is in Centerport, and who was one of the speakers.

The speaker at the meeting, which lasted from 9 o'clock until after midnight, was the Rev. Oscar Haywood of South Carolina, an organizer of the Klan. He declared that negroes had been misled about the Klan. The Klan was out to help the negroes in every way, he said, and there was not a Klansman who would not stand between a negro and a lynching crowd.

Mr. Haywood said that 32,000 Protestant ministers were members of the Ku Klux Klan. Within three years, he said, every Protestant church in New York City "will be wide open to the K Klux Klan."

KLAN INITIATES 300.

Thirty-five-Foot Cross Burned at Meeting in Long Island Village.

FREEPORT, L. I., Oct. 21.—A large crowd attended a Ku Klux Klan meeting in a lot off the Merrick Road in the village of Wantagh, seven miles east of here, last night. A field nearby was filled with the parked automobiles of those at the meeting. A class of 300 were initiated, and a thirty-five foot high cross was burned, while a brass band played "Onward, Christian Soldiers." 10-22-23

Kamelia Wins Flag as the Most Popular Organization in Nassau County.

BABYLON, L. I., Oct. 13.—A dozen fiery crosses, symbol of the Ku Klux Klan, lighted up the sky over Long Island on Friday night. In two or three instances near Garden City the Nassau County police put the fires out because of the disturbances they created. One cross, 50 feet high, was ignited by Klansmen at midnight. Crosses were burning at Huntington, Cold Spring Harbor and Valley Stream.

A Ku Klux Klan initiation started late Friday night and ended at 3 o'clock this morning in a field between Babylon and Lindenhurst. Roads and fields were congested with automobiles and spectators. It was estimated that about 15,000 Klansmen gathered to initiate 350 into the order. Music was furnished by a band of fifteen pieces. The five initiators wore robes but no masks and three Klansmen made addresses.

The Kamelia, the woman's branch of the Klan, received a silk flag at the Lynbrook firemen's tournament on Friday as the most popular organization in Nassau County. The selection was made by vote. The Democratic Club of Lynbrook was second.

The Ku Klux Klan held a meeting about 2 o'clock yesterday morning in Davidson's Woods, in Jamesburg, near Perth Amboy. The members, hooded and robed, arrived in thirty-five automobiles. Several hundred persons gathered when a large cross was lighted, watched the proceedings, but made no hostile demonstration. After the cross burned out the Klansmen put up a sign reading: "Jamesburg Bootleggers, Beware!"

KU KLUX ARE IN LOUISVILLE

Louisville News
Louisville, Ky.

HOLD MEETING IN JACOB PARK

3-3-23

CHEIF OF POLICE DENOUNCES BAND

Now, don't get scared, but The News wants to put you next to something. Now, keep this under your hat and don't run around telling everybody. This is just between friends: The Ku Klux are in Louisville! Yeah, Boy, they are. Had a big meeting out to Iroquois Park last Sunday night in all that rain. Yes, you know—old Jacob Park. Went way up there on one of them hills, lit up their cross and initiated some more members. Yeah, Boy! took in some more members. Now, will you be good? But the police saw the SIGN of the CROSS, and Major Griffin, Night Chief, and a gang of cops went out there accootin. But the Ku Klux didn't believe that BY THIS SIGN WE CONQUER, and they had all skeedaddled. All the police found was twenty-five footprints—showing one Ku Kluxer must have been one-legged or something—and a lot of newspapers where the Ku Kluxers must of wrapped up their night gowns in. Oh, yeah! Get this, Boy; Get this—This was found:

"One notice on yellow paper was addressed: 'To the New Men,' and said: 'You have been honored tonight by being initiated into the Ku Klux Klan at the largest initiation ever held in Louisville. You are now a real Klansman.' It urged new members to get ten others to join in ten days. In large print appeared: 'Remember, a Klansman sees and hears, but he doesn't talk.' "

Now, what you know about that? Mr. Smith said when he was Mayor: "The Ku Klux can not organize in Louisville." Brave words, but Mr. Smith is not Mayor now. Still there is balm in Gilead. Louisville has a Chief of Police—a soldier and a man—in the person of Col. Forrest M. Braden. And when he speaks he speaks for the admniistration. Hear him and take heart. On getting a report of the Ku Klux meeting he made a very strong statement. It has the right ring to it.

The Chief's statement follows:

"This little handful of ignorant dupes, dupes of the so-called organizers of the Klan, who are merely playing upon the prejudices and ignorance of these dupes, for the purpose of getting their hard-earned dollars, which the yhave to pay to become members of the Klan, certainly left their classification as citizens on Jacobs Hill last night. The police found a burned emblem of the crucifixion, a misspelled message and some empty bootleg whisky bottles. The 'super-citizens' had fled in the dark, like ordinary chicken thieves before the police arrived, and all that was found were these marks of ignorance, cowardice, lawlessness and blasphemy.

"I do not believe there is room for an 'Invisible Empire' and a 'free republic' in America. Any organization that tries to usurp the most serious of all responsibilities of government, that of trying and condemning fellow-citizens, must be choked off."

Strong words. They are bac up by the Louisville Times, wh wittily, perhaps, but meaning, says: "The Klux Kan't Klan in Kentucky." We hope not. But, Boy! do you remember The News asked you about three years ago: "Have You Got a Little Fairy in Your Home?" And we advised you to get one. The Department of Justice called on us to explain. We did, because The News is law-abiding and centainly dreads the idea of a race riot. But as fine as are Col. Braden's words and his stand we repeat that question: "Have You a Little Fairy in Your Home?" Some people think a little fairy is soap—some think it is a forty-eight. Oh! well; you may use Ivory for all we know.

"RATHER MURDEN THAN LET GIRL WED NEGRO.

"Newport, Ky., Feb. 26 (Associated Press).—A white-robed, hooded member of the Ku Klux Klan, addressing the members of the Brighton Street Baptist Church last night, said he "would rather go before his Almighty with the stain of murder on his hand than permit a daughter of his to marry a Negro.'

Louisville Herald
3-3-23

"He said that he was not opposed to Catholics or Jews, but believed in "white supremacy, free speech, religious liberty and preservation of American institutions."

There ain't no difference between them—whether they live in Newport or Louisville.

KLAN KLEAGLE BURIED IN HOME'S WRECKAGE

Gas Explosion Blamed for Tragedy in Louisville.

KLAN'S RECORDS FOUND

H. Hooper Hall Is Victim of Explosion, Either Acidental or Deliberately Planned—Had Been Dropped From Louisiana Klan.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 25.—An explosion that ended the life of H. Hooper Hall at his home here, left buried in the wreckage documents which reveal the inner workings of the invisible empire, a list of charter members of the Tuscaloosa, Ala., organization, and Hall's commission as kleagle.

Commercial Appeal
May 26 1923

Searchers today sifted the debris in an effort to uncover additional communications from the klan headquarters while police and firemen sought to clear up the mystery surrounding the blast.

Hall, 43 years old, a member of an old Kentucky family, was agent here for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of Baltimore. He retired to his handsome bungalow in the southern part of the city, where he resided with his nephew, W. G. Hall, when early today neighbors were attracted by an explosion. The house was burning when they arrived. Hall, nude, toppled 15 feet to a concrete walk a moment later. He died without speaking.

It is known Hall had trouble. His wife, who filed a divorce suit a week ago, said today she had given him a year to "make good," but that he failed. She denied his work as an organizer for the klan caused her action.

Locked Doors and Windows.

According to the wife, Hall was in the habit of locking all doors and windows in his bedroom. It is the opinion of some that this was caused by fear, inasmuch as a large sheet of paper was found which bore the command, "Do it now."

Communications from the invisible empire show that Hall was an organizer in Louisiana. They tell the story, too, of why Hall was dropped from the organization. It seems, from the documents, that Hall failed to meet notes held by the invisible empire.

It is hoped that his nephew, who is away on a visit, will be able to aid the investigators when he returns for the funeral. Perhaps he will know the names of three men who visited Hall at the time crosses were burned in various parts of Louisville.

Investigators are certain the explosion was caused by gas, but whether the fumes escaped through a leak, or through an opening made deliberately, has not been determined definitely. One theory is that Hall ignited the bed clothing, and that the flames ignited accumulated gas. Hall then crawled to a window and onto a roof over a bay window. From there he rolled over and fell to the walk.

One of the documents unearthed in the ruins is a kleagle's chartered klan report, addressed to the imperial wizard. In it Hall says "I have this day chartered a klan at Tuscaloosa, Ala., with 143 charter members. The klan, named Jack Jolly, meets every Thursday."

Louisville newspapers today printed the names of officers and members of the Tuscaloosa klan, as shown in the papers found.

Monroe Klan.

Another communication originally written to the imperial wizard, and sent out in circular letters, calls attention to the growing organization in Monroe, La., and the number of Jews there.

"This town is dominated by Jews," it stated. "Only one Gentile in the dry goods business here. Our mayor is John Marx, the chief clerk in the water and light plant, the registrar of voters and one of the most influential members of the school board. The president and secretary of our police jury and the chief of our fire department and the superintendent of our street railway system are Roman Catholics.

"However, we propose to do our best to band together enough dyed in the wool American citizens to make Monroe safe for real klannishness and true Americanism."

Another letter boasts that "2,376 join klan at Big Klonkave held in Chicago."

One communication, signed "N. N. Furney, cashier," was to remind Hall, who then was stopping at the Hillman Hotel at Birmingham, that he would be expected to pay $60 he owed to the klan.

Whether Louisville klansmen expect to take part in the funeral of the dead kleagle, could not be ascertained.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 4.—The condemnation of the Ku Klux Klan as an unAmerican institution at the Republican State convention here last Thursday came as a great surprise to many. Lexington, Ky., June 28, 1923—The Republican State Convention before adjourning early today adopted a plank denouncing the Ku Klux Klan as un-American. It was a surprise, as no intimation of such a move had leaked out.

Declaring the party heartily condemned the Klan as subversive of American ideals and institutions, the plank declared further, "We pledge Republican officials to a relentless warfar upon this (the Klan) and any similar organizations which may attempt to usurp the functions of government."

KLAN SPEAKER IS FINED.

Gets $200 for Defying Officials in Kentucky.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 25.—In a decision by City Judge Joseph H. Bullock, the Rev. E. H. Lougher of Indianapolis, Ku Klux Klan speaker, was fined $100 and costs on each of the two breach of peace charges, which were amended from charges of inciting to riot. The fines grew out of an attempt by Lougher to address 5,000 persons on the public square here the night of Aug. 1, after the mayor and city commissioners had forbidden the meeting. He had spoken for about 10 minutes when a squad of police arrested him. Lougher was taken to police headquarters and allowed bond at once. Five minutes later he again attempted to speak and was arrested a second time. Judge Bullock said: "The defendant came here to speak for an organization that was already in our midst, producing in the minds of the local public considerable apprehension and alarm by its unlawful practices. The red ink with which the handbill was printed advertising the meeting was in itself significant. The general knowledge that a large element of our population was under the ban of persons calling themselves the 'Ku Klux Klan' created a situation where the words or acts or conduct certainly tended to provoke or incite others to violate the peace and tranquillity of this city and commonwealth."

The Rev. Mr. Lougher will appeal.

HAIL AND FAREWELL TO KLAN ORGANIZER

Mayfield Citizens Speed the Parting Guest.

MAYFIELD, Ky., Aug. 25.—Last Wednesday night a long line of determined Mayfield citizens lined the streets along North Seventh Street, thence westward to the Illinois Central Depot. Not a word was spoken, not a sign given, but shortly after 7:15 they dispersed, melting as silently away in the night as they had gathered, their mission accomplished. They had sent a committee to wait on a klan organizer, the committee had done its work in the quietest, most polite kind of a way, and the whistle on the fast Louisville-to-Memphis passenger train No. 101, due here at 7:15, had whistled its departure up the grade in South Mayfield. The organizer was aboard that train. Those citizens were satisfied. They believed they had done their duty to their city and their families. The organizer had no escort to the station; he walked along the silent lines alone. No one waved good-by, no one speeded his departure; he just left.

The Daily Messenger had this to say:

"Mr. [illegible] organizer for the Ku Klux Klan, who has been in Mayfield for the past several weeks, left Mayfield last evening for Indiana.

"During the past few days there has been much talk going on in Mayfield about klans, Ku Klux Klans and klansmen, the burning of the 'fiery cross' and mask robes, together with the number of klansmen now in Mayfield.

"Getting down to the facts, and to make a long story short, a man representing the Ku Klux Klan arrived in Mayfield several months ago and wanted to get the courthouse to speak in, which was refused him. He also received several callers, who represented the best of Mayfield's citizenship and before long he was escorted to the train and left for parts unknown.

"About two weeks ago a man arrived in Mayfield to take his work up where he left off, and after being in Mayfield a short time it was discovered by newspaper people and other citizens that he was here working in the interest of the Ku Klux Klan.

"Immediately the officials of both city and county responded, together with the American Legion, and before two days had passed there had been several meetings held, after which a committee went to see the organizer, and as a result he left the city last evening for Fulton, Ky.

"The citizens of Mayfield were out in large numbers during the early part of the evening Friday, and it looked as if there would have been some trouble should the klan organizer have remained in Mayfield.

"The citizens were so intent on him leaving town that they sent a man to tell him that the train was on time.

"From the view we take in the matter, we believe that Mayfield is one of the best towns in America, and if there is a single neighborhood that does not need a Ku Klux Klan this is one of them.

"The city of Mayfield and Graves County are not as wealthy as some counties, but they have the best people here that can be found in America.

"No doubt the Ku Klux Klan will be represented in Mayfield again in about three months' time with another organizer, but remember when he comes he will receive the same reception, if what the citizens have to say today is true."

PEDDLER OF KU KLUX PAPER FINED $100

LOUISVILLE NEWS EDITORIAL OFFERED AS EVIDENCE KLAN IS MENACE

Republican Lawyer For Klansman Attracts Attention

The editorial referred to was one captioned "Have You a Little Fairy in Your Home," which appeared last February.

It was written about the time the Klan appeared very active in this community and the essence of it was to advise Colored people to prepare to defend themselves.

At the time it aroused the ire of the Chief of Police and that official summoned the editor of The News to his office and denounced the editorial as incendiary and declared he could keep the peace without the aid of The News.

Rumors have been rife for a long time that the Ku Klux Klan in Louisville and Kentucky is made up mostly of Republicans. The News has been informed that prominent members of the Republican organization are members of the Ku Klux Klan. And since the trial of Rigor these rumors have become positive assertions. The basis for them being what is called a "significant thing" that Rigor was represented by Mr. J. S. Luscher.

Mr. Luscher, it is charged is a protege of, and until recently was in the office with Messrs. Searcy and Chilton, Republican bosses.

Last Saturday morning Jack E. Rigor was fined $100 in the Police Court for selling on the streets of Louisville copies of the "Fiery Cross," organ of the Ku Klux Klan.

Rigor had been charged with disorderly conduct when arrested for selling the paper but this was changed to breach of the peace and he was given the maximum fine so he could carry the case to the Court of Appeals.

Prosecuting Attorney Nat Cureton was assisted in the prosecution by Mr. Richard P. Dietzman of the City Attorney's office. Mr. Dietzman had asked William Warley, editor of the Louisville News to be in court and testify as to how he thought Colored people felt regarding the Klan. He said the city was determined the Ku Klux should not get a foothold in Louisville.

Other COLOREED people who had received alleged Ku Klux notices were summoned to be present, and testify at the trial, by the Police Department.

None of these witnesses was called upon and efforts of Mr. Dietzman to get an editorial from the Louisville News in the records were over-ruled, when Judge Railey sustained objections of Rigor's attorney.

KLAN GOLD TABOOED BY A. M. E. CHURCH SAYS BISHOP CAREY

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nev. 2.—By A. N. P. "The African Methodist Episcopal Church will never accept a cent of Klan money. It is tainted and would sully the Christian principles for which this church stands," said Bishop A. J. Carey, presiding over the Lexington district, conference here this week. "Send this money back to Ashland, and tell them we do not want it."

Throughout this state the Klan has been growing increasingly and insistently active. It has invaded many places and won over many people whom the colored people of the section have in the past considered friends.

It developed that at Ashland, Ky., recently, the pastor of the M. E. Church, South, who had spoken at the colored church before appeared during a rally with a group of white men. He made a pleasing talk and at its conclusion said he wanted to present a gift from an organization which had been much misunderstood, the Ku Klux Klan. He handed the pastor fifty ($50) dollars. The latter promptly added it to his dollar money and reported to conference. In a speech which was so strong that some of his hearers feared it might be dangerous, Bishop Carey condemned the hooded crowd.

The dollar money for the conference ran over $4,000.

Dr. J. A. Gregg, President of Wilberforce University, the leading College of the denomination, addressed the Sonference. Among other prominent visitors were Rev. Reverdy C. Ransom of the A. M. E. Review, New York and Rev. Noah Williams of Louisville, who is being boomed for the position of Secretary of the Home Mission Board. His church will be host to the next general conference which meets in Louisville in may 1924.

JUDGE PRICE SEVERE.

Counsels Swift Justice for Klansman Who Violate the Law.

PADUCAH, Ky., Sept. 24.—A thrust at future Ku Klux Klan activities in Paducah and McCracken County was delivered by Circuit Judge Joe L. Price when he instructed the McCracken County grand jury this morning to prosecute any person who might commit an offense in the guise of the invisible empire. He congratulated the city and county upon the fact that the hooded organization has found little sympathy here.

"Should the organization be formed here and any overt act committed, I shall ask the grand jury to bring indictment and that the offenders be thoroughly prosecuted," Judge Price declared.

"The rights of a man to trial by jury are inviolate, but if I am correctly informed, this organization denies this right. In Oklahoma, we are informed, the invisible Empire has taken into its own hands enforcement of the law. I think that Paducah and McCracken County are to be congratulated that the organization has found little support here.

"I grant you the organization may have good men in it, but in my opinion they are misguided and the only result is trouble and turmoil. I think the courts of the land are capable of taking care of law enforcement. I don't think the organization can do the things it is setting out to do when they hide their faces and conceal their identity from their neighbors and seek to enforce law. They are vilators of the law. The bill of rights guarantees that trial by jury and the right to be confronted by evidence in open court is the right of every man, but if I am correctly informed, this organization denies this right. When the Declaration of Independence, that document we worship and revere, was signed, it set forth that one reason for the colonies seeking independence was that England was trying citizenship without juries. We can never be able to dispense with trial by jury."

Efforts of the Ku Klux Klan to organize in Paducah were unsuccessful last winter after two Kleagle organizers had spent more than six months in the city. Recently another Kleagle arrived in the city and is said to have established headquarters and is making an active campaign in the city and county. A Klan representative heard Judge Price deliver his instructions to the grand jury this morning.

KENTUCKY WHITES ARE WAGING WAR AGAINST THE KLAN

Inter-racial Conference Calls Hooded Order a Serious Menace to the Whole Country.

TERM "SOCIAL EQUALITY" IS PLACED UNDER BAN

American Negro Artist, Who Met Failure Here, Is Honored for His Paintings in Paris.

Kentucky.

By LESTER A. WALTON

Influential white men and women of Kentucky are waging a vigorous and effective war against Ku Kluxism and race prejudice. Among the leaders in the movement is Judge J. H. Hager of Ashland, President of the Kentucky State Bar Association, who, at a session of the local Interracial Commission held in the Jefferson County Court House, subjected the hooded order to such biting ridicule and scorn that the following resolution was adopted:

"This conference commends the excellent paper of Judge Hager in which he shows that the Ku Klux Klan is treasonable in that it is contrary to human law as set forth in the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Kentucky, and it is also contrary to divine law as set forth in the Holy Scripture."

A Serious Nuisance.

"Capacity for leadership without the interference of reason as well as a capacity for hating are the prime qualifications for membership in the Ku Klux Klan," Judge Hager declared. The Klan following the Civil War offered a protection for carpetbaggers and crooks because of the hooded disguises and the Klan of the present day constitutes a nuisance to this country equally as serious, asserted the distinguished jurist.

Other resolutions adopted by the conference were:

"Resolved, since neither race, the black any more than the white, wishes racial amalgamation, the misleading phrase 'social equality' should no longer be permitted to hold back the helpful hand of white people from giving fair life and opportunity to the Negro.

"Resolved, that the race problem is not one of social equality, but a human problem that can best be solved by thoughtful consideration of definite needs of both races.

"It is recommended that hearty indorsement be given the plan of including the study of inter-racial relations in the curricula of high schools and colleges.

"We recommend that when a bond issue for schools is to be voted on it should be agreed beforehand that an equitable division of the money thus secured should be made between the schools for the white and Negro pupils."

Thirty Kentucky women, leaders in religious and civic activities, have joined in the present fight against intolerance. They have formed a separate organization with Mrs. Charles Semple, Chairman; R. K. Massie, Vice Chairman, and Miss Nannie Hite Winston, Secretary.

Single Moral Standard.

In issuing a statement to the public Kentucky is congratulated on its [illegible] freedom from lynchings, the injection of race prejudice into political campaigns is condemned, a single standard of morals for both white and colored women is demanded and the protection of life and property for all is asked.

Associated on the committee are Mrs. B. W. Bayless, Mrs. Frances Beattie, Mrs. William Black, Mrs. Muscoe Burnett, Mrs. H. L. Cockerhan, Mrs. Lee Curry, Mrs. J. H. Dickey, Mrs. Tevis Goodloe, Miss Maude L. Harrison, Mrs. John D. Hazwell, Mrs. W. E. Hunter, Mrs. Atwood Martin, Mrs. F. A. Mehl, Mrs. R. P. Moody, Miss Olivia Orr, Mrs. John Purdy, Mrs. W. J. Piggott, Mrs. J. C. Rawlins, Miss Marie L. Roberts, Mrs. A. T. Robertson, Miss Alma Schmitt, Mrs. J. H. Spilman and Mrs. Charles A. Thomas.

Henry Ossawa Tanner, one of the Americans recently decorated with the ribbon of the Legion of Honor, is a Negro, the son of the late Bishop Benjamin T. Tanner of the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Tanner was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1859. After pursuing his studies in the Academy of Fine Arts under Thomas Eakins he went to Atlanta, Ga., where he opened a photographic gallery and undertook to teach art. Not meeting with success the Negro artist obtained a position as teacher of free hand drawing in Clark University.

Met Failure Here.

Failure after failure and discouragement after discouragement rewarded his efforts in this country. Given financial assistance by friends he went to Paris, studying under Jean Paul Laurens and Benjamin Constad. His first taste of real success was in 1900, when he won the Lippincott prize at Philadelphia and the medal at the Paris Exposition.

Having been brought up in a religious atmosphere the artist as a rule selected themes from the Bible. In the Luxembourg Gallery hangs his "Raising of Lazarus," while his "Christ and Nicodemus" and "The Denunciation" are respectively in the [illegible] of Fine Arts and Memorial Hall, Fairmont Park, Philadelphia.

WILL TRY KLANSMAN ON CONTEMPT CHARGE

Atlanta Constitution

Kansas Member Refuses to Divulge Names on Membership Petition.

2-25-23

Topeka, Kans., February 24.—Opening of the hearing on the ouster petition brought by the state against the Ku Klux Klan today suddenly developed into a situation as to whether the klan oath supersedes that of a witness.

As a result of the refusal of H. H. Kitchen, a klan organizer, to divulge names on a membership petition, contempt of court proceedings will be started in the supreme court Monda according to Assistant Attorney G eral John G. Egan, who condu the state's case.

The hearing was opened ' M. Brewster. Commission Kitchin, who has been in week or more anouncing an organizer of the klan, first witness questioned by Egan. He admitted he was a klan organizer and that a petition signed by persons desiring to join the klan had been submitted to him. Questioned further, he stated that the petition was in a safety box.

"Who has the key?" he was asked.

"One of the boys. Some times I have the petition days and keep it locked up at night," Kitchin answered.

Oath Hold Man.

"What is the name of the person who has the key?"

"I have taken a solemn oath before God not to tell," was the cryptic answer.

In reply to orders by Commissioner Brewster, Kitchin maintained his attitude of secrecy, repeating that he had "made an oath before God" not to divulge the names of any member of the klan.

Following application in the supreme court to hold Kitchen guilty of contempt of court, Commissioner Brewster said, the probable procedure will be for the court to set a time for a hearing at which Kitchen will be given an opportunity to explain why he refused to answer.

Commissioner Brewster continued the hearing before him until March 1.

Carl McManus, who also claims to be a klan organizer and who was subpoenaed as a witness, did not testify today, Attorney Egan desiring to bring the Kitchen refusal to a conclusion before the case goes further.

KLAN OUSTER SUIT BEGINS IN KANSAS

Montgomery Advertiser

(Associated Press)

TOPEKA, KANS., Feb. 23.—The taking of testimony in the state's ouster suit against the Ku Klux Klan will commence tomorrow before S. M. Brewster, appointed by the supreme court to sit as commissioner to hear evidence. 2-24-23

Two witnesses will be heard and their deposition taken. They are H. H. Kitchen and Carl McManus on whom subpoenas were served by the state several days ago when they appeared here and claimed to be Klan organizers.

One of the contentions of the Klan is that it has no officials, members, agents or organizers in Kansas.

The hearing is to be a sort of round-robin affair which will extend to all parts of the state where there have been any alleged Ku Klux Klan activities.

"We probably will hold the hearings a dozen different places from time to time," said Attorney General C. D. Griffith.

Secure Little Evidence In Alleged Operations Of Ku Klux in Topeka

Atlanta Constitution

Topeka, Kans., March 3.—The hearings before a supreme court commissioner in the state's ouster suit against the Ku Klux Klan will be resumed soon at some other point in Kansas, possibly Kansas City, Kans., officials indicated today. 3/4/23

Because of the unwillingness of klan representatives to divulge information the hearing concluded here yesterday resulted in comparatively little evidence concerning the order's alleged activities in Topeka.

H. H. Kitchen, klan organizer, formerly of Oklahoma City, and Guy A. Swallow, former Topeka chief of police, are in the Shawnee county jail, judged in contempt of the state supreme court. Kitchen refused to answer questions at the hearing regarding names on a Topeka membership petition, holding that the klan oath bound him to secrecy, while Swallow refused even to take the oath as a witness.

In Kitchen's case klan attorneys have indicated they would bring habeas corpus proceedings, pending an appeal to the United States supreme court.

Charge Unfairness.

At the hearing yesterday, John S. Dean, defense attorney, charged the state's attorney with unfairness in bringing out at Thursday's session only a part of the klansman's oath, which, he said, would tend to give the public a wrong impression of the oath. The section cited by the state that the klan members swear to keep secret such information as comes to him through the "sacred bond of klansmanship, the crime of violating this solemn oath treason against the United States of America, rape and malicious murder excepted."

Dean read from the membership oath the following sections:

"I solemnly swear and affirm that to the government of the United States of America, and the states thereof of which I may be a resident, unequalled, and above any other and every kind of government in the whole world, I here and now pledge my life, my property, my vote and my sacred honor to uphold its flag, its constitution and constitutional laws, and will protect, defend and enforce same unto death."

Dean also read the concluding paragraph of the oath:

"Before God, in the presence of the mystic klansmen, on my sacred honor I do most solemnly and sincerely pledge, promise and swear that I will at all times, in all places and in all ways, stand ready to aid and assist officers of the law in the proper discharge of their legal duties, so help me God. Amen."

REGAINS FREEDOM UPON PROMISE TO TESTIFY ON KLAN

Ku Klux Organizer Spends Month Behind Bars For Refusal

Associated Press Report.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 5.—After being under arrest one month, held in contempt of the Kansas supreme court for refusal to testify at hearings of the State's ouster suit against the Ku Klux Klan, H. H. Kitchen of Oklahoma City, Klan organizer, today informed the court through his attorney, John S. Dean, that he is ready to comply with the court's order and answer all questions to the best of his ability.

Following presentation of Kitchen's statement to the supreme court, an order for Kitchen's release was issued, his attorney's word being accepted in lieu of any bond that Kitchen will be on hand when the hearing is resumed.

Kitchen, after taking oath as a witness, refused to answer certain questions put to him, claiming that to answer would be violation of his klan oath of secrecy. Guy S. Swallow, of Topeka, also was held in contempt because he refused to take the witness oath when summoned to the hearing. After one day in jail Swallow agreed to take the oath and testify and he was released. The date for resumption of the klan hearing to hear these two witnesses has not yet been set.

KLAN TO DISCARD MASKS IN KANSAS

(Preston News Service)

Topeka, Kans., May 7.—The Ku Klux Klan of Kansas, charter application for which is now pending before the state charter board, is said to represent an insurgent movement to the one in Atlanta, Ga., according to the sponsors. The new klan is to maintain headquarters in Kansas and intends to issue charters for klans in other states.

Kansas City Star 5-17-23

It is said that the new klan intends to eliminate some of the objectionable features of the old organization. According to the head, recognize no boycott, no class hatred of the new organization, it will will not use masked hooded uniforms.

No mention is made with regard to the elimination of race hatred or religious antagonism and other nefarious features so prominent in the old klan.

Members Decided It Was In Violation Of Penal Code.

KANSAS CITY, May 1.—When advised last summer that the Ku Klux Klan was in violation of section 19, of the federal penal code, about 400 members of Wyandotte Klan No. 5 voted to disband, L. S. Harvey, testified here today in the hearing of the suit to oust the klan from Kansas. Mr. Harvey, who was first assistant United States district attorney in Kansas during the war, testified that he was a member of the exalted cyclops cabinet at the time and knew that things had been proposed which would be in violation of the federal statute. 5-2-23

KANSAS KU KLUX SECRETS ARE TOLD

Associated Press Report.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., May 1.—When advised last summer that the Ku Klux Klan was in violation of section 19 of the federal penal code, about 400 members of Wyandotte Klan No. 5 voted to disband, L. S. Harvey testified here today in the hearing of the suit to oust the klan from Kansas. Mr. Harvey, who was first assistant United States district attorney in Kansas during the war, testified that he was a member of the exalted cyclops' cabinet at the time and knew that things had been proposed which would be in violation of the federal statutes.

Before he withdrew from the klan, Mr. Harvey testified, a proposal came before the cabinet to "correct the viewpoint" of M. E. Pearson, superintendent of schools here, who had sanctioned a pageant in which white and negro children participated. He said a group of men known as "kluxers" was to carry out the order, against which, he testified, he and other members of the cabinet objected.

In reply to a question Mr. Harvey said the "kluxers" composed a group to discipline persons whom the cyclops ruled deserved correction.

Thousands Expected To Join In Demonstration In Kansas.

TOPEKA, KAS., July 17.—Thousands of members of Knights of Ku Klux Klan from all parts of the state will assemble here for a huge demonstration Saturday, it was announced today by local officials of the roganization. The marchers will wear the full regalia of the order, including masks and robes according to officials.

Attorney General C. B. Griffith, when questioned this afternoon, said that his office would take no action tending to stop the announced demonstration unless directed to do so by Governor J. M. Davis.

SUING KLAN FOR $30,000.

Theodore Schierman, Former Kansan.

Charges Whipping on Kluxesrs.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Nov. 13.—A klan suit, second only in importance to state ouster suit, was set for hearing in federal court here today.

Theodore Schierman, now of Nowata, Okla., formerly mayor of Liberty, Montgomery County, is suing for $30,000 damages.

The city of Liberty is defendant. He cites an alleged whipping in September last year by a mob the former mayor believes to have been composed of the klan.

Scores of witnesses from Montgomery County and Southeast Kansas have been subpoenaed.

One Saturday night, his petition states, he was in front of his garage when a car drove up and some men forced him at the point of a revolver to get into the car. He was driven several miles into the country and whipped across the back with a heavy strap. None of the men were masked.

Released, he went home and the story did not become public for several days. 11-14-23

Schierman was owner of a hall used by lodges of Liberty. It issaid that when advised the klan was using the hall as a meeting place, Schierman told the men he could not permit the hall to be used by such an organization.

Schierman failed to recognize his assailants, the suit declares.

BLAME KLAN IN SCHOOL OUSTER AT COFFEYVILLE

Chicago Daily News

Board of Education Refuses Our Children Admittance to Junior High School

11-10-23

Coffeyville, Kan., Nov. 9.—The local branch of the N. A. A. C. P., working in conjunction with citizens, retained Attorneys Elisha Scott and R. M. Van Dyne of Topeka to institute a suit of mandamus against the Coffeyville school board to compel it to admit children of our Race into the junior high school. The city recently voted bonds to erect a school, known as the junior high school of Coffeyville, at an approximate cost of $350,000, and denied our children in grades ranging from seventh, eighth and ninth, the right to enter the school, but segregated them to a school known as the Cleveland. The Cleveland school is inadequate and without proper facilities for teaching

Case Is Important

A suit was brought originally in the state Supreme court on Sept. 21. An alternative writ of mandamus was immediately issued and the case is set down for trial on its merits Dec. 5. This case is of vast importance because there are several cities in Kansas suffering the same fate as Coffeyville and are waiting action of the Supreme court in the matter to determine whether the ninth grade is a high school grade, and whether a city of the first class can deny our children the right to enter a junior high school where high school subjects are taught or relegate them to a place unfit and unequipped to teach such subjects.

The school board raised a question of fact in their answer which makes it necessary to be determined by evidence. This evidence is to be taken in the form of depositions. The citizens have already gone to considerable expense in this matter to prepare their case for presentation to the Supreme court. Donations are being received by D. M. Hunigan, 504 E. Fifth St., who is treasurer of the citizens' committee.

For many years Kansas has maintained a spirit of friendliness and good-will toward our people, opening her schools, colleges and universities to them, but recently the Ku Klux Klan entered the state and began preaching a doctrine of hate and oppression of our citizens which found its way to the hearts of many of the leading white citizens.

Depositions Taken

Four members of the board admitted that they were Klansmen. These men: A. Bessy, T. Perry, Bert Hastings and C. Mercer, at first attempted to evade the questions in such a manner as not to commit themselves, but under the direct cross-questioning of Attorney Scott were forced to acknowledge membership.

Among the large number of witnesses examined was Professor McMillan, principal of the Washington High school, who testified that there was no discrimination practised in his school, although a number of children had preceded him on the stand and each testified that all Race girls and boys were forced to sit in a group to themselves and were not permitted to sit in chapel with the other children.

Principal Beunefield of the Junior High school testified that he had been ordered not to enroll any Race children in his building. This authority was traced to A. Decker, superintendent of schools, to whom the members of the board admitted, had been given the power to run the schools as he saw fit.

Houston Post
Houston, Texas

Associated Press Report.

WICHITA, Kan., Feb. 4.—Charges that the Ku Klux Klan was responsible for the alleged hooded band activities in Morehouse parish, Louisiana, last summer, are false, and "Governor Parker knows they are not true," Z. A. Harris, national organizer for the Ku Klux Klan, told an audience at the forum here this afternoon. 2-8-23

Mer Rouge happenings, as testified to in the Bastrop open hearing recently conducted by Attorney General Coco, are the result of "the greatest conspiracy" agains the klan, Harris declared.

The klan organizer also referred to the reported whipping of Mayor Theodore Schierlman of Liberty, Kan., early last fall by a band of hooded and robed men, declaring that the press had told only one side of the story and that it had failed to "tell the public all about it when lawyers dismissed the case."

Between 3000 and 5000 persons, several hundred of whom were women, attended the lecture, admission to which was permitted by presentation of a ticket at the door.

Kansas Klans Deny All Charges Made In Ouster Petition

Atlanta Constitution

Topeka, Kans., February 9.—A sweeping denial was made today by the Ku Klux Klan to the charges in the ouster petition filed in the supreme court by the attorney general in behalf of the state. As a result the state is expected to bring out at the hearing important evidence which, it is claimed, the state has obtained through investigations in the portions of the state, where the state claims klan organizers were at work.

Toward the end of his term of office ex-Governor H. J. Allen appointed Judge J. A. McDermott of the industrial court to conduct an investigation. Judge McDermott made no formal report on his findings, nor was any report made public as to findings of a Leavenworth, Kas., detective agency, employed by the state to investigate the alleged klan activities.

TOPEKA, KANSAS, Feb. 9.—The Ku Klux Klan makes a sweeping denial of all of the statements and charges contained in the petition recently filed by the state to oust the organization from Kansas, n an answer filed with the supreme court here today.

According to the answer the Klan is "purely a social, secret, benevolent and eleemosynary" organization; it opposes mob activities and violence, intimidation or threats; believes in enforcement of law by constituted authorities and in the highest allegance to the government of the United States, and furthermore, that it has no members, agents or employes in Kansas.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Edward Young Clarke, imperial klaliff of the Ku Klux Klan, announced today that Dr. Oscar Haywood, self-styled national klokard, had been recalled from New York to the imperial palace at Atlanta to explain to Dr. W. H. Evans, imperial wizard, alleged unathourized assumption of authority.

According to Mr. Clarke, the principal charges against Dr. Haywood were that he challenged Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman" to a debate, without sanction of the klan; that he had assumed the fictitious title of "national klokard," and that he had taken upon himself to state the attitude of the Klan without authority.

Mr. Clarke who said that Dr. Haywood already was on his way to Atlanta, also left for the South today to be present when the latter met the imperial wizard.

Court Orders Men Held Until Ready to Answer Questions

Kansas.

(Associated Press)

TOPEKA, KAS., March 2.—Guy A. Swallow, former chief of police of Topeka, was placed in the jail here late today on a commitment issued by the supreme court. Swallow was held in contempt of the supreme court for his refusal to take the oath as a witness when placed on the stand today at the hearing of the state's ouster suit against the Ku Klux Klan.

Swalow is the second alleged Klansman jailed.

H. H. Kitchen, Klan organizer, formerly of Oklahoma City, being incarcerated Thursday on a similar charge.

The hearing was adjourned today, to be taken up later, probably at some other place where evidence in the hands of the attorney general indicates there may be a Klan organization. The time and place for the next session has not been determined, S. M. Brewter, it was reported, said.

The case on Swallow differs from that of Kitchen in that the latter took the witnes oath, admitted he was an organizer and member of the Klan, but refused to answer questions which he said conflicted with his oath of secrecy as a Klansman. Kitchen' attorneys have indicated habeas corpus proceedings will be instituted in his behalf, pending appeal to the United States Supreme court on a writ of error from the Kansas supreme court.

Swallow's refusal surprised the Klan's attorneys, W. L. Wood, of Kansas City and John S. Dean, of Topeka, they asserted. Both Kitchen and Swallow were advised that they are to remain in jail until they are ready to conform to the supreme court's orders.

Assistant Attorney General Rhodes, who is conducting the state's case, claims he has evidence that Swallow is one of the one hundred Topeka men who recently joined the Klan.

Carl McManus, an organizer, testified that he administered the oath to that many. When confronted by Swallow today, McManus said he did not remembmer having administered the Klan oath to him.

W. L. Wood, the Klan attorney, was on the stand today and examined at length. He frequently refused to answer questions on the ground that such information as he might have came to him in his capacity as an attorney.

Wood admitted he was a member of a Klan in Kansas City, Kas., and that it has a meeting hall, but said he had knowledge of no other Klan organizations in the state. Referring to a trip made by forty men from Kansas City, Mo., to Atlanta, Ga., on a Klan mission last November, Wood said:

"I was retained as an attorney at Atlanta. I went there to inquire into the organization's activities before I would become its attorney in this case: I found it to be an entirely wholesome and upright organization and not such an organization as represented in the Kansas press."

Wood declared he did not know the name of any of the men who made the trip, except George C. McCarron, Kansas City, Mo., who superintended it and paid all his expenses.

"If I knew any of their names I would gladly tell you," he informed Captain Rhodes. "I met them and talked with them and probably would know their faces, but I did not charge my memory with their names or where they were from."

Question Arose Over Request For Names of Members in Kansas

(Associated Press)

TOPEKA, KAS., Mch. 1.—H. H. Kitchen, organizer of the Ku Klux Klan, formerly of Oklahoma City, was placed in the Shawnee county jail this afternoon on a writ issued by the state supreme court holding him in contempt of that court for refusal to answer questions at a hearing today of the state's ouster suit against the Klan.

The court issued an order February 26, requiring Kitchen to answer questions, he refused to at the opening of the hearing before Commissoner S. M. Brewster, February 25.

Attorneys for Kitchen, Colonel John S. Dean, of Topeka, and W. L. Wood, of Kansas City, stated that the case will be carried to the United States supreme court if necessary. Meanwhile habeas corpus procedings probably will be instituted for Kitchen.

The issue, as created by Kitchen, is whether he should be compelled to inform the court as to names of members of the klan after having taken the klan oath not to reveal them.

After Kitchen's arrest, the hearing was resumed with Carl McManus, also an organizer, who said he was employed by Kitchen, testifying.

McManus testified that during his visit to Topeka of two weeks he had administered the klansmen oath to "approximately a hundred men" in Topeka. Questioned as to the identity of these men was, McManus said he did not recall any of the names. He said he had been a member of the klan for two years.

Assistant Attorney General Rhodes read a portion of what was purported to be the klansman's oath, and McManus admitted that it was part of it. The section read as follows:

"I swear that I will keep secret to myself information of klansmen which come to me in the sacred bond of klansmanship, the crimes of violation of this oath, of treason to the United States of America and of rape and malicious murder alone excepted."

McManus testified that the membership fee is $10; that the members pay $6.50 for the klan uniform. His testimony was continued until tomorrow to permit Attorney Wood to take the stand. Wood denied that he ever had held office in the klan, other than attorney "since last July or August."

In pursuance to the supreme court's order that the witness, Kitchen, produce the membership petition which he had testified was in his possession part of the time. Kitchen informed the court that he had returned to each of the signers his detached signature.

"I want to direct the attention of the counsel that at the conclusion of the former hearing, I directed the witness not to remove or destroy any of the information desired," Commissioner Brewster stated.

Kitchen again was asked whose names were attached to the petition.

"I refuse to state," he answered.

"Why?" Commissioner Brewster asked.

"Because of my conscience and an oath before God."

"Did you take an oath as a witness that you would answer questions?"

"I did."

"Does that oath bother you?"

"Not under these circumstances."

Attorney Dean, in behalf of Kitchen had a long statement recorded in the record that the witness did not refuse to answer because of any disrespect for the court, but claimed the right to refuse until ordered to do so "by the court of last resort."

LEAVENWORTH PERFECTS KLU KLUX ORGANIZATION

(By Ernest F. Jones.)

Kansas City Sun 10-20-23

The city of Leavenworth, Kansas, although a little late, nevertheless keeps up with the fad. The getting in line was put into locomotion by some of the city's leading gamblers and booze runners.

The incident mentioned is a Ku Klux Klan organization perfected Tuesday night, October 2. The writer doesn't mean to imply that this city hasn't had Kluxes before, because it has, but it hasn't had a permanent order until since the night mentioned.

Kansas City Mo.

The Sun's representative became in knowledge of the organization through one of his men whom he has around through the city keeping him posted to what is going on around the town. This sub was informed by Mr. ——— (white), to whom he was talking. He says that he received a written communication inviting him out that night to take part in the organization. He said to h—— with the Klan, and that he would kill the first ——— that jumped him up why he didn't attend. He will kill them all until he gets the right one, remarked Mr. ———.

Because a man says he is against the Klan is no reason that he is, because the man in question is a member of that ring that sent him the invitation.

The Klan order was set in motion at the Shrine Temple on Shawnee street, and they are in an exceeding great numbers and have a powerful influence in this city.

MASONIC RANKS IN IOWA TO BE PURGED OF KLAN

Grand Master Flays Purposes of Masked Organization; Deposes Masonic Warden

Des Moines, Iowa, June 22.—Iowa Masonry is opposed to the Ku Klux Klan. Grand Master Frank W. Glaze of Oskaloosa in an address recently before a session of the annual meeting of the grand lodge of Iowa in no uncertain terms expressed the negative attitude of the grand lodge toward the order.

"The grand lodge does not approve of the masked organization nor will it tolerate the spreading of Klan propaganda in Masonic halls," Glaze said.

The Rev. Tom Roberts, Sheffield, Iowa Klan organizer, was relieved of the junior warden's job of the Sheffield Masonic lodge when it came to the attention of Grand Master Glaze that the pastor had been active in the Klan.

After a rather extended discussion of the Klan Grand Master Glaze summed up Iowa Masonry's stand against "the invisible empire" as follows:

"If a Mason wants to do good, he has ample opportunity as a Mason to do so. As far as enforcing law we have officers for that purpose, and I do not believe any good Mason should take the law into his own hands; and further, I do not believe any respectable, honest, upright man would want to cover his face and go out nights to enforce the law.

"I can see no good reason why a good Mason would want to join an organization which is in disrepute and a disgrace to the community and as far as I am concerned, I have no use for such an organization.

"I received information that speeches had been made in some of the lodges by Klan organizers, spreading their propaganda. I investigated the matter and found it to be true.

"I therefore called a meeting of the masters in that locality and informed them that no more speeches of that nature must be allowed in their lodge halls, and if any of them were members of the Klan, or expected to join, to turn their jewels in to me, as I did not consider it proper for an officer of any lodge, knowing the attitude of the grand lodge, to be a member of that body.

"I was informed that the junior warden of the lodge at Sheffield was an organizer of the Klan, so on April 3 I sent the following letter to that place:

"'I am informed that the Rev. Thomas L. Roberts, your junior warden, is an organizer for the Ku Klux Klan and is making speeches over the state in the interests of that organization. I feel that this is detrimental to the Masonic fraternity of Iowa and that he is disregarding the wishes of the grand lodge in doing so. I therefore ask you to arrest his jewel, declare his office vacant, and proceed to elect an officer to fill the vacancy.'"

MOB TRIES TO BREAK INTO THE GEORGIA TRAINING SCHOOL

They Sought Negro and His Wife Employed There in Order to Chastise Them.

AUTHORITIES ORDER FULLEST PROTECTION

Have Made Two Attempts to Secure the Negroes They Are After — Sensational Story Laid Before Governor Walker.

Special to The Chronicle.

Milledgeville, Ga., Aug. 8.—About 1 o'clock Tuesday morning a mob considered to be composed of about forty white men, all unmasked, attempted to force their entrance into the colored building of the Georgia Training School for Boys for the purpose of seizing Tom Thomas and his wife, negroe employees at the place.

The men first approached the front of the building used as a domicile for the negro youths at the training school. It was publicly learned today that a similar mob forced their way into this building Friday night last and then and there warned Thomas and his wife to leave the place by Tuesday night, at which time they would make a return visit to the place to ascertain whether or not their orders were carried out.

Last night Mrs. Orion W. Manson, superintendent of the training school, was in Atlanta ,and the place was temporarily in charge of Dr. H. C. Wood, of Irwinton, a brother of Mrs. Manson. It was known by the officials of the school that the mob had promised to return to the place Tuesday night and Tuesday afternoon Dr. Wood came up to take charge of the situation in the absence of his sister. Having been apprised of the fact that a mob would probably undertake to invade the place. Dr. Wood supplied himself with an automotic shot gun and stationed himself in the colored building to await the oncoming of the would be intruders.

Crowd Drives Up.

Shortly before 1 o'clock eight automobiles drove up in front of the training school and the occupants immediately alighted. Several of the men went immediately to the negro building and demanded admission to the place, which demand was ignored by Dr. Wood. Iimmediately after their approach Dr. Wood, standing with a pump gun in his hands, demanded the departure of the members of the mob. "I'll give you men one minute to leave these premises before a volley of buckshot is turned upon you," said Dr. Wood. A member of the mob asked the dosto to repeat his statement and, as h did so, he added, "half of that minute is now up," and the men hurriedly left the place to later assemble in front of the building used as a home for the officials and a dormitory for the whie doys confined at the training school.

Upon their latter stop the members of the mob demanded of assistant superintendent J. H. Johnson the keys to the negro building. Upon being questioned as to their object the men stated that they desired to get in touch with Tom Thomas and his wife for the purpose of giving them a lecture in regards to the manner in which the negro man his wife had addressed some white people. At this juncture, W. E. Ireland, bookkeeper at the place, communicated with Sheriff S. L. Terry, requesting the sheriff to make a hurry trip to the training school which is located nearly two miles west of Milledgeville. Later, the men cut the telephone wire, though too late to prevent communication with the sheriff's office.

The Sheriff on Hand.

"Within a very few minutes Sheriff Terry and Deputy John T. Burke appeared before the mob left the place. As the officers stepped from their automobile the Sheriff made inquiry as to the trouble. Not a member of the mob parted their lips while Assistant Superintendent J. H. Johnson, with Mrs. Johnson swinging hysterically to his arm, made the statement that no trouble existed. Coming down to the ground from the veranda, Deputy Sullivan, who arrived at the training school Tuesday afternoon with two youths in his custody, expressed the opinion to the officers that something serious was about th take place, whereupon Sheriff Terry reached into hi automobile and drew an automati shot gun. At this the members o the crowd climbed into their auto mobiles and immediately left th place. Sheriff Terry and Deput Burke remained at the trainin school until after day Wednesda morning.

A Negro Beaten.

Later today it became known tha a mob about 9 o'clock Tuesday nigh went to the home of Jim Douglas, a negro residing in the country about nine miles west of Milledgeville, in search of the negro Thomas, who is a brother-in-law of Douglas. Douglas advised the mob members that he knew nothing of the whereabouts of Thomas. Then men then threw their guns into Douglas' face and carried him away about fifty yards and gave him an unmerciful beating, lascerating the negroe's head with buts of pistols and drawing freely blood from his back by being severely beaten with sticks.

Wednesday afternoon the negro Douglas was interviewed by a newspaper man. His wounds had been dressed Wednesday morning. He stated that he felt compelled to leave his three-horse farm to go to another section or run the risk of losing his life or being done severe bodily injury. In an interview with several white people in the community, it was learned that Douglas was a quiet, peaceful and hard working negro.

Wednesday morning communication was had with Mrs. Manson, superintendent, and F. J. Paxon, of Atlanta, chairman of the board of managers of the Georgia Training School for Boys. In the early afternoon Wednesday Governor Walker conferred with Sheriff Terry over long distance telephone and the governor advised the sheriff to use every precaution in protecting the training school and call for military aid should the situation appear to demand it.

Early in the evening Wednesday three deputies appointed by Sheriff Terry were stationed about the building the training schools, with orders to permit no one entering the premises.

Upon leaving the place Tuesday night members of the mob were heard to say they would make a return trip Wednesday night and finish the job they had undertaken.

At a comparatively late hour Wednesday evening no further developments had taken place in the way of an additional threat by the men to invade the premises of the training school. However, at 7 o'clock Dr. Wood, temporarily in charge of the institution, stated that a number of strange men had driven about the grounds in automobiles and appeared to be moving in a mysterious manner.

Gov. Walker Notified.

The Chronicle Bureau,
The Kimball House,
Jno. W. Hammond, Mgr.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 8.—The official report made to Governor Walker on the two assaults made on the state reformatory, or training school for boys at Milledgeville, is sordid in its details. The comment following the report, made by the superintendent of the institution to Governor Walker, was that unless the institution can be surrounded with ample protection it is her purpose to release the inmates of the institution, regardless of the aftermath, since she will not hold them there in confinement by the state subject to any further attack by armed and masked men and with no way to defend themselves or be defended.

Governor Walker assured the authorities of the institution that ample protection would be afforded and was joined in this assurance by Mr. Etheridge, representing the Ku Klux Klan who sat in the conference and heard the official report made to the governor. In fact, Mr. Etheridge, speaking for the klan, assured the superintendent that the klan itself would throw a guard around the buildings tonight and protect them against further attack.

It is stated that Governor Walker, in the official conference, told the klan representative that this was the time for the klan to show its hand, and show where it stands. The report had contained information that the attack was made, twice at the negro building and once at the white building, by two bands of men, parading themselves as klansmen, which the official representative of the organization said was not the true condition.

The governor called the sheriff of Baldwin County on the telephone and issued instructions, in the presence of officials of the institution that as many citizens of Baldwin as may be needed be immediately sworn in as deputies to extent of every male citizen in the county, if necessary, to afford full protection at the institution and the same time that the sheriff should spare no effort in rounding up the masked band.

Governor Walker was told that there has already been one death at the institution directly as a result of these attacks and two negro men have been mercilessly beaten at a point eight miles from the institution where the band traced Tom Thomas, one of the negroes they went to the institution to attack. His wife, Mary Thomas, was hiding and they were unable to find her.

Trouble Dates Far Back

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 8.—The troubles preceeding the attacks date back for some time, according to the information officially given Governor Walker. A white man employed at the institution in farm work objected to the employment of any negro at the place and insistently sought to have them discharged. In fact such reports and complaints were made by this man against negro employes that repeately they were dismissed until finally Tom and Mary Thomas were engaged to cook for and take care of the negro building.

Objection also was raised to these negroes, thought the superintendent of the institution found them to be especially efficient.

Finally, after consultation with members of the board, the white farm supervisor was given notice that his services would no longer be needed after August 1st, and upon that notice the authorities at the institution were told they would not be permited to keep the negroes in employment at that place.

The verbal report also stated to the governor that this same man had repeatedly threatened the negro boys with "the klan," and told them "the klan" would get them, too.

One night the latter part of last week fifteen armed men approaching the institution were discovered by Tom and Mary Thomas. The latter hid in some bushes alongside the road and the woman went to the rear of the building and locked herself in with the inmates. Tom Thomas saw and recognized several of the band of fifteen men, watched them as they broke down the door to the negro building where they entered and demanded to know the whereabouts of Tom and Mary Thomas. Failing to find either they finally left the place, telling the inmates they were coming back and get the two negroes they were after.

The inmates were thrown into pandemonium. Three of the boys got out of the building, left the place and have not been seen since. Another crawled to the roof of an outhouse and spent the night. The following day, in a dazed sort of condition and asking if "the Klux" were coming back after him, he got into the white building, secured a gun and shot himself to death.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death, because it is not stated none of the attaches of the institution would tell all they knew of the night attack, although the physician expressed the certain belief that the boy had killed himself, and others of the institution said at the time they knew that to be true.

Yesterday a telephone message was sent to a neighboring county for a guard, who was known to be entirely fearless. A relative of one of the officials of the institution procured a repeating rifle and a supply of cartridges, went to the place, locked himself inside the negro building, and remained on guard last night, and was there when, single-handed, he turned the l of twenty-five men away.

A former inmate of the institution, now employed in a clerical position, heard the band of twenty-five approaching while he was engaged on certain work in the office in the white building. Immediately he called the sheriff on the phone and notified him, and was in the act of trying to call the mayor when the telephone wire was cut. He then went into the white dormitory, told the boys the klan was coming, and asked for volunteers to slip through the approaching crowd, go to Milledgeville and get help. Out of the many who volunteered he selected three of the boys and they did get by and into Milledgeville. Meantime the band of twenty-five men had reached the white building, called the employe by name and demanded of him the keys to the negro building. He asked what they wanted, and the reply was: "We want Tom and Mary Thomas."

The employe declared to the men they could get the keys only by killing him, whereupon they left the building, and going to the negro building, knocked on the door, and demanded: "We want Tom and Mary Thomas."

The man on the inside guarding the building replied, "In just one minute I'm going to dump a load of buckshot into th man standing nearest that door and one by one the masked attacking party began backing off. The sheriff and two or three deputies had at that time arrived at the white building and, noticing the collection about the negro building, proceeded there, mingled with the attacking party, talked to several of the men, and one at a time the aufomobiles in which they came, and which had by now been cranked up, began to drive away until they were all gone. No arrests were made, nor was there any effort at arrests.

The report made the governor, verbally, goes on to state that the armed band proceeded from the institution to a point eight miles away where lived a relative of Tom Thomas, and there they found the negro man, whom they took out and beat unmercifully. With him was another negro who has never had any connection with the institution, and he was taken out and given a similar unmerciful beating.

In the meantime, while the attack was in progress and when the band were beating the two negro men, Mary Thomas was hiding in a sleeping room in the white building, and thus escaped punishment.

The authorities state that the attack has been directed against Tom and Mary Thomas for no other purpose than to carry out the determination that the authorities shall not be allowed to employ negro help at the negro building of the institution.

It is reported also that the negroes involved have been able to positively identify at least four of the men in the attacking party.

NEW SECRET ORDER IS BORN

Knights of America, Based on U. S. Constitution, Organized in Atlanta.

Announcement was made Saturday of the birth of a new secret order in Atlanta on the night of July 4. It is to be known as the Knights of America.

The order is founded on the principles of the constitution as written by the colonial fathers, with rituals and regalia suggestive of that period of the country's history, according to the announcement.

Its membership is restricted to native and naturalized citizens who pledge allegiance to the Stars and Stripes and the order will be non-partisan.

The following is an excerpt from the prospectus of the order:

"Men of this country need to think deeply, raise moral standards, teach Americanism in its true sense as was intended by the fathers, and to cement loyalty and love among themselves for the good of all mankind and the American Republic."

MOTHER KLAN NOT TO JOIN NATIONAL

Refuses to Affiliate or Recognize Greater Body Until It Has Been Purged

ATLANTA, GA., July 19—Nathan Bedford Forrest, Klan number one, of Atlanta, known as "the Mother Klan of the World" adopted a resolution tonight to "at no time in the future recognize, contribute to or in any manner affiliate with the national organization of the first order of the Ku Klux Klan, until such time as the national organization has been purged and different officials placed in control".

The resolution also delcared the Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan would return to the national organization when officials are placed in control "who have the interest of the organization only in mind and at heart". In the meantime they will "continue our work as klansmen but separate and apart from the national organization".

Offering to Quit, Ridley Accorded Confidence Vote

Board of Deacons in Congregation as Church Defies Baptist Association of Atlanta.

PASTOR WILL REPLY TO CRITICS TODAY

Says Ku Klux Activities Contributing Cause to Withdrawal of Fellowship by Association.

In the face of withdrawal of fellowship by the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' association on charges of "conduct unbecoming a minister," Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of Central Baptist church, Tuesday night was accorded a unanimous vote of confidence by his congregation in reply to his public offer to resign his pulpit.

The big crowd assembled at the church, including the board of deacons, rose to its feet to signify an affirmative stand on the resolution calling for a confidence vote. It then burst into applause which lasted several minutes.

"I am happy to know that my people still believe in me and that they don't care whether I am allowed to be a member of the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' association and their church permitted to retain fellowship with the Atlanta Baptist association. They seem to think we will get along better without either of the organizations," Dr. Ridley declared at the meeting.

Blames Klan Prejudice.

Prior to this Dr. Ridley told newspaper men that in his opinion the fact that he is imperial klud of the Ku Klux Klan was a contributing cause for the attack upon him.

In a prayer that followed the rising vote of confidence, Mrs. A. F. Todd, wife of the senior deacon of the church, expressed her gratitude for what she termed a victory for the right, and gave credit to Dr. Ridley for the handsome church building that is now occupied by the congregation. During this prayer many expressions of emotion were made by various members of the congregation, and as the audience resumed its seats there were tears in many eyes.

Dr. Ridley asserted that he will not resign his pastorate until he has concluded that such a step would be in the best interest of his congregation.

"Has No Effect on Me."

"The action of the brethren of the Ministers' association will have no effect on me," he said. "I shall go on the best way I can, serving my day and generation to the best of my ability.

"I am not vindictive or vicious toward the Baptist ministers' conference. There are many things of which they have no knowledge. I am very human, and I have erred, no doubt, but I have tried and shall keep on trying to walk straight ahead with my face to the front.

Ministers "Humiliated."

The resolutions adopted by the Baptist ministers are said to have been prepared by Dr. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church. One dissenting vote, that of Rev. M. L. Carswell, was cast.

Following are the resolutions:

"Whereas, for many years the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' conference has been pained and humiliated by the many persistent and well authenticated reports from Atlanta and other cities throughout the south of the unbecoming conduct of the Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist church of Atlanta, and

"Whereas, from time to time committees from this conference as well as individuals have labored to reclaim Dr. Ridley to an honorable life, and

"Whereas, Dr. Ridley has repeatedly acknowledged his shortcomings, made promises of amendment, and begged for another chance to make good, only to break said promises and disappoint our expectations of his amendment, and

"Whereas, the Central Baptist Church of Atlanta has continued Dr. Ridley as its pastor to the embarrassment of the Baptist denomination.

"Therefore, be it resolved by the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' conference:

"Injures Cause of Christ."

"1. That because of his conduct and reputation, we regard the continuance of Dr. C. A. Ridley in the Baptist ministry as an injury to the cause of Christ and a reflection upon the honor of Baptists;

"2. That while we do not have and do not claim to have any ecclesiastical authority over Dr. Ridley, we are involved as fellow Baptist ministers and must disavow any further responsibility for the fellowship which our common ordination vows have created;

"3. That since the Central Baptist Church of Atlanta is the only Baptist body that can deal officially with Dr. Ridley, we hereby notify said church that because of its failure to protect the Baptist denomination from the reproach of his conduct we will appeal to the Atlanta Association of Baptist Churches at its next session to deny the Central Baptist church representation in the association;

"4. While determined to maintain the honor of Christ's cause and the integrity of Baptist churches, it is our earnest prayer that God may deliver Dr. Ridley from the error of his way. To this end we are ready to do all in our power to help him. None will rejoice more than we, when we can sincerely and honorably welcome him back into our fellowship as a servant of Christ and the churches.

J. A. CRUMBLEY,
President.

"W. H. BARRETT, Secretary."

Tuesday night marked the fifth time in the course of his pastorate of less than 10 years at Central Baptist church that Dr. Ridley has resigned, the members each time refusing to accept his resignation.

Answer Charges Today.

"I will answer the charges made against me in full at Lakewood at 12 o'clock tomorrow," he said.

Preceding the vote of confidence, Dr. Ridley made a short talk in which he reviewed the situation surrounding the charges that have been made against him by the Atlanta Baptist ministers, which resulted in withdrawal of fellowship from Dr. Ridley and a recommendation to expel the Central Baptist church from the Atlanta Baptist association.

In this talk Dr. Ridley said that he would at a later date explain why the charges had been made against him. He declared that the action of the ministers was no surprise to him.

"I was surprised, however," said the minister, "that they should have waited until my church was preparing to have the big barbecue at Lakewood, and then spring this thing in an effort to put a damper on the occasion."

The motion for a vote of confidence in Dr. Ridley, which was not in written form, carried with it an expression of indifference as to whether or not the Baptists ministers of Atlanta retained fellowship with Dr. Ridley, or the Atlanta Baptist association continued to affiliate with Central Baptist church.

Not Called for Vote.

The gathering that passed upon the motion of confidence was informally brought together for the purpose of considering plans for the barbecue to be held at Lakewood park today.

land upon which the present Central Baptist church stands, and he has also been the leader in efforts toward erecting the church plant that takes the place of an old Jewish synagogue in which his congregation worshiped for many years

On several occasions Dr. Ridley has been involved in more or less sensational happenings.

While several hundred people were present, they were not called to the church for the purpose of acting upon charges by the Atlanta Baptist ministers.

Dr. Ridley, who came to Atlanta from the mountains of North Carolina, retains much of the ruggedness

JUDGE ENJOINS KLAN AS A CORPORATION

Temporarily Forbids Activities Under Benevolent Orders Law —Kamelia Also Restrained.

N.Y. Times

DECEPTION IS ALLEGED

7-26-23

Organizations Accused of Falsifying Incorporation Certificates After Court's Approval.

PROSECUTION IS THE AIM

Orders Will Be Liable Under Walker Act if Injunction Is Made Permanent.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 25.—Supreme Court Justice Staley at Albany on Saturday, under an order signed today by Supreme Court Justice Hinman, is to hear arguments on an order directing the Ku Klux Klan and its women's auxiliary, Kamelia, to show cause why they should not be permanently enjoined from acting as corporations in New York State.

The temporary injunction was granted at the request of Attorney General Sherman, made through Deputy Attorney General Griffin, who motored today to Warner's Lake, where Justice Hinman is spending the Summer. The application was made as soon as Mr. Griffin received from Supreme Court Justice Pierce of Buffalo affidavits that the incorporation papers of the two orders had been falsified after he had approved them and before they had been filed with Secretary of State Hamilton.

It was on the basis of Justice Pierce's affidavits that the State started its action to have the Klan and its auxiliary barred from the protection of the Benevolent Orders law, under which they are accused of having incorporated fraudulently to avoid the teeth in the Walker act, which required them to file a list of their members, their constitution, by-laws, &c., with the Secretary of State.

The action of the State's answer to the open defiance of Klan leaders who, while the Walker act was before the Legislature, declared the hoded band would never obey its provisions.

Organizations not protected by the Benevolent Orders laws are required to file with the Secretary of State their oaths, constitutions, by-laws, lists of members and other data. It was aimed solely at the Ku Klux Klan in an effort to remove the cloak of secrecy from the order's activities.

If the proceedings before Justice Staley result in the granting of a permanent injunction against the Klan and its sister body, their incorporation papers, through which they received charters under the Benevolent Orders law, will be wiped from the Secretary of State's books, making the two orders definitely amenable to the Walker law.

In that event the Klan and the Kamelia will be subject to prosecution for failure to comply with the requirements of the Walker act by filing the desired data.

Mr. Griffin, however, declared today that prosecution if a permanent injunction was granted would be up to District Attorneys, since the Attorney General was not a prosecuting office.

AL SMITH DRAWS FIRE AT K. K. MEET

The Houston Post

Governor Al Smith of New York State, and Mayor John Hylan of New York City drew the fire of Dr. E. L. McEldowny of Charleston, W. V., during the course of an open meeting of the Ku Klux Klan held last evening in City auditorium. A crowd estimated at from 1500 to 2000 persons attended.

The speaker's topic was "Is America in Danger?" and both Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan were charged with "disrupting the constitution by permitting the public schools to adopt the teachings of bolshevik government."

Houston

Dr. McEldowny, who has been touring the Western States in the interest of the K. K. K., was introduced by District Attorney J. Dixie Smith. The speaker declared the principles of the Klan would not permit him to vote for Governor Smith in the event that individual was nominated for president on the democratic ticket.

"I have been a life-long democrat," he said, "but I would vote the republican ticket for the remainder of my life if men like Al Smith are put forward to head the government at Washington."

Charge Klan Used Sheets From Veteran Hospital

Associated Press Report.

NEW YORK, July 13.—Charges that sheets from the store rooms of the Veterans Hospital at Tuskegee, Ala., were used as uniforms in a Ku Klux Klan anti-negro parade held there on July 3, and that white attaches entertained the paraders at supper in the hospital after the demonstration, were contained in a statement issued today by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people.

NEW YORK KLAN HEARING IS BEGUN

The Amsterdam News

ALBANY, Aug. 14.—The Ku Klux Klan hearing before Supreme Court Justice Staley at Elizabethtown will begin today as scheduled. It had been feared the hearing would have to be postponed because of legal technicalities.

Deputy Attorney General Griffin recently received a telegram from George M. Lepine, of Unadilla, N. Y., counsel for the Klan and sister organization, Kamelia, consenting to have the case heard by Justice Staley at Elizabethtown.

Three weeks ago Supreme Court Justice Hinman of Albany granted a temporary injunction prohibiting the Klan and Kamelia from operating in this state as a corporation. Subsequently Justice Staley was to have heard arguments in this city to make the injunction permanent, but the hearing was adjourned until Tuesday at Elizabethtown, where Mr. Staley is spending the summer.

THE Ku Klux Klan has been through an unusually busy week. It has bought Valparaiso University; has engaged in a near-war with the citizens of Steubensville, Ohio; has lost its injunction suit against Hearst's Magazine, intended to halt the publication of articles about itself; has been enjoined temporarily from functioning as a chartered fraternal body in New York; and is said to be in a fury of indignation because at a meeting of the Knights of Columbus at Montreal a message from President Coolidge was read, expressing his good will and admiration for the order. This message appears to have been written several years ago; but the Knights of the Fiery Cross, having tasted blood, are reported to be determined to get a public repudiation by the President, on pain of defeat for both himself and his party in 1924. This is doubly interesting, because it implies a frank recognition that the Klan is now in politics. It uses whip and tar pot when the victim is obscure and helpless, the ballot box when he is not.

Move Announced to Bar Ku Klux Klan For Changes in Incorporation Certificate

N. Y. Times

ALBANY, N. Y., July 23.—Action will begin immediately in the Supreme Court seeking to restrain the incorporators of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., and the Kamelia, Inc., from exercising powers as a corporation in New York State on the groound that they made material changes in their certificate of incorporation after it was approved by Supreme Court Justice George E. Pierce of Buffalo, it was announced today.

Attorney General Carl Sherman, who made the announcement after a conference with Secretary of State James A. Hamilton, said he would also ask that the court issue an order canceling the papers filed by the organizations in the Secretary of State's office.

7-24

The Klan and the Kamelia, women's auxiliary organization, filed papers of incorporation under the Walker bill passed at the last legislative session, which provides that secret fraternal organizations must file membership, constitution and bylaws with the Secretary of State. The two organizations, it was charged, presented the documents to Justice Pierce for approval, then made material changes in the certificate of incorporation.

FIGHT AT KLAN MEETING.

The Newburgh N.Y. Times

Elmira Police Escort Preacher and Other Ku Klux Members to Train.

8-16-23

ELMIRA, N. Y., Aug. 15.—After a general street fight that followed a public meeting last night at which the Ku Klux Klan principles were explained, the Rev. Nicholas Cassaboon of Buffalo, and several other persons who had been speakers were escorted to their train by police.

The trouble started when a heckling crowd surrounded one of the klan delegates as he left the hall. One of the delegats was struck in the face.

Vertner H. Morgan, 26 years old, of this city, was arrested, charged with discharging firearms. Arthur Saylor, who was struck on the chin with a stone, declined to make a complaint against his assailant. Morgan paid a fine of $50 in police court today.

STATE KLAN LOSES JURY TRIAL CHANCE

New York Times

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The last chance the Ku Klux Klan and its sister order, the Kamelia, had for a jury trial of the issue brought up by the State in the action to annul its charter has faded away, because the Klan did not take the opportunity to combat the allegations made by Deputy Attorney General Edward Griffin and Charles E. McManus.

9-11-23

The last date on which the Klan could file an answer to the complaint of the State was last Thursday and no word came from the attorneys of the Klan. The Attorney General is expected now to ask for a judgment by default which, if granted, will prevent the Klan from exercising any of the privileges accorded by the articles of incorporation now on file in the Secretary of State's office.

New York

The two organizations now are restrained from acting as incorporations under a temporary injunction granted originally by Supreme Court Justice Harold J. Hinman of Albany and twice extended by Justice Ellis J. Staley, also of Albany.

The Klan requested an extension of the time within which to file their answer, but it was not granted. This gave them twenty days from Aug. 13, or until Sept. 5, and the Klan and Kamelia are believed now to be in default.

One hope still is left to the Klan, however. The incorporators of the organization had thirty days from the date Justice Staley's order was served upon them within which to appeal to the Appellate Division of the order. The order was served by mail on the attorney for the defendants and was mailed Aug. 21. Therefore, appeal may be made within thirty days from Aug. 22.

THE KU KLUX IN NEW YORK

The N. Y. News N. Y.

The cockroaches of the Ku Klux Klan who held a tempestuous propoganda meeting of the Klan in Perth Amboy last week are simply forerunners of the hordes of its paid apostles who will soon infest this State, according to our latest information. The 5,000 Catholics and Hebrews which broke up the meeting will only be the forerunners of tens of thousands of their proscribed brethren who are going to give these apostles and their converts throughout the State an even warmer reception. We trust that Governor Smith will lose no time in banning them from the State, as Mayor Hylan did from the city.

9 - 22 - 23

The colored citizens of New York make this solemn promise to the citizens, white and colored, of the nation: If the Ku Klux actually shows its head in the metropolis and does not confine its too cowardly propaganda to anonymous letters, and the governing authorities don't stop it before it reaches them, they and their friends will The New York Evening Telegram had it right recently when it warned the nation to stop its compromising and temporizing with the color line. The black men of America, like the Irish, have won and preserved their mother country's freedom and independence. They are now determined to secure freedom and equality for themselves. North, East, South and West the good white citizens till now have cowardly allowed the Negrophobists to run riot with law and order. Unless the South can keep the black man in bondage and serfdom in the South it will have to go to work. Unless by its uncanny and unrelenting propaganda against the colored people it can stampede the North into hysterical outrages against them, the anti-black sentiment, North and South, is doomed. Unless it can thus force the North to terrorize the blacks into going back South, Dixie's program, including its social equality and Negro domination camouflages, is at an inglorious end. Southern demagogues are more wily, unscrupulous and successful in making sinister sentiment than Northern statesmen are in making wholesome public sentiment. In theatres, restaurants, street cars, now in the kindergarten picture books, in public places and private conferences the sleepless Southrons—both their societies and individuals—lost no opportunity to build up their hateful cause. The unsuspecting Northerner in business, in his club and in his home thus has his prejudice inflamed. His vision, too, of the colored people becomes warped, his clear judgment dwarfed, his disposition to treat men on the basis of their merit and not on that of their color is undermined and the color line grows and becomes embedded in public sentiment. Why? Because race relations have been falsely reared into a mighty and an insoluble problem in his mind when, in fact, it is simply a condition. The obsession which Southern propaganda has made of race relations, both in the minds of the white race and the colored race, is as empty as a house of cards. Of such stuff is the Ku Klux Klan. The cowardly Southern degenerates, murder fiends and mob outlaws would no more come out in the open in this great State than the plague-infested rats, the death-dealing rattlesnakes or the poisonous tarantulas of the tropics seek the sunlight of mid-day on Broadway. True it is that the Ku Klux murdered thousands of innocent, ignorant black people in Dixie in days gone by. True that publicly and mercilessly they ravished thousands of colored women, burned thousands of colored homes and churches and have kept terrorized millions of unoffending black Americans for a generation. But that was the last generation and that was in the South. Colored men are beginning now to sell their lives and their race's rights and virtue dearly even in the South. The Ku Klux, in fact, if not in name, started to put on their program in Washington, Chicago and Omaha. The Ku Klux will not try there again. They now announce New York as their next objective. Let them come. We urge all New York to ban the Ku Klux, and at once!

KLAN BARRED IN N. Y. STATE FOR FRAUD

The Guardian 8-18-23

Injunction Also Enjoins the Sister Organization.

Elizabethtown N. Y., Aug. 14, 1923. —Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley tonight granted an injunction sought by the State of New York retraining the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Inc., and the Kamellia, Inc., its sister organization, from acting as chartered benevolent fraternal organizations in New York State.

Boston Mass.

Declaring that the statutes clearly intended a certificate of incorporation "should be opproved in the form in which it was filed or filed in the form in which it was approved," Justice Staley held that the act of incorporators of the klan and kamella in altering the certificates of incorporation after approval and before filing was "not only an illegal and unauthorized act but also an imposition and fraud upon the court."

Rabbi Wise And The Negro

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue of New York, a noted preacher and friends to the Negro race recently sent a check to the National Association for the advancement of Colored People for $100.00 as a part of an anti-klan collection taken at one of his services. Rabbi Wise wrote the Association; "Sunday morning, November 18, I preached to my people on 'Can America endure the Ku Klux Klan?' I ventured to suggest to the great congregation that instead of replying merely in words to the Klan, we undertake to serve and co-operate with those who are under the proscription of the Klan. I stated that part of the collection would be sent to your association which is lifting up the banner of even handed justice between the white and colored races. In accordance with that statement. I beg to send you a check for $100.00 for your work to be used as you see fit." Though the check is small, it shows that Rabbi Wise is interested in the Negro's welfare.

INDIANA SWAYED ENTIRELY BY KLAN

Hooded Forces' Domination There Seems to Be Complete and Opposition Is Silent.

POLITICAL PARTIES COWED

Ohio and Other Neighboring States Are Reported Falling Into Line Under Klan Banner.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 6.—In no State in the Union, not even in Texas is the domination of the Ku Klux Klan so absolute as it is in Indiana. In Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas it is the Democratic Party that is controlled by the hooded organization. In Indianapolis both parties are involved, with the menace far serious in the case of the Republican organization than that of the Democrats.

N. Y. Times

It would be difficult to exaggerate the Indiana situation, with a membership that even conservative anti-Klansmen admit approximates half a million men. The forces of the Klan are threatening to sweep everything before them in the 1924 elections.

11-7-23

In Texas the indications are that the crest of the Klan wave has passed and that in the election next year the Klan will have to fight every inch of the way to maintain its present hold on the political machinery of the biggest of States. In Texas the anti-Klan organization is under skillful leadership.

But such is not the case in Indiana. The Republican and Democratic organizations of Indiana are apparently impotent in the existing situation. Old Republicans, like Senator Jim Watson, Joe Kealing, the National Committeeman, and most of the others who have held the whip rein in days past, are silent today. It is only necessary to ask an Indiana politician to discuss the Klan menace to demonstrate the accuracy of this assertion. The answer, in nearly every instance, will be "Excuse me."

New York

As Atlanta in the Southeast and Dallas in the Southwest are headquarters of the Klan, so is Indianapolis in this part of the country. They boast here that Indianapolis is one of the "twin stars" of Klandom. Dallas is the other. From Indianapolis is being directed the campaign in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Kentucky and West Virginia. Here is published the official organ of the Klansmen of these six great States, a paper with a circulation that is conservatively estimated in excess of 400,000.

The Klan in Indiana says it is not in politics. Its only mission, say its leaders, is "law and order." The Klan masters in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas say that same thing. The Klan never admits. It always denies when the word "politics" is mentioned. The evidence, however, is all the other way.

An instance was the race for State Auditor of Indiana in 1922. The late William Oliver was the Republican candidate that year. He was up for re-election. Oliver had gubernatorial ambitions. So did Edward Jackson of Newcastle, then and still the Secretary of State. A story gained circulation to the effect that Oliver was in part responsible for the linking of Jackson's name with that of the Klan. It was not claimed that Jackson was a Klansman. He was just a very friendly neutral, as the story was told.

Oliver was the only man on the Republican State ticket who went down to defeat. His defeat was overwhelming. On the other hand, Jackson won. Not very long ago Oliver committed suicide. All but Klansmen say Oliver was a victim of the masked forces.

Other instances were many in which Klan support meant victory in 1922, and in that year the Indiana Klan was an infant compared with the organization that is sweeping forward for control of everything in the State next year.

Klan Friendly to Jackson.

Jackson is expected to be a candidate for Governor on the Republican ticket next year. He is not fighting the Klan, and the signs are many that the Klan may swing its support to him in the primary next Spring.

Arthur Robinson, an Indianapolis lawyer, and, according to the Klan officials, not a member of the organization, is said to be very popular with the rank and file of Klandom.

At present the Indiana Klan is apparently not much concerned about the Democrats, so far as State and local offices are concerned. They are after the Republicans, and that is why "Sunny Jim" Watson is no longer "sunny." The predicament of the senior Senator from Indiana was referred to during an hour THE TIMES correspondent spent in the publicity headquarters of the Indiana Klan. It was apparent that the Klan is not half as much worried about Senator Watson as the Senator is about what the Klan is going to do.

"Is Senator Watson a member of the Klan?" one of the directing heads of the organization was asked.

"No, I guess not," was the answer.

"Well, is he friendly?" was the next question.

"Really, we don't know where he stands," the Klansman replied, "and I doubt very much is Jim knows himself. At any rate, we have not been furnished with any statements from him denouncing us. We are the majority, and, as everybody knows, Jim Watson is not unlike a lost duck when it comes to minorities."

When told that a report was being circulated in Texas that Senator Ralston was a Klansman, the spokesman for the Klan promptly branded that statement as without basis of the fact. THE TIMES correspondent heard the same report in Indianapolis. It appears, on good authority, that Senator Ralston is not now and never was a member of the masked organization.

Compared with Klan headquarters, the headquarters of the Republican State Committee in the Hotel Severin is like a tomb. They have a new Chairman in charge there in the person of Lawrence Lyons of La Grange, but Mr. Lyons was not in the city today. Clyde Walb, a Watson lieutenant, until recently was the State Chairman. He quit when it became known that he was a member of the Klan. In the interest of harmony, and in the hope of saving something from the wreck, he resigned as Chairman, and Lyons took over the job.

Republicans Evade Issue.

There was no anti-Klan news to be had in the Republican headquarters. It was said that the organization did not feel called on at this time to do any talking. Besides, Senator Watson was in Battle Creek, Mich., it was said, and Joe Kealing, the Indiana member of the Republican National Committee, had gone to French Lick Springs for a few days' rest. It was denied that Kealing had gone there to confer with Tom Taggart, the Democratic boss.

F. E. Schortemeier, the State Secretary, was also listed as temporarily absent. All that the correspondent obtained was a copy of a bulletin which proclaimed that so far as the Republican Party was concerned "party spirit is running high in Indiana."

But the Republicans are not ahead of the Democrats when it comes to silence. From what is said in and out of the political camps, that party is just as feeble as is the Republican organization, so far as staging a fight against the hooded force is concerned. Both parties are "pussyfooting" on the Klan issue, and the leaders of both are praying they won't have to take sides. Even Postmaster General New is reported to be a member in good standing of the "say nothing" group.

While Watson, Kealing, Taggart, and the other bosses of the old school are silent, there is one Indiana politician who is talking. He is Lew Shank, the Mayor of Indianapolis, who has announced himself as a candidate for Governor on a Republican, anti-Klan platform. The Klan organizations refer to the Mayor as "Limber Lunged Lew."

"I am a candidate for Governor," says the Mayor, "and I am not going to ask these Klansmen to vote for me. I am straight out against the Klan, and whether I win or lose I am not going to do any pussyfooting." No one believes the Mayor will have a chance in the event the Kloncium directs the faithful to defeat him.

The hard task so far as this Indiana Klan situation is concerned is to find somebody who knows the situation and who is willing to talk for publication. Such persons are apparently all out of the State. In Texas the anti-Klan leaders do not hesitate to talk, but here in Indiana, where the opposition appears leaderless, no one of political importance is willing to be quoted.

Sweeping Whole Middle West.

The Klan itself claims a bona fide membership of 700,000, which is at least 300,000 more than the Texas organization claims and nearly three times as many as are said to be enlisted under the "fiery cross" in Oklahoma. Only one other State has as many hooded brothers, so it is asserted here in Indianapolis, and that is Ohio. In proportion to population, however, Indiana seems to be in a class by herself.

Not many weeks ago the Klan staged a great meeting near Kokomo. Newspaper men who covered that gathering are authority for the statement that a reliable tabulation of the automobiles parked in the fields on that occasion numbered more than 50,000, and the number of individuals who participated or looked on was between 250,000 and 300,000. Another big mobilization, to be participated in by the Klans of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, has been announced for next Saturday. Fort Wayne will be the scene of that demonstration.

What the Klan is doing in Indiana, according to reports from across the State line, is being duplicated in Ohio. Michigan is also the scene of a vigorous campaign, and the Klansmen declare they are gaining new members in Detroit at the average rate of 1,000 a week, and that the growth in other Michigan communities is in proportion.

In no State in the Klan belt has the campaign of hate and bigotry assumed such proportions as here in Indiana, and all the reports are that Ohio is a close second and that the contagion is assuming alarming proportions in Illinois and Michigan.

Just now the backbone of the Klan appears to be Texas, Georgia, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Indiana, Oregon and Ohio. There seems to be no question that Illionis, Missouri and Kentucky are in danger. These States, according to all the evidence, are today the strongholds of Klandom.

KU KLUX OFFICE OF PROPAGATION TO BE IN INDIANA

Times—

Permanent Headquarters to Be at Indianapolis, Official Says.

Picayune

New Orleans, La.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 10.—The national propagation headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan will be permanently established in Indianapolis, it was learned today from a high national officer of the klan, who arrived with Imperial Wizard Evans.

"While it will be impossible under our national charter to move the imperial palace from Atlanta," the official said, "we have found that the work of extension and propagation may be lawfully centered in Indiana."

The Indiana realm for some time has been the central organization for the klan's activities in twelve states, the spokesman said.

Plans to make the Indiana capital the national headquarters of the women's klan organization also are under consideration, it was indicated. The women's body endorsed by the Evans adherents is regarded as an integral part of the klan proper and is distinct from the "kamelia" sponsored by William Joseph Simmons, emperor.

11-11-23

The twelve state units which have been centralized in Indianapolis in propagation activities are: Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, New Jersey, Connecticut, North Carolina, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Kentucky. Membership fees from these states, it was explained, have not been passed to the jurisdiction of the Atlanta headquarters for some time.

Similar regional centers have been operated in San Francisco and Kansas City, and it is now planned to consolidate the three at Indianapolis, according to the Atlanta official.

KLAN SENDS 'WARNING' FOR RIOT

Chicago Defender 9-15-23

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 14.—As a result of an affray here Saturday afternoon when Glen D. Smith, a white patrolman, was shot and killed by Charles Harp, the Ku Klux Klan has gone on a rampage. Letters have been mailed out by that body threatening the citizens of South Bend and expressing the intention of abducting Charles Harp from the county jail, where he is being held.

Policeman Killed Off Duty

The shooting occurred in the rear of a pool room and soft drink parlor at 615 West Division St., when Smith with a companion, John Leys, attempted to conduct a raid without a warrant. Investigation disclosed that the patrolman was off duty at the time of his adventure. According to the story told the police, Harp, who had been asleep in the back of the soft drink establishment, was aroused by the entrance of the raiding party and grappled with the officer just as the latter was entering the rear room. During the struggle Harp gained possession of the policeman's pistol and fired one shot. Smith fell, wounded through the heart, and died almost immediately. Another policeman, Orville Bunch, hearing the shot, rushed to the assistance of his comrade and was also shot by Harp. He is in the hospital, where his condition is said to be serious.

Leys, who is an ex-Texas Ranger, upon being questioned, admitted having been a member of the Ku Klux Klan at one time. He assisted in arresting the 17 men who were in the pool room and was then asked to accompany the officers to jail for further questioning.

Chief Against Race

Citizens here charge Smith with having been on a "graft" collecting mission when he met his death. The more timid of the Race citizens here have begun to make preparations for leaving the city. Extra policemen have been on duty since the receipts of the K. K. K. letter by Clarence Elliott. Orders have been issued for all hardware dealers to cease the sale of firearms. Chief of Police Lane has forbidden meetings of any kind among the Race people here, and race feeling is running high.

South Bend is already feeling a shortage of labor since the K. K. K. sent out its letter. More than 1,200 citizens have left and many business houses have closed their doors.

THE KLAN BUY A KOLLEGE

Milton Elrod, editor of the Fiery Cross, organ of the Ku Klux Klan, announces that negotiations for the purchase of Valparaiso University in Indiana, which have been for some time in progress, have been completed. The Klansmen have long been concerned with the Uplift. They now essay the Higher Education.

Valparaiso has been famous as a poor man's college. The aspiring student with no money has found there unusual opportunities for earning his way. No race or religion was barred. Social formulæ were chiefly distinguished by their absence. Everybody was rooting hard for an education and nothing else counted.

Money fell short, as it has a way of doing, and now this remarkable school, with its 1,500 students, falls into the lap of the Klan. For buildings and equipment $1,000,000 is in sight. It is to be called the National University, an instance of modesty which in some quarters will be denounced as the extreme of insolence and arrogance.

As usual in the most modern institutions, instruction in theory and technical detail will be combined. "Reasons for Anglo-Saxon Supremacy" will fall in the former classification; "The Melting Temperature of Tar as a Medium for Affixing Feathers" in the latter. And, so that Valparaiso traditions of mingled work and study shall not be wholly lost, students will no doubt improve their grasp of practical details by "laboratory work" in actual lynching parties under experienced leaders. In the great field of public education this design displays energy and initiative.—New York World.

OFFER TO SAVE UNIVERSITY.

Combined K. K. K. Klan and Chemical Firm Present Plans to Pay Valparaiso's Debt.

Chicago Defender

VALPARAISO, Ind., Sept. 21.—Trustees of Valparaiso University, which is reported to be in financial difficulty, are considering two proposals for the operation of the school, one advanced by the Ku Klux Klan providing for the sale of founders' certificates through the organization to its members to pay off indebtedness and the other under which the school would turn over part of its property to the Cook Laboratories Company of Chicago.

A meeting of the trustees has been called for Sept. 27 when final decision is expected to be made.

The Cook company, which is the institution's principal creditor, offered to cancel notes held if part of the buildings could be obtained by the company for a chemical plant.

PICKENS DUCKS KLAN ROOST

Birmingham

DINNER IS PREPARED, NEGRO IS USED TO TURN THE TRICK; CASH IS RAISED FOR THE BANQUET SPEAKER; NO KLAN DINNER FOR ME, SHOUTS PICKEN.

Reporter

(By the Associated Negro Press)

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 17—The Terre Haute correspondent is not calling names just yet, but reports that the K. K. K. of this town, when they heard that William Pickens, the contributing editor of the A. N. P., was to deliver a lecture to a mixed audience down town, got alarmed lest the dean might flay the Klan, and actually rigged up a little scheme to to buy him off or soften him WITHOUT HIS KNOWING IT. 10-20-23

This is how: The K. K. K. is said to have furnished a big check to certain usable Negroes to prepare a banquet for the speaker, said banquet to take place before the meeting. At this banquet there would be colored and white "friends," the whites being certain Republican leaders who are Kluxers. This combination was supposed to do the softening act, indirectly and cunningly, without letting on. Birmingham

This alarm came from the fact that the great downtown hall, at which the Field Secretary was to speak, was donated for the the occasion by the anti-Klan whites of Terre Haute. The Klan wanted to counteract this by slipping something over to the dean gently.

It was learned that telegrams and letters were sent to the dean by both sides, and while the contents of these could not be learned, it is to be noted that William Pickens did not allow himself to be banqueted—although the chickens were all bought and waiting for execution.

The Pickens meeting proved to be the biggest thing of its kind that Terre Haute has seen, the Knights of Columbus and the Jews were there strong with the colored people.

When asked about the Klan attempt, the speaker only replied:

"Frankly, I don't know. But one thing I do know: if the Klan had succeeded in getting a dinner into me, it could not have kept me from saying my say, unless the food were poisoned doped."

Subpoena Indiana Leaders in Action Against the Klan

Atlanta Constitution

Indianapolis, Ind., October 16.—Subpoenas calling for the appearance in federal court here October 24 of several hundred persons, including state and county officials, members of the judiciary and political leaders of both major parties as witnesses in the injunction suit brought in behalf of six South Bend citizens against the Ku Klux Klan, were issued today by William Kappes, clerk of the court. The list of witnesses was submitted by Joseph Roach, who with Patrick O'Donnell, president of the American Unity league, brought the action for the South Bend residents, who seek to have their names removed from lists purporting to be lists of klansmen. 10-17-23

Among the persons for whom subpoenas were issued are Ed Jackson, secretary of state; Ora Davies, state treasurer; Newman T. Miller, state fire marshal, and Lawrence Lyons, former republican state chairman. James A. Collins, judge of the Marion criminal court; Judge W. A. Leathers, of superior court room 1, and Judge Clinton M. Given, of superior court room 4, are members of the Marion county judiciary named. George Snider, sheriff of Marion county; Albert Losche, clerk of Marion county circuit court, and Dr. Paul F. Robinson, Marion county coroner, are others on the list of witnesses.

Other persons included in the list of witnesses are Ralph Updike, state representative from Marion county; Captain Walter McCord, Captain Harry L. Hagen and Lieutenant R. P. Holler, army officers stationed at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

The original suit, among other charges, alleged the members of the klan are engaged in a conspiracy to form a super-government to gain control of the judiciary and the administration of justice and that the klansmen are endeavoring to gain control of the army and militia and influencing members of the army board of inquiry called to look into uses of government property by the klan.

KLANSMEN ASSAILED IN SUIT IN INDIANA

Atlanta

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 2.—Charges that members of the Ku Klux Klan are conspiring to become a super-government that will supplant the constitution of the United States, and are endeavoring to take over the administration of justice in the United States, are contained in a suit against the klan filed in federal court here today on behalf of six residents of South Bend, Ind.

It is further asserted in the action that the Ku Klux Klan intends to take over the military forces of the country and take government properties to be turned over to the defendant and influence army boards of inquiry that look into the disposition of property. Omaha Bee

The suit asks that the membership lists of the Indiana klan organization be seized and that A. B. Anderson, judge of the federal court, grant a preliminary injunction, later to be made permanent, restraining the defendants from representing the plaintiffs to be members of the klan.

The date for a hearing on the plea for a preliminary injunction will be set later. 10-3-23

The klan is an organization to suppress American citizens who are negroes, Catholics, and members of the Jewish faith, the complaint charges, in violation of the first article of the constitution of the United States, which guarantees religious and political freedom, and the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments. These articles deal with slavery, citizenship and the right of suffrage, respectively.

The plaintiffs are Benjamin Dubois, John Dossman, Peter J. Birmingham, Daniel W. Youngerman, Zelman Dekelbaum and Earl Jackson.

KU KLUX KLAN AN ISSUE

Beveridge Is Ambitious, While Senator Watson, Himself, Would Like to Be President—Democrats Firmly United.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

(By Chicago Tribune-Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 28.—For more than the usual number of reasons Indiana, according to present indications, is likely to be an exceedingly doubtful state in the presidential election next year.

To add to the normal political complications in the Hoosier state, involved themselves in a bitter factional warfare the end of which no man seeth.

Then a new cause for division in Republican ranks has been contributed by Gov. McCray's financial difficulties and the question whether the Republican governor's misfortunes and acts will discredit the party irretrievably next year when a governor is to be elected.

In contrast with this sad state of affairs in the Republican party are the comparative harmony and confidence prevailing in the Democratic party.

Ku-Klux Klan Votes.

An element of uncertainty for both parties, however, is the Ku-Klux Klan, said to number between 300,000 and 400,000 voters in this state. The klan defeated several candidates in the 1922 election, since which time it has grown stronger. It dominates affairs in a large part of rural Indiana.

The immediate problem of the Republicans is what to do with Gov. McCray. Those elements of the party represented by Postmaster General New, National Committeeman Kealing and State Chairman Walb think the party ought seriously to consider calling on Gov. McCray to resign and thereby relieve the party of responsibility. To that end these leaders caused a meeting of the state committee to be called for next Monday.

This move is called factional politics by the Republicans still faithful to the McCray-Watson combination, who echo the assertion of Gov. McCray that his financial difficulties are his personal affair and do not involve his record as a public servant.

Senator Watson, Chairman Walb and Committeeman Kealing have spent this week holding conferences in various parts of the state to sound opinion on McCray. They have encountered a good deal of sympathy for the governor, particularly among the farmers who have a fellow feeling for one who has lost his fun in agricultural ventures. This sympathy doubtless will be reflected at the state committee meeting, possibly to an extent that will defeat the move to demand the governor's resignation.

Organization Sued In Indiana As Violation Of Constitution And Menace To Law

SAYS KLAN WILL FAVOR LOWDEN FOR WHITE HOUSE

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—D. C. Stephenson, a member of the Ku Klux Klan national lecture bureau and former grand dragon of Indiana, declared today that former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois now is a candidate for President of the United States on the platform suggested in the official publication of the Indiana Realm in August, 1922."

"The klan is not in politics," he said. "It is not a political organization—but klansmen are in politics, and some klansmen are mighty good politicians."

Mr. Stephenson was addressing 10,000 klansmen gathered here from middle west states.

Charles G. Palmer, grand dragon of the realm of Illinois, was introduced by Stephenson, who prefaced the presentation with the statement that "not long ago you could barely hear old Illinois klux—and now Illinois is in the front ranks of those states which will help make our voice heard in Washington."

Mass to Hear Imperial Wizard Evans Talk on Atlanta Murder There Today.

BIG TENTS READY IN PARK

Catholic Mayor Ignores Their Parade Plans—Some Citizens Resent Order's Invasion.

Special to The New York Times.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 9.—This city awaits tonight the long-heralded invasion of the Ku Klux Klan. The headquarters of the Indiana Klan in Indianapolis has announced that a vast army of hooded knights will tomorrow swoop down on Fort Wayne, in which the Klan is admittedly weaker numerically than in any other city in the State.

Hiram W. Evans, the Imperial Wizard, is on the way, and early tomorrow morning it is announced that special trains will begin arriving from Cincinnati, Lansing, Detroit, Hammond, Logansport and other places in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan, while tens of other thousarnds will arrive in automobiles or on special cars over the interurban lines.

No Klan estimates of the theory are less than 100,000, while most of them are above 200,000 and some of them in excess of 300,000. The vanguard is expected to arrive about dawn and after that the stream of arrivals, the leaders declare, will be continuous up to the time the Wizard sounds his official call—his second in three weeks—from the stand in the Memorial Park, where arrangements have been made to assemble 100,000.

Wizard to Talk on Klan Slaying.

The Wizard is in Indianapolis tonight in conference with Cyclopses, Dragons, Klokards, Killigraphs and other leaders. His speech is expected to be a reiteration of the doctrine proscription which he preached at Dallas, Texas, three weeks ago. He will also for the first time, it is announced, give to the "Klansmen of the nation" whatever facts the Kloncilum possesses which may aid in explaining away the mystery surrounding the murder of Williams Coburn, the Atlanta lawyer, by Philip E. Fox, the publicity agent ofthe Kloncilium.

As at Dallas tomorrow's exercises will be open to the public. Tonight the park resembles the site of a great circus the night before the first performance. Ten huge tents have been erected in two rows, each tent opening into the next one forming two huge canvas halls, where the Klansmen will be fed during their stay here. Two other big tents are kitchens. Arrangements have been made to feed on the serve-yourself plan 100,000 men.

The park is a vast open field, owned by the city. It is hoped some day to transform it into a great municipal sport field. Loud talking apparatus is being installed to carry the words of the Wizard to all parts of his audience.

Catholic Mayor Ignores Parade.

Following the speaking exercises there will be a lull of two hours, during which the Klansmen will prepare for the parade of 50,000 through the city, starting at :730 o'clock in the evening. There will be Klan floats, a score of Ku Klux bands, besides divisions of women and children.

The city authorities have announced that they will not interfere with the parade, and in this instance it may be noted that Mayor William H. Hosey is a member of the Roman Catholic Church. He took the position that interference would only make a bad situation worse.

It is said that the total membership of the Klan in this city is about 5,000, or one-eighth of the voters. Among these 5,000 are twelve Protestant ministers, but they do not include the leading minister in Fort Wayne.

The real strength of the organization in this part of the State is in the country and small towns. Kendallville, a small town about thirty miles out, is said to harbor 1,000 members of the Klan.

Coming of Klan Resented.

Just why the Klan selected Fort Wayne as a place from which to demonstrate its hold on Indiana is a puzzle to most people here. Indianapolis, they say, would have been a much more appropriate place.

"We people here in Fort Wayne," said a leading citizen this afternoon, "I am right nicely, thank you, but one object, and that is getting along very nicely. We have been ordered moved from Atlanta to Indianapolis. In many quarters this is looked upon as a deliberate attempt to stir up religious prejudice and hatreds. In the Klansmen think they are due for a rude awakening."

Facts picked out for this city for this unsought advertisement. "Gentile, Catholic and Jew have lived side by side here for years, and I think I can do those things in Fort Wayne, bigots picked out our city for this, I say that the big machine of the Klan have been ordered moved from Atlanta to Indianapolis. In many quarters this is looked upon as a deliberate attempt to stir up religious prejudice and hatreds. In the Klansmen think they are due for a rude awakening."

Unity League, With Agents Inside the Klan, Tells How National Organization Is Operated in Each State, County

By GEORGE D. PADJETT.
Special Correspondent of The World.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 29.—"Boring from within" and carrying on a campaign of intimidation, the Ku Klux Klan, which now claims this as its banner State, has seriously crippled the Republican Party and has split its leaders into factions. It has all but grabbed control of the party's machinery in Indiana and the next primary election may see the Grand Old Party with a white hood over its head and the Fiery Cross as its standard.

The Republican Party had a close call in recent months, and although it bridged over the crisis temporarily after learning that its State Chairman was a Klansman, it will face a still more serious test when the rank and file go to the polls to vote: to vote Klan or anti-Klan, for the Klan question will monopolize the political arena in this State.

Using the tactics of the Prohibitionists, the Klansmen in Indiana are attempting to build up a political machine inside both parties, and although the Democrats thus far have managed to steer pretty clear of an open split among themselves over the Klan issue, the question will play an important part in the affairs of both political organizations.

Many Officials Are Klansmen.

The State Republicans received a shock when they learned that the Invisible Empire was smiling upon some of their prominent leaders. It was thrown into a quandary when Tolerance, anti-Klan paper, published by the American Unity League, exposed as members of the Klan such party leaders as Ed Jackson, Secretary of State; Judge James A. Collins of the Marion County Criminal Court (Indianapolis), prospective candidate for Mayor; Ora J. Davies, the Treasurer of State; George V. Coffin, ex-Marion County Sheriff and ex-Indianapolis Chief of Police, and Joseph L. Hogue, Indianapolis City Comptroller.

Mr. Jackson for several years has been a powerful figure in State politics. He will be a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination next spring. Mr. Davies (not to be confused with Ora Davis, mayor of Terre Haute and anti-Klan candidate for Governor) along with Mr. Jackson, was elected last fall, while Patrick J. Lynch, Republican candidate for re-election as State Auditor, was knifed by the Republican Klansmen, the Klan slate showing that he was a Roman Catholic.

Another prominent local man who has been exposed as a leader of the Klan here, although he has not figured in politics, is E. Howard Cadle, ex-drunkard and gambler (by his own proud boast) who erected a large tabernacle here a year or so ago, named for himself, erected in honor of his mother and dedicated to the redemption of lost souls.

With a Secretary of State, a Treasurer of State and the Republican State Chairman in the hollow of its hand, the Klan was "sitting pretty" until the blow-up came.

State Chairman Resigned.

The first shock came with the exposure of Lawrence Lyons, State Chairman, as a Klansman who had just resigned from the Invisible Empire. There was a great demand from party leaders all over the State that Lyons resign as Chairman, and he did. But when Jackson, Davies and other prominent men were exposed as Klansmen, somehow this demand did not repeat itself. The Republicans realized that they couldn't kick out all the Klansmen or the party would be split wide open. They temporized and have been keeping the issue as much under cover as possible.

The State leaders did manage to elect Clyde Walb as State Chairman over the protest of the Klan. There was a hot row over this. The old man (D. C. Stevenson of Ohio) is alleged to have wired Jackson, Davies, Collins and Coffin to allow no choice to be made until they heard from him and to battle the choice of Walb. But after a hot contest Walb was elected. The Klan element has this in its craw and is only waiting for a chance to get even.

One thing that is worrying the Klan Republicans at the present time is the Negro vote. The Negroes hold the balance of power politically in Indianapolis, and the Klansmen are trying to figure out a way to prevent the 30,000 colored votes inside Marion County from going to Mayor Samuel Lewis Shank or some other anti-Klan candidate in the primary next May.

Attack Centred on Catholics.

Trying not to antagonize the Negroes, the Republican Klansmen have been expending their wrath against Catholics and foreigners and have been leaving the race question alone.

In making its tenets fit the locality in which it operates, the Klan in Indiana has centered on the Catholics, for the Roman church is comparatively weak in the State. There are large rural communities in which children grow to maturity without ever having seen a Catholic, like the South Carolina man who was thirty years old before he knew what a Republican looked like. In these communities the Protestant ministers dominate the thought and regulate the morals of the public, and it is here that the public has become solidly Klux.

There is one element in the political situation that is causing the Klan much worry. Renewal of dues is not what the members expected. In many communities men have been forced to join the Klan against their will in order to be with the majority and not lose business or suffer political or personal harm. It is hard for the Klan to keep the cash coming from this element, and this element will be heard from at the polls. While nominally Klansmen, they are sick of the whole business and the anti-Klan politicians are banking on them voting against the Klan when they get in the secret booths on election day.

Issues List of Members.

The principal opposition that the Klan has met with in Indiana has been the American Unity League, with headquarters in Chicago, which has been waging an active fight. It was through this organization that the exposures of Klan members was made. The League got a list of 12,000 Indiana names that were on the Klan's membership roll and exposed them. The Klan then came back and printed the list itself and from that time on the Klan fight has been waged somewhat in the open.

With the State so strongly Klan and with the rumor persisting that the national headquarters is to be moved here, the members are rather proud to be identified as Klansmen. They have Klan pennants with which they decorate their automobiles in going to a big meeting. The pennants bear the letters K. K. K., with the name of the town from which the member hails.

The charge that the Klan is moving its headquarters here was made at a banquet here the other night by Patrick H. O'Donnell, President of the American Unity League. There have been reports to that effect for some time, and with the State in the centre of the country and with the strongest Klan organization anywhere, it would be a logical step for the Klan to make.

In his speech here O'Donnell charged that the Klan has entered national politics on a big scale and that it has $6,000,000, partly supplied by the Klan itself and partly contributed by politicians who are seeking Ku Klux support.

Headquarters in Indianapolis.

"National headquarters are being established in Indianapolis and the United States is divided into four sections of twelve States each," he said. "These sections in turn are divided into States and the States are divided into dominions, as are now controlled by a cyclops, and the further organization goes down to county, ward and precinct. These officers are to be military in name. A General controls the nation; Major General the four divisions; Brigadier General the State, and Captains control the dominions, and below them are Sergeants and Corporals.

"The General now in command is D. C. Stevenson, known in Klan circles as The Old Man. He lives in Columbus, O., but is on a tour of lecturing with Mr. Evans to pertect the organization. The Major Generals are not yet named; the Brigadier Generals are men in charge of the different States now, and the minor officers are those who are now officers of the Klan, their names simply changed to military titles.

"From the headquarters in Indianapolis they are to control their own telephone system throughout the Union and so equip it that by throwing a switch at national headquarters it signals the four divisions by a flashlight, so they signal the State headquarters, and they in turn signal down to the lower divisions. It is estimated by Mr. Stevenson that within three hours he can have the entire officialdom of the Klan over the United States notified. The men to be opposed, and to be supported, State and national, are to be known by numbers only, and the final determination of who shall be supported or rejected will be sent out on the eve of the election. This system they believe will hold the balance of power and put the officialdom of the United States under the control of the Ku Klux Klan.

"This work is so advanced that in cities like Fort Wayne they have perfect city, ward and precinct organizations.

"The American Unity League already has its investigators in the secret conference and gives this statement out as authentic and will be able to honeycomb the political organization with its intelligence department."

WOMAN ROUTS KLAN AT HUSBAND'S GRAVE

Bars Masks From Men Who Bore a Fiery Cross Against Her Wishes.

By R. W. BARRY.

BEEVILLE, Tex., Sept. 23.—A frail little woman burdened with grief faced six masked and robed Ku Klux Klansafternoon. Her husband had just been laid to his final rest. He had been killed by a locomotive. Orville Jenkins, twenty-five years old, had become a "naturalized citizen" of the Invisible Empire about a year ago, his widow told a newspaper reporter. Lately he had often expressed a desire to sever his connections with the Klan. He said it had "persecuted" him.

When he was killed she sent a note to the Ku Klux Klan of Sinton. She requested that the Klan desist from any demonstration at the funeral of her husband. Recalling the Klan's oft-repeated and widely-flaunted "protection of womanhood" boast she felt that her wishes would be respected and that she could bury her husband without masked men parading at his grave.

The funeral hour came and the casket was borne to the cemetery. It was lowered into the grave. The widow sat in an automobile supported by a brother and her father, J. D. Caddell. The grave was filled and the mound was covered with floral tributes of sympathetic friends.

The last prayer had been said when a closed car stopped near the grave. Six masked men wearing robes bearing the insignia of the Ku Klux Klan alighted. The leader bore a fiery cross. Mrs. Jenkins upon seeing the men leaped from her automobile.

"Those Klansmen shall not parade at the grave of my husband," she cried. Her brother attempted to calm her. She would not be restrained. She made her way to the grave and grasping the fiery cross planted there by the intruders she tore it into many pieces and flung them far. Turning on the Klansmen she tore off the masks that covered the faces of two. One face she recognized as that of Bill Sherman, the man to whom she sent the request that there be no Klan demonstration at the grave.

"You're a pretty thing now, aren't you?" she cried, slapping his face. His face was bleeding from scratches, inflicted when she tore the mask from him.

Sheriff Hunt interposed. He came out with a scratch across his throat, inflicted by Mrs. Jenkins. Will Foley, a deputy sheriff, seized Mrs. Jenkins by the shoulders. "If you do not let me go I'll blow your brains out," she told Foley. Foley relinquished his hold. Six Ku Klux Klansmen retreated, two of them with bleeding faces.

Ku Klux Klansmen did not put a fiery cross on the grave of Orville Jenkins.

KLAN'S VICTORY CLAIM IN OREGON BASELESS

It Merely Assisted Masons in Their Education Bill Attacking Catholics.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT

The Ku Klux Klan has taken much credit to itself for what it calls its Oregon victory. It claims to have carried Oregon at the last elections and is preparing to sweep the State at the next.

In point of fact the Ku Klux Klan did not carry the last elections in Oregon. There was no "Oregon victory" for the Klan. There is no reason for the rest of the country to fear or admire the mystic power of the Klan, as far as Oregon is concerned.

Last winter when I was at work as one of The World's correspondents in Europe I read in the news that the Ku Klux Klan had carried Oregon. As I was born and raised in Oregon and know the State pretty thoroughly, I was dumfounded. I could not understand why or how Oregon, where no race or religious questions are acute, had gone Ku Klux. But, like every one else who got the bare news that the Ku Klux candidate for Governor had won easily against the candidate who declared himself opposed to the Klan, I had to accept the news as it stood, just as millions of people in America, no doubt.

But for the last month I have been on vacation in Oregon. I have seen and talked to a great many people whom I have known all my life, and so I have come to know exactly what the Ku Klux victory amounts to. I give it here because it helps straighten the record.

Not an Issue at All.

To my surprise no one mentioned the Klan to me first. I expected to find the Ku Klux a burning political issue and found it just missed being an issue at all. It was only by questioning and by hunting up people who I knew would have every bit of inside political history that I was able to satisfy my curiosity.

One thing every one said immediately: there was no Ku Klux victory in Oregon last year. All the Ku Klux could claim was that it played a role politically in Oregon and that it was on the winning side.

The Ku Klux got all its advertising as the victor in Oregon because it backed a school bill for compulsory public education which was introduced and backed by the Scottish Rite Masons, who are strong in Oregon. It elected Gov. Pierce on the same combination of public sentiment, and that is all it has done.

My judgment would be that the Ku Klux Klan in Oregon, having been born in an atmosphere of war psychology and having won its own only political success in temporary partnership with the Scottish Rite Masons, will have to find other powerful alliances and get in on the winning side of other public issues to keep alive. It certainly has not enough impetus of its own to keep going in Oregon.

KLAN DISTURBS INDIANA POLITICS

ORA DAVIS — E. HOWARD CADLE — Judge JAMES A. COLLINS — LAWRENCE LYONS — ED JACKSON

KLAN IS DENOUNCED BY KENTUCKY PARTIES

Both Democrats and Republicans Are Pledged to Rout Invisible Empire.

Special Despatch to The World

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 29.—The Republican and Democratic Parties will elect full State tickets at the coming November election. Women will vote for the first time at a full State election. A General Assembly is to be elected. The women's vote is the uncertain quantity.

There are more questions of wide public interest than ever before which will play a part in the balloting this fall. Among these are the Ku Klux Klan and the question of whether pari-mutuel betting on race tracks will be permitted.

Both parties in their platforms came out flat-footed against the Ku Klux Klan. The Republican platform says:

"The Republican Party heartily condemns and vigorously denounces the K. K. K. as un-American, subversive of American ideals and institutions and a menace to civilized government, and our party stands unalterably committed to the policy of invoking all existing laws which forbid unlawful assemblies to injure the person or property of another, and to enact and enforce such other laws as are necessary to completely destroy the growth of this great evil. We pledge Republican officials to a relentless warfare upon this and any similar organization which may attempt to usurp the functions of government and take the law into its own hands or disguise its principles for the purpose of the intimidation or persecution of our citizens. There can be no government by individuals within a government established by the people."

The Democratic State Committee has drafted in its platform a plank which condemns "any effort anywhere to injure or ostracize any American citizen on account of his religion, color or political opinions, and we emphatically condemn as un-American, as indefensible and absolutely lawless and criminal any effort by organized associations to intimidate any citizen because of religious or racial ties.

OUST ANTI-KLAN CHIEF

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 16.—Following a demand for his resignation as chief of police, Arthur M. Sullivan, Ku Klux Klan charges against Maurice, city manager; Arthur Snyder, member of the city commission; and David Miller, city engineer, have been placed before the city commission by the ousted police officer. 1/17/23 Amsterdam News

All three were named as members of the organization in an affidavit presented last Thursday by Mr. Sullivan, who demanded reasons for his requested resignation last Monday. "My discharge was caused by the fact that I refused to join the Klan," Sullivan said. "The climax came when I refused to permit a parade of masked klansmen through the streets of Michigan City."

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Jan. 10.—Following a demand for his resignation as chief of police, Arthur M. Sullivan, Ku Klux Klan charges against Maurice, city manager; Arthur Snyder, member of the city commission; and David Miller, city engineer, have been placed before the city commission by the ousted police officer.

All three were named as members of the organization in an affidavit presented last Thursday by Mr. Sullivan, who demanded reasons for his requested resignation last Monday. "My discharge was caused by the fact that I refused to join the klan," Sullivan said. "The climax came when I refused to permit a parade of masked klansmen through the streets of Michigan City."

"Conditions in this city have become almost unbearable for persons not affiliated with the klan. Night Captain Thomas Grant and four other members of the police force have resigned."

KU KLUX CONDEMNED.

Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn. 1/27/23

Declared Un-American By Episcopal Church, Indianapolis Diocese.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 26.—The Ku-Klux Klan was condemned in a resolution adopted by the Indianapolis Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church in a business session here today as an "un-American menace to peace and order."

"We feel that we should record our strong disapproval and condemnation of the Ku-Klux Klan and other secret and political societies as un-American and as a menace to peade and order and to social security and wellbeing," the resolution said.

"The so-called enforcement of law and the attempted regulation by bands of hooded and masked men can accomplish no good."

Indiana Klan Denouncer Not to Resign Office

Associated Press Report.

BROOK, Ind., March 31.—Lawrence Lyons, chairman of the Indiana republican state committee, declared today that he would resign his office as the result of the publicity attending his former connection with the Ku Klux Klan. Announcement that he had joined the organization but had resigned as he considered it "un-American" was made by Mr. Lyons yesterday.

INDIANA POLITICIAN QUITS KU KLUX KLAN

Lyons, Chairman of Republican State Committee, Joined It Only Six Weeks Ago.

NOW CALLS IT UN-AMERICAN

The Order's Oath and Constitution Violate the Principles of Liberty, He Asserts.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 30.—Lawrence Lyons, Chairman of the Indiana Republican State Committee, admitted today that he had resigned from the Ku Klux Klan after having joined the organization about six weeks ago. Mr. Lyons said he had given a statement to the American Unity League at Chicago in which he characterized the Klan as "un-American." Mr. Lyons was in Brook, Ind., today. His admission of membership in the Klan was made during an interview by telephone.

Mr. Lyons said he had no copy of the statement given to the Unity League. He explained that after joining the Klan he discovered that it was not an organization which he cared to be identified with, and that he submitted his resignation one week ago.

Mr. Lyons, further than declaring that "personally he was done" with the Klan, refused to make any announcement of his previous connection with the organization.

Governor McCray had disapproved of his joining the organization, Mr. Lyons said. He has been a close political friend of the Governor. The Governor in discussing Mr. Lyons's announcement said that "he was in and out before I knew anything about it." The Governor has expressed opposition to the principles of the Klan since its incorporation in this State.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 30.—A letter from Lawrence Lyons, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Indiana, to the American Unity League, an organization opposed to the Ku Klux Klan, announcing his resignation from the Klan, will be published tomorrow in Tolerance, the official organ of the League. The letter, dated March 27, as made public by the League, reads in part:

"It is my desire to publicly denounce my affiliation with the Ku Klux Klan or the Invisible Empire.

"Having acquainted myself with the purposes of the Ku Klux Klan organization, I deem it my duty as a loyal American citizen to set forth my position as to those prescribed by the Ku Klux Klan.

"I am a firm believer in our Government as it is now constituted, believing that all men are equal before the law, with the right to a trial by jury of his peers, and the right to worship the Almighty God in whatever way he may deem fit.

"The Ku Klux Klan, according to its oath and constitution, does not conform to these principles. Being a man of conservative ideas and a lover of freedom, I cannot help but at this time make my position plain with the people of my State."

Mr. Lyons added that, having some responsibilities as a citizen, he felt it his duty to set forth in the press his position and true feelings regarding what he termed "this un-American organization."

SOUTH BEND, IND. TRIBUNE MARCH 20, 1923

KLANSMEN IN SPIRIT.

The men who give moral aid and comfort to klansmen are guilty of fostering group strife in a degree only once removed from that of members of the klan. Some men are afraid to join societies dedicated to persecuting Roman Catholics, Jews and Negroes but they favor such persecution and by their words help keep the klan alive. Such persons are more despicable than known members of the klan because they lack the courage of their convictions

If men and women who are not members of any society pledged to persecute Roman Catholics, Jews and Negroes would adopt a rule of unmitigated, outspoken opposition to such societies and would fight relentlessly the spread of religious and racial hatred they would accomplish something of a positive nature for their city and country.

Klanism is a state of mind. A man does not have to belong, wear the regalia and subscribe to the formal teachings if he has in him the suspicion and hostility emanating from religious and racial bigotry. Men and women of all creeds and faiths could and should adopt and live by the Golden Rule, exemplifying the belief that in free America is room for all, but no room for malice and persecution of any creed or race by anybody.

INDIANA MINER KILLED AT TRIAL BEFORE LOCAL

Washington, Ind., April 21.—Accusations at a meeting of the coal miners' union local here for membership in the Ku Klux Klan, led to the death of William Gilley, 35, Friday.

Gilley was on trial by the United Mine Workers' local on a charge of violating union rules by becoming a constable through membership in the Horse Thief Detective association. Harry Hudson, 64, and father of 13 children, charged him with membership in the klan.

Gilley was shot in the ensuing argument and died with a bullet wound in the temple. Hudson surrendered to the police.

Bars Klan and Rival Parades on 4th

INDIANAPOLIS, June 26.—Permission for parades on July 4 has been denied to both the Ku Klux Klan and the American Unity League, rival organizations, by Herman Rikhoff, Chief of Police. Chief Rikhoff said his refusal to permit the parades was based on the belief that such demonstrations would serev only to create racial and religious prejudice which would be detrimental to the community.

Indiana Has More Than 85,000 In Klan.

KOKOMO, Ind., July 5.—Indiana has surpassed Texas in the number of members enrolled in the Ku Klux Klan, H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard, declared in an address here yesterday to a gathering of Klansmen from this and several surrounding States. The Texas membership was recently 85,000, he said. The meeting held here marked the completion of organization efforts in this State, Klansmen said. Charters were granted to organizations in each of the ninety-two counties of the State.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY AND THE KLAN.

Indiana seems to be the hot-bed of Klanism. The organization boasts of a membership of 300,000. Among these are many prominent men of all professions. Recent exposures have brought into the limelight such names as Lawrence Lyons, State Republican Chairman; Ed Jackson, Secretary of State, prospective candidate for Governor; James Collins, Republican Criminal Judge and other lesser lights. The exposure continues and no one seems surprised at any revelation, however startling. None of the many prominent men charged with Klanism have denied their identity with the un-American organization. Some are trying hard to either ignore the charge or to make light of it.

A striking, if not a shocking feature of the Indiana Klan situation is the prominence in the Klan of Republicans and Republican leaders. So far, indications are that the great majority of Indiana Klansmen are Republicans. This fact is explained by noting that the Democratic party has always had a large Catholic following and that the Democratic leaders have not dared insult so formidable a clientele. On the other hand, it is observed that while the large Negro vote of the State has been almost solidly Republican for over fifty years, the Republican leaders have not hesitated to make common cause with an organization whose whole history is hostile and unjust to the Negro citizen.

Many thoughtful Negroes are saying that the affiliation of the Republican party in Indiana with the Klan is only a part of the movement to to exchange the loyal Negro vote for the white vote of the South, and those with Southern prejudice against the Negro. It is, therefore, pointed out that the Negro, by reason of the traditional attitude of the Democratic party toward him, is politically adrift.

The whole reaction upon the intelligent Negro is noteworthy and interesting. The tendency of the Negro vote has been for several years toward independency. Especially has this trend been obvious in the Northern and Eastern municipal and State elections. The flirtation of the Republican party with the Klan is the straw that has broken the camel's back. It now seems certain that no thoughtful Negro in Indiana will have anything, politically, to do with any man who is known to be a Klansman.

INDIANAPOLIS PAPERS WARN RACE AGAINST KU KLUX KLAN ALLY OF REPUBLICANS

In the same vein the editorial of the Ledger, from which we quote the following:

"Let's speak plainly. Where have the greatest number of Kluxers been found? What political party was found to be a hot-bed of the Klan with almost every important official wearing a "night-gown" and parading for "White Supremacy"? Does the Republican organization think that the Negro is asleep; or have they come to the plac where they frankly do not want his vote? Where are our old guard Republican Negro politicians? Have they been called in and swallowed the "explanation" that was handed to them all?

"The Negroes of Chicago upset the dope and wiped a reputed Klux Republican ticket off the field. In New York the Negro vote shifted as a whole. What was the result? In Chicago Negroes have been appointed to every important civic office and very marked improvements along every line can be noticed. Often it pays to swap horses and there is no better time than now."

KLANSMEN STABBED IN STREET PARADE

Doctor Who Knifed Three Pleads Self-defense.

Says White-robed Woman Demanded That He Lift His Hat While Marchers Passed.

RUSHVILLE, Ind., June 21.—On the eve of a grand jury investigation of the stabbing of O. R. Umberger and R. L. Whitehead of this city in the course of a Ku Klux Klan parade here, Dr. H. V. Logan, a widely known Rushville physician and a former service man, in a public statement, announced that in self-defense he had stabbed three marchers in the parade with a pocket knife, when they attacked him after he had declined to remove his hat when a woman in Klan regalia waved a small American flag in his face.

Dr. Logan said he was returning with his wife and daughter and that the parade, which had gone thru the business part of the city and was beginning to break up, blocked the street. As he stood waiting for the parade to pass a young man told him to remove his hat.

Only decorated automobiles were passing, Dr. Logan said, and he did not comply with the request. A woman wearing a white robe then waved a small flag in front of him and repeatedly demanded that he remove his hat. Dr. Logan asserted that he stepped back and that the woman cried:

"Come and get him, Muncie No. 4!"

Four large men rushed at him the physician asserted, and he drove three of them off with his knife, but the fourth man knocked him over a fence. Dr. Logan's statement was signed by three witnesses.

Klan in Final Phase Of Deal To Purchase Valparaiso University

Valparaiso, Ind., August 17.—Although final articles transferring ownership of Valparaiso university over to the Ku Klux Klan, were not signed today, all preliminary details of the transaction have been completed, and the deal will be closed probably next week, according to a statement tonight by Milton Elrod, editor of the Fiery Cross, official publication of the klan.

Elrod and C. C. Watkins, after a conference with university officials, left tonight for headquarters of the klan at Atlanta, Ga., where they declared plans for operation of the university will be worked out with national officials of the organization.

CLARKE UNDECIDED ON KLAN PROPOSAL

The Atlanta Constitution 8-19-23

Declares He Does Not Wish to Again Become Target for Abuse—Willing to Be Peacemaker.

Atlanta, Ga.

Indianapolis, Ind., August 18.—Edward Young Clarke, of Atlanta, Ga., organizer of the Ku Klux Klan, imperial wizard emeritus, and imperial giant, tonight declared that he was undecided what definite answer he would make to William J. Simmons, of Atlanta, Ga., emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, in reply to the latter's offer to vest him with "executive and administrative authority of the klan," ranking over all other officers of the klan except Mr. Simmons. Mr. Clarke, however, said he was willing to step into klan affairs as a peacemaker and harmonizer, if necessary.

Mr. Clarke admitted that he had re- the n telegram from Emperor Simmons eral uning with him to come to and assist the klan in "gen- isfactory conditions," and insisting that he "alone could allay the restlessness in the order," and reclaim the membership that was breaking away.

In the telegram to Mr. Clarke, Emperor Simmons offered him the title of "Sir Knight Supreme of the Order Knights Kamelia" and "Herald Supreme of the Kamelia."

Clarke's Telegram.

Mr. Clarke's telegram to Imperial Wizard Simmons follows:

"I hardly know what to say or what reply to make to your telegram of today. Especially in view of the fact that as you know, I have been away from home for five months and during that time I have been absolutely out of touch with klan affairs, and since my return home, have not had time to familiarize myself with what has transpired during my absence or with the conditions of klan affairs at this time.

"Knowing only in a general way that bitter difference of opinion has arisen between prominent officials and klansmen in all parts of the nation, I most earnestly hope that conditions are not as bad as pictured to me in your telegram, because as the builder of the klan in America and at such terrific cost to myself in suffering through persecution, I am naturally deeply concerned in the progress and peaceful and successful operation of the thing which I builded and which has my heart's deepest devotion.

Does Not Desire Office.

"I do not desire now, and have never sought, any official position with the klan, and since I have refused to accept the position of imperial wizard, tendered me by the klanvocation last November, I hardly see how it is possible for me to accept any official position inside the klan at the present time.

"The only way that I could possibly be induced to put myself in position where I could again become the target from the inside of disgruntled and dissatisfied elements and from outside enemies to the klan and to real Americanism, would be for me to be shown conclusively that I was the only one who could bring to the klan peace and harmony, and that the klansmen of the nation wanted me to undertake the task. 8-19-23

"Of course, I deeply appreciate the confidence evidenced by yourself and associates and the executive bodies of the Knights Kamelia and the Kamelia, but it is impossible for me to give you any definite answer until I have had time to give the matter very careful consideration. I am still greatly in need of many months of complete mental and physical rest in order that I may recuperate from the terrific strain of the three or four years spent in building the klan, and in order that I may clear up certain legal entanglements brought upon me as the result of my connection with the klan, and which you know, are simply and solely persecutions and not prosecutions.

(Signed)
"EDWARD YOUNG CLARKE."

Consults On Case.

Mr. Clarke said he had come here to consult attorneys in regard to his case pending in federal court. On information filed last September by United States District Attorney Homer Elliott, he was charged with violating the national prohibition law at Muncie. Mr. Clarke surrendered himself to federal authorities on September 8, last, and gave bond of $2,000 for his appearance in federal court. He was charged with having unlawfully transported whiskey and with unlawful possession of liquor which was said to have been found in his handbag during a visit to Muncie where he spoke to a gathering of klansmen.

Mr. Clarke characterized the information as an effort to "frame" him. He insisted yesterday that he wanted to recover $500 which was in his bag. He admitted that he had attempted to get in communication with Mr. Elliott through his attorneys. Whether the charge will be pressed by the government could not be learned.

CLARKE IS URGED AS KLAN LEADER.

William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the klan, Saturday sent a telegram to E. Y. Clarke, at Indianapolis, Ind., requesting him to return to Atlanta and assume control of the Ku Klux Klan and the Knights Kamelia to save the two organizations from "disorganization and ruin."

Emperor Simmons made a public statement in which he stated that the development and progress of the Ku Klux Klan has been stopped, and disintegration is setting in throughout the entire bounds of the invisible empire due to the lack of leadership and lack of constructive programs of activity.

Emperor Simmons paid a high tribute to Clarke's "courage and ability to suppress disorder on the part of the klansmen."

He said:

"Mr. Clarke has the distinction of being one man in the leadership of the organization who had the courage to abate and suppress every tendency toward disorderly conduct on the part of the klansmen. While he was at the head of the organization he did not hesitate to revoke charters of klans or even to suspend entire realms if lawlessness in any form was condoned or tolerated by members of respective klan units. His wise and fearless leadership is especially required at this time to free the klan from any activities that may be criticised or from any tendencies toward the violation of the fundamental principles of the order. His leadership can immediately restore the confidence of the best men in the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

It was also announced Saturday that the Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1 on August 16 adopted a resolution expressing confidence in Mr. Clarke and urging him to return and take charge of the organization for practically the same reasons that were outlined by Emperor Simmons' telegram.

Three Cited For Contempt.

Judge George L. Bell, of the civil division of the Fulton superior court, Saturday morning cited three imperial officers of the Ku Klux Klan to appear before him on September 1 and show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt of court. Judge Bell's citation was issued on petition of Attorney William S. Coburn, representing Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1, Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans, Grand Dragon Nathan Bedford Forrest and Great Titan Ben H. Sullivan were named as defendants.

The petition set forth that the defendants had refused to obey Judge Bell's order of August 2, restraining the organization of a second klan in Atlanta in opposition to the Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan.

KLAN TO TAKE OVER VALPARAISO COLLEGE

Atlanta Constitution

Indianapolis, Ind., August 15.—Negotiations have been completed for the taking over of Valparaiso university, located at Valparaiso, Ind., by the Ku Klux Klan organization, it was announced here tonight by Milton Elrod, editor of the Fiery Cross, official publication of the klan. The university, which is one of the oldest educational institutions in the country, will be called the National university, Mr. Elrod said. 8-16-23

The purchase price was announced as $350,000 which represents an amount about equal to the indebtedness of the institution. Five hundred thousand dollars will be spent immediately from improvement of the university buildings and in addition an endowment of another half million dollars will be established, according to Mr. Elrod, who added the school would be strictly non-sectarian. Atlanta Ga.

Announcement of the taking over of the university, which recently was reported on the verge of financial collapse, came after a series of conferences between officials of the klan, which lasted more than two weeks.

Mr. Elrod and C. C. Watkins, of Columbus, Ohio, an official of a junior organization of the klan will leave tomorrow for Valparaiso, where final articles of the agreement will be signed with trustees of the university.

The present trustees of the school will submit their resignations immediately, according to Mr. Elrod, and five new trustees from the Indiana realm of the klan will be selected to take their places.

Would Restrain Simmons.

Chicago August 15.—A bill for an injunction to restrain William J. Simmons, former imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and three Chicago men from controlling local klan organizations was filed today in the superior court on behalf of the national organization.

The bill alleges that by the by-laws of the order, all title to property of the klan and paraphernalia and records of subordinate bodies is vested in the national organization and that Atlanta headquarters control all local klans.

Major Franklin C. Browns, James C. Stockwell and Millard F. Roberts, whom the bill seeks to enjoin from acting as exalted cyclops of Chicago klans, are declared to be under suspension by the national organization, as are local klans 33, 11 and 15, said to include a membership of 400. These klans, it is alleged, have held unauthorized meetings and have been affiliated with Mr. Simmons in promotion of another organization, referr to as the Kamelia.

The petition asks that the de ants be requested to cease meetings of Klansmen and over all records and proper national body.

These five will constitute a quorum until other realms of the klan throughout the country can be called on for representatives among the directors of the institution.

The summer school course, now in progress at the university, will be continued, according to Mr. Elrod, and notice will be sent out to all last year students that the regular fall opening will take place. The institution will be run along the same lines as heretofore, and will be open to all persons meeting the educational requirements, regardless of race, color or religion, it was said.

MINISTER ALLOWS KLAN IN CHURCH ON SUNDAY NIGHT

Rev. Bell of Elkhart Draws Fire of Citizens Because of Action

Elkhart, Ind., July 13.—The Rev. Charles H. Bell, one of the leading ministers of this city and pastor of the A. M. E. church here, brought humiliation to members of his church and public condemnation to himself when recently he turned his pulpit over to members of the Ku Klux Klan headed by Harry H. Smith (white) in order that the cause of the hooded knights should be laid bare to the racial group whom they so thoroughly despise.

The action of the Rev. Mr. Bell in turning over the Sunday night service to the Klan members followed a conference on Saturday between him and a committee representing the order. It was at this time that the minister, without consulting his congregaion, is said to have consented to let the Kluxers speak from his pulpit.

Just what inducements or bribes the committee offered the Rev. Mr. Bell to gain his consent during the private conference behind closed doors has not been learned. The minister refused to talk other than to explain his action on the grounds of the right of free speech.

"Every man ought to have a right to speak in his own defense," the preacher is alleged to have declared when questioned. But this laconic explanation was not satisfactory to the members of his church, nor the Race here. They believe that he, in whose honor they had faith, betrayed them into the hands of their arch enemy for a few paltry dollars.

But on the ground that he was "helping the struggling congregation," Harry M. Smith, the Klan representative, presented the church $100 at the close of his address. The Rev. Mr. Bell accepted the public offering and declared it was "a pleasant surprise." Nevertheless it is said that one of the Klansmen stated that the minister was told on the previous day that the money was to be given to the church.

It has been reported also that the pastor of the Baptist church here, Rev. Sebre, accepted $100 from the Klan a week previous to the action of the Methodist pastor.

Elkhart Race citizens loudly decry the actions of their two leading ministers and feel that they have been betrayed to their enemy by those in whom they trusted, and that the betrayal was for a mess of pottage. The chief of police and other police officials are accused of being members of the order.

KLAN BUYS COLLEGE, TO ADMIT STUDENTS WITHOUT COLOR LINE

NEW YORK HERALD
AUGUST 16, 1923

Negotiations for Purchase of Valparaiso University, Ind., Completed.

FOR NATIONAL SCHOOL

Plan to Spend Half Million for Improvements at Institution.

KNIGHTS TO BE TRUSTEES

They Say No Racial or Religious Distinctions Will Be Drawn.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 15.—Valparaiso University, at Valparaiso, Ind., will be taken over by the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a fund of $500,000 will be used shortly for betterments, another $500,000 raised for a permanent endowment and the name changed to National University, according to Milton Elrod, editor here of the Fiery Cross, official publication of the Klan, and C. C. Watkins of Columbus, Ohio, who is official representative of the Grand Titans of Indiana in the Valparaiso negotiations.

The announcement was made this afternoon after a series of conferences of Klan officials lasting more than two weeks. Mr. Watkins and Mr. Elrod will leave to-morrow morning for Valparaiso to complete the negotiations. The purchase price is fixed at about $350,000, which represents approximately the indebtedness of the university.

Mr. Elrod said to-day that while the name and ownership of the university would be changed, it would continue as nearly as possible to be "the poor man's Harvard." It would be non-sectarian, he said, in every respect. Enrollment will be open, regardless of race or color, to any man who fills the necessary educational requirements of an institution of this sort. The officials of the Klan expect to notify the students at the summer school, now in session, that the university will be open in the fall as usual.

Knights to Be Trustees.

Under present plans, the board of trustees of the university will resign and five trustees representing the realm of Indiana, will be appointed immediately. These five will constitute a quorum until the remainder of the board can be selected from various realms throughout the United States.

Plans for improvement and enlargement will be given first consideration, Mr. Elrod said. A full curriculum of the standard college course will be taught, including the regular courses in pre-medical, pharmacy, law, mechanical engineering, civil engineering, electrical engineering, science and arts, a normal course for teachers, music, oratory and other studies. As a regularly chartered university it will confer all degrees and will conduct a summer term in all courses.

An official statement put out by the Klan says: "The total indebtedness of $350,000 will be taken over by the Klan and at least a half-million dollars will be made available for the successful development of the university. An additional $500,000 is to be established in addition to bequests from time to time, with the full force of the national organization behind the project at all times."

National Project of Klan.

Mr. Elrod said at first the idea was to make the purchase with the aid of the Indiana realm alone. He said a list of the homes of members of the student body showed almost every State in the Union represented, and the Indiana Klan felt, in view of this fact, the national organization should have a part in the project.

The official statement also says: "Investigation develops that more than 350,000 students have passed through Valparaiso University and that more than 141,000 graduate alumni hold degrees, with a present student body representing every State in the Union. Therefore the Klan in Indiana has decided that Valparaiso University will be made a national institution and that every single State in the Union and every single individual Klan throughout the United States be afforded the opportunity of participating in the refinancing and development of a national university."

It was announced last July that the Ku Klux Klan was preparing to take over Valparaiso University and make it the Klan University. Valparaiso was in straits because of the falling off of membership and lack of funds to continue it and Klan officials announced that if a fair offer were made the Indiana knights would take over the institution. The Klan announced that under Klan auspices the school would specialize in the teaching of Americanism.

The sudden collapse of the school has occurred since 1920. In that year, with postwar prosperity on every side, the Indiana farmers and others sent their children to the school in great numbers. More than 4,000 students were enrolled. Hard times hit the middle West. Retrenchment was quickest and deepest in the matter of education. The enrollment fell in a years' time to 1,260. In 1922 it had picked up to 1,500, but was in serious financial and other troubles.

During the flush time of prosperity in 1920 Valparaiso sent an eleven east to meet Harvard. Fraternities were introduced. These and other departures caused factional clashes and the university found itself headed toward speedy dissolution.

The present year rounded out a half century of Valparaiso's existence. It was founded in 1873 by two young teachers—H. P. Brown and O. P. Kinsey.

The will of one of its founders probably is one of the reasons for the downfall of the school. H. P. Brown left his possessions to the school, but apparently with some flaw or condition to the title, because Henry Kinsey Brown, former president of the school and son of the founder, has recently started an action to regain control of fifteen buildings, valued at $1,000,000.

Permanent Endowment For Valparaiso Is Plan Of Klan in Indiana

The Atlanta Constitution

Valparaiso, Ind., August 17.—Consideration was being given today to a plan for the raising of a permanent endowment fund for Valparaiso university which has been purchased by the Ku Klux Klan, Milton Elrod, editor of the Fiery Cross, official organ of the Klan in Indiana said today.

Although the university will be governed by a board of trustees appointed by the klan, the university will be strictly non-sectarian, Mr. Elrod said, as has been the policy of the school in the past, negroes, he asserted, will not be admitted.

Mr. Elrod denied that the name of the university would be changed as had been the impression. This impression, he said, probably came from the fact that the university is being taken over by the national organization of the klan, although the details of the purchase have been handled by the state organization.

Whether Dr. Horace M. Evans, president of the university, will be continued in that capacity, will be up to the board of trustees to be appointed by the klan. As soon as the technical agreement is signed probably today, five of the present members of the board of trustees will resign and five new members from the state klan will be appointed to form a majority until the national organization can elect an entirely new board, Mr. Elrod said.

BASTROP HEARING WAS FRAME-UP EVANS DECLARES

Investigation of Mer Rouge Murders Staged by Enemies of Klan, Says Imperial Wizard.

DECLARES PARKER PROSTITUTED OFFICE

Says Governor Sought to Indict Klan Rather Than Apprehend Murderers of Two Men.

Atlanta Constitution

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Chicago, January 26.—Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the invisible empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, in a public statement today declared that the investigation of killings at Mer Rouge, La., was a "frame-up on the Ku Klux Klan," staged by enemies of the klan, "represented by Governor Parker," and that it had "signally failed."

He declared the governor of Louisiana had prostituted his office for "political purposes, to vent spleen or gain notoriety," and had sought to indict the klan rather than apprehend criminals.

Attorney-General Coco, of Louisiana, the wizard termed "that erstwhile Mason," and "tool of the executive."

Evans asserted that the public hearing at Bastrop, La., which closed yesterday after investigation of the deaths of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, it was clearly shown that the klansmen "do not approve or participate in lawlessness of any kind."

Issue Statement.

The statement in reference to the Louisiana situation follows in full:

"The first and most notable deduction and one which is apparent to everybody is that the enemies of the Ku Klux Klan, represented by Governor Parker, have staged a Herculean effort to put over a frame-up on the Ku Klux Klan and that they have signally failed. The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan do not approve or participate in lawlessness of any kind and the partial inquiry just closed at Bastrop proved this fact as having been brought out clearly by that investigation. The hearing at Bastrop has also brought out the fact that those who most fear the klan and are the bitterest foes are law violators and their associates and those who would impute or attempt to attach lawlessness to the klan are compelled to use as witnesses people of low character and lawless regard.

"It is lamentable that the governor of the great state of Louisiana, whose people rank high as loyal and law abiding citizens of America, should, either for political purpose, to vent spleen or gain notoriety, so far forget the responsibilities of his office as to prostitute it and thus bring discredit upon his own state. The hearing at Bastrop clearly brought out the fact that the governor of Louisiana was endeavoring to indict a patriotic organization rather than to apprehend criminals and see that they were punished. The inquiry developed the fact, first, the absolute incompetency and lack of ability of the chief executive of the great state of Louisiana and a lack of veracity or character stamina of that erstwhile Mason, Coco, used as the tool of the executive. In spite of his provocative tactics plainly followed to try to produce riots in Morehouse parish, this fiendish scheme against peace and dignity of a great state, which originated in the mind of its venal governor, has signally failed."

"Militia Not Needed."

"The need of the militia has not been proven. On the other hand, the failure to declare martial law has demonstrated the uselessness of its presence in Morehouse parish. Richard or Daniel, or both, may have been murdered. The klan gave its entire support to this inquiry in the sincere hope that the real truth might be developed and the guilty punished.

"Murder has not been proven, corpus delicti has not been proven, personae of murderers has not been established, and the inquiry has failed. We now are wondering how it is possible for bodies to have remained in the lake for four months; why, with heads, legs and arms blown off by dynamite, bones broken, the flesh was still tenaciously holding together.

"It has not been proven that these southern lakes, themselves infested with reptiles and fish life, would permit bodies for nearly four months to rest undisturbed and in such condition that the bloodstains from the wounds could still remain to disclose the character of wounds.

"It is known, however, that these conditions are physically impossible, as it is also known that embalmed bodies might lie in these waters for two or three days, and that the embalming fluid placed in them at the clinic, from which they were obtained, would protect them for some days in the water, without loss or change.

"It is also known, as a physiological fact, that fractures are produced at clinics upon muscle-covered bones precisely as those claimed by Dr. Duval to have been upon the purported bodies of the victims.

Cites Klan's Principles.

"Finally, the klan claims no regulatory rights upon the conduct of American citizens. It uses no extra legal measures, but it supports the duly constituted officers of the law in the full performance of their every legal duty.

"Ku Klux Klansmen have no right to take the law into their own hands, Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the organization, who also in a statement charged Governor Parker, of Louisiana, with political or other motives in instigating the Mer Rouge investigation of the deaths of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, declared today.

"Asked if the klan would defend any men who may be arrested or indicted in connection with the Louisiana case, Evans said:

"'It would depend entirely upon the condition of the klansmen. If he was unable to provide defense for himself we would most certainly see that his rights as a klansman were looked after, and that he got justice. We would not use any effort anywhere to prevent a man from paying the just penalty for a crime committed.'

"'There is no set of circumstances under which the klan would have a right to take into its own hands, or be responsible in any way for the enforcement of the law, except insofar as their sworn duty as klansmen would place them under the officials charged with the enforcement of the law,' Evans said.

Give Klan Code.

"Every klansman specifically takes the following oath, which has never been published before:

"'I furthermore promise to swear that I will always, at all times and in all places, help, aid and assist the duly constituted officers of the law in the proper performance of their legal duties.'

"There is nothing contained in any oath that in any way permits, allows or condones law violations.

"The mask is but a portion of our regalia. It is only worn within our klaverns during the ceremony of naturalization or initiation, or, when special dispensation is granted, in a public parade; to the grave of a klansman, or a man who has served the klan or the country in an upstanding way, or upon an errand of charity. On the two latter occasions it is not worn except that the klan may express, as a klan, either its sorrow or its sympathy, and that this action might not be considered individual expressions, but representative of the klan. The klan is not attempting to build upon the personality of men, but upon the foundation of principles. The klan is not a political organization, but if it is builded upon men, instead of principles, it might become such—hence the organization, in maintaining its secrecy, prevents its exploitation for personal profit. And, finally, it is necessary, in many sections of this nation, that we protect the identity of our members from the persecution of un-American, alien or foreign influences which would persecute the membership of the klan merely because they were members, as evidenced by the persecution of members of the klan being meted out in Chicago today, simply because they believe in our principles and have inculcated them into the local life.

"The enforcement of the law belongs to the enforcement officials of the government or of the several states. We hold no right to enforce the law, either upon bands of masked men nor other criminals. We claim, and strenuously endeavor to see, that all law violators, masked or unmasked, are brought to judgment and proper penalty inflicted.

"A klansman would vote (if he lived up and fully exemplified the spirit of klankraft) always for the man who could best serve his country, regardless of his race, creed or political affiliation.

"We do not advocate religious prejudice. We are an organization of Protestant Christians. We advocate Protestant Christianity, but not religious prejudice."

Asked regarding rumors concerning the eligibility of others than Protestants to be klansmen, he said:

"There is no possibility of the eligibility of membership being changed at all within a period of two years, and no change is contemplated or likely to be put into effect at all."

PARKER ATTACKS KLAN IN CHICAGO

Atlanta Constitution

Louisianan at "All Nations Rally," Charges Whitewash in Bastrop Grand Jury Probe.

Chicago, February 26.—Governor John M. Parker, principal speaker tonight at the opening session of a week of meetings known as "all nations rally," held under the auspices of the American Unity league in opposition to the Ku Klux Klan, bade his hearers adhere to the advice of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt. He said in part:

"Washington said: 'The very idea of the power and right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government. All obstructions to the execution of laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities are obstructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency.'

All Protected Alike.

"Jefferson, that great apostle of democracy, emphasized with all the power at his command, the purposes and intent of the constitution in declaring America to be a land where every one could express his religious and political views and who emphasized the fact that the constitution throws its protecting arm around alike Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Gentile, Hindu and Quaker.

"Our martyr president, Lincoln, whose glorious memory will remain in the hearts of his people for countless generations, repeatedly plead for fearless and fair enforcement of the law by the duly constituted authorities elected by the people themselves."

Of Roosevelt, who, the governor said, had been his personal friend, he said:

"He repeatedly stated that he regarded it wicked to array any class against class, religion against religion and that one of the wise things of the nation was the proviso in the constitution of every state that not a dollar of public funds should be appropriated for parochial schools of any creed, for the public schools belonged to all the people; therefore, they represented one of the greatest American assets to our future womanhood and manhood."

The advice of these men had been cast aside by the Ku Klux Klan, the governor asserted.

Tells of Disappearance.

The governor said that last August 28 Mrs. Richards, of Mer Rouge, called him by telephone and told of the disappearance of her husband, who, she said, had been taken from a barbecue at Bastrop, La., August 24. Later, he said, J. L. Daniel wrote to him telling of the disappearance of his son, Watt, a war veteran, who had been kidnaped by masked men. The district judge was asked to call the grand jury into special session at Bastrop, the governor said, and added:

"The report was a complete white-wash."

The grand jury had been composed of twelve men, nine of whom, the governor said, were active klansmen.

Then, the speaker said, he and Attorney General Coco of Louisiana, made a trip to Washington and laid the Mer Rouge case before the president and other officials and obtained the aid of the department of justice. A public hearing was held at Bastrop, with which the public was fully acquainted, the governor continued, and declared that should the new grand jury at Bastrop fail to return indictments Attorney General Coco would file informations against a large number of men mentioned in the public hearing and that special counsel would vigorously prosecute them.

Sims Attacks Klan.

St. Louis, February 26.—Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired, in an address here this afternoon attacked the Ku Klux Klan, and said that if legislation would not prove effective against the wearing of masks an open season might be declared for the klan and a bounty offered for their ears. He spoke before the local chamber of commerce.

ASSAILS MOREHOUSE CRIME

He Declares Klansmen Did the Killings and That "Klan Jury" Whitewashed Them.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—An appeal to Americans to organize in unmasking the Ku Klux Klan, and a warning that the Klan may soon subvert constituted Government by a "hostile mob of Kluckers acting as prosecutor, judge, jury, executioner, and permitting no defense," was voiced tonight by Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana in opening the week rally against the Klan in Chicago tonight.

"Every State in the Union should declare itself against masked men and mob violence in such unmistakable terms and with such severe penalties that none would dare wear the hood and robes that conceal murder and outrage under a traitorous pretense of law enforcement," Governor Parker said. "The Klan is endeavoring to tear asunder community ties and lifelong friendships by injecting into our lives every one of the issues against which Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt repeatedly warned us. The time has come for the most drastic action conceivable."

Governor Parker declared that every man connected with the murder of Richards and Daniel in Morehouse Parish, Louisiana, was a Klansman and that Klansmen in official positions had attempted a "whitewash" investigation and attempted to intimidate witnesses in the inquiry conducted by the State.

Quoting Theodore Roosevelt, his friend for twenty-five years, as saying it was "wicked" to attempt to array class against class or religion against religion in this country, Governor Parker said it was time for him to make a clear-cut statement regarding the Mer Rouge outrages. He said they were first brought to his attention by Mrs. Richards, wife of one of the victims, and then by the father of Daniel, who had himself been beaten by Klansmen.

Governor Parker said he asked the judge of the district to request the assistance of the District Attorney and Sheriff of Morehouse Parish in fixing responsibility. The Grand Jury, three-fourths of the members of which were Klansmen, made a report which was a complete white-wash, he added, and he directed Attorney General Coco of Louisiana to make an investigation because of the failure of the local authorities to act and obtained the assistance of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Denounces Morehouse Outrage.

"The splendid service of the Bureau of Investigation was shown at the hearing," Governor Parker continued, "and, when the cases are brought to trial, will show overwhelming proof not only as to the guilty parties, but establish the fact that every man charged with and guilty of the outrages in Morehouse Parish was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

"The American public is familiar with the ghastly details of that hearing. It is further familiar with the public report that even the new Grand Jury probably will be composed largely of Klansmen, and that the question of indictment is problematical. But the people have the assurance of the Attorney General that, indictment or no indictment, he will file information against a large number of thees men whom he and special counsel will prosecute.

"Law and order must and will prevail in Louisiana. It is inconceivable that any body of men working under cover of darkness, garbed in gown and cowl, should be permitted to rise superior to our legally constituted authorities and to the law.

"This prosecution is neither religious nor political. My whole life has been spent as a Presbyterian. For thirty-five years I have been a Mason and my sons are both Masons and war veterans with foreign service.

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan have as much right to organize as the Knights of Columbus, the Masons, the B'nai Brith and the Pythians, but neither the Klan nor any other organization has the moral right or the legal right to work under cover of darkness and mask to commit outrages and crimes that take us back to the Middle Ages and the days of barbarism.

"We cannot at this late date commit the crime of mixing religion and politics, tearing families and communities asunder and creating untold bitterness and discord where peace and good-will should prevail. Every State and the National Government should declare against masked men and mob violence in such unmistakable terms and with such severe penalties that none would incur the risk.

"Members of the great secret societies referred to above gladly publish the names of their members, and many of the members of these organizations wear over their heart on the lapel of their coats the pin and emblem of their order. The Klan, on the contrary, endeavors to be absolutely secret as to who its members are, to create an air of mystery and terror.

"Every man implicated in these outrages was a member of the Klan. The Sheriff of Morehouse parish, who sat by and saw these men carried off in direct violation of his sworn oath of office, was an official of the Klan. The Sheriff's deputies, the District Attorney and many others were members of the Klan.

"Officials of the order have pledged themselves repeatedly in fine sounding phrases to assist in maintaining law and order. The records of Morehouse Parish show that not a single one of them even in the remotest degree rendered any help but, on the contrary, did all in their power to intimidate witnesses, choke off the investigation and prevent the light of publicity from reaching the American people.

Never Helped to Enforce Law.

"Not one single time, since my inauguration of Louisiana, has the Ku Klux Klan or the Knights of the Invisible Empire given me the least help in enforcing the law. On the conrtary, time after time, the Klansmen have terrorized communities, have threatened and in some instances beaten people and in others have committed crimes with such secrecy and fiendish[illegible]ss that it has been impossible to ferret [illegible]t, convict and send to the penitentiary or hang the criminals.

"Interferring as it does with the orderly conduct of constitutional American government, the Ku Klux Klan is a menace to the political liberties of the people. It seeks to enforce the law when there are constituted authorities for that purpose. It strikes at freedom of religious conscience, when the American Constitution guarantees that freedom. It pretends that it is its mission to punish lesser offenses and to do this commits greater crimes. Founded on the mere excuse of moral reform, it has become the deadly enemy of law and order, an instrument of terrible vengeance, a form of secret government that seeks to justify mob law in its most deadly and blighting shape. The acts of the mob at Mer Rouge were deliberate, c[illegible] [illegible]essary. They show to wha[illegible] [illegible]m may be put."

Govern[illegible] [illegible]rrived at noon and was me[illegible] [illegible]ain by a Reception Committ[illegible] [illegible]he American Unity League, [illegible] [illegible]om the City Council and a larg[illegible] [illegible]ry of moving picture and news[illegible] [illegible] photographers. Governor Parker was guest of honor at a banquet at the Lexington Hotel prior to the mass meeting. Plans for a national permanent fight against the Klan were discussed at the banquet and a national anti-Klux convention probably will be called in Chicago.

Them ass meeting was presided over by Chief Justice Michael McKinley of the Criminal Courts, who has barred Klansmen from his juries. Preceding Governor Parker former Senator Leray [illegible]rcy of Mississippi told the audience [illegible] Klan was not fighting race or religion, but was attempting to have hooded mobs control every judicial [illegible]rand of local, State and National Governments.

Negroes in Northern Industry

Secretary of Labor Davis takes notice of the migration of negroes from the South to the industrial districts of the North and East. While the movement is not as large as during the war, it is important enough to affect the labor supply situation, the secretary believes.

If the negroes are find ng industrial opportunity in the North, let them take advantage of it. Since the North has been so solicitous of the negro's welfare, it should welcome these Southern negro immigrants and see that they are given a square deal in employment. The unskilled work in many industries can doubtless be done as well by negroes as by cheap white labor, most of which is of foreign origin. And these opportunities for employment should be given first to the native American population. Negroes have a claim to employment of which they are capable superior to that of aliens seeking admission to the country.

Hamilton Post 2-10-23

By introducing the negroes into industry more extensively, the demand for alien labor, and the consequent demand for a modification of the immigration law, may be abated. The congressional committee having the immigration bill in charge has agreed to a reduction in the quotas of the various nations furnishing immigrants, so that the probability is that immigration under the new law will be about one-third less than it is under the present law.

If the large industries can secure sufficient negro labor from the South they should not be further concerned over the new immigration policy.

Poll Large Vote for Commissioner in St. Louis—Election in April.

East St. Louis, Ill., February 28. Interest in the local political situation today turned to the municipal election to be held in April following the primary yesterday in which three candidates alleged to have been supported by the Ku Klux Klan were nominated as city commissioners, and two others supposed klan candidates were defeated.

The Rev. William R. Evans, Ralph Cook and August M. Eggmann, are the three victorious candidates who were said to have been indorsed by the klan. They polled three of the four largest votes for commissioner. The defeated candidates, who were declared to have been included in the alleged "slate" of five put up by the klan, were M. L. Harris, for mayor and S. F. Porter for commissioner.

Widespread interest was focused on the result of the primary during which three men were arrested on charges of distributing anonymous political circulars, which urged the defeat of 18 candidates, said to be Catholics or said to have been supported by Catholic organizations.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch printed an article stating that the alleged klan "slate" had pledged itself if elected, to appoint Protestants and klansmen to public office here.

All members of the "slate" with the exception of the Rev. Evans denied they had soliciated the klan endorsement.

A mayor and four commissioners will be chosen in the April election.

PLAN ANTI-KLAN DRIVE

National Convention Will Be Held in Chicago

Montgomery Advertiser

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—A national convention, to discuss the possibility of an organized country-wide campaign against the Ku Klux Klan will be held in Chicago some time this spring, the American Unity League announced today after a two-day anti-Klan rally here.

3-1-23

Plans to continue the rally through the week were abandoned when Bishop Michael Gallagher, scheduled to talk tonight was unable to attend and when Governor Al Smith, of New York, scheduled to speak later in the week sent word that legislative business made it inadvisable for him to leave Albany. Governor Parker of Louisiana, who opened the rally left tonight for home.

TOLERANCE, ANTI-KLAN ORGAN, APPEARS TODAY

No Names of New York Members in First Issue, but Publication of List Is Promised.

New York Times 1/13/23

The first issue of the New York edition of Tolerance, the organ of the American Unity League, previously published only in Chicago, will appear today. The league was formed to combat the Ku Klux Klan and Tolerance, according to its announcement, will "voice a protest against racial and religious discriminations."

Although previous announcement had been made that the League, following its custom in Chicago, would fight the Klan here by publishing the names of New York City Klansmen, no such names are published in the first issue, the only two persons being named as alleged members being two prominent res'dents of Chicago.

Publication of the names of New York Klansmen in future issues was promised by Grady K. Rutledge, secretary of the League and editor of the New York edition of Tolerance.

"In Chicago, where the plan of exposing the individual members was first worked out, Tolerance has published the names of 5,000 Klan members," he said. "So positive has been the proof of this membership that Tolerance has not had make a single retraction nor face an ion for damages."

n article in the magazine charges the Klan is starting a membership e here. The article asserts that the n leaders do not expect to wield at political influence here, but hope aise funds to carry on their propa- a in sections where the proportion ewish, Catholic and foreign-born ns is not so large.

Chicago Opposed To Retaining Klan Members on Pay Roll

Atlanta Constitution 1-19-23

Chicago, January 18.—By a vote of 56 to 2, the city council was on record today as opposed to retaining members of the Ku Klux Klan on the city pay roll.

The vote was taken yesterday when the city council was asked to order the suspension of William H. Green, a city fireman and an alleged member of the klan.

Green recently had been questioned by an aldermanic investigating committee regarding his alleged connections with the organization. At that time he declared he had resigned from the klan. He will face trial before the city civil service commission January 26.

Robert J. Mulcahy, alderman acting as chairman of the council's committee, declared during the session that a policeman had threatened his life for his activities against the secret order. He said he would divulge the facts later.

John P. Garner, one of the dissenting aldermen, referred to alleged klan activities in Morehouse parish Louisiana.

"A friend of mine who just came back from Louisiana tells me that he met Skipwith and Dr. McKoin and that they are a fine lot of people," Alderman Garner said. "The whole trouble down there is politics."

Skipwith is the cyclops of the klan in Morehouse parish, and Dr. McKoin, alleged klan leader, went back to Louisiana after he recently was charged with murder.

BARS KLANSMEN FROM GRAND JURY SERVICE

Chicago Daily News 1-22-23

Chief Justice McKinley Declares Ku-Klux Oath Makes Them Ineligible.

With a sharp denial that Ku-Klux klansmen, proponents of 100 per cent Americanism, could qualify under the United States constitution as attaches of an American court, Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley to-day barred the knights of the invisible empire from the January grand jury.

Judge McKinley departed from the usual procedure of questioning the venire in a body concerning its qualifications for jury service. Instead he called each man separately for examination and then demanded, point blank: "Are you a member of the organization known as the Ku-Klux klan?"

When some of the prospective jurors failed to answer he announced that he took silence "as a sign of negation," and that any klansman who failed to declare himself would be held in contempt of court. In stating his attitude Judge McKinley attacked the klan oath.

Statement of Judge McKinley.

The judge said:

"As chief justice of the Criminal court of Cook county it is my duty to safeguard the rights and liberties of all citizens, regardless of race, creed or color, and in doing so that duty begins with the impaneling of the grand jury. The court recognizes this responsibility and intends to inoculate against an insidious influence masquerading as 100 per cent Americanism.

"American courts are to protect all classes of Americans. The keystone of our court system is the constitutional guaranty of fair and impartial trial by jury. That guaranty should and does extend to the grand jury.

"Poisonous prejudices born of bigotry, racial hatred and intolerance if carried into a quasijudicial body constitute a menace to a considerable class of citizens. There are no such divisions of citizenship and all Americans are amenable to due process of law and entitled to its benefits.

"Grand jury service is not a right but a duty [illegible] which no citizen can be called upon to qualify. Can a member of the organization known as the Ku-Klux klan, bound by an oath of allegiance to an invisible empire, sworn to secrecy should information come to him connecting a klansman with the commission of crime, qualify as a fair and impartial juror?

"That is the question before the court. Mindful of the fact that the only opportunity to inquire as to the qualifications and fitness of a grand juror is that which is now presented to the court, I have directed the clerk to swear each and every venireman to answer all questions concerning your competency to serve as members of the January grand jury."

Judge McKinley stated that the January grand jury would be of especial importance, as it would have to deal with the reindictment of the school board graft defendants and the report of the Juvenile Protective association charging that vice is prevalent in Chicago with official sanction.

Judge Davis Bars Klansmen.

Reiterating his intention to bar all members of the Ku-Klux klan from jury service in his court, Judge Joseph B. David, chief justice of the Superior court, this morning began the hearing of criminal cases in the county building.

In his address to the jury Judge David said: "Every person is entitled to a fair and impartial trial, without regard to race, religion, creed or color. Any one who belongs to an organization such as the klan, which teaches racial hatred or religious bigotry, is not wanted on a jury in this court."

NATIONAL RALLY CALLED.

National Figures Will Address Meeting to Organize Klan Opposition.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—An "all-nations rally," to form the basis of a national organization to oppose the Ku Klux Klan and kindred organizations, will be held at the Coliseum here beginning Feb. 26 and continuing for one week, Patrick H. O'Donnell, chairman of the American Unity League, announced tonight.

Gov. John M. Parker of Louisiana has accepted an invitation to make the opening address Feb. 26, and Gov. Al Smith of New York is expected to speak, Mr. O'Donnell announced. Other prominent speakers representing various races and creeds will be invited to address sessions of the mass meeting, it was announced.

"This is expected to mark the beginning of a national movement," he said, "to harmonize all races and religions in the common purpose of breaking down the Ku Klux Klan and kindred organizations that undertake to overthrow the separation of church and state, freedom of conscience, equality before the law and freedom of men to act."

Following the meetings here Mr. O'Donnell declared that similar meetings would be held in other principal cities and that a national organization opposing what he termed the "treasonable principles" of the klan will result.

Gov. Parker's letter accepting an invitation to address the all-nations rally said:

"In my judgment every right-thinking man owes a patriotic duty to awaken the people of this nation to the dangers which confront them when any invisible empire seeks to rise supreme to our laws and is engaged in an earnest effort to mix politics and religion, raise friction and bitterness between those of different religions and tear down the civilization that has taken us centuries to build up."

Assail Barring of Klan on Juries.

New York Times 1/31/23

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—The action of Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley of the Chicagod Criminal Court in barring members of the Ku Klux Klan from juries was condemned today by Methodist ministers of the city and by a resolution declared such action to be in the nature of class legislation and was "virtually depriving klansmen of their rights of citizenship.

LEADER OF KLAN ASSAILS MULCAHY

Hiram Wesley Evans Declares in Statement Monday, People of Chicago Are "Sleeping Over Volcano."

Atlanta Georgia

Chicago, January 29.—Declarations that Alderman Robert Mulcahy, chairman of the special council committee investigating the connection of city employees with the Ku Klux Klan, was trying to avoid the klan issue, and that the people of Chicago are "sleeping over a volcano," were made today by Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the klan. He declared that Alderman Mulcahy was laying emphasis on the claim that Fireman William Green denied he was a member of the klan at one time and later asked a hearing on the ground that he was a klansman when the only issue was whether Green was a klansman.

Green did resign from the klan and so was not a member but was asked by the klan to recall the resignation so the klan issue could be threshed out, Mr. Evans said.

He said he wanted Mulcahy to come out on the first charge against Green, that of being a klansman, and to prove that the oath Green took as a klansman was unAmerican and disqualified him from public service.

"The klan does not want to excite race prejudice but to eradicate it," he continued, "but Chicago has a racial situation which the citizens of Chicago must solve, not the klan. The people of Chicago are sleepin over a volcano now."

In regard to his last statemen he said recent investigations wou indicate what he meant.

KLAN CHARGES INTIMIDATION.

New York, January 29.—Paul S Etheridge, imperial counsel of the Ku Klux Klan, today charged in a statement that attendants in the Gates avenue court in Brooklyn had staged a fake riot outside the cell of eight alleged klansmen, arrested Thursday night, in order to intimidate them.

Frank Burke, a court attendant, and other officials flatly denied the charges of Mr. Etheridge, who asserted that members of the order were being persecuted in New York City, and that Magistrate Dale had no right to denounce the klan at the arraignment of the prisoners on charges of having blackjacks and whisky in the automobile in which they were arrested.

Describing the riot alleged to have been faked, Mr. Etheridge said:

"The treatment of the men, from the time they were locked in their cells in police headquarters, was not that which is ordinarily accorded convicted criminals.

"The attendants at the Gates avenue court endeavored to scare or intimidate the men by staging a fake riot outside their cell, throwing bot tles and cans down the corridor ir front of the cell, one attendant ever faking a telephone call to police headquarters for reserves in order to quell 'a mob of 2,000 people outside the court who are trying to get at these Ku Kluxers.'

"Another attendant in negro dialect shouting 'let me get at these Ku Kluxers; I'll tear them to pieces.'

"The action of Magistrate Dale is regarded by the klan as one of the most astonishing evidences of official bias and prejudice against the organization that has ever come to its notice. When the eight men were first arraigned the actual charges against them, the charges constituting only misdemeanors, were not the subject of the magistrate's speech, for Judge Dale, instead of delivering any opinion concerning the charges themselves, launched into a vehement denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan, simply because it was inferred that the eight men had earlier in the evening attended a Ku Klux klan meeting."

Calls Klan Menace.

Greenwood, S. C., January 29.—Assailing the Ku Klux Klan in his charge to the Greenwood county grand jury here today, County Judge C. C. Featherstone, who is holding his last term of court before taking up his duties as circuit judge in the eighth judicial circuit to which he was elected recently by the legisture, declared that "never has any organization been such a menace."

"God save us from the K. K. K.," said the judge.

"This K. K. K. has been organized because some felt that they had to take the law into their own hands. Their excuse is that courts and juries are not enforcing the law. Never has any organization been such a menace. It gives opportunity for a few cowards to punish their enemies with it. Unless checked, it won't be long before there will be no government at all."

Imperial Wizard Evans Says Alleged Brooklyn Klansmen Should Be Punished if Guilty.

New York Times

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—The selection of Chicago as the scene for a trial of the Ku Klux Klan before the bar of public opinion and a judicial body was indicated here today by developments since the arrival of imperial officers of the organization.

William H. Green, whose suspension from the Fire Department for his alleged Klan membership brought the officers here to challenge the action, yesterday repudiated former statements that he had resigned from the order. He admitted his membership and asserted he wished to stand trial for suspension before the Chicago Civil Service Commission on that ground.

"We have decided to make an issue of this case to prove to the world that the Ku Klux Klan is a law-abiding and legal organization and to prove that any city employe has a perfectly legal right to belong to it if he wants to join," Green said.

Although he declined to say whether he had been requested to make that statement by the imperial officers, it was known that Green had been in conference with them.

At Green's suggestion Fire Chief Seyferlich drew a charge against him for presentation to the Civil Service Commission, which, in part, reads as follows:

"That the said William H. Green, fireman, is an admitted member of the Ku Klux Klan and that he has subscribed to an oath of the said organization which is contrary to the provisions of the Constitution of the United States of America and which is evidence of his unfitness to remain in the service of the City of Chicago."

The Civil Service Commission said the charge would come before it for hearing Feb. 2, when a date for Green's trial probably would be set.

Hiram Wesley Evans, Imperial Wizard, of Atlanta, stated today that he was watching with interest the situation in Brooklyn, N. Y., where alleged members of the Klan were found with blackjacks and liquor in a police raid in which they were arrested. If the charges should be proved, he said, such Klansmen should be punished the same as any citizen. Meantime he was awaiting fuller information.

He refused to say whether he would appear at the hearing on Feb. 2 in the case of Green. "They say that they will produce a Klan oath at this hearing," said the Wizard. "The Klan also will produce its oath. If these oaths differ then the case will fall flat."

Withholds Plans of Intervention in Alleged Chicago Discriminations.

Atlanta Ga Constitution

Chicago, January 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, declared today that he was watching with interest the situation in Brooklyn, N. Y., where alleged members of the klan were alleged to have blackjacks and liquor in their possession. If the charges should be proved, he said, then such klansmen should be punished the same as any citizen.

The wizard said the Brooklyn charges had not yet been proved and he was awaiting fuller information.

As to the Chicago situation where a city council special committee is investigating to determine whether city employes are members of the klan, Evans declared he would remain here until the matter was finally decided.

Keeps Plans Secret.

He refused to say in what manner the klan would intervene or whether he would appear at the hearing on February 2 which Fireman William Green asked, so that he might be tried by the city civil service commission on the charge that he was a klansman.

"They say that they will produce a klan oath at this hearing," said the wizard. "The klan also will produce its oath. If these oaths differ then the case will fall flat."

The wizard and three other imperial officers of the "invisible empire" came here Thursday announcing they had come to make a stand and have it publicly determined whether klansmen could be discharged from the city service merely because they were members of the organization.

MEN ARE RELEASED ON BONDS.

New York, January 27.—Robert Fisher and Thomas Jones, arrested Thursday night with six other men after a Ku Klux Klan meeting in Brooklyn, today were released in bail of $1,500 each, pending a hearing February 1. The others furnished bail yesterday and were released.

The eight were arrested soon after they left the Ku Klux Klan meeting in a limousine. The automobile did not carry any lights, police said, and was caught when forced to stop to avert an accident at a corner.

The police said they found blackjacks, a quart of whisky and a klan robe in the machine. Disorderly conduct charges were preferred against all the men while Fisher, said to be the owner of the whiskey, drew an additional charge of violation of the state prohibition enforcement law.

Chiefs Probe Chicago Case. Evans to Speak on Bastrop Hearing.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Chicago, January 25.—Imperial Wizard Hiram Wesley Evans, who, with other imperial officers of the invisible empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, arrived here today to investigate reported action by the city council against klansmen, declared tonight that the klan had discarded its policy of indifference to attacks and in the future will vigorously defend the klan and its members against unwarranted attacks or discrimination. Atlanta Ga

Action in the case of reports from Chicago that firemen and other city employees were discharged because of their affiliation with the klan will depend on how true he finds these reports to be, the imperial wizard announced. He refused to outline any plan of action until he and other officers had more thoroughly investigated local conditions.

Comment on the Mer Rouge, La., investigation would not be made, he said, until he had time to analyze the statements of state officials of Louisiana carried in press dispatches during the day. Klan officials had remained away from Mer Rouge, he said, because he did not wish to hamper the investigation in any way. The klan's side of the case, he said, will be stated tomorrow.

To Answer Charges.

The reported action of the Chicago council committee against city employees because they might be klansmen was the first tangible action upon which he could make an answer to the charges against his organization, Evans declared.

"We will throw the entire weight of our membership behind any klansman, regardless of who he is, if denied the ordinary rights of citizenship," he declared. "The same power will be used in behalf of a man who is not a klansman, but who may suffer because he is believed to be a member of the klan."

"The vicious, unfounded reports involving the klan as an organization in activities the klan deplores equally as much as every law-abiding citizen can and will not be suffered by the national organization as a reason for discrediting any honest public servants who, perchance, might be klansmen."

The imperial wizard is accompanied on his investigation trip here by Edward Young Clarke, imperial giant; F. L. Savage, imperial klaliff, and Paul Etheridge, imperial klonsel.

Illinois Has Taken Up The Cudgel Against the Klan

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 7.—Two bills against the Ku Klux Klan have been introduced, both by Chicago members. The better one of the two, introduced by Representative Adelbert H. Roberts, colored member from the Third District, is expected to have a chance of accomplishing its end. It describes who may be classified as Klansmen, and what is understood to be their activities. Specific punishment is asked in the way of fines or imprisonment or both, and the entire bill points to a definite end, with, in the minds of experienced legislators, a measure of hope being enacted.

Firemen in Klan Order Are Caught

Chicago Defender
1/13/23

The city council has scored its first victory in its effort to cure the community of boils born of Klan infection. The council committee, headed by Alderman Mulcahy, has procured the retirement of one fireman, a Klan kleagle, and the transfer of four others, one of whom is a fire captain.

The men were treated in an order issued by Fire Marshal Arthur F. Seyferlich. The men transferred were Capt. William Hind, Gilbert Nelson, Albert Peterson and Joseph Gozdicke. The alleged kleagle retired was George Green.

The next move of the aldermanic committee, of which Louis B. Anderson is a member, is expected to be directed against the police. Patrolmen in a station only three blocks removed from the engine house at Chicago and Laramie avenues are also charged with being affiliated with the Klan.

Although the council's committee has been successful thus far in proving its charges, it announces that it is not prepared to let the firemen go yet. They believe that there is still much Ku Klux activity in the department and they are going to destroy the whole of it.

This fight against the Klan began when Alderman Mulcahy made the charges in the council chamber against the masked organization. It has been a hard battle to go ahead with the work. Many influences have worked to impede the committee's progress.

It is proposed that the committee enlarge the scope of its work to include Klan activities in every manner displayed in the city.

Representative Adelbert H. Roberts of the Third senatorial district has introduced a bill proposing prison for Ku Klux Klansmen. It is the first direct action that has been taken by the Illinois lawmakers to deal a knockout blow to the activities of the order within this state. 1-20-23

It would amend the criminal law to provide fines of $500 to $2,000, prison for 5 to 14 years or both for masked persons committing felonies; would fine masked "sluggers" $100 to $1,000, imprison them from 1 to 5 years, or both; provide $1,000 to $2,000 fines or up to 10 years in prison, or both, for masked gunmen; fine masked creators of disturbances up to $1,000, or send to the county jail for six months to one year any person appearing in public in klan garb, "with an evil or wicked purpose."

Three Arrested For Distributing Alleged Klan Campaign Posters

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., Feb. 26.—W. J. Gillen, and Harry Weeks, who were arrested last Saturday midnight with Benjamin O. Morrow on charges of distributing anonymous election campaign matter, waived preliminary examination today and were bound over to the grand jury under bond of $1,000 each. The hearing of Morrow was set for March 1.

Morrow has admitted under oath, according to Chief of Police Mulconnery, that he was a "precinct committeeman" for the Ku Klux Klan, being paid $10 a day, and that the Klan had "committeemen" in each of the 61 precincts of the city. The campaign circulars, the men were said to have been distributing urged defeat of the candidates who are said to be Catholics or to have Catholic support.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been publishing news articles that the Klan has indorsed the following "slate" for the primary election tomorrow at which two candidates for the mayoralty and eight for city commissionships are to be nominated: M. L. Harris for mayor and Ralph Cook, August Eggmann, S. F. Porter, and the Rev. William Revans, for commissioners. Harris, Cook, Eggman and Porter have denied they solicited the indorsement of the Klan.

ILLINOIS PASSES BILL TO PROHIBIT MASKED IDENTITY

Atlanta Constitution 4-19-23

Springfield, Ill., April 18.—Appearance in public places of any person masked, robed or hooded to conceal identity is prohibited in the Roberts bill passed by the house of representatives today, 107 to 3.

Representative Roberts, republican, Chicago, declared "we must destroy the Ku Klux Klan, or it will destroy us."

Represntative Roberts said his life had been threatened after he introduced the bill.

...es Anti-Klan Paper For $100,000 Damages

Associated Press Report.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Suit for $100,000 damages was filed today by Louis J. Behan, lawyer and master in chancery, against "Tolerance," an anti-Ku Klux Klan publication issued by the American Unity Publishing company. He charged slander on the grounds that his name was printed as a member of the klan.

KLAN STARTS CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN IN WINDY CITY

3/17/23

San Antonio Tex.

Chicago.—Activities of members of the Ku Klux Klan to put an end to the wide-open vice conditions existing in this city, have at last brought results and the entire police force has received orders to get on its toes and clean up the red light sections of the city. The order is so drastic that it is likely that 3,000 of the 4,575 men on the force will be assigned to the vice squad until the city is ridden of its moral lepers crime runs rampant as the result of his order the public will still hold him responsible.

Chief of Police Charles C. Fitsmorris has directed police captains to place patrolmen at the front and back doors of every known vice resort in the city. Klansmen who have been carrying on an unofficial investigation declare that there are over 500 disorderly houses in the city and the assignment of police to guard them would take nearly three-fifths of the entire police force.

Chief Fitsmorris has declined to comment upon the order but was content to say that the drastic order speaks for itself.

Police captains were warned that no excuses would be accepted for failure to comply with the order to close up the objectionable houses, and stations found crippled by the necessity of detailing men to the work would be given reserves from other stations.

The order came after Chief Justice McKinley of the Criminal Court had indicated that the March Grand Jury would be ordered to dig into vice conditions in the city, its two predecssors having failed to bring any indictments.

Chief Fitsmorris' stand is said to be that Chicago was as orderly as it could be without turning the entire force loose on vice work and allowing other crime to run rampant.

Chief Justice McKinley said that "if the chief sees fit to assign all 4,500 patrolmen to guard one flat, that is his responsibility. If the chief's intention to co-operate in a sane manner, he deserves the commendation of the better element of the public."

KLAN, ANTI-KLAN LEADERS CLASH AT CHICAGO HEARING

Case of Discharged Firemen Up Before Civil Service Commission

3/20/23.

Houston Post

Associated Press Report.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 19.—H. K. Ramsey of Atlanta, Ga., imperial kligraff of the Ku Klux Klan, and Robert E. Shephard, treasurer of the American Unity League and manager of "Tolerance," a publication opposed to the klan, were the principal witnesses today at a hearing before the city civil service commission of charges filed against Otto Novotny, who with William Greene, was discharged from the city fire department for being klansmen.

Repartee between attorneys and witnesses kept the hearing room in an uproar most of the afternoon. Mr. Ramsey submitted what he said was the official oath of the klan, the prosecution having charged that a member of the klan would be prohibited by the oath from revealing another member if he were guilty of any crime except treason, rape or malicious murder, these three being excepted in the oath.

Mr. Ramsey defined the klan as a patriotic organization," and declared a person can not join unless he believes in the Christian religion. Roman Catholics and Jews are not precluded, he said, adding that they preclude themselves. Negroes are precluded because the organization is caucasian, he said.

Mr. Shephard testified that "Tolerance" hired several investigators to seek out the klan membership and secrets. His investigators had been going to klan meetings since last June, he said, and added that his publication had printed the names of over 5000 klansmen. Shephard said he knew the signs, passwords, signals of distress and other secrets of the organization.

"Well, give the klan signal of distress because they are going to need it," Attorney Patrick O'Donnell of the prosecution said.

Shepard placed the first finger of his right hand in the center of his forehead and drew it down over the right eye to the center of his right cheek. The hearing will be resumed tomorrow.

Second Ward, Chicago, Goes Democratic.

Louisville News

Republican Nominee For Mayor Ku-Klux, Charge.

Louisville, Ky.

Anderson and Jackson, Colored Republicans, Win Council Seats.

4-7-23

Chicago, April 4.—The Second Ward here, black belt like the old 10th Ward in Louisville, Ky., went Democratic yesterday.

The main reason being that Lueder, Republican nominee for Mayor, was charged with being allied with the Ku Klux Klan, and backed by the Chicago Tribune, Negro hating Republican paper, and as postmaster of Chicago, he had been unfair and unkind to Colored employees.

That he was knifed by Colored and white Republicans under former Bill Thompson's lead, is shown by this fact: Four years ago when Bill Thompson, the Negro's friend, ran for Mayor the Second Ward went Republican by 12,000 majority, this year tiwent Democratic by 7,000 majority, yet elected Louis Anderson, Colored Republican, Councilman. Robert R. Jackson, Colored Republican, also was elected.

Judge Dever, Democratic candidate for Mayor, made a strong bid for Colored support and in speeches to Colored audiences promised to do more for the Colored people than any Mayor Chicago ever had including Bill Thompson.

Roscoe Simmons, erstwhile Louisvillian, who ran for delegate at large from Kentucky to the National Republican Convention, lives here now. He boasts he would vote for a yellow dog on the Republican ticket, and through the Chicago Defender he begged Colored voters to support Luder in spite of the fact that such leaders as Bishop A. J. Carly, Oscar DePriest and the CHICAGO WHIP, declared he was an enemy to the race. But Colored voters paid no attention to Roscoe and refused to vote for a Republican reputed to be a Ku Klux, and who as postmaster had shown his hand.

SPREADING KLAN DIRT GETS 3 IN TROUBLE

Indicted for Circulating "Scurrilous" Matter.

The Commercial Appeal Memphis Tenn. 4-19-23

(By The Associated Press.)

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., April 18.—Benjamin O. Morrow, Harry Weeks and W. J. Gillen have been indicted by the St. Clair County grand jury here, it was learned today, for distributing "anonymous and scurrilous" campaign matter, alleged to have been issued by the Ku Klux Klan preceding the East St. Louis municipal primary election Feb. 27.

The three were arrested the night of Feb. 24 and a large amount of literature attacking Catholic candidates and the police department, was confiscated. The klan had a ticket in the election. Two of the five alleged klan candidates were nominated and one of the two was elected a city commissioner, but he subsequently repudiated the klan.

The indictments charge a felony, and Weeks was indicted on seven counts, Gillen on five and Morrow on four counts.

Following his arrest Morrow made a confession to police in which he asserted he was employed as a "precinct committeeman" by the klan, that klansmen took an oath "sealed with blood" to war on Catholics, Jews and negroes, and that on receiving a certain pass word they were to assemble "prepared for an emergency."

Later Morrow appeared at East St. Louis police headquarters and asked protection, saying klansmen had threatened him for the disclosures.

Alleged Klansmen Lose East St. Louis Election

Associated Press Report.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., April 14.—The four candidates for the board of education, alleged to have been endorsed by the Ku Klux Klan, were defeated in a municipal election here today, according to complete unofficial returns tonight. The four successful candidates who will serve for three years, are: Charles E. Reid, J. M. Sullivan; Henry G. Miller and Gertrude Geary Huitt. E. W. Cannaday was unopposed for president of the board.

The candidates said to have received the endorsement of the klan, are: Charles Prall; James C. Henry; J. J. Zumwalt Jr., and A. B. Coughill. There were twelve candidates in the field.

Names of Alleged Ku Klux Members On Court Record

Chicago, May 25.—Names of 12,000 alleged members of the Ku Klux Klan in Indianapolis and adjoining Indiana territory became a matter of court record open to the public Friday when they were filed in federal court here by attorneys for the Tolerance Publishing company, which is fighting an injunction restraining it from publishing the list.

Seeking to have the injunction dissolved, the Tolerance faction also charged through affidavits that the Indianapolis klansmen are engaged in a criminal conspiracy to boycott Jews, negroes and Roman Catholics in all business dealings.

Denial is made that the membership list was obtained by theft.

"This list was compiled to enable this affiant to assist in carrying out the purpose of said conspiracy. "The prayer of the petitioners says, "that the same was kept on the desk in the klavern, so the members could ascertain the names of recent members and determine which of them resided in his neighborhood; that if said examiner should be a business man, he could then find out those who did not trade with him, but might be trading with those opposed to the klan, and being possessed of the name of said klanship persuade the members of the klan to continue all business connections and relations with said member or members of the klan alone, to their financial benefit, and to the great detriment and financial loss and injury of said other persons."

Court Enjoins Publication Of Ku Klux Klan Membership

CHICAGO, May 16.—Federal Judge Carpenter issued today a temporary injunction restraining the Tolerance Publishing Company from publishing the names of persons alleged to be members of the Ku Klux Klan in Indianapolis and the State of Indiana. The Judge referred the matter to a master in chancery to determine how the lists of names, which attorneys for the Ku Klux Klan allege were stolen, came into possession of the publishing company.

The company published Tolerance, which is opposed to the Ku Klux Klan. It also is preparing, according to attorieqs for the Klan, to publish a book entitled "Who Is Your Neighbor?"

Klan counsel allege that the lists were stolen and that the publishing company has no right to publish them.

Unity League Protests On Klan Use of Mails

(By The Chicago Tribune Commercial Appeal Leased Wire.)

CHICAGO, May 9.—The American Unity League has protested to President Harding against the use of the United States mails to spread the doctrines of the Ku Klux Klan. The Unity League which was formed to oppose the klan bases its protest on a statement attributed to Abraham Lincoln which is printed on the outside of the envelopes sent through the mails. On the envelope is a profile of Lincoln and around it is a statement in which Lincoln is alleged to have predicted a bloody conflict coming from Rome.

In its letter to Mr. Harding the Unity League says: "It is needless to say that this statement is the purest fabrication and has been repudiated by Robert Lincoln, now living, but the iniquity which we protest is that the public mails be used as a vehicle to disseminate that false slander not only against Catholics, but all the fair minded people and particularly against the memory of the great man to whom these false sentiments are attributed."

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY CHARGED TO KU KLUX

Opponents Seek Perpetual Injunction Against Klan.

CHICAGO, May 18.—Answers charging a criminal conspiracy on the part of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and seeking a perpetual injunction against the klan were filed in federal district court today by the Tolerance Publishing Company and by Patrick H. O'Donnell, counsel for the American Unity League, an organization formed to oppose the klan.

The answers were filed in the klan suit in which a temporary injunction was issued recently by Federal Judge Carpenter enjoining the Tolerance Publishing Company from publishing a list of 12,500 names of persons said to be on the klan membership list in Indiana.

O'Donnell, who is an attorney, declared that his answer and application for a permanent injunction was in the form of a cross-bill broad enough to permit any person in the United States who has been persecuted by commercial boycott, religious bigotry or racial hatred to intervene in the suit. Mr. O'Donnell said it would permit the intervention of relatives of Thomas Richard and Watt Daniel, alleged to have been slain by a hooded band in Morehouse Parish, Louisiana.

Mr. O'Donnell telegraphed George E. D. Peddy of Houston, Texas, who is contesting for Senator Mayfield's seat in the United States Senate; Gov. Parker, who caused the investigation of the Morehouse Parish deaths to be made, and Leroy Percy of Greenville, Miss., and others, inviting them to intervene in the suit. The Tolerance Publishing Company in its answer charged that the Ku Klux Klan is an illegal organization formed for the purpose of injuring, threatening and oppressing members of the Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths, and that the klansmen were organized to go in disguise on the highways of the United States to hinder the free use of rights which are common privileges.

To Bar Klan From Illinois State Fair Grounds

Associated Negro Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. June 13. The use by the Ku Klux of the State Fair Grounds for initiation purposes brought an investigation by a legislative committee Thursday, which brought Governor Len Small before it as a witness. The Governor denied being a member of the Klan, and said he knew nothing about them but that if the committee so recommended he would issure orders to the effect that it never happen again. One representative, called a witness a liar, when the witness, A. R. Livingston, assistant secretary of the Illinois Senate, defended the Klan, saying they barred no applicant on account of religion or race. Representative Roberts of Chicago, a colored member of the legislature, arose and said:

"I am an American citizen and college graduate. Please bring me an application for membership in the Ku Klux Klan, tomorrow." Mr. Roberts is still waiting.

K.K.K. Anti Mask Bill O. K.'d By Illinois Senate

Associated Press Report.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 18.—Receiving the exact number of votes making the constitutional majority, the drastic anti-mask bill directed against the Ku Klux Klan was passed by the Illinois senate tonight. The vote was 26 to 1, with two senators voting present, and about 20 other members absenting themselves from the chamber while the roll was called.

Senator Boehme, democrat, Chicago, voted for the bill, but remarked that it would apply to children who masquerade on Halloween, and that therefore it was "nonsense."

Penalties for disturbing the peace, kidnapping, and assault and battery are increased for any one who so violates the law while robed or hooded to conceal identity.

Colored Representative Applies For Klan Membership

Representative A. H. Roberts, of Chicago, and member of the Illinois House at Springfield, asked a State employe under fire of the committee quizzing the Ku Klux Klan activities, since he was a college graduate, World War veteran, legislator, and 100% American, if he could secure him an application for membership. The question got Representative Roberts in the paper, but not in the Klan. We will say he is fearless anyway.

STATE ROAD-POLICE BILL PASSES HOUSE

Creation of 125 Constabulary Jobs Fought by Civil-Service Friends.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—Rush of business in the closing hours of the house sessions is responsible to-day for Illinois having a state police bill. It is not much like the one killed a few weeks ago in the senate, but it is a police bill and argued for by its proponents as the best way of preventing a state constabulary at the next general assembly. The bill is said to have the support of union labor. The principal argument against it is that it does not provide for civil service.

The highway police bill sponsored by Senator Richard E. Meents (rep.) Ashkum, the governor's personal representative in the upper chamber, calls for 125 policemen to patrol the state hard roads. "To prevent the destruction of the improved highways by careless automobile drivers and also highway robbery on them."

Collars wilted and perspiration flowed during the arguments for and against the measure, but it passed by a big margin.

Scarcely had the members recovered from this sweltering experience when they got into another on the bill of Senator Harold C. Kessinger designed to prevent all street carnivals. Religion entered into the argument early in the evening and the battle waged on until near midnight.

The municipalities committee brought in a report recommending that the bill be killed. Representative Bob Scholes (rep.), Peoria, moved that the house nonconcur and he won his point, but immediately an amendment was offered by Representative Lee O'Neil Browne (dem.), Ottawa, to exempt legitimate fraternal and religious organizations. A substitute amendment by Representative Howard P. Castle (rep.), Barrington, was approved. It provided that any firm or corporation should not conduct any transient carnival.

The argument was advanced that the Illinois state fair would be seriously injured if the bill were killed.

"The state can very well get along without the state fair," said Minority Leader John P. Devine; "the exhibition if anything, is a little more questionable than the bunch that conducts it."

The bill finally went to third reading.

Bill Strikes at Klan.

The "Ku-Klux klan killer" has passed the senate 26 to 1. The opponents, except Senator Dunlap of Champaign, did not vote. The roll call showed only twenty-five votes, one less than necessary, when Senator Shaw of Harrisburg voted aye and carried it to victory.

The bill makes it an offense to appear in public places, to disturb the peace, wearing a white hood or a robe to hide the wearer's identity. The penalty is a fine of not more than $1,000. If the hood wearer appears in public "with an evil or wicked purpose," he can be fined from $100 to $1,000 and also locked up for six months.

A Ku-Kluxer who while hooded commits an assault with a deadly weapon with an intent to do bodily injury, "where the circumstances of the assault show an abandoned and a malignant heart," can be fined $500 to $5,000 and put in prison for one year to ten.

Cook county commissioners got their forest preserve bill through just before the gong. The board has possessed the right to buy 25,000 acres of land before being compelled to submit its bond issues for land purchases to the voters.

This bill postpones necessity for a referendum until 35,000 acres have been bought. It also increases the income of the forest preserve district by permitting three-tenths of a mill tax to be levied annually for improvement of purchased land for in addition to whatever levy is needed to pay interest and principal of outstanding bonds.

Check on Landlords.

The legislature has extended for two years more some of the temporary acts against "rent hogs" which were passed two years ago. One prevents a landlord from collecting double rent from tenants who overstay their leases. Landlords also must give sixty days verbal notice of termination of tenancy or thirty days' written notice.

Taxes levied in Chicago for teachers' pensions, free textbooks and children's playgrounds under the control of the board of education shall be outside the regular levy of the school board.

This legislature believes in practical memorials and it has provided that counties which want to erect substantial memorials to their soldiers and sailors, instead of erecting monuments, may build orphan homes or hospitals.

Cicero, the biggest incorporated town in the United States, is given the same powers to license business and to grant franchises that cities of its size possess.

When the senate adjourned at 12:45 this morning its action spelled death to two measures on second reading which then dropped into the waste basket. They were the bill providing for one day's rest in seven and the competitive state insurance bill. Both were measures sought by union labor. Three insurance bills were killed by the simple method of striking out their enacting clauses.

SMALL NOT MEMBER OF KLAN, HE TESTIFIES

Senate Secretary Admits He Is Klansman in Story to House Committee.

BY C. B. ROURKE.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Springfield, Ill., June 8.—Gov. Small is on record to-day before Representative William L. Pierce's legislative committee investigating activities of the Ku-Klux klan at the state fair grounds on the night of May 26 last as not being a Klansman.

The governor made this admission to Representative Reed F. Cutler, one of the house lawyers chosen by the committee to examine witnesses, in answer to a direct question. The executive smiled as he answered and continued to smile as he denied knowledge of any of his appointees being members.

Official Admits He's Member.

A minute after the governor left the stand Al Livingstone, assistant secretary of the state senate, became a witness and "chuckled" happily as he admitted membership in the "invisible empire." He agreed to send to-day a blank membership application to Representative Adelbert H. Roberts, one of the three colored representatives of the house.

Mr. Roberts made the request that the blank be sent him after Livingston had testified that he had never heard of negroes being barred from the organization. The witness cheerfully complied with the request of the legislator, but he added: "I can give no guaranty that your application will be acted upon favorably."

Besides Mr. Cutler, Chairman Pierce and Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill questioned Gov. Small. The chief executive declared that he was opposed to the klan or any other organization using state property without permission or without paying for it.

"Klygrapp" Tells His Story.

Following the governor came the "big gun" of them all. He is A. R. Willard, "klygrapp," or secretary, of Abraham Lincoln klan No. 3 of the realm of Chicago. He testified that he had no other business and that he had only been receiving pay from his job for one week.

He admitted that he was the man who made the arrangements for the meeting at the state fair grounds; that he did not think he was doing anything wrong by using state electricity or a state building without permission or compensation for the same. He took all the blame "if there was any" for these oversights and said that if B. M. Davidson, head of the state agricultural department, who paid no attention to former State's Attorney Edmond Burke of Sangamon county when he protested against the use of state property for that purpose, would present a bill the klan would cheerfully pay it. Davidson was a previous witness and denied membership in the klan.

"Who posted the guard at the gate with a gun?" shouted Representative Thomas J. O'Grady at the witness. The "klygrapp" answered that if there were armed persons on the grounds that night he did not know it. Cal Foust, a local newspaper reporter, "spilled the beans" for the klansmen when he took the stand. He was complimented by the committee as he left the stand. He is not a member of the organization.

Testimony of Two Conflicts.

Charles Wandless, "grand cyclops" of the order, had previously testified that there were no masked persons within the fair grounds outside of the Coliseum building on the meeting night. Foust testified that they were stationed every ten yards from the main gate to the Coliseum.

He, with another local reporter, had been taken, according to his testimony, by Livingstone in an "official" car to the grounds. Two long lines of automobiles passing into the grounds that night, he said, were held up while the "official" car passed.

Peeped in at Ceremony.

"Did you see any of the ceremonies?" asker Representative Michael L. Igoe.

"Yes, I peeped in while the thing was going on."

"What did you see?"

"Well, I couldn't see much. Some one switched off the light and there was only an illuminated cross about forty feet high and ten feet across to give light. One fellow told me it was the cross of Calvary."

"Whom did you leave the grounds with?"

"Livingstone."

"Was the entrance gate locked when you reached it?"

"Yes, there was no chance for any one but klansmen and reporters to get in there that night.

"I was told by an outside guard who said his title was 'night hawk' that the order wanted the world to know what it was doing. This was repeated to me by a couple of other fellows who called themselves 'natural lecturers of the imperial palace of Atlanta, Ga.'"

Saw One Armed, He Says.

The witness added that every klansman he saw in regalia also carried a flashlight and he saw one dressed as a soldier and carrying a gun.

Mr. Pierce asked the "klygrapp" why the members of the klan mask their names as well as their faces.

The witness replied that he would rather the answer to that question would come from headquarters in Georgia.

A little bit of excitement was caused when M. M. Cantrall, local sergeant of police, was on the stand. It was Cantrall's night force of policemen that arrested Pierce on the night of the day he introduced the resolution for this investigation. Cantrall was an unwilling witness and when Mr. Igoe told him he was "impudent" Representative Lawrence F. O'Brien (dem.), Chicago, told the witness that if he would deposit his revolver on the chairman's table he would go into the hallway with him and give him the thrashing of his life. Cantrall made no move to accept the challenge.

STATE FAIR CUSTODIAN ADMITS FLEEING KLAN

C. F. Muttera and W. W. Lindley, Manager, Face Questions of House Committee.

BY C. B. ROURKE.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Springfield, Ill., June 6.—Gov. Small's custodian of the state fair grounds, Charles F. Muttera, left the grounds in the hands of the Ku-Klux klan when ordered away by a klansman the night of May 26. He made this admission yesterday in testimony before Representative William L. Pierce's legislative committee investigating the initiation of 700 candidates into the klan at the fair grounds on the night mentioned.

Muttera denied under oath that he was a member of the klan, but he acknowledged that he was afraid of klansmen because "they had on masks" and that he protected the state's property by going home and going to bed.

Muttera was just as clever a "side stepper" as was W. W. Lindley, manager of the state fair grounds, who preceded him.

Lindley admitted that he had been solicited to join the klan, but he denied that he had paid initiation fees and become a member on the night of Oct. 12, 1921, although data in the hands of Chairman Pierce, with which he was confronted seemed to indicate it.

Muttera Denies Joining Klan.

So did Muttera deny that he went through a similar ritual on the night of Oct. 7, 1922, but Mr. Pierce confronted him with similar data. In answer to a flat question by Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, one of the five members of the committee, Lindley denied that he was a member of the klan.

In the absence of Minority Leader Devine, designated from the democratic side to question witnesses before the committee, Representative Michael L. Igoe took charge as a substitute.

Mr. Igoe is a Catholic. He was backed up by Representative Adelbert H. Roberts, colored, and Representative Sydney Lyon, Jewish, all three from Chicago and representing "trails" for which the klan has no use.

With these three putting most embarrassing questions as far as the "unseen" is concerned the witnesses had some unhappy moments on the witness stand. In response to questions by Mr. Igoe, Lindley denied that he had ever heard of Adjutant-General Carlos E. Black, head of the state militia, being a member of the klan.

He admitted that he had read in newspapers that Gen. Black had been "accused" of being a "klansman," but he had never heard of him denying membership.

And then came Muttera with the statement that he had been proposed for membership by Judge C. H. Jenkins, head of the state welfare department, and Dr. John A. Wheeler, head of the Lincoln school and colony for feeble minded, a state institution at Lincoln, Ill. He reiterated, however, that he had never joined the organization. Muttera was ordered back as the first witness when the hearing is resumed late to-day.

People with masks on, it was evidenced from his testimony, have a peculiar horror for Muttera. There were 6,000 masked persons on the fair grounds that night. They had taken possession of the big buildings. He as "custodian" entered the grounds and was challenged by the masked "outside guard." He said he was told to go back to the place whence he had come, and did it without asking questions.

Questioned by Igoe.

"You were guardian of that state property that night, weren't you?" asked Igoe.

"Yes," the witness replied.

"As far as you know, they might have carried off the fair grounds."

"You are a big, fat goof of a coward, aren't you?"

"You would have been a coward, too——"

"Never mind what I would have been—you were a coward, weren't you?"

"Well, I guess you will have your way no matter what I say, but I'm not afraid of you."

"But you would be afraid of me if I had a mask on, wouldn't you?"

"Well, maybe."

Representative Thomas J. O'Grady, a member of the committee, made the witness admit that all of the chairs in the grandstand might have been carried away that night as far as he knew and then Representatives David H. McGaggage and Frank E. Abbey, the other two members, further "manhandled" him.

Muttera weighs 250 pounds and was formerly a local manager of a beer wagon. He admitted, as did Lindley, that he was an "intimate" friend of the governor.

Didn't Think to Tell Sheriff.

He told Chairman Pierce that he "never thought" of notifying the sheriff of Sangamon county that a "mob" of this size had taken charge of state property and that he, the custodian, "had run away." He admitted that he had gone home and to bed at 1 a. m., leaving the mob in charge, and that he had been informed that the initiation lasted until 4 o'clock Sunday morning, May 26.

Lindley "didn't know a thing about it," he testified, until he read a local paper. The next day, he said, Muttera told him about it, but he considered it nothing to get excited about. He did not consider it anything to confer with Gov. Small about nor with local authorities.

"Why, that very afternoon," said Lindley, "an order of Catholic sisters had a meeting at the fair grounds and we did not disturb them."

"Did any of these nuns raise any disturbance or were they masked?" asked Mrs. O'Neill.

"Well, they wore hoods," was the answer.

Davison Quizzed on Complaint.

Before these two were called the committee summoned M. B. Davison, state director of agriculture. He was the official to whom Former State's Attorney Edmund Burke of Sangamon county complained about state property being used for such a purpose. Davison testified that he paid no official attention to Mr. Burke's letter. The witness denied that he was a member of the klan.

Chairman Pierce concluded his interrogation of Muttera by telling him that the governor should dismiss him within twenty-four hours and that if the executive failed to do it the general assembly should. It was Mr. Pierce who introduced the resolution in the house for the investigation, and in this connection he let it be known that he had been arrested in Springfield by eight uniformed policemen. He explained that he had committed no breach of the peace and that he could attribute his experience to no other reason than he had been the author of the house resolution. Mr. Pierce said he had been "locked up," but that the case was stricken from the court docket the next day through no effort of his own.

KLAN GETS ANOTHER BLOW.

Springfield, Ill., June 22.—The Knights of The Ku Klux were dealt another knockout blow when the senate here passed the bill which increases the penalty for disturbing the peace, kidnapping, assault and battery while robed or hooded to conceal identity.

The measure was passed by the senate. After concurrence in the amendments by the house, the bill will go to Governor Small, for his signature. It is expected on all sides that the governor will sign the bill.

71 Klansmen Arrested At Gates of Cemetery

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 6.—W. H. Cortner, Eagle of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and 70 other members of the local klan, many of them prominent business men, were arrested by squads of police this afternoon as they left Fern Cliff cemetery, following funeral services at the grave of a brother klansman.

Arrests were ordered by Sergeant Thomas Norton, acting chief in the absence of Police Chief Charles O'Brien, who is on his vacation.

Arrests were made under the recent ruling of Police Judge Golden C. Davis that three or more persons appearing on the streets masked would constitute disorderly conduct.

Illinois Law Puts Heavy Penalty on Ku Klux Klan

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—A bill aimed at the Ku Klux Klan, putting a heavier penalty on kidnaping, assault and creating disturbances when committed by masked individuals, was among those signed by Gov. Small. He also gave his approval to a tenants' relief measure, extending for two years the provision that tenants cannot be evicted for six months after being given orders to vacate.

Farmers Report Huge Midnight Conclave Near Wisconsin Line.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Waukegan, Ill., June 18.—Then thousand uniformed klansmen from Illinois and Wisconsin gathered in a midnight conclave at the state line, near Winthrop Harbor, Saturday, according to excited reports from farmers living in the vicinity to-day. Fiery crosses blazed until nearly daybreak while 1,000 candidates were being initiated.

The Illinois delegation, said to include 1,500 men from Chicago and Oak Park, assembled at the courthouse in Waukegan, but were not hooded, so the purpose of their gathering was not suspected. The Wisconsin men met at Kenosha. Two automobile processions met near Winthrop Harbor, and there the ceremonies were held.

PASS ANTI-KLAN BILL

Illinois Law Prohibits All Disturbances by Masked Men

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 27—The anti-Ku Klux Klan bill today became a law by the governor's appeal. It makes it unlawful to disturb the peace, to kidnap, to assault with a deadly weapon, or to appear in public places while hooded, robed or masked to conceal identity, and provides penalties. It was introduced by Representative Roberts.

Illinois Anti-Klan Bill Is Law.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 27 (Associated Press).—The Anti-Ku Kluz Klan bill today became a law by the Governor's approval. It makes it unlawful to appear in public places with evil or wicked purpose while hooded, robed or masked to conceal identity. It provides for penalties.

Out in Illinois on Klan.

The war in the ranks of the Ku-Klux reached Chicago to-day with the filing of a bill in the Superior court for an injunction against William J. Simmons, former Imperial Wizard of the klan, and three local officers. The petition, filed in behalf of the order by Attorney Charles G. Palmer, alleges that Franklin C. Browne, James C. Stockwell and Millard F. Roberts, heads of klans 33, 11 and 15 of Chicago have called meetings without the sanction of the headquarters in Atlanta and have allied themselves with Simmons in a secessionist movement. The petitioners seek to enjoin the defendants from holding further meetings. They wish to halt particularly a klan gathering scheduled to be held under the auspices of Simmons at Dunning next Saturday.

Urbana, Ill., Aug. 23.—Ku-Klux klan members from all sections of Illinois are expected here next Saturday to attend a barbecue and naturalization at Crystal Lake park. It is estimated nearly 50,000 klansmen will be in attendance. It is stated they will not be masked.

KU KLUX THREATEN STRIKE ORGANIZER

By MARTIN A. DILLMON
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

TAYLOR SPRINGS, Ill.—Two of the ten companies of National Guards stationed at the plant of the American Zinc Co. since Aug. 11 in connection with the strike for union recognition here, have been withdrawn. Citizens from the beginning have protested against the presence of troops, and many appeals have been made to the governor for their removal. There has been no violence in connection with the strike since the first week, when company gunmen shot one striker and clubbed many others. Of the 300 employes at the plant about 275 joined the International Union of Mill, Mine and Smelter workers and walked out. The strikers' ranks remain unbroken.

The company is paying strikebreakers a bonus of $5 a day as long as the strike lasts and they remain on the job. Troops have been removed from the immediate vicinity of the plant and special deputies are doing guard duty.

Addressing a mass meeting of the strikers, Organizer Ed Carbine, in charge of the strike, said:

"A little more than a year ago you had a so-called 'outlaw' strike here and the company broke it in a day and a half. But we will win this strike if we have to call on some of the veterans of the United Mine Workers, who are residents of this community. To organize this union we had to hold our meetings in the woods. Stool pigeons snitched and known union members were fired by the company. It was the company that got the troops here and we must see to it that there is absolutely no violence to mar our chances of winning this fight."

Carbine has received a letter signed by the Ku Klux Klan in which he is warned to leave town or he "may be helped along." Officials of the Hillsboro klan refuse to acknowledge responsibility for the letter.

Carbine will remain. The klan claims to have a membership of 500 in this vicinity. As a result of the letter, the strikers demand of the sheriff that their spokesman be given an armed bodyguard to assure his safety. Sheriff Hill says he is investigating the source of the letter.

The international union of which the strikers are members has begun payment of strike benefits. Local 1440, United Mine Workers has voted to give $2 a man each pay-day to the strike fund, the contribution to continue until the strike is settled.

Efforts of Hugh D. Friel, U. S. commissioner of conciliation, to mediate failed when the company refused to consider recognition of the union. Daniel Dinneen, Illinois commissioner, has arrived to bring about a conference of strikers and the company if possible.

KU KLUX KLAN.

Last Sunday a speaker at the Klan meeting near Collinsville, Ill., said the Negro must be protected. From what, and by whom? For what and when? Again he said, "If he (the Negro) cannot understand that American white womanhood is the most precious thing in the world, we'll have to teach him." Why "American white womanhood"? Does the Klan thus declare that only white American womanhood is precious? What is the matter with white women who are not American? Why is not womanhood precious, whether it be white or black, whether it be American or foreign?

"We'll have to teach this to the Negro." Why teach it to the Negro, when the crimes against white womanhood by Negroes are only one-ninetieth as numerous as those against white womanhood by white men themselves. The last account we had showed that 300 criminal assaults against white women were made in the United States and that only 20 were charged to Negroes, nine of whom were afterwards cleared of the charge. Why should not the Klan start in on the white men who do not recognize white American womanhood as the most precious thing in the world and teach them. It is very much needed when there are 800 more white men who outrage white women than Negroes.

Besides, the Klan might get busy teaching white men the value of respecting Negro womanhood.. We wonder if the Kamelia, the lady Ku Klux, can't do something to teach the white man some respect for both races.

Some time ago we read an article from a southern white woman's pen who said that the lynching of Negroes on the ground of protecting white womanhood was a base slander. That white womanhood was amply able to protect itself. She said "if white men were as busy protecting themselves against the enchanting wiles of the Negro woman there would be fewer mulattoes in the Negro race."

We hope the Kamelia will use its influence to protect the defenseless Negro woman in the South against the encroachments of the white man. Why would they not lynch a few white men for outraging the Negro woman?

The Bastrop Klux, so it is reported, were trying to break up white men who were too openly living in concubinage with Negro women. For the same reason, the "whipping crews" that infest Oklahoma and Georgia, we understand, are only whipping white men who have made themselves odious by this same sort of conduct.

While we oppose lawlessness of every sort, there seems to be some justification for the white race trying to protect itself against these white scoundrels who, under cover of night, steal away to the cabins of the defenseless Negro women. This same thing was urged as justifications for the murder of two white men at Merouge, La., last year. Mr. Skipwith denies that the Klan did it, but reliable witnesses say that when last seen the two men murdered were in the hands of person known to be members of the Klan.

4000 ATTEND PUBLIC KU KLUX MEETING NEAR COLLINSVILLE

The St. Louis

St. Louis Business Man Principal Speaker, Defends Organization

Clarion 8-24-23

From The Globe Democrat

St. Louis Mo.

A public meeting of the Ku Klux Klan was held on Ramey Brothers' Farm at Monk's Mound, four miles west of Collinsville, Ill., last night. Approximately 500 robed klansmen took part in the demonstration, which was followed by secret initiation ceremonies. The audience at at the public speaking was estimated at 4000.

Gathered at the foot of the mound, the klansmen opened the meeting with an address by a white-robed leader, who announced himself as the "exalted cyclops." After asking the gathering to give attention, he declared, in a calm voice: "Ladies and gentlemen will: others must. If any of you do not, we will eject you, and if we have to do that, we will not use kid-glove methods."

His talk was met with liberal cheers, indicating that fully half of the audience was comprised of klans men or klan sympathizers Among the speakers who followed him was a St. Louis business man, whose name could not be learned. The latter, who was the principal speaker, defended the klan as "needing no one to apologize for it." What it did need, he asserted, was "advertising and a campaign to educate the public as to its principles."

No Prejudices

"We are not against any race or sect," he said. "The Negro should be protected. But if he cannot understand that American white womanhood is the most precious thing in the world, we'll have to teach him."

He then proceeded to enumerate the principles of the Ku Klux Klan as follows:

"We stand for white supremacy, which means white inside as outside. This lets the bootlegger, gunman and gangster out.

"Protection of pure womanhood, with a single standard of morals.

"We do not take the law in our own hands, nor do we want to, but we will get enforcement of law and order through the ballot.

"Respect for the flag, with one language.

"One educational system in the United States, and that the public school system."

Two others who spoke announced their names as C. E. Coons, field organizer for the Klan at Collinsville and O. P. Bellanger, former Jesuit priest of Wisconsin, now living in East St. Louis. The latter declared in his address that he renounced the Catholic faith because he "believed it all a fallacy."

Interest in the initiation, which was conducted at the crest of the mound with a cordon of robed Klansmen guarding against any intrusion was prcatictollly out of the kpes was practically nil. Fully 2000 of the audience left after the speaking. It was estimated 200 candidates were initiated at the ceremonies.

Another Meeting Announced

The Klansmen attending the closed session were mostly from Colinsville although a small number were from St. Louis and East St. Louis. Another meeting will be held, it was announced at Greenville, Ill., on the night of August 24, when Capt. J. K. Skipwith of Bastrop, La, fame will speak.

During the proceedings last night it was announced that the woman's organization, the "Kamelia" will be competed soon in St. Cair and Madison counties, Ill.

Denunciation of Catholics, Jews, and Negroes was more or less subordinated last night, the speakers being somewhat diplomatic. Bellanger, who claimed to have been a priest, declared that the klan now has 10,000,000 members in the United States, and boasted that in another year, with an estimated 25,000,000 the klan would dominate politics.

Chicagoans Can't Hold Meetings Without Sanction of Wizard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Three local klans with membership of approximately 1,200 men, were named in a temporary injunction issued today by Judge Walter P. Steffen, restraining them from holding meetings without authority of headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan. 8-17-23

The bill is directed against William J. Simmons, former imperial wizard, and Major Franklin C. Browne, James C. Stockwell, and Willard Roberts, head of the three klans, all of which are said to be suspended.

Attorney Charles G. Palmer, representing H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, asked for the injunction, declaring that Simmons is endeavoring to organize the Knights of Kamelia and obtain his members from among the klansmen.

Exalted cyclops of three local klans met after their meeting in a downtown building was halted by court order and passed resolutions protesting against the officers in charge of the Atlanta headquarters of the klan and warning fellow klansmen that they are being hoodwinked by officials and "hired men who have looted the treasury of the organization."

Dr. Evans was accused by Major Franklin O. Browne, one of the cyclops, with having turned in an expense account for $58,000 claimed to have been used in the Chicago mayoralty electio[illegible] when, the cyclops declared, proo[illegible] been obtained that no money [illegible]en spent. The local officers sa[illegible] klans here would continue a[illegible]smen, but separate and apart [illegible]he national organization.

KLAN INJUNCTION FAULTY; AMENDED

Atlanta Constitution

Chicago, October 8.—A bill for an injunction against William Joseph Simmons, emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and three representatives of three Chicago klans, against whom a temporary injunction recently was granted to prevent them functioning as klans, today was found technically faulty by Superior Judge Foell. The court, however, allowed Charles G. Palmer, attorney and grand dragon of the realm of Illinois, of the klan, to amend the bill and the injunction stands. 10-9-23

The three klans are alleged by Attorney Palmer to have seceded and aligned themselves with Emperor Simmons who has organized the Knights of Kamelia which he describes as a higher order of klan craft, and later were banished by the national body.

The defendants charge that the national offices were administered improperly and that incompetency and tyrannical methods toward klansmen were prevalent and adopted resolutions reaffirming their allegiance to the principals of klan craft but resolving to operate separately until Imperial Wizard Evans and his own official family should be ousted.

Emperor Simmons has issued a proclamation addressed to "klansmen throughout the nation," to the effect that he proposes to elevate to the primary order of knighthood all klansmen, who by their conduct have proved loyal and faithful citizens of the invisible empire."

The Knights of Kamelia is described as more strictly enforcing the secrecy of membership, with no written records of any kind, and without regalia or public demonstrations and banning the mask.

Charge Armed Men Used to Harass Members of Organizations.

10-21-23

New Orleans, La.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Spokesmen of the Ku Klux Klan and of the Knights of Kamelia today exchanged charges that the other organization was employing armed men to oppose it. The charge against the Ku Klux was made by W. C. Brown, former klansman, and present Kamelian. He said gunmen had been hired to harrass the Knights of Kamelia.

The charge against the Kamelia was made by G. C. Palmer of the klan, who said the knights had recruited armed men to prevent the holding of klan meetings in Chicago. Mr. Palmer ridiculed Mr. Brown's charges. The Knights of Kamelia are a seceding faction of the klan.

KLAN FOES BLOW UP S. SIDE DRUG STORE

Chicago Daily News

Wreck Building and Shake Far Washington Park District.

10-13-23

Chicago, Ill.

Scores of sleepers were thrown out of bed and buildings were shaken for blocks on the south side early this morning when the second bomb in the same neighborhood in two days was exploded, with a member of the Ku-Klux klan as the target.

The drug and jewelry store of G. A. Penrose at 344 East 61st street was demolished by the explosion, which shattered windows for blocks around and awakened most of the south side between Washington Park and 63d street.

Penrose in a statement to detectives said that in his opinion the infernal machine was set off by enemies who had sworn to "get him" because he was an avowed klansman. He had been threatened, he declared, several times.

"I'm a Klansman," he said early today as he surveyed the wreck of his store and the building which housed it. "I'm a klansman and proud of it. And this is what they did to me."

Suspect Use of Time Device.

The bomb exploded at 3 a. m., with a terrific detonation and a crash which was heard more than a mile. The police believe that a time instrument of some kind was used. So far no pieces of the bomb itself have been found in the wreckage.

The loss was set by Penrose at about $3,000. Much more damage from smashed glass may be counted up in the neighborhood. No one was injured, the police believe, largely because of the early hour of the explosion.

Penrose said that he had received seven threatening letters from anti-klan agents. He always had scoffed at them, he said. The last letter came five months ago and he had given up worry meantime.

The bomb is the second of the same kind this week. The press of Jack Forsum on East 55th street near Ingleside avenue, where a klan organ formerly was printed, was blown up Thursday night.

Acquitted in 1914 Killing.

Penrose was tried in March, 1914, with Mrs. Louise Sear Van Keuren for the murder of Mrs. Van Keuren's husband. The jury upon the instruction of Judge Charles M. Walker, returned a verdict of not guilty. Mrs. Van Keuren shot her husband when he tried to enter her home at night after they had separated. Penrose was charged with complicity in the killing.

BOMB THREATS IN KLAN FIGHT

Houston Post

Associated Press Report.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—A bomb explosion in a nearby vacant lot Friday night and anonymous telephone threats that the building where she lived would be destroyed Saturday night and warning her to move, were reported to the police today by Mrs. Norman J. Perkins, living on the third floor of a South Halsted street building. 10-21-23

The building, the first floor of which is occupied by the grocery store of Fred and Harry Junker has been bombed twice since their names were published as members of the Ku Klux Klan. They deny membership in the klan. Mrs. Perkins said she only had returned home Friday night from a hospital where she went October 8 to recover from the shock of the last explosion. The police put a guard at the building.

Two recent bomb explosions of the South Side were attributed to enemies of the klan.

CHARGE GUNMEN USED IN KLAN-KAMELIA WAR

Spokesmen of Factions Assert Fear of Violence; Demonstration To-Day.

STATE CONSTABULARY HIT

Chicago Daily News 10-10-23

Chicago gunmen, among them certain followers of "Umbrella Mike" Boyle, have been hired by sympathizers of the Ku Klux klan to harass the schismatic Knight Kamelias—according to W. C. Brown, 160 Drexel boulevard, former klansman and present kamelia.

Armed members of the state constabulary have been recruited by the Knight Kamelias, to prevent the Ku Klux klan from holding meetings in Chicago, according to C. G. Palmer, an attorney with offices in the First National bank building, who is spokesman for the klan.

Brown and Palmer, representing the rival factions into which the "invisible empire" has visibly split, vied with each other to-day in exposing violence and trickery, by wearers of the hoods and gowns of the Ku-Klux klan. They told similar stories, except that Brown blamed klansmen for the violence while Palmer accused the Knight Kamelias.

Demonstration Reveals War.

The war between factions came to light as the Ku-Klux klan was organizing a demonstration of strength at the end of the Irving Park boulevard car line, near Dunning. Thousands of klansmen were to assemble there to-day, according to an advance announcement in "Dawn," the official publication of the Ku-Klux klan.

Posters marked with red arrows and American flags were tacked to telegraph poles and trees marking a trail along the Irving Park road from Dunning, and then along the River road and Higgins road through a wooded tract about midway between Des Plaines and Park Ridge. In a clearing near the Des Plaines river pavilions had been erected by the Thomas Jefferson and U. S. Grant klaverns. A $3,000 display of fireworks was set up among the trees.

Delegates from Five States.

The advance guards stated that from 25,000 to 40,000 members of the klan were expected to attend the meeting. Delegations were promised from four states adjacent to Illinois. Four thousand men were reported on their way from Rockford.

Secrecy was maintained only with great difficulty, inasmuch as the massing of the automobiles in the road, the carpentry in the woods and the maneuvering of airplanes aroused the interest of farmers and other residents in the neighborhood.

Brown met the announcement of the meeting with a denunciation of the klan. Gunmen have hindered organization of the Knight Kamelias. Brown declared by terrorizing the owners of halls and sending riot calls to the police whenever kamelians assemble.

"The klan is using gunmen," he said. "We have every reason to believe that certain followers of 'Umbrella Mike' Boyle are among them. It was the Evans faction that bombed the 55th street printing plant where we get out 'The Klansman,' our official publication the other day."

Sees Effort to Trick Klansmen.

Palmer ridiculed Brown's charges. Brown and his associates are out simply to make money by tricking klansmen into joining their organization, he said.

"They have been expelled from the klan, and a court has issued a restraining order to prevent them from using the ritual or gowns of the order," Palmer said.

"As for violence," he continued, "what could be worse than the Brown faction's attempt to intimidate us by use of armed members of the state constabulary? Twenty armed constables stood in front of Boylston Brothers' undertaking rooms in Cottage Grove avenue last Monday night, when we had a meeting scheduled there, and tried to keep klansmen from going in."

M. E. PASTORS VOTE AGAINST RACE HOSTILITY

Chicago Daily Tribune

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

After a spirited discussion for over two hours of the Ku Klux Klan and super-government in general, Methodist ministers in session at the Rock river conference in Grace church yesterday carried the resolutions presented by the committee on public policy, which condemned all race and creed antagonisms.

DR. P. H. SWIFT.

The victory for the anti-Ku Klux Klan forces was modified, however, by two eliminations from the report proposed by middle of the road advocates.

The Opposing Groups.

The Rev. John H. Williamson, former commissioner of law enforcement in Mayor Thompson's administration, and the Rev. S. H. Wirsching, pastor at Belvidere, were the leaders of the Ku Klux forces. The Rev. Ernest F. Tittle, First church, Evanston, and [illegible] professor in Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, were the [illegible] canning the klan.

Two of the middle of the road advocates were the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of Chicago Temple, and the Rev. Frank D. Sheets, Freeport.

Dr. Thompson introduced the resolution which eliminated from the report the words, "We condemn any institution which has as one of its principles, 'We believe in the supremacy of the white race.'" Dr. Sheets caused the elimination of the words, "the invisible government."

10-9-23

Dr. P. H. Swift Retires.

A great surprise which it was announced by Bishop Nicholson, was the chief reason why the conference was obliged to postpone adjournment until today, was the retirement from the active ministry of the Rev. P. H. Swift, superintendent of the Chicago southern district nationally known in the Methodist denomination. Lack of physical ability to carry the strain of the burdens of his office was given as the reason for Dr. Swift's action.

Bishop Nicholson and a dozen leading members of the conference spoke in complimentary terms of the past work of Dr. Swift and a large committee representing all sections of the conference was appointed to present suitable resolutions at a later meeting. Bishop Nicholson said because of this unexpected announcement and the necessary changes involved in making the appointments there would be no evening session last evening and work would continue today.

Speaks for Klan.

"I am not asking you to endorse the Ku Klux Klan," said the Rev. Mr. Williamson in speaking against the public policy report. "I simply want you to leave it out of the records. Whatever may be your theories about the supremacy of the white race, practically you are for it. The reason for the klan was voiced by former Vice [illegible]ent Marshall when he said, 'The [illegible]lux Klan exists because public [illegible]ls have failed to do their duty.' [illegible]u condemn the klan you are condemning some of the noblest men in this country and among them many of your own ministers."

"The argument of those who favor the Ku Klux Klan," said Dr. Tittle, "seems to be about this: The Knights of Columbus have done certain things we do not like, therefore, organize the Ku Klux Klan. This is the doctrine of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. To fight fire with fire is to produce a conflagration. If the Knights of Columbus need defeating the way to defeat them is by lifting up higher standards of living and ideals. I condemn the Ku Kluv as profoundly unchristian. We can't settle the supremacy of the white race by resolutions. That race will be supreme, whatever its color, which follows Jesus Christ to the limit of its ability."

Would Not Condemn Klan.

The Rev. S. H. Wirsching declared that we ought not to condemn the klan without knowing personally what its principles and methods are.

"Some of you know that Masonry, in which many of you are members, has been unjustly accused and condemned," he said. "You resent the charges because you know better from experience. Act in the same way towards the klan."

"We may not know all about the klan," said the Rev. A. M. Pennewell, Covenant church, Evanston, "but we do know that a group of the Ku Klux klan have come here to the church since this conference session began and threatened that we would suffer if we spoke out against them. The klan is anti-Jew and as such would not only exclude such philanthropists as Julius Rosenwald, but would exclude Jesus Christ himself, who was a Jew."

Order Follows Invasion Into Home of Colored Women by Masked Band

Philadelphia, Pa.

LEWISTON, Idaho, Sept. 27. — (By A. N. P.)—The Lewiston City Council has ordered the chief of police and his men to "shoot to kill" any persons wearing hoods or garbs hiding their identity when found invading homes or molesting citizens, in case they resist the officers.

This order is the result of a visit by three white-robed men to the home of Georgia Cross, a colored woman. She escaped from the house before the men got inside.

IS KLAN A REVOLT?

The Ku Klux Klan, and any other organization that has its being in this State, must be erected on the basis of the State and National Constitutions and the traditions of a free people.

A man's home is his castle in Georgia. To invade that home, one must be empowered by a mandate from the whole people through their constituted authorities. This State can never afford on any excuse to allow to be struck down this tradition and institution won by the blood of the people. It is too great a compromise to do so to bring a bootlegger to justice—or even a man who is said to treat his wife badly. And if the Ku Klux is built on the basis of violating the sovereignty of a man's dwelling, then it is a European organization, a Russian conception fundamentally, and belongs to have no existence beneath the protecting folds of the stars and bars of these United States.

It behooves the Ku Klux Klan to prove that it is not a revolt against the American Constitution. It should make plain, if it can, that it is not an attempt to re-interpret America in terms of methods wholly foreign to the ways and intentions of the original Americans and to the spirit of the real America of today.

Masked government, masked politics and masked justice have no place in Georgia. The shades of the night are not necessary to the functioning of society in this State. The original Ku Klux Klan was thought to be a thing of dire necessity to save the honor and flower of the South; but no such necessity nor occasion exists today. Even the original Klan sowed seeds that it required years to get rid of, and even at this late day the seeds planted to protect the flowers are springing up as weeds that are endangering the foundations of society.

Nowhere in the historical record of Oglethorpe can it be found that he resorted to methods of the night in founding Georgia.

It was not the idea of Bob Toombs, Alexander Stephens, Ben Hill or Henry Grady that our government should be invisible; that the community should be ruled from an office building or a private residence instead of from the City Hall, the Courthouse, the State Capitol and the National.

As a matter of pure and simple logic and protection, if not love and pride, the necessary and progressive traditions of a great people should not be flaunted and trampled under foot by a Russianistic scheme that writes "Americanism" across its banner. If the Ku Klux Klan is not this, in view of recent findings and statements in the public press, it behooves the Klan to bend its every energy to prove its right to life and existence.

The cellar-court plan of Bertha Krupp should not be transplanted anywhere in Georgia, from her wiregrass pinelands in the south that breathe the very air of unrestricted freedom, to her mountain communities of pure-blooded Anglo-Saxon people in the north.

The star-chamber method of trial, in secret and without the defendant being allowed to defend, is too un-American ever to be transferred from the imperialistic cess-pools of Europe to the light of the new day that the patriots of Georgia and the other thirteen original States have made to dawn and become a precious reality.

The woodland execution ground, set about by thickets, the stars, the owls and a hooded, disguised company—this belongs to a day in the past, to the dark spots of the Middle Ages that men and women of courage, sacrifice and persistence have put behind them for the sake of their children and their children's children, though they could not themselves live to see the clear skies and pacific waters.

The very psychology of the suggestion and idea of "Ku Klux" is the taking of matters into one's own hands. If the modern-day organization did not wish to suggest or imply that, why did it adopt such an entitlement? The American Government, the Georgia code of law, do not sanction clique rule. A high tax rate is levied; police and sheriff forces are set up and paid by the people to function as enforcers of the law. These forces cannot go further than the law as agreed upon by the people. "But there are offenses not covered by the law." Why are they not? That is essentially the business of the sovereign people, rather than of any individual or group of individuals. The mass thought must rule in America.

There is an idea in Europe that the masses are not capable of ruling, that their intelligence is too low. On the strength of this, they set up and maintain monarchies. If the argument of the Klan is that the people of Georgia are not sufficiently intelligent to make the proper laws and to rule, that democracy is out of place in Georgia, then this is a plea for a return to monarchy. If the Klan has really set up an oligarchy, then it is a declaration that the experiment of democracy has failed, and announces a revolution against democracy, against the American system of government, against the State and National Constitutions, against the local, State and National judicial, legislative and administrative departments, and against the traditions and institutions of the people of Georgia.

If the Klan is not a revolt, why should its membership be secret?

Witnesses File Depositions Full of Interest to All Who Would Know Course of Hooded Order

SIMMONS AND EVANS DISCUSSED AT LENGTH

Denials of Former Witnesses are Made by Some of Higher Officials

ATLANTA, GA., Oct. 31.—Denials of charges made in affidavits introduced by the plaintiffs in the suit of D. M. Rittenhouse and others seeking a receivership for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, featured today's hearing in Fulton county court. The plaintiffs closed their presentation of affidavits and depositions shortly before noon and the remainder of the time was taken up with depositions presented by the defense.

11-1-23

The defense is expected to complete its presentation early tomorrow. Arguments may be made before the end of the day's session.

Chief interest in the defense affidavits centered around refutation of charges made by the plaintiffs that the funds of the organization were being wasted; that klan officials had endeavored to secure filing of a breach of promise suit against Edward Young Clarke, former head of the propagation department of the klan, and that the imperial kloncilium of the order had refused to allow charges to be filed against imperial wizard Evans and other high officials.

Audit is Introduced.

The defense introduced an audit of the books of the organization made by a firm of expert accountants showing that on July 31, 1923 there were assets of $1,087,273.42 as compared with $403,171.18 on the same date in 1922 and that liabilities on July 31 were $1,705 as compared with $247,227.59.

Affidavits also were introduced setting forth denial of charges that klan funds were kept in the name of individuals instead of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, declaring that funds when received were at all times deposited to the credit of the order that checks were drawn through the proper channels for funds and, in certain instances, placed to the credit of N. N. Furney, as cashier for disbursement.

C. J. Orbison of Indianapolis, a member of the imperial kloncilium of the organization and who also was a member of the commission of eight that adjusted the litigation between William Joseph Simmons, emperor and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, told of these negotiations and of how five members of the kloncilium were appointed by the commission; five by the imperial wizard and five selected by the imperial wizard from a list of ten supplied by the emperor.

The imperial wizard, he said, under the constitution could appoint all fifteen members of this body, which is the governing body of the klan.

Decree is Reviewed.

Mr. Orbison told how in a meeting on May 2, 1923, the kloncilium reviewed the consent decree in the Simmons-Evans litigation.

At the close of the meeting, he said the kloncilium [illegible] a number of persons were present who wanted other matters taken up but said that no charges were filed against any one and no one appeared.

They were told, he said, that Tennessee, Oklahoma and Louisiana delegations were in the city [illegible] no charges had been filed it was decided to notify them that charges should be filed properly and they would be heard at the next quarterly meeting of the kloncilium in July.

He flatly denied that there was any refusal to hear any one. In closing he asserted that he had close personal knowledge of the affairs of the klan and denied that there was any waste or mismanagement as charged in the receivership suit.

11-1-23

Shirley Tells of Plans.

T. J. Shirley of Birmingham, Ala., said that he had been a member of the imperial kloncilium virtually ever since the order was founded and that on the night before the klonvocation here W. J. Simmons, then imperial wizard, had called a meeting in a building near the meeting hall and announced that he intended to resign as imperial wizard and to create the office of emperor separate from that of imperial wizard.

Simmons later announced this decision on the floor of the klonvocation, he said, and told the delegates that his choice for wizard was H. W. Evans.

He said that all of the members of the imperial kloncilium resigned but that Evans refused to accept the ressignations pending further appointments.

Nine of the present kloncilium members, he said, were members of the old body. He also denied charges of waste and mismanagement and declared that the klan had prospered more under the Evans regime than ever in its history.

Attorneys for the defense read only portions of each affidavit skipping over much matter relating to events of the past prior to the time Dr. Evans took charge at the imperial palace. As a result the hearing proceeded much more rapidly than had been expected.

Etheridge Testifies.

Paul S. Etheridge, also a member of the kloncilium, also made an affidavit regarding the resignation of W. J. Simmons.

In another affidavit Mr. Etheridge declared that charges that various persons tried and were refused the right to file charges against Imperial Wizard Evans and others were untrue.

He said that he called W. E. Thompson, who made an affidavit regarding the filing of charges, and offered as attorney for the klan to accept any charges and that Thompson promised to file them but did not do so until he (Etheridge) went to Thompson's office and that Thompson then signed and delivered the charges to him.

He said that the kloncilium met in Atlanta on July 19, 1923, to consider the charges, but that neither Thompson nor any one else appeared to prosecute them.

Mr. Etheridge also made an affidavit in which he told of a visit of Helen K. Steele, who has filed suit for breach of promise against E. Y. Clarke, made to his office and how he told her that neither he nor the Knights of the Ku Klux KBlan would have anything to do with her suit.

Evans Makes Affidavit.

Imperial Wizard Evans also made an affidavit in connection with the Steele matter, in which he denied a statement in an affidavit made by the woman that he had asked that she call him on the telephone.

He said that a woman called his residence on the telephone and told him she wanted to see him about E. Y. Clarke and that he told her he would have nothing to do with anything relating to Clarke. Thereupon, he said, she told him that it involved the klan and he referred her to Tom Akers.

He then instructed Akers to take her to the office of Paul S. Etheridge, klan attorney, and that Mr. Etheridge would determine whether or not the klan was interested in the suit.

Mr. Evans also dinied an assertion made in an affidavit by E. J. Jones that he had told Jones that he expects to make $100,000 out of the klan and that he doubted whether he would last a year. He also denied spending any money in the Chicago election of last spring or in any other election anywhere, and also denied that J. Q. Jett or J. A. McKerley had been in the employ of the klan since he became imperial wizard. He also declared that Tom Akers never had been an official of the klan, but merely had been an employe of the bureau of investigation.

Denies Campaign Funds.

Imperial Wizard Evans also denied that funds had ever been supplied for political campaigns, or for any espionage system, adding that no effort had been made to build up a political machine, or for an espionage system. He declared that funds had been used only for necessary expenses and to spread the principles of the organization.

CONFESSION NEAR BY HUDSONS, SAY MACON OFFICERS

Atlanta Constitution

Believe Hudson Brothers Only Paid Workers in Gang Which Has Been Terrorizing City.

8-21-23

Macon, Ga., August 20.—From information obtained from the three Hudson brothers, arrested last night in act of flogging two negroes, the police tonight were preparing to round up an organized flogging band which has been terrorizing Macon for several weeks, according to announcement made by the police.

During the last fortnight several men have been whipped and ordered to leave town within forty-eight hours, and at intervals during the last six months scores of men have been flogged. The climax in the disorders was reached early Saturday when the police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers after they had kidnaped a man from in front of the railroad station. Governor Walker has threatened to place the city under martial law.

The police also announced tonight that the Hudsons and other members of the flogging band were paid men, and that through the Hudsons they had learned they were being financed by an organization. A confession from one of the Hudsons, the police say, the men appears near a break. He looks for a confession, he said, before morning.

"We are trying to bring out of these men the names of those whom we believe financed their operations," the sheriff declared. "It seems almost certain that others supplied the money and issued orders for the operations of the gang," he added.

U. S. Takes Hand.

The federal government entered the case today when post office inspectors joined forces with the city authorities to apprehend gangsters who held up a mail motor truck Saturday and attempted to remove Charley Mike, negro, from the vehicle for the purpose of whipping him. The driver today was unable to identify the automobile used by the three Hudsons when they were caught last night.

R. A. Hartley, World War veteran one of the last men to report he had been flogged, was committed to jail during the day on a writ of lunacy. His brother is also being held on an insanity charge. Hartley has declared his brother's condition was due to fright because of a threat of the floggers when he was taken out three weeks ago and lectured.

Hartley was taken into custody while attempting to obtain a warrant for the men who whipped him, he said. He did not disclose the name of the floggers.

In the enforcement of the state automobile tag law, floggers having used no tags on their automobiles, several arrests were made here today. Those arrested, the police said, proved not to have been connected with the flogging band.

GOVERNOR READY TO USE MILITIA IF NECESSARY.

After a lengthy conference with Adjutant-General Charles H. Cox, whom he had sent to Macon to investigate conditions in that city following a series of floggings, Governor Clifford Walker Monday declared that the state militia would be used to handle the situation if it becomes necessary. The chief executive stated, however, that in his opinion the county and city officials were well equipped to cope with the situation and that there was no present condition which required the assistance of the military.

Governor Walker stated that Adjutant-General Cox had informed him that Sheriff Hicks, of Bibb county, had organized an efficient force, including fourteen deputies and many others, subject to call as special officers, that the motorcycle force had been reinforced and other precautionary steps taken to handle any further trouble, and that there was no evidence of need for help from any other source.

Adjutant-General Cox went to Macon late Saturday upon instructions of the governor following a series of bold floggings in that city, and returned to Atlanta and made a report of his investigation to Governor Walker Monday. The adjutant-general expressed confidence in the ability of Sheriff Hicks and city officials of Macon to handle the situation.

Walker's Statement.

The following statement was made by Governor Walker following the conference with Adjutant General Cox during which every angle of the situation at Macon was gone over carefully:

"The city of Macon, I was informed, has fifty policemen on regular duty, all of whom are aroused to the need of extraordinary vigilance, and is now organizing an additional motorcycle force.

"The sheriff and city police force, according to my information, are working in harmony, cooperating with each other and are willing to cooperate with any efforts by state authorities.

"The reason that violators of the law have not been apprehended heretofore is because they operate in flying squadrons. They flit around in automobiles, pounce upon their victim, flog him and are gone before the sheriff's office or the police department knows anything about it. From the very nature of these operations, a military force would be of little or no service at the present time.

"Sheriff Hicks expects to call meetings of civic bodies and to ask the cooperation and assistance of all law-abiding citizens in giving more prompt reports of disorders or any preliminary signs of disorder. He also will ask for additional rewards by the civic organizations.

"I have offered to call out the militia if conditions indicate that military interference is needed and have been assured by the sheriff that he will call upon me for aid if the situation demands it."

Expect Other Arrests.

"We expect to make other arrests within forty-eight hours," said Sheriff J. B. Hicks, Jr. The county official would not tell what had been disclosed in his examination of the three brothers.

The prisoners have been separated in the county jail.

The police admitted they were at work on the theory that the three men, who were caught by officers last night in the act of flogging a negro, one with a mask still covering his face, are part of a gang that has been conducting wholesale whippings in the city.

Sheriff J. R. Hicks, Jr., who is putting the three Hudsons through a third degree examination in connection with last night's round-up of floggers, announced tonight that one of

Flogging Victim Placed in Jail On Lunacy Writ

Macon Man Lost Mind as Result of Whipping, Is Belief.

Macon, Ga., October 8.—(Special.) One of the victims of the "flogging gang" in Macon, Ben Green, of Columbus road, a carpenter, who was taken out and whipped last summer, was today committed to jail on a writ of lunacy sworn out by his wife.

According to relatives, Green imagined last Friday morning that he was being attacked by someone while on his way to work and, returning home that night, he discharged a shotgun through the floor of his dwelling. Today he was stopped by a man while going to work. The man asked him where he was employed and Green, who was with his little daughter, was badly frightened.

Today Green, accompanied by his wife and two daughters, went to the sheriff's office, one of the girls carrying a shotgun with her. Green exhibited signs of fear while talking with deputy sheriffs and Mrs. Green, on advice of the sheriff, took out the writ of lunacy.

Mrs. Green told the sheriff the family moved a few days after the flogging, but received an unsigned letter stating they had not moved far enough. Since then the family has moved three times.

Mrs. Green says her husband's health has steadily declined since he was flogged.

YARBROUGH TRIAL TO BE REVIEWED

Case Transferred to Georgia Court of Appeals by Attorneys for Dentist

MACON, GA., Oct. 1.—The fight of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, local dentist, to secure dismissal of the charge of riot made against him in connection with flogging of W. O. Barnett, harness manufacturer, today was moved from the Macon city court to the Georgia court of appeals.

10-2-23

Attorneys for the dentist forwarded to Atlanta during the day a bill of exceptions to an order by City Judge Will Gunn overruling a demurrer of the defense at the outset of the recent hearing which ended in a mistrial.

The demurrer asserted that the charge against Dr. Yarbrough, which stated that "Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, together with, other persons to the deponent unknown," conspired to riot, was improper in that it did not name any persons other than the dentist. The jury which heard the case stood 9 to 3 for conviction when it was dismissed.

At the same time that the attorneys announced the appeal on behalf of Dr. Yarbrough, J. P. Durkee, organizer for the Ku Klux Klan here, who is charged with rioting in connection with the flogging of R. F. Mills, chiropodist on November 4, 1922, filed a motion in city court demanding immediate trial. Under the law h must be tried either at the present term of during the December term of court.

STATE SPEEDS UP YARBROUGH TRIAL, WILL REST TODAY

Barnett Gives Account of Whipping When Dentist Faces Jury for Third Time in Floggings.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Macon, Ga., October 22.—Trial of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, dentist, charged with rioting in connection with the flogging of W. O. Barnett, on February 27, was speeded up today, so that it was indicated the state will rest before noon tomorrow.

The last witnesses on the stand this afternoon were B. A. Harley, World war veteran, and W. W. Arnold, both of whom recited, as during the previous trials of the dentist, that they were flogged by a gang of unmasked men. Both declared that Dr. Yarbrough was a member of the flogging party.

During the morning, immediately after the jury was obtained, Barnett also told how he had been lured from his office on the pretext that his child had been run over by an automobile, being driven away in an automobile with strange men to be whipped.

The case on trial is the same as the one in which a mistrial was declared a few days ago. The testimony is the same as presented at that trial

Only Small Crowd.

During the afternoon letters alleged to have been written by Dr. Yarbrough were identified and a typewriter expert said that the work was done on his machine. This is the third trial of Dr. Yarbrough. In the first case there was a verdict of acquittal.

As in the previous cases the jury was kept together when recess was taken this afternoon, two deputies being assigned to guard them.

At previous trials the courtroom was crowded, but today there was only a small crowd.

J. P. Durkee, local Ku Klux Klan organizer, also accused of implication in the floggings, will be put on trial after Dr. Yarbrough's case is disposed of, it is expected.

Jurors Are Chosen.

Most of the morning session was taken up with the selection of a jury.

The following compose the jury: B. L. Garrett, bank teller; J. T. Moulton, Jr., contractor; George T. Bush, foreman at Central railroad; R. O. Roland, carpenter; C. B. Campbell, blacksmith; M. B. Johnston, painter; George W. Barnes, salesman; A. D. Sewell, grocer; W. R. Woodard, clerk at Georgia Casualty company; H. T. Bryant, farmer; J. F. Brice, boilermaker; C. M. Millsons, agent.

Barnett Takes Stand.

The first witness to take the stand was W. O. Barnett, the main witness. He testified that he operated a harness shop at 407 Poplar street. Between 8 and 9 o'clock the night he was whipped a stranger came upstairs in his place of business and told him that one of his children had been run over by an automobile and that he was wanted at home, he testified.

Barnett said he rushed down stairs, closing his place of business and got into an automobile with the stranger. Three other men were in the car, he testified on being examined by the solicitor, Roy Moore. He said he sat in the rear seat between the man who came into his place and Dr. Yarbrough.

Dr. Yarbrough was the only person that would do any talking, the witness said, in answering questions of Solicitor Moore. He said he asked which of his children had been run down but nobody seemed to know whether it was his little son or daughter.

Tells of Whipping.

The car was driven up Poplar street, the witness said, and near the Catholic church it choked down. "The man driving finally started the car again and Dr. Yarbrough said 'all right,' and suddenly I was handcuffed, blindfolded and gagged," said Barnett.

"I did not know Dr. Yarbrough at the time," testified the witness on cross-examination. He said the machine was driven around town and finally to an old park out in the woods. Here he was taken out. In the meantime, another car of men came up. "Those in the car with me and the others juggled a little bit and Dr. Yarbrough ordered the men to throw me down," said the witness

"Dr. Yarbrough had the strap and hit me half a dozen licks, I suppose," said Barnett, answering a question of the solicitor. He said he was searched after he was whipped.

Asked by the solicitor if he was told any reason for being whipped, Barnett said the men charged him with not treating his children properly and told him that he had a woman working at his shop that he either had to get rid of or marry.

Went Back Home.

In answer to questions of the solicitor, Barnett said that he walked back to the Vineville car line and rode home, as the men who carried him out left him there. He found on reaching home that none of his children had been run over by an automobile, he said.

Next he saw Dr. Yarbrough in Steve Wright's drug store, he testified. He said Dr. Yarbrough was standing at the soda fountain. He said he recognized him as the man on the rear seat of the automobile with him the night he was carried out and flogged. He walked up to the soda fountain to get a good look at him, the witness testified, but Dr. Yarbrough turned his back on him, he said.

Barnett, on cross examination, testified that he did not know or recognize any other men in the automobile other than Dr. Yarbrough.

Judge John J. Ross conducted the examination for the defendant. He began by asking Barnett about the woman employee mentioned at the time he was whipped. He said that he had more than one woman working for him and at various times had employed as many as fifty women at is place of business.

Jury Is Excluded.

Judge Will Gunn, who is presiding, excluded the jury when objections were raised to question the counsel for the defense relative to intimacy that they sought to prove existed between Barnett and a woman employee whose name was not mentioned.

Judge ruled that counsel for the defense could not cross examine the witness relative to moral relationship between the witness and women employees. Barnett testified that he had a gas stove at his shop and that frequently one of the women working there cooked his and her meals there.

The trial here was featured by tilts between Attorney Ross and Judge Gunn, who ruled that some of the questions of the defense were legally and properly asked and that some of them were not legal.

The defense is represented by Attorneys John P. Ross, W. A. McClellan and E. F. Goodrum. Solicitor Moore is prosecuting the case unaided. The trial is the same case in which a mistrial was declared recenly, when the jury stood 9 to 3 for conviction after deliberating more than 70 hours.

Klansmen Parade Smyrna Streets

With a fiery cross borne at the head of their column, a band of members of the Ku Klux Klan, clad in the white robes of the order, paraded in single file in the streets of Smyrna and afterward held a public demonstration Saturday night. More than fifty klansmen were counted in the procession, and a crowd of more than 500 citizens gathered in the heart of the city to watch them and to hear a speech on klan principles. The speaker was introduced by J. Gid Morris, Mayor of Smyrna.

After the speaking the band dispersed. The occasion was marked by orderliness and precision in every detail of assembly and disbandment. Several rockets were discharged before the procession began, and added to the natural illumination of lightning gave a spectacular appearance to the affair.

RIOT SUSPECT IS GIVEN FREEDOM ON BOND

Man Held for Attack on Milledgeville School Asks Grand Jury Hearing

MILLEDGEVILE, Ga., August 19.—J. J. Nolan, charged in a warrant issued August 10, by Mrs. Orian W. Manson, superintendent of the Georgia Training School for Boys, with being implicated in rioting, Saturday waived commitment trial by demanding through his attorneys an indictment by the grand jury of the Baldwin Superior Court which convenes next in January, 1924.

Nolan is charged in the warrant with being implicated in the raid on the negro building of the Georgia Training School for Boys the night of August 3 when a number of men entered the institution and demanded that Tom and Mary Thomas leave the place within five days following the night of the raid. The night of August 7 another raid of men went to the institution, demanding entrance. At the point of an automatic shot gun held by Dr. H. C. Wood, of Irwinton, Acting Superintendent during the absence of Mrs. Manson, the mob turned from its planned procedure.

Solicitor Doyle Campbell, of the Ocmulgee Circuit Superior Court, was here at the request of Governor Walker to take charge of the prosecution of Nolan.

In the waiving of commitment trial and demand of grand jury indictment a bond of $500 for appearance at the next term of Baldwin Superior Court was made by Nolan. The court room was well crowded with spectators, though no excitement prevailed at any time. Nolan, formerly an employe of the Georgia Training School, was given notice of his discharge from the institution in June to become effective August 1.

YARBROUGH CASE RAPIDLY NEARING HANDS OF JURORS

FLOGGING EPISODES DESCRIBED ON STAND

Victims and Witnesses Tell in Detail of Lashings—Defense Attempts to Impeach Stories.

Macon, Ga., September 25.—(By the Associated Press.)—Taking of testimony in the case of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, charged with rioting in connection with the whipping of W. O. Barnett, proceeded so rapidly today that the defense at 6:20 o'clock announced that it had run out of witnesses and asked for a recess until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. Attorneys after adjournment stated that they expected the case to reach the jury stage by noon and that it was possible that the arguments would be concluded and the jury start consideration of the case by night.

The state rested its case shortly after court convened for the afternoon session and the defense at once began offering character witnesses in an effort to impeach the state's witnesses. The state today declined to cross-examine any of the defense character witnesses and as a result the specific instances of alleged bad actions on the part of accusers of Dr. Yarbrough were brought out as in the trial two weeks ago of the Mills flogging case.

Four Hours' Argument.

Attorneys will be allowed four hours for argument when the case reaches the jury stage, two hours for each side, it was announced.

Solicitor Moore stated that another flogging case would be called immediately after the present trial is ended, but declined to state which defendant would be put on trial. At the end of this week, however, if present plans are carried out, the flogging cases will be laid aside and civil business of the court taken up. One court official said that it was probable that cases other than those reached this week would not be called until the December term.

Trial of the Barnett case was accelerated considerably today when Judge Will Gunn, presiding in city court, ruled that testimony regarding the flogging of R. F. Mills, of Hapeville, Ga., former Macon barber and chiropodist, could not be used in any other of the cases against Dr. Yarbrough, because the dentist had been acquitted on the charge. He ruled that such testimony would serve to impeach a verdict of the court duly rendered.

The defense in opening its case introduced into the record articles in The Macon Telegraph and The Macon News regarding the rewards offered by various persons and organizations for arrest and conviction of the alleged floggers. A page efrom the ledger of Dr. Yarbrough, showing the account of W. W. Arnold, one of his accusers, was also introduced and Chief Counsel John P. Ross read into the record portions of the transcript of the testimony of W. O. Barnett and Arnold at the trial of the Mills case which he said varied from the testimony given today.

Evangelist Called.

Rev. T. F. Callaway, evangelist for the Georgia Baptist convention and former pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church here, was the first witness called. He told of going to the office of W. O. Barnett at the latter's request. When he arrived there, he said, Barnett asked him first if he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and second if he had heard anything derogatory to his (Barnett's) character. The evangelist said he told Barnett he was not a member of the klan and also that he had never heard anything derogatory about him. Barnett then asked him, the witness said, to preach a sermon against the Ku Klux Klan. He said that he told Barnett he doubted the wisdom of attacking any organization in a general evangelistic campaign such as he was carrying on. He said Barnett told him he did not know any of the men who flogged him.

String of character witnesses who testified in the Mills case then was put on the stand and each was excused after he had been asked the statutory questions about the character of various of the state's witnesses. Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Vann, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wheaton, W. G. Evans, J. C. Turner, P. T. Reynolds, all of Macon, and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Spear, of Americus testified that they regarded Barnett's character as bad.

Say Character Bad.

Dr. W. O. Stevens, a druggist, was placed on the witness stand to attack Barnett's character but declared that he did not know the prosecuting witness and had never heard of him until the Mills case trial. He was unable to qualify as a character witness and was excused.

Patrolman Bob Thomas and J. R. Roberts testified that the character of W. W. Arnold was bad, while similar testimony was given about R. A. Hartley by A. J. Searles and J. W. Allen.

Rev. H. H. Connell, pastor of the Bellevue Baptist church, was called by the defense and asked about a visit he and Dr. Yarbrough made to the home of W. C. Quarterbaum. Quarterbaum, a vocational training student at Mercer university, testified this morning that Rev. Connell had told him in Dr. Yarbrough's presence that Dr. Yarbrough was in touch with men who would do things when the officers failed to act. The minister testified that he told Quarterbaum that Dr. Yarbrough knew men in the sheriff's office and could get quicker action possibly than either he or Quarterbaum. In the Mills trial, Rev. Connell, when asked if he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, said that he preferred not to answer and was excused without replying. Today, however, the solicitor asked him this question and he replied "I don't know." He said that he signed an application for membership seven months ago, and attended one meeting. He said he had never paid the membership fee and had been told that he was not a member of the klan.

Vigil in Cemetery.

The bright spot of the day's proceedings, which were largely a repetition of the occurrences in the Mills case was when J. P. Durkee organizer for the Ku Klux Klan was placed on the stand. He had testified regarding events in connection with the Mills case at the previous trial, but with ruling out of events connected with that case he could not be questioned about certain letters introduced at that time. Today Solicitor Moore questioned about a trip he, Dr. Yarbrough J. D. Patrick, Delamar and another man made to a cemetery here. He testified that they went to the cemetery to watch a house nearby where one of their members had been reported to have been going to see a woman. They remained until after midnight and their watch brought no results. This testimony, however, was stricken from the record by Judge Gunn on objection by the defense that it was not related to the case on trial.

SIMMONS DEPICTS KLAN AS CRUMBLING

He Appeals to Clarke to Return to Altanta and Take Control of Order.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 18.—William J. Simmons, Emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, sent a long telegram today to Edward Young Clark at Indianapolis, pleading with him to return to Atlanta and assume control of the Ku Klux Klan and the Knights of Kamelia to save the two organizations from "disorganization and ruin."

He offered to Clarke the title of Sir Knight Supreme of the Knights of Kamelia with the declaration that this office delegates to Mr. Clarke "full and complete executive administrative authority over all matters pertaining to the Klan and the Kamelia."

In his message Simmons said in part: "The development and progress of the Ku Klux Klan is stopped and disintegration is setting in throughout the entire bounds of the invisible empire, due to the lack of leadership and want of constructive programs of activity. . .

"The stress under which the Klan is now passing calls for your leadership . . . The order of Americanism, constructed through your genius, is threatened everywhere with disorganization. Every constructive plan has been abandoned and the organization is without objective and without leadership, capable of making and defining a scheme for progressive operations. You alone can allay the restlessness in the order and reclaim the membership that is breaking away.

MACON POLICE ARE ON FLOGGING TRAIL

Hudson Brothers Tell of Organized Band Which Has Terrorized City for Weeks

MACON, GA., Aug. 20.—From information obtained from the three Hudson brothers, arrested last night in the act of flogging two negroes, the police tonight were preparing to round up an organized flogging band which has been terrorizing Macon for several weeks, according to the police.

During the last fortnight several men have been whipped and ordered to leave town within forty-eight hours, and at intervals during the last six months scores of men have been flogged. The climax in the disorders was reached early Saturday when the police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers after they had kidnapped a man from in front of the railroad station. Governor Walker threatened to place the city under martial law.

A confession from one of the Hudsons, the police said, was expected during the night and names of those who have been financing the floggers would be made public.

"We expect to make other arrests within forty-eight hours," said Sheriff J. B. Hicks, Jr. The county official would not tell what had been disclosed in his examination of the three brothers.

The police admitted that they were at work on the theory that the three men, who were caught by officers last night in the act of flogging one with a mask still covering his face, are part of a gang that has been conducting wholesale whippings in the city.

"We are trying to bring out of these men the names of those whom we believe financed their operations," the sheriff declared. "It seems almost certain that others supplied the money and issued orders for the operations of the gang," he added.

The federal government entered the case today when post office inspectors joined forces with the city authorities to apprehend gangsters who held up a mail motor truck Saturday and attempted to remove Charley Mike, negro, from the vehicle for the purpose of whipping him. Yarbrough Jury Is Discharged By Judge Gunn Deliberators Deadlocked at 9 to 3 for Conviction of Dentist.

Macon, Ga., September 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—Sixty-eight hours and forty minutes after they had taken the case of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, charged with riot in connection with the flogging outrages here, the members of the jury in the second flogging trial here were discharged by City Judge Will Gunn. The jury since yesterday morning had stood 9 to 3 for conviction of the dentist who the state alleged was the leader of a gang of men who used the lash as a means of punishing men reported to them as having committed indiscretions or broken laws.

The trial of the case, the second of a series of six in which the dentist is accused, was started last Monday. Taking of evidence and arguments were concluded Wednesday afternoon and the case went to the jury at 4:29 p. m. Dr. Yarbrough was charged with taking part in the flogging of W. O. Barnett.

The first ballot, according to jurors, stood six and six. The next three showed changes but after the fourth the jury at all times stood 9 to 3 for conviction. Jurors declined to say how many ballots were taken but added that "four or five" votes a day were had.

City Solicitor Roy W. Moore today said that it was probable that no more of the flogging cases, in which nine defendants have been named, will be heard before the December term of court. For the next two weeks civil cases will be heard and during the last half of October superior court will be held in the courtroom. It is possible, it was said, although improbable, that Judge Gunn might call a special jury and start hearings on other flogging cases during November. Solicitor Moore said this afternoon that the Yarbrough case would be tried again.

KU KLUX KLAN MAKES A RAID ON GEORGIA SCHOOL

Governor Orders Guards After Masked Mob Seeks Man And Wife In Charge Of Negro Dept.

Preston News Service.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 15.—Following two raids on the Georgia Training School by masked bands, Governor Walker has ordered guards placed at the instituion here. It is said that the raiders were seeking Thomas Thomas and his wife, who are in charge of the Negro department of the institution. It is said that the masked marauders could not find Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and finally they came across a Negro said to be a brother of Thomas and severely whipped him.

According to Mrs. Oyain Mattson, superintendent of the institution, one of the leaders of the raiding party was a former employee of the school. She also said that she could see no reason why there should exists any reason to molest Mr. Thomas or any of the other Negro attendants. All of the Negroes connected with the institution are loved and respected by all the immates, both white and colored.

MARTIAL LAW NOT NEEDED

Georgia Governor Says Guard Chief Thinks It Unnecessary In Macon.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 19.—Governor Walker declared here early tonight he was in communication with Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, who had been sent to Macon to investigate flogging cases for the purpose, if necessary, of declaring martial law. The military commander reported the situation quiet in Macon and that he did not believe at this time martial law was needed, the governor said.

CAN THE KOO-KOO CONTROL COBB

MARIETTA, GA., Con — SEP 6 - 1923

Politics like the poor we have with us always in Cobb and while the state primary is a year off and the county primary will in all probability, not be held before April of next year there are already rumors of candidates and policies. In some cases statements tantamount to public announcements have been made, in others there is merely an intention and some only hope, but the outlook is for a busy year politically and the elections to be held will exert a greater influence on the county and state than any with the memory of the present generation, for here in Cobb all the signs point to a straight out fight for control of county affairs by the Ku Klux Klan.

If this is to be the case, and from statements made publicly by leaders of the local Koo-Koo, it is true, the fight as well begin early and be thoroughly threshed out, so that the people of the county when they go to the polls can decide whether they wish to live under domination of the Marietta klan or remain in the paths which they have tried.

Members of the Klan or those popularly supposed to govern its affairs, for no man may know who really is a part of the "Invisible Empire," have said the Klan of their crowd means at the coming election to fill every county office and not content with that, to elect the Solicitor General and Judge of the Superior court of this circuit.

Marietta cyclops and goblins have boasted that they now control certain county offices, through members placed in them, and that they intend to take he remainder next year. . In positive terms they have admitted their intention to place on the bench of this circuit a Judge who will be subservient to their wishes and will take orders from the local gizzard.

The guantlet has been thrown and in terms unmistakeable.

Either citizens of Cobb county must prepare for four years of government by a masked body whose members do not allow even their names to be known and whose only outward appearances here has been sheeted, hooded and masked or they must prepare to make a fight.

The Times, for its part, expects to do battle as best it can, for it cannot concede that anything other than harm can come to Cobb county through government by mask.

It does not believe that the good women of this county are so reduced that they must be defended by men who dare not show their faces or allow their names to become public.

It does not think that religion in Cobb county has reached the pass where it must be defended by men, whom when questioned deny their allegience.

It does not consider that Cobb county schools have been so contaminated that they must be cleansed by the purification of the mask.

It cannot see that Cobb county business needs the boycott.

Above all, it can conceive of no reason why Cobb county citizens—freemen born and accustomed to exercising the rights of liberty—should be placed at the mercy of a particular organization or crowd, who aim to dominate purely for the sake of forcing down the throats of the community certain ideas of their own.

The thinking citizen must see and recognize the infinite danger which lies in the thing, even if it were accompanied by the holiest motives, and no one has accused the local Koo-Koo of any motive except controlling politics for the sake of the offices.

The K. K. K. is a sworn brotherhood..

It accounts, on its admission, those not with it as against it. Place in authority officers drawn from its ranks and see where fairness, justice and right go.

Suppose for a moment that we had in Cobb county a Sheriff member of the Koo-Koo, would he enforce the law if his crowd flogged a man, as the Klan has been accused of doing. If he failed to would there be any security of person in this county. Could a citizen "who not being for must be against" go to his bed at night with the assurance of a night's rest or would he be tortured by visions of sheeted figures, secure and unalarmed, since they controlled the machinery of the law.

If the Solicitor general were a member of the organization could indictments be expected or convictions had, against masked attacks on persons and property in the county?

If the tax officers were in the gang could fair assessments and impartial collection be expected?

These are, however, small, compared to the danger to be expected should one of them be elected to the Superior court bench. For in the bench, through its power to select jury commissioners, lies the last resort of democratic government.

Suppose we had a K. K. K. judge. Naturally he would select as Jury Commissioners his friends from among the ones who parade in a dirty sheet in the rain. These men have in their keeping the jury lists of the county. They select the Grand and Traverse Jurors of the county; the first with oversight over county affairs and the power to investigate crime, the latter to try litigation involving the rights of property and pass on the guilt of persons accused of crime. What chance would one "who is not with us and must be against us" have to be selected as a Grand Juror of his county or to sit on the traverse jury? How much justice could a litigant not a Koo-Koo obtain from one who is, before a jury composed of Koo-Koos?

Is it probable a defendant not a klansman would be given a fair trial before a Klan jury, with a Klansman solicitor and a Klan judge, when presecuted by a member of the Invisible Empire? On the other hand suppose a citizen is taken out and handled by the Klan—just how it doesn't matter in Oklahoma it is partial to tar and feather parties, in Macon it is charged it prefers the lash, anyway suppose you, Mr Citizen, are because you happen to be in the bad graces of the Klan of an individual member are taken out to be regulated. You recognize one of the masked dastards—the hidden bullies. Could you convict him before a Klan drawn jury of Klansman, in a Klan ruled court, with a Klansman for a prosecutor?

These are some of the questions which Cobb county people will be called upon to decide for themselves in the next few months. It is well to begin consideration now. To watch newspapers for reports of what the Klan is doing elsewhere, to determine what sort of men its officials are and where they are leading the deluded $10 per head noviatiates, who ignorant of their real purpose, follow blindly.

There have been times in the past when men were to be decided upon and there have been others when principles were at stake in elections here, but next year we face one question and that is:

Is the Ku Klux Klan crowd to Control Cobb county?

Negro Steers His Auto Into Embankment When Man Leaps on Running Board—Struggles With White Men While Passersby Notify Sheriff—His Men Come Upon Party Struggling With Negro, Report.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 19.—The first gang of alleged kidnapers and floggers which have been terrorizing Macon for the last six months was captured here tonight by sheriff's officers. Three white men, brothers, S. R. Hudson, C. F. Hudson and J. C. Hudson, were taken to jail tonight after they had been captured, officers said, while in the act of flogging two negroes.

The capture of the trio is said to be due to the daring work of a negro, Emory Roberts, whom the gang tried to pull from an automobile for the purpose of whipping.

Another negro was whipped by the same gang a few minutes before, it was stated.

When one of the men jumped onto the running board of the negro's automobile and commanded him to stop, the negro stepped on the gas and left the two brothers at the roadside. The white man in the car whistled for his brothers to join him, but before they could do so the big automobile was plunged into an embankment.

Persons passing the scene in other cars phoned the sheriff's office and immediately twenty men were rushed to the scene in automobiles and motorcycles. The whole city and county anti-flogging squad was on the way.

Officers Interrupt Party.

Three miles out from the city the sheriff's force claim to have come up on the members of the gang, struggling with the negro. Farther back on the same road was an untagged seven-passenger automobile, which the brothers were said to have used. Still further back was a coupe which also is said to have been used by the same gang.

There may have been others in the whipping party of tonight. The authorities are still investigating.

In the tonneau of the larger car the sheriff's deputies found three leather masks and one cloth mask. Another mask was said to have been worn by one of the Hudsons as he jumped on to the running board of the negroes' machine.

He still wore the mask, the officers said, when they reached the scene.

There was a pice of hevay felt, which was wet, and which the sheriff's deputies said was for use as a gag.

There also was a small sledge hammer.

The sheriff's force reported that the Hudsons had given them considerable trouble in recent years.

It was the opinion in the sheriff's office that the Hudsons were not attached to any organized flogging band, but were operating on their own hook.

Held Without Bond.

S. R. Hudson gave his age as 35 years; C. F., as 27, and J. C., as 24. The county jailer was instructed not to accept bond for the men in the event any be offered during the night pending a decision as to the other charges to be placed against the men.

During the days of old Camp Wheeler, according to the sheriff's office, the Hudsons figured in numerous difficulties. Some of them were taxicab drivers, it was stated, and one of them killed another taxicab driver, the sheriff said.

Because of the past record of the Hudsons, it was learned at the sheriff's office an hour after the arrests an investigation is being made to determine if they are paid gangsters, receiving a certain amount of money for each flogging.

Sheriff Hicks stated that revolvers which the negro said the men had, apparently were thrown away during the excitement. The deputies are hunting with flashlights for the guns.

Associated Press Report.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 19.—The first band of alleged kidnapers and floggers which have been terrorizing Macon for the last six months was captured here tonight by sheriff officers. Three white men, brothers, S. R. Hudson, C. F. Hudson and J. C. Hudson were taken to jail tonight aftey they had been captured, officers said, while in the act of flogging two negroes.

8-20-23

The capture of the trio is said to be due to the daring work of a negro, Emory Roberts, whom the gang tried to pull from an automobile for the purpose of whipping.

Another negro was whipped by the same gang a few minutes before, it was stated.

The only other event of the day that brought out the police anti-flogging squad was an attempt to hold up and rob a United States mail truck between the terminal station and the post office. The police squad was organized recently to work exclusively on flogging cases.

Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, after a conference with local police authorities, the sheriff, and General H. D. Russell, commander of the Georgia National Guard, left for Atlanta late today, and will recommend to Governor Walker that there be no martial law in Macon at this time, growing out of the flogging situation.

The adjutant general was ordered to Macon last night by the governor after police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers and J. B. Hartley, a world war veteran, reported to the police he had been flogged by a gang of men. The Hartley flogging was the last of about a score of whippings reported to the police during the last 10 days.

The adjutant general said he would issue a statement on the Macon mob situation after he reported to the governor.

City and county officers in conference late today decided to round up all automobiles not bearing state license tags.

Kidnapers' automobiles have borne no tags.

Appeals were made to citizens to report all kidnapings promptly. More secret work will be done in both departments, it was stated, to combat the secret activities of the kidnaping gangs.

No arrests were reported in Hartley's case today. Rewards totaling $2100 have been offered by the State and county for the arrest and conviction of the "floggers," and appeals will be made this week to all civil service clubs to increase the rewards.

ALLEGED FLOGGERS FACE TRIAL TODAY

Atlanta Constitution

Macon, Ga., September 23.—(By the Associated Press.)—Wallace Miller, former assistant United States district attorney, noted as a criminal lawyer, has been retained to assist City Solicitor Roy W. Moore in the prosecution of the Macon flogging cases, it became known here tonight. Trial of the cases, postponed last Monday, will be resumed in city court tomorrow morning. 9-24-23

F. H. Lamb, who assisted Mr. Moore in the prosecution of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough when the dentist was tried on a charge of riot in connection with the flogging of R. F. Mills, former Macon barber and chiropodist, will continue to assist in the prosecution, it was stated.

Solicitor Moore tonight declined to announce which of the nine defendants in the flogging cases would be placed on trial tomorrow. He said that it was certain that the trials would be be resumed but that he was not in position to announce at this time which it would be.

There are six more charges against Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, in addition to the one on which he was acquitted a week ago. Besides these cases, J. F. Alexander is charged with rioting and assault and battery in connection with the flogging of Ollie Perry; J. P. Durkee, Ku Klux Klan membership solicitor for Macon and Bibb county, with riot in connection with the flogging of R. F. Mills; J. D. Patrick, W. F. Delamar and J. K. Bloodworth with riot in connection with the flogging of R. F. Mills; and S. R. J. C. and C. F. Hudson, brothers, are charged with having attempted to whip a negro.

The case of J. C. Alexander is the first on tomorrow's docket, but if Judge Will Gunn of the city court presides, this case will not be called. Judge Gunn is distantly related to Alexander, and for this reason is disqualified.

Solicitor Moore, in setting the cases over for one week, announced that he had discovered new evidence in the cases, which he desired to look up before taking up any of the other cases. He declined to state what this evidence was.

JUDGES FEAR OVERTHROW OF LAW BY VIOLATORS

MILLEDGEVILLE, GA., Aug. 24.—J. J. Nolan, charged with being a member of a mob which invaded the State reformatory for boys here recently, waived commitment trial today and was bound over in $500 bond to the grand jury. The mob was said to have attempted to obtain negro attendants for the purpose of whipping them.

The Pittsburgh

After the mob invasion a machine gun was mounted at the reformatory school to protect it. Rewards for apprehension of members of the mob were offered by Governor Walker.

Nolan is said to be a former guard at the reformatory.

For More Protection

Mrs. Orien W. Manson, superintendent at the training school, has requested Governor Walker to provide two additional machine guns. The Governor has taken steps to provide the guns and has ordered a special investigation of the mob visits.

When the mob reached the reformatory at midnight recently and demanded of officials that the Negro attendants be turned over to it the acting superintendent threatened the visitors with a shotgun and they left, just before the Sherriff arrived. At a previous visit a smaller mob had made the same request but dispersed.

Court's Strong Language

Judge Moran, in fixing Nolan's bond said, "At the rate this thing is going it will not be long before mob law will have supplanted organized law and the very foundation of our government itself will be undermined. Not only are they terrorizing the law-abiding citizens of the country but they are simply ruining the reputation of the Ku Klux Klan.

"It does seem, if the Ku Klux Klan are really sincere in their claim to promote law and order, they would disband and go out of business, since they realize, as they must undoubtedly realize, that any other mob or set of regulators has the same right to operate as they have."

Soon after the raid on the reformatory Mrs. Manson said she believed the Ku Klux Klan had no part in the raids.

ARREST IS MADE IN MACON PROBE

Atlanta Constitution

Macon, Ga., September 8.—Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, prominent Macon dentist, was re-arrested in his office here at noon today on five additional warrants in connection with recent Macon floggings. Two warrants charged rioting, two charged assault and battery and another charged pointing a pistol at another. All five were bench warrants and carried no specific allegations. 9-9-23

He made bond a short time after the warrants were served in the sum of $12,500. He was required to give $2,500 bail in each case. The only statement that Yarbrough would make was that he was innocent and was willing to leave his fate to 12 jurors of his home city and county.

He is already under a $5,000 bond, as the result of his arrest last Tuesday night on warrants charging him with rioting and assault and battery.

Another Man Held.

The warrants against J. E. Bloodworth, who was arrested here today, charged that he in company with others did seize and transport R. F. Mills over the roads in Bibb county for the purpose of flogging him on the night of January 13, 1922. Bloodworth travels for a dry goods commission house here.

Announcement was made today that Judge John P. Ross has been retained as counsel to assist in the defense of Dr. Yarbrough, J. D. Patrick and W. F. Delamar, who were arrested last Tuesday night charged with assault and battery and rioting.

The five warrants served today make a total of seven against Dr Yarbrough.

At least five arrests, and possibly more, were to be made today, according to Roy W. Moore, city court solicitor, in connection with information connecting Macon and Milledgeville members of the Ku Klux Klan with two invasions of the State Training School for Boys last month for the alleged purpose of kidnapping two negro employees, which is said to have been secured by county officials who are investigating the invasions. The information, according to county authorities was secured during the investigation of a conference of klansmen which is said to have been held in an abandoned house ten miles from here last Monday. The nature of the information was not made public.

M. O. Dunning, chief staff of the Georgia Ku Klux Klan, yesterday notified authorities here that he was coming from Milledgeville with information that may be of value to the investigators.

The trial of seven men, held here in connection with recent floggings, are scheduled to be held here next week. Soliciter Moore declared last night that the state "had an inexhaustible supply of testimony to be presented at the trials.

Investigators working on the klan's connection with the recent floggings are said to have uncovered the information relative to the meeting of the klansmen in the abandoned house and the klans connection with the Milledgeville invasions.

The invasions at the Milledgeville school last month followed the removal of J. J. Molan, farm foreman of the institution, by the superintendent. The raiders drove up to the school in automobiles and demanded Tom and Mary Thomas, negro attendants, and then whipped Jim Douglas, negro, in an effort to locate the two. A negro inmate of the institution committed suicide during the raiding, according to reports made to the state executive department. Machine guns were order installed for protection from further raids and Nolan, the former foreman, was arrested. His case is still pend-

Unmasked Men in Automobiles Kidnap and Carry Victims Into Country for Whipping. 8-11-23

Macon, Ga., August 10.—Police received reports today that four persons, all white, were kidnaped by unmasked men during last night, taken to the country in automobiles and whipped.

The names furnished by the police and sheriff's deputies as victims of last night's kidnapings are: R. E. Bobo, proprietor of a small grocery store; Ollie M. Perry, under indictments in connection with alleged illicit liquor traffic; Gus Roberts, said to have been a friend of Perry's, who was found in Perry's house, and J. B. Goodyear, the latter said to have occupied part of the residence of Deputy Sheriff Wiltse Birdsong.

R. E. Bobo, storekeeper in a negro settlement here, was kidnaped and carried to the country last night by a band of men and severely whipped. After being whipped he was left in the woods to walk home.

He arrived at the home of his brother, B. Bobo, at 7 o'clock this morning, practically exhausted. He was whipped so severely that the skin was broken in a number of places about his body and these wounds had bled considerably. No arrests have been made but police are investigating. The whipping took place shortly after last midnight after Bobo closed his store for the day.

Bobo stated this morning that the men told him that he had mistreated a woman living in one of his houses and that was why they whipped him. He called a physician to dress his wounds after reaching his brother's home. Bobo said a heavy leather strap was used by the men to whip him. He was unable to identify any of them.

The whippings of last night follows closely on the heels of a chain of other whippings that attracted nation-wide attention because of the prominence of the victims. These included Dr. Eugene Schreiber, formerly of Boston, Mass.; Dr. R. N. Mills, Lynwood L. Bright and others.

In the Bright case Mrs. Frederick Pace, of New York, also was kidnaped, but she was not whipped.

Bobo was carried about six miles into the country, where he says he was told to lie face downward on the ground. While in that position, he says, the lash was applied.

"They told me to tell my friends that they did a good job," said Bobo when he appeared in the downtown district at 6:30 o'clock this morning. Bobo called a taxicab and was carried to his home. He is under the care of a physician. Bobo insisted that he did not know why he was whipped.

At the home of Ollie Perry reporters were denied admission to his home. Perry's wife, however, said tonight that her husband was unable to leave his bed.

While the county and city officers have conducted investigations of all of the whippings of last night and the ones that preceeded, there have been no arrests. Dr. Mills promised to go before the grand jury, but he left town instead.

Ceremonial Held in Georgia Capitol, Marquardt Testimies.

(By the Associated Press.)

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 17.—The Ku Klux Klan initiated several new members at a ceremonial held in a room of the state capitol here the closing night of the recent Georgia Legislature's session, Louis P. Marquardt, an attache of Solicitor-Gen. John A. Boykin's office, testified in Fulton superior court today. He appeared as a witness in the hearing of a contempt petition brought by Nathan Bedford Forrest Klan No. 1, against imperial officers who are charged with enlisting members of the second klan branch in Atlanta in violation of a restraining order issued by Judge George L. Bell. 9-18-23

The ceremonial was held in room 321 of the building, Marquardt testified, which is occupied by the state game commission. He said no one seemed to know at the time of the meeting where the authority for use of the room came from.

SPIED ON KLAN HALL AFTER BEING LASHED

Witness Identifies Yarbrough as Whipping Boss.

Memphis Scimitar

(By the Associated Press.)

MACON, Ga., Sept. 24.—How he stood in a darkened hallway near the hall in which the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan hold their meetings every night for weeks and watched members of the klan going and coming from the hall, was told in city court here today by W. O. Barnett, harness manufacturer, who was flogged by a band of men on Feb. 17, 1923. The story was told in city court, where Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, prominent dentist, is on trial charged with rioting in connection with the flogging of Barnett. 9-25-23

Barnett told how a man had called him from his place of business the night of Feb. 17, telling him that one of his children had been struck by an automobile. He went with the man and got into an automobile, in which were two other men, he said. He declared that Dr. Yarbrough was in this party.

The men grabbed him, Barnett said, and put handcuffs on him. After reading charges that he had failed to provide for his family and had beaten his children, they whipped him. He asserted Dr. Yarbrough was the man who wielded the lash.

It was on cross-examination that Barnett told of his hunt for the floggers. He said that he watched the Ku Klux Klan hall night after night until finally one night he recognized the dentist as the leader of the floggers.

Pulled Their Hats Down.

In response to questions by John P. Ross, counsel for defense, regarding whether or not the members of the klan entered the hall as though they were afraid of being recognized, he said that many of them pulled their hats down so their faces could not be seen. The attorney, admitting that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, asked if he had been recognized by the witness.

"I didn't hide, did I?" the attorney asked.

"No, you walked up and down the sidewalk. You may have been on guard," was the reply.

Barnett was asked by the defense if he did not go to see Rev. T. F. Callaway, a Methodist minister, and ask him to preach a sermon against the Ku Klux Klan. He said that he sent for the minister. He denied that he had told the minister he could not recognize any of the floggers, asserting that he had told the minister that he "did not know" any of them.

He declared at the close of the cross-examination that Dr. Yarbrough was not disguised the night of the flogging.

An anonymous letter Barnett said he found lying on his desk threatened to flog him again if he did not do certain things for members of his family, was introduced. Efforts of the defense to get into the testimony certain questions regarding Barnett's alleged conduct toward his family were overruled.

JURORS AT ODDS IN FLOGGING CASE

Atlanta Constitution

Recess After 31 Hours of Vain Discussion Until Morning — Other Cases Are Postponed.

9-28-23

Macon, Ga., September 27.—The jury deliberating on the case of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, charged with riot in connection with the flogging of W. O. Barnett, late tonight took a recess until tomorrow morning without reporting a verdict. At 11 o'clock the jurors had deliberated for 31 hours.

Rumors Are Rife.

The jury at no time has had any communication with Judge Will Gunn, of the city court, other than to send by bailiffs requests for medicines, or other small items. Attorneys watching the progress of the deliberations said that this was one of the most unusual features of the case, as usually juries unable to agree send for the presiding judge within a few hours or ask for instructions regarding certain points.

Case Is Postponed

Macon's flogging trials today were brought to an abrupt ending for the present. City Solicitor Moore at the opening of court announced to Judge Holmes Johnson, of Grays, who came here to sit in the J. F. Alexander case, that one of the state's chief witnesses, Melton Britt, had disappeared and that as a result the state would be unable to go to trial at this time. Alexander is charged with participation in the flogging of Ollie M. Berry.

Apology Offered.

Wilse Birdsong, former deputy sheriff, who yesterday interrupted Attorney Wallace Miller while he was arguing for the state in the trial of Dr. Yarbrough, was permitted to apologize when he appeared this afternoon in city court in answer to a rule charging him with contempt of court. Judge Will Gunn accepting the apology told Birdsong all persons in court must curb their passions.

Birdsong's commission was revoked immediately after the incident yesterday by Sheriff Hicks.

Public Official Violates Oath of Office When He Joins Klan, Says Editor Brown

Columbus, Ga., Enquirer-Sun

SEP 23 1923

(From the Cordele, Ga., Dispatch.)

Late strength of the Klan in Georgia is centered directly in the activities of a few politicans of low purpose in the state capitol. To be sure that strength could not be counted worthy of consideration did it not include in Klan membership a few of Georgia's better type of citizenship. If these few would shake their unworthy company and stand four square where they want to stand for honor and integrity in politics as well as public service, the Klan in Georgia in a few months would be heard no more, save for that lawlessness which the rough element have learned through the Klan to practice.

Governor Walker is not the only high official in Georgia who is making serious mistakes giving Klan quarter to those who are directing a propaganda that is breaking down our jury system—our established methods of meting out justice in the courts. He is not the only man the klan claims to have elected.

We sought to help Governor Walker win because everything with which he had in the past associated himself was clean, upright, honorable. We know him to be superior in his outlook upon public service—we think he is still all that. And we are going to believe he will stick firm and fast to that sort of program as long as he is in his own right mind.

But the Klan in Georgia, at the same time is boasting of a whipping boss in Macon, is likewise claiming all but one or two of the office holders in Georgia. It does not claim Senator William J. Harris—we never heard that it did. It does claim the governor, the other senator, and a string of office holders, INCLUDING JUDGES, AND SHERIFFS ALL OVER THE STATE. It claims more Baptist preachers than we ever thought could make a living in Georgia. It has not been so popular with the Methodists. Now and then a Methodist minister will rise up and pull off the mask of one of this set and expose him.

There is a judge on the Court of Appeals today—sent there by a tremendous majority in an election—whose name the writer of these lines saw attached to a personal testimonial given a Georgia Klansman organizer and this Klan organizer was going from point to point in Georgia completing his organization on the strength of this testimonial—boasting the fact that he had this jurist at his back. And he had this jurist, else he had forged his name to a letter of recommendation—and that written on the printed stationery of the jurist.

This same thing is being practiced with regard to other office holders—not one of them exempt save Senator William J. Harris. We mean that the Klan boasts of having other Georgians that hold office on their membership rolls and they use that as a means of adding to that kind of power and control which has lately developed in the trial of the Macon whipping boss.

If we know it we are not going to let the political enemies of Governor Walker use us to help make his public service look like a crime. Likewise if we know it, we are not going to follow that kind of political leadership which can be easily tracked to the headquarters of these gangsters in Atlanta—We are not going to boast of anything with which this organization keeps company. We are sure of that chiefly because we are pretty well aware that if there are good men there—our friends—there are likewise too many politically noisy hell-raisers, who drink moonshine liquor, carry a bull dog pistol in the hip pocket and smoke cheap cheroots—smoke them on the fronts of their shirts!

The Klan is responsible this wide country over for an unreasonable amount of lawlessness. That came plain as could be in the Macon whipping boss trial. It will come again. Are we to take that dangerous stuff as a joke? What do you say about it ?

As long as we can follow and render aid in a constrcctive administration for Governor Walker, we are going to give support, but all of it, down to the last penny worth of it, is not going to quarter with a Klansman—not till the last element of the gangster and the outlaw is gone and we know they are gone. We believe in the dignity of the law and the courts and jury service. We believe in the unbought, untrammeled ballot. We believe in incorrupt public service, honest, upright, courageous. We believe in all this for the good of future generations, as well as for ourselves.

And now—and now—we've seen that political faction headed by former Governor Hardwick accept support of the Klan and use it and count it good. It was wrong then—it is wrong now. When Hardwick used it he justified no other public official for using it. It is not unlawful for Cliff Walker to use it, but so long as this organization thrives on religious intolerance, on race hatred, on bigotry and demagogery in politics—so long as it assumes to dictate justice by mob rule, so long as in the peace of the night under his own roof any man, culprit, criminal or what not, is unsafe from this Klan constituted system of super-government, we are bound to protest its power.

The public official who accepts membership in the Klan violates his oath of office—and he must understand how and where he does it. No office holder in Georgia can support and defend the constitution of the state of Georgia and of the United States under the banner of any super-government!

Klan Will Parade At College Park

Atlanta Constitution

A parade of the Ku-Klux Klan will be staged in College Park Tuesday night, it was learned by reports emanating from the Imperial Palace Tuesday. The gathering is to exhibit the strength of the klan, according to officials.

The klan Friday night will stage a ceremonial parade in East Point. This ceremonial will precede the initiation of a large number of candidates. The initiation will be held in the ball park at East Point.

MACON DENTIST, AFTER ACQUITTAL, NOT YET CLEARED

Atlanta Constitution 9-16-23

Prosecution of Others Charged With Flogging Will Be Continued, Is Solicitor's Pledge.

Macon, Ga., September 15.—Prosecution of persons accused of being implicated in floggings in Macon will be continued in city court here on Monday despite the acquittal today by a jury of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, prominent dentist charged with rioting. City Solicitor Roy W. Moore, after the jury had announced its verdict this afternoon, stated that the prosecutions would be continued.

The solicitor said that J. F. Alexander, who is charged with having been one of a band of men who flogged Ollie Perry, probably would be the next accused man to be tried. City Judge Holmes Johnson, of Grays, will hear the Alexander case, it was announced. Judge Will Gunn, of the Macon city court, is distantly related to Alexander and for this reason is disqualified.

Dr. Yarbrough, who was identified by four state witnesses in the trial concluded today as one of bands of men who flogged them, still has six charges against him. Each of these will be tried it was stated at the office of the solicitor, although it is probable that all will not be heard at this term of court.

Jury Out Three Hours.

Dr. Yarbrough went on trial last Tuesday on the charge of being implicated in flogging R. F. Mills, former Macon chiropodist and barber. The case was given to the jury at 12:15 o'clock this afternoon and at 3:21 p. m. the verdict was read.

City Judge Gunn appeared in the court room at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon and announced to Sheriff J. R. Hicks, Jr., that he had been informed that the jury had reached a verdict. He then admonished the crowd against any demonstration. Five minutes later the jury filed into the courtroom and handed the verdict to Solicitor Moore who one minute later read the verdict.

After Judge Gunn had discharged the jury and adjourned court until Monday morning, scores of persons crowded around Dr. Yarbrough and his attorneys to congratulate them. For a time it took on the appearance of a reception for the dentist.

Dr. Yarbrough had nothing to say beyond thanking his friends for their good wishes. Solicitor Moore declined to comment.

Longest Trial.

Today was the fifth day of the trial in Macon city court. Attorneys said that this was the most lengthy trial of a misdemeanor charge in court in Bibb county in many years.

Dr. Yarbrough, admittedly a member of the Ku Klux Klan, was put on trial last Tuesday on the first of seven charges against him. Selection of the jury took up the first half day and the taking of evidence lasted until noon yesterday, the defense being virtually confined to an effort to discredit state witnesses through bringing out of allegations derogatory to their character. A number of the witnesses in behalf of the dentist, including his leading counsel, John P. Ross, admitted their membership in the Ku Klux Klan, while others testified they had made application for membership or asked that they be not required to answer the question.

On the other hand three members of the Ku Klux Klan, all employees of the imperial palace at Atlanta, two of them detectives and the third a solicitor of members or organizer in Macon, testified for the state. The two detectives have been here for several weeks with M. O. Dunning, chief of staff for Georgia, admittedly working up evidence against floggers. Imperial Councilor Sullivan of the imperial palace, arrived here last night. The Ku Klux Klan figured prominently throughout the trial, every male defense witness being asked if he was a member, as was every talesman.

WOMAN CHARGES FLOGGING.

Macon Man Rearrested on Complaint of Victim's Wife.

Macon, Ga., Oct. 17.—J. F. Alexander was rearrested late this afternoon on a warrant charging assault and battery and rioting in connection with Macon's flogging cases. The warrant was obtained by Mrs. W. B. ("Fritzie") Bullock, and charges that Alexander was in a group of men who flogged her husband, W. B. Bullock, July 31.

Alexander gave bond in the sum of $5000.

Bullock is the man who was attacked on the street here a few days ago by a man named Barfield, according to the police. Bullock sustained a severe gash in the neck at that time. 10-18-23

Bullock said he was driven from Macon at the time of the flogging and had been back only a week when he was attacked.

Dr. Ridley Declares a Kind Stranger Accosted Him and Gave Him Liquor—Auto Takes Both Sides of Atlanta's Main Street.

(By The Associated Press.)

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 17.—Rev. Caleb Ridley, known as the imperial kludd of the Ku Klux Klan, and former pastor of an Atlanta church, was arrested here late today by the police on a charge of being drunk and operating an automobile. The arrest was made by Motorcycle Officer L. E. Shumate, who said that in the machine driven by Dr. Ridley were two small bottles of whisky.

In police station Dr. Ridley stated that he had driven out into the country when he was accosted by a man who offered to give him some whisky. He stated that he accepted the whisky, and before starting to town, he took a drink.

Officer Shumate, who made the arrest, said he saw the automobile zigzagging down Peachtree Street, one of the main thoroughfares, and stopped it, and, finding Dr. Ridley apparently under the influence of liquor, arrested him. Dr. Ridley, the officer said, admitted having more liquor in the automobile, and produced two small bottles.

HUDSON MAKES BOND

Alleged Floggers Released From Bibb Jail.

Macon, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—S. R. Hudson, eldest of the three Hudson brothers charged with being implicated in recent floggings in this county, was today released from jail when his friends made bond for him in the sum of $5,000. His two brothers had previously been released under bond, as had J. F. Alexander, a Macon grocer, also charged with being a flogger. 9-4-23

Alexander today employed counsel to represent him, but refused to discuss the case, further than to make blanket denial of the charges against him. He has been positively identified by Ollie Perry as the leader of the gang that took Perry out and whipped him.

Five Testify at First Day's Trial in Macon Floggings—Yarbrough Object of Testimony.

CALL ATLANTA WOMAN TO TELL HER STORY

Ku Klux Klan Figures in Evidence Given—Durkee Admits Membership. Letters Are Cited.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Macon, Ga., September 11.—Evidence intended to show that Dr. C. A Yarbrough, on trial in city court here on the charge of rioting in connection with the whipping of R. F Mills, a chiropodist, had knowledge of letters written by persons seeking to have other persons punished for various offenses featured today's session of the trial. In one instance a state witness, an employee in Dr. Yarbrough's office, told of reading a letter in which a mother, a day or two before her son was flogged, expressed a wish that something could be done to her son.

Impersonation Charge.

Employees of the Ku Klux Klan also testified regarding letters and other matters designed to connect Dr. Yarbrough, who has been called the "whipping boss" of Macon, with the series of floggings that have been going on in Macon and Bibb county for approximately two years, and which for several weeks, had the city and county in a turmoil. It also was charged during the day's testimony that J. P. Durkee, organizer of the Ku Klux Klan in Macon, visited the prosecuting witness in the case and pretended that he was an officer sent by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick to aid in running down the men that had flogged Mills.

Atlanta Woman Witness.

When court adjourned at 6 o'clock tonight until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning five witnesses had been put on the witness stand. The state announced the names of fifty-four witnesses at the opening of the case this morning, including the names of former Governor Hardwick and Mrs. Linwood Bright, of Atlanta, while the defense announced the names of more than 100. Indications tonight were that this case, the first of seven charges against Dr. Yarbrough, would last three or four days at least. Judge Will Gunn, of the city court, this morning excused all jurors not selected for duty today until Thursday morning.

The jury selected for today's trial, besides the usual questions put to jurors in city court to determine their qualifications, were asked whether or not they were members, ever had been members or ever had made application for membership in the Ku Klux Klan. This question was asked over continued objection by the defense.

Jury to Hotel.

The jury in the case tonight was taken to a hotel in charge of Deputy Sheriffs Roberts and Brannon. These men had been appointed by Sheriff Hicks to handle the jury, but when the afternoon session started, the defense sought to have all of the sheriff's deputies disqualified and a new set of deputies appointed. Attorney Ross moved that Sheriff Hicks and his chief deputy, J. Lane Mulally, be barred from having anything to do with the jury, and when Judge Gunn directed that the deputies named by the sheriff continue to care for the jury, he also sought to have them disqualified.

The defense claimed that because of his activity in connection with the prosecution, Sheriff Hicks and his chief deputy, should not be permitted to go near the jury.

The courtroom today was crowded with spectators and the anteroom with witnesses. Near the close of the session one woman fainted in the rear of the courtroom because of the heat beating down on the flat roof of the garage building being used as a temporary courthouse. The spectators at the morning session virtually all were men, but this afternoon many women appeared. At one time testimony became a bit rough and Judge Gunn cautioned the women that it appeared that the testimony was becoming "a bit rough and vulgar" and if they wished they might leave the courtroom. Every woman left, but some returned later.

Laughter greeted answers of a number of witnesses. Judge Gunn several times cautioned the spectators and finally instructed the sheriff's force to watch the audience, arest the first person who "giggled or made a demonstration," and bring him before the court on a charge of contempt. After that there was no more laughter.

9-12-23

Victim Is Witness.

R. F. Mills, twice victim of the Macon floggers, was the first witness called by the court. He was on the witness stand for more than three hours and told how he was called from his home on January 13, 1922, presumably to make a professional call, and how, when he got into a small automobile he supposed had come to meet him, he was taken to a point on the Columbus road, placed flat on the ground and held there by two men while another man flogged him. He said there were five or six men in the gang and that they were dressed in black robes with white caps and masks.

Mills testified that although he had been warned that he would be killed if he did not keep his face to the ground, he had turned it in such a way that he saw several men disrobing near an automobile and that he saw Dr. Yarbrough walk into the lights of the machine. His story was not shaken on cross-examination.

Mills created a stir in court when he was being questioned about a letter he wrote to Governor Hardwick asking for protection. He had testified that a day or two after the letter was written on October 31, 1922, a man who gave his name as Payne called on him and said he was from Governor Hardwick. He said that the man, on being asked for his credentials, showed a badge.

Says He Is Durkee.

"Have you seen this man since," he was asked by Solicitor Roy W. Moore.

"Yes," he replied, "I saw him yesterday."

"Who is he?"

"His name is Durkee, I believe."

of the defense attorneys in the trial of Dr. Yarbrough, are under arrest on various charges.

"How long would they stay there?" she was asked.

"I don't know," was the reply.

"Who did they talk to?"

"Dr. Yarbrough."

"What is your usual hour of leaving the office?"

"Seven o'clock."

"Were they often there when you left?"

"I don't remember, sometimes there was somebody in the reception room, but I don't know who was there."

Miss Culpepper was asked how many rooms Dr. Yarbrough has in his office and stated there were two dental offices and a private room. She said Dr. Yarbrough received the men named in the private room.

Had Many Patients.

On cross-examination she was asked about the business of Dr. Yarbrough and testified that he waited on from 20 to 40 patients a day and often had engagements booked for all evening. She also was asked if she did not know a drive for members was being conducted by the Ku Klux Klan and replied that she did not know this.

In connection with the presence of Mrs. Bright in Dr. Yarbrough's office the defense asked her if she did not know that Dr. Yarbrough signed a bond for Mrs. Bright and that she had come to the office to thank him for it. She said she had heard that that was the reason for the visit. Miss Culpepper also was asked about Dr. Yarbrough's reputation and declared that it was good.

FLOGGING CASES COME UP TODAY IN MACON COURT

Atlanta Constitution

Eight Men Scheduled to Come Before Tribunal During Week—Many Accusations Made.

9-10-23

Macon, Ga., September 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—Bibb county's effort to clean up a situation that has thrown the community into a turmoil for many months and that has resulted in a number of persons being severely flogged and some of them being driven out of Macon, tomorrow is slated to get its first airing in court. Trials of four of the eight men now facing charges of being implicated in various floggings are scheduled to be called in city court when it opens for the September term.

The cases of S. R., J. C. and C. F. Hudson, brothers, charged with attempting to whip Emory Roberts, a negro, are expected to be called shortly after court opens. The case of J. P. Alexander also is due to be called tomorrow.

Many Accusations.

The cases of the other four men including that of Dr. C. A Yarbrough, a dentist, alleged to be the head of an organization conducting the series of floggings; J. E. Bloodworth, a traveling salesman; J. D. Patrick, former deputy sheriff, and W. F. Delamar are on the docket to be called during the week.

A total of 29 accusations have been made against the eight. It is alleged that Dr. Yarbrough, Alexander, Delamar, Bloodworth and Patrick are connected with one organization of which the dentist is alleged to be the "whipping boss," and that the Hudsons have no connection with the large group of floggings that preceded the effort to flog Emory Roberts.

Although the case of Alexander is set for hearing Monday it was indicated tonight that this case probably would not be called at the time. City Court Judge Will Gunn is distantly related to Alexander and for this reason is disqualified. Up to a late hour tonight he had been unable to obtain any judge to sit in his place.

No New Developments.

Solictor Roy Moore said tonight that the cases of the Hudsons would be taken up tomorrow if possible and that it was hoped to call the Yarbrough case on Tuesday

The Hudsons will be represented in court tomorrow by John P. Ross and W. A. McClellan. Solicitor Moore will be assisted in the prosecution by P. H Lamb.

Although the sheriff's office yesterday announced that other arrests were expected it was announced tonight that there had no developments in the past 24 hours.

The charges on which the white men are to be tried are misdemeanors under the Georgia laws. For this reason they are to be tried in the city court instead of the circuit court.

THE WHIPPING HYENAS.

Saturday and Sunday newspapers in the east and central west, reaching Atlanta Monday, had the news stories of mob violence in Georgia spread all over their front pages.

And so it is in all of the thousands of daily newspapers, large and small, in every state of the American union and even abroad—for mob rule in Georgia has gotten to be even an international scandal.

The Saturday newspapers carried the lynchings of two negroes in one day, one in Bleckley county and another in Houston county. The Sunday newspapers carried further stories of the floggings in and around Macon, which have reached such stages of terrorizing that the whole nation is talking of it, and the newspapers of other sections are editorializing on "the Georgia disgrace."

Atlanta Constitution

The truth about the whole lamentable situation is that it is the truth that hurts.

There is no error in the news

dispatches that the courts and constituted authorities in Bleckley county were defied by a mob of around 50 armed and disguised men, traveling in automobiles from which the license tags had been detached, and that the jail was entered and a prisoner, awaiting an orderly trial according to the laws of Georgia, taken out of town and "hanged and riddled with bullets."

There is no doubt in the news dispatches that a negro was taken from officers in Houston county, almost at the same hour, "by a mob of about seventy-five men," and hanged and riddled.

Both of these men, whether guilty or not guilty of the crimes for which charged, were in the custody of constituted authorities when kidnaped and murdered, thereby destroying any extenuating plea of possible escape from legal justice.

There was no error in the news dispatches of Sunday telling of the further barbaric escapades of the human hyenas at Macon, who have terrorized that community for months with indiscriminate flogings, administered to both white and black, without any apparent charges of wrongdoing against the victims, but were illustrations of the bloodthirsty inhumanities under the very night-lights of one of the most refined and cultured cities in the south.

It is the truth that hurts. It is the truth that is making Georgia today the most publicly abused and censured state in the American union—holding her up to the ridicule of nation-wide public opinion, and disgracing her in the estimation of right-thinking people throughout the world.

And yet, while such is the misfortune of having an element, however small, of human beasts in any community to disturb and upset the peace and serenity of upright, law-abiding citizens, the further truth is that the overwhelming majority of the people of Georgia, in every section, rural and urban, are as militantly opposed to mob violence and night riding as is the most sedate apostle of law among the puritan critics.

All the more lamentable that any situation shall exist in Georgia by which a few irresponsibles, as compared to the entire citizenship, shall be permitted to defile the whole in public appraisement, like the one drop of impurity may destroy the value of the full vessel of liquid.

It is a grievous condition and it must be stopped.

That the measure of a people's greatness is their respect for law is an axiom as old as the civilization that is founded upon law and the integrity of constituted government.

Governor Walker is to be commended for his firm pronouncement that every resource of the state would be employed to stamp these hyenas from the face of Georgia, and in the undertaking he should have the undivided cooperation of right-thinking, upstanding men and women of the state.

Georgians are too good a people as a whole—too law-abiding and patriotic—to have this mob stigma hanging like a cloud of hate over their heads. The material welfare of Georgia is too great an issue, too valuable to the prosperity and contentment of our people and our posterity, to have it thus harassed and obstructed by minority elements of moral degenerates who, like skunks, befoul the atmosphere of every community in which they reside.

Civilization, founded upon the religion of Christ and made secure by the sacrifices of our fathers, is too priceless a possession to have it menaced and threatened by men who make the law a mockery and the judiciary the debris of government wreckage.

The conscience of Georgia must become aroused, militantly aroused, in rebellion against such arch-enemies of our government, and of the honor and integrity of our people.

If it is necessary to call into service a volunteer army to stamp such marauders out of Georgia a solid phalanx of determined Georgians will fall into a line that will reach from the Blue Ridge to the Atlantic.

It is civilization against barbarism. Which shall rule in Georgia?

KLAN ORGANIZER SEIZED IN MACON FLOGGING PROBE

J. P. Durkee Is Arrested as "Big Man" of Recent Whippings—Trial of Accused Delayed.

Macon, Ga., September 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—J. P. Durkee, organizer of the Ku Klux Klan in Macon, was arrested here tonight on two warrants charging him with rioting and assault and battery in connection with the Macon flogging cases.

Durkee is charged with participating in the flogging of R. F. Mills, a local chiropodist. His bond was fixed at $5,000.

Nine Now Held.

Durkee's arrest is the ninth in the cleanup campaign being conducted here by city and county officials after a series of floggings that has had the city and county in a turmoil for months. The cases of eight other men accused in the cases are already on the docket of the city court, seven of them being on tomorrow's docket and the eighth being set for next Monday.

City Solicitor Roy W. Moore, commenting tonight on the arrest of Durkee, charged that the klan organizer was the "big man" of the Macon floggers.

Refuses to Comment.

Durkee was sitting in the office of Sheriff J. R. Hicks awaiting further developments in the flogging cases" when he was arrested. Since the roundup of alleged floggers began, Durkee has frequently consulted with officers, it was said, and spent much time in the office of the sheriff.

His only statement when arrested was "well I'll declare." Beyond this he refused to talk.

Durkee was released on $5,000 bond, signed by Dr. J. H. Heard.

Durkee, it was stated tonight, has been watched closely for several weeks, particularly after he began showing a marked interest in activities of the sheriff's office in connection with the flogging cases. He has office space with Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, charges with being the "whipping boss" in Macon.

M. O. Dunning, chief of staff of the Ku Klux Klan for the realm of Georgia, commenting on the arrest of Durkee tonight, declared that it made no difference whether a man was a klansman or not, the klan wanted to see the law enforced, and if the man was guilty the klan wanted to see him punished. Mr. Manning, who is here with two klan detectives investigating the flogging activities in Macon, said that he had no other comment to make.

FLOGGING REPORTED TO KLAN PALACE, CHARGE.

Macon, Ga., September 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—Charges that a personal report on the second flogging of R. F. Mills, who was whipped on January 13 and November 4, 1922, was made to imperial headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan by a representative of the Macon klan, are made in a statement by Rhodes McPhail, said formerly to have been connected with the klan as a publicity writer, which will be published by The Macon Telegraph here tomorrow morning. It also is charged that letters written by Mills to Governor Hardwick, asking for protection, never reached the governor.

Mr. McPhail is quoted as charging that M. O. Dunning, chief of staff for the realm of Georgia, who is here with two klan detectives openly working with county officials in running down the floggers, is in Macon merely as chief spokesman for H. W. Evans, present imperial wizard of the klan" and to "save the klan's hide."

"I don't know anything about several of the more recent floggings at Macon but I do know that R. F. Mills deserves every assistance for obtaining justice that the courts can possibly give him," the statement says. "His case was one of the most atrocious I ever heard of."

"Mills was flogged for the second time by the klan one night in November, 1922. The next morning a representative of the Macon klan came to Atlanta to report the incident to headquarters. He had evidently handled the matter pretty well because the usual denial of responsibility or knowledge of the affair was issued and the usual reward for apprehension of the floggers was offered.

"It seemed that Mills' life had been made so miserable since his first flogging that he had his lawyer write Governor Hardwick an appeal for protection. A few days later a stranger called on him, said he was from the governor's office and assured him he would be protected. It was a night or two after this that Mills was given the second flogging. He then communicated with Governor Hardwick by telephone and was told by the chief executive that he had never heard of his case until that moment and that no representative from his office had been sent to see him."

Mr. McPhail in his statement charges that the letter disappeared before it reached the state house mail sack.

"My informant," says the statement, "at this juncture highly commended two mail distributing clerks and one inspector for their 'faithfulness.'"

The article then goes on to state that Mills was flogged after Dr. W. H. Evans became imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan and charges that Dr. Evans "achieved fame among Texas floggers when he was head of the Dallas klan."

Mr. McPhail is not now connected with the Ku Klux Klan.

Mr. Dunning, asked about the McPhail charges, branded them as false and asserted that McPhail was "sore about being fired." He declared that the charges were made merely to "muddy the water."

Hearing Postponed.

The cases of three alleged floggers, S. R., C. F. and J. C. Hudson, brothers, which were slated to be called in city court today, were set over until tomorrow in order that jail and minor cases on the docket for the September term might be disposed of. They are on the docket for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, but there is a possibility, it was learned tonight, that they may again be set over and other flogging cases regarded as more important called first. The case of J. F. Alexander was set over until next Monday because Judge Will Gunn of the city court is disqualified in the case by relationship and another judge could not be obtained before that time.

Besides the cases o the three Hudsons, the cases of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough, local dentist and alleged "whipping boss" of Macon; W. E. Delamar, J. D. Patrick and J. E. Bloodworth are on the docket for tomorrow. No announcement was forthcoming tonight as to which defendant would be called first in the event it was decided to set the Hudson cases over again.

Hot Fight Promised.

Dr. Yarbrough also is charged with participation in the flogging of Miils, the man, it is alleged, Durkee helped to whip. Mills now lives in Hapeville, Ga., and was whipped November 4, 1922.

There are seven charges against Dr. Yarbrough and indications tonight were that the cases would be hard fought all along the line. The state has subpoenaed 33 witnesses and the defense has summoned 300 character witnesses.

J. P. Durkee, organizer for the Ku Klux Klan in Macon, was arrested last night in connection with the Mills case and is now free on $5,000 bond.

Mills testified that a few days after this man called on him he was again taken out and whipped. He has since left Macon.

The defense several times during the day sought to get into evidence matters reflecting on Mills' past actions or character, but each time Judge Gunn sustained state objections after sending the jury out of the room while the attorneys argued.

Mills, on cross-examination this afternono, was asked particularly about his actions after he was flogged. He testified that he went to Barnesville to see a postal clerk. He was then asked a long series of questions regarding what he told the chief of police of Barnesville and others about the identity of the floggers and finally was asked if he did not tell some one that his uncle did the whipping. Although Judge Gunn intervened to state that the groundwork for such a question had not been laid Attorney Ross replied that if the witness would admit the statement he would not push the question.

"I'll admit that he wrote the letter," Mills replied. This letter was one that was read to Mills at the time he was first flogged.

Did Not Make Threat.

Asked if he did not threaten to kill his uncle, he said that he did not make any such threat, but that he did "give him ten days in which to admit it."

On redirect examination this afternoon Solicitor Moore asked Mills to state his reason for going to Barnesville. He replied that he had gone there to see a man then working in the postoffice to try to find out if he could tell him who mailed "that letter" to the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta.

After Mills was excused J. P. Durkee was called to the stand. Durkee was asked by the state if he had been arrested in connection with the case and stated that he had been. He then identified three letters which he said he had obtained from Dr. Yarbrough or from a desk in Dr. Yarbrough's office. One letter was addressed to Dr. Yarbrough personally and the other was addressed to the Ku Klux Klan.

Durkee testified that many letters were received by him and that he read some of them and others he merely scanned and that he gave them to Dr. Yarbrough. On cross-examination he was asked whether or not Dr. Yarbrough read the letters and he said that he knew the dentist read some, but he did not know whether he read all of them. He said that the letters identified by him had been shown to M. O. Dunning, chief of staff of the Ku Klux Klan for the realm of Georgia, and that he then turned them over to Sheriff Hicks.

Employee on Stand.

Deputy Sheriff J. Lane Mullally who arrested Dr. Yarbrough, H. L. Perryman and J. E. Sompson, the latter two Ku Klux Klan investigators, testified regarding alleged actions of Dr. Yarbrough.

Miss Elizabeth Culpepper, the final witness of the day testified that she had been an assistant in Dr. Yarbrough's office for three years. She told of a letter being received by Dr. Yarbrough from a Mrs. Perry and of its being given her to read.

"Who gave you the letter to read," she was asked. Before she could reply, however, the defense objected and the objection was sustained because the proper groundwork had not been laid by the state.

Asked if she had seen the letter since she read it she replied "no." She added that she handed the letter to Dr. Yarbrough after reading it.

"Did Dr. Yarbrough make any comments about the letter," she was asked.

"He asked me what I would do in such a case," she replied.

"What did you tell him?"

"I told him I didn't know, it was pitiful."

Miss Culpepper had not been allowed to relate what was in the letter while Judge Gunn looked up precedents but at this point he stated that he had found that such evidence was permissible. She then was asked what was in the letter and said that it was from a Mrs. Perry who expressed a wish that something might be done to her son Ollie M. Perry and saying that she had no husband and that the son had been selling whisky.

Tells About Women.

Miss Culpepper then was asked, "do you know Mrs. Lynwood Bright?"

"I've seen her but don't know her," she replied.

"State if on the day before Lynwood Bright was whipped Mrs. Bright didn't spend the afternoon in Dr. Yarbrough's office?" Solicitor Moore told the witness.

"Did she have dental work done?"

"No, she just came up to see him."

"Do you know W. F. Delamar?" the prosecutor continued.

"I have seen him in Dr. Yarbrough's office."

"Did you see him there often?"

"Yes, we did some dental work for him."

"Did he come into the office when you were not doing dental work for him?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever see J. D. Patrick there?"

"Yes, several times."

Many Under Arrest.

She also testified that she had seen J. E. Bloodworth, J. F. Alexander and Attorney Goodrum in the office a number of times. Most of these men, she said, had dental work done by Dr. Yarbrough, but they made some trips to the office when they were not having work done. All of the men named, except Attorney Goodrum, who is one Steubenville City Council Prepares to Pass Anti-Ku Klux Ordinance.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 20.—Acting on information obtained from the three Hudson brothers, arrested last night in the act of flogging two negroes, the police announced tonight that they were preparing to round up an organized band of floggers which has been terrorizing Macon for several weeks.

The authorities also announced that the Hudsons said they and the other members of the band were being financed by an organization. The name was not disclosed.

"We expect to make other arrests within forty-eight hours," said Sheriff J. B. Hicks Jr. "We are trying to bring out of these men the names of those whom we believe financed their operations," the Sheriff declared. "It seems almost certain that others supplied the money and issued orders for the operations of the gang."

The Federal Government entered the case today when postoffice inspectors joined forces with the city to apprehend gangsters who held up a mail motor truck on Saturday and attempted to take Charley Mike, negro, from the vehicle for the purpose of whipping him. The driver today was unable to identiy fthe automobile used by the three Hudsons when they were caught last night.

During the last fortnight several men have been whipped and ordered to leave town and at intervals during the last six months scores of men have been flogged. Early Saturday the police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers after they had kidnapped a man.

Governor Walker has threatened to place the city under martial law.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 20.—Governor Walker has offered to call out the National Guard to ch[illegible]wlessness in Bibb County whenever [illegible]ocal officials feel that additional forces are needed and has received assurances from Sheriff James Hicks in Macon that such a call will be made if an emergency develops, it was announced at the executive department today.

EAU GALLIE, Fla., Aug. 20.—C[illegible] Davis, who was removed from the county jail last night by five masked and robed men, who obtained keys to the jail, when they overpowered a Deputy Sheriff on the street, returned to the jail this morning.

Jail officials did not issue any statement beyond saying that Davis was uninjured. Davis had been arrested on a charge of non-support.

Ohioans to Fight Klan Secrecy.

Special to The New York Times.

STUBENVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 20.—City and County officials, far from being thrown off guard by the truce which has existed for several days between Klansmen and the thousands of persons here opposed to the "Invisible Empire," are taking every precaution to prevent a recurrence of the rioting of last Wednesday night, which would need but little provocation on either side to flare up again.

To prevent as far as possible a recurrence of the trouble, an ordinance to prohibit the holding of secret meetings without a permit issued by the Mayor, will come before the city council tomorrow night and undoubtedly will be adopted quickly.

Another development that already is causing uneasiness among the more timid here is the announcement that the Klan will have a mayoralty candidate in the coming fall election.

Last Wednesday night's rioting, in which three men were shot and seriously injured, dozens beaten and several automobiles destroyed, was precipitated by the primary election of the previous Monday, when Mayor Hawkins, a candidate for re-election, triumphed over the representative of the "Invisible Empire" who sought the office.

Anti-Klan feeling here has so wrought up the members of the Ku Klux Klan that they are determined to put a stright ticket in the field at the municipal election in November. They declare that less than 60 per cent. of the vote was accounted for at last Monday's primary, when Mayor Hawkins won over Albert Smith, a high schol teacher, with a majority of 607 votes out of 2,185 ballots cast.

Under a recent Ohio law Smith will not be permited to run for office at the election on an independent ticket, but any other eligible candidate may run, and the situation here is said to be such that the Klan will certainly have candidates in the field for the city offices.

The proposed city ordinance to make unlawful the holding of any meetings without consent of the city authorities, unless too drastic will undoubtedly pass council. Just how far the city fathers will go in restricting meetings or gatherings is not known and considerable friction is looked for. Mayor Hawkins is known to favor the ordinance.

While men known to be identified with the Klan freely express that opinion that any further attack on members of their organization will bring down the wrath of Governor Donahey, no word has has reached this city that would indicate any interference on the part of the Governor so long as the city and county officials are able to maintain order.

It became known today that Klan detectives, imported here recently from Columbus and Pittsburgh, have been busy investigating last Wednesday's riots, with the result that criminal information will probably be lodged against a dozen or more residents of this city, charging them with starting the riot and wrecking the cars of the visiting Klansmen. The charges, it is understood, will be made in the names of Klansmen from East Liverpool, Ohio; Chester, W. V., and Wierton, W. Va., who made up the party attacked during the riot.

If the charges are made prior to Sept. 10 they will probably come before the

Dr. Ridley was not in court.

The Rev. Ridley, Official of Klan, Held as Drunk Driver

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 17.—The Rev. Caleb Ridley, known as the imperial kludd of the Ku Klux Klan, and former pastor of an Atlanta church, was arrested here late today by the police on a charge of being drunk and operating an automobile.

The Atlanta Herald Aug 26 1923

The news of the arrest in Macon last night of three men caught in the act of flogging a negro will be received with satisfaction throughout the state. The kidnaping and whipping of men has been going on in Macon for some time past, and at a distance it has appeared that the officers there have not been over-anxious to apprehend the offenders. And even now it is doubtful whether the leaders in these outrages have been caught. The three men arrested are no doubt guilty, but the chances are that they were cheap imitators taking advantage of the crime epidemic in the community to punish one or more negroes against whom they held a grudge. The leaders in the series of kidnaping and whipping that has been going on in and around Macon—those really responsible for the kidnaping and flogging of white citizens—have, in all probability, not yet been apprehended; but, now that a start has been made, and the report comes from Macon that other arrests are expected, it is to be hoped that the original and responsible leaders in this outlawry will yet brought to justice.

Alexander Alleged to Have Been in Bullock Whipping Party.

MACON, Ga., Oct. 17.—J. F. Alexander was rearrested late this afternoon on a warrant charging assult and battery and rioting, in connection with Macon's flogging cases. The warrant was obtained by Mrs. (Fritzi) Bullock, and charges that Alexander was in a group of men who flogged her husband, W. B. Bullock on July 31.

Alexander gave bond in the sum of $5,000. 10-18-23

There are other cases pending against Alexander.

Bullock is the man who was attacked on the street here a few days ago by a man named Barfield, according to the police. Bullock sustained a severe gash in the neck at that time.

Bullock said that he was driven from Macon at the time of the flogging and had been back only a week when he was attacked.

DEADLOCK LOOMS IN JURY DELIBERATING YARBROUGH CASE

Deliberators Are Locked Up for Night After Six and Half Hours' Vain Discussion.

TO RESUME SESSION EARLY IN MORNING

9-27-23

Last Day of Flogging Trial Featured by Plea of Accused Dentist on Witness Stand.

Macon, Ga., September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—The jury deliberating on the case of Dr. C. A. Yarbrough charged with riot in connection with the flogging of W. O. Barnett, harness manufacturer, retired at 11 o'clock tonight in a reported deadlock.

City Judge Will Gunn instructed the bailiffs in charge of the jurors to return them to the courthouse immediately after breakfast tomorrow morning to resume consideration of the case.

When they went to their hotel for the night the jurors had been considering the case for six and one half hours. At no time was there any inkling of how they stood.

When they returned from supper the jurors found that the lights in the jury room had burned out. The courtroom was cleared and it was turned over to the jurors. Spectators, attorneys and attaches of the court waited in the hallway of the temporary courthouse and in nearby offices for word that an agreement had been reached.

Took Case at 4:29.

The jury took the case at 4:29 o'clock, after attorneys had argued for four hours.

The trial started on Monday morning and lasted for three days.

City Solicitor Moore concluded his argument at 4:08 o'clock and Judge Gunn immediately began reading his charge to the jury.

The case of J. F. Alexander, charged with being implicated in the flogging on August 9, of Ollie M. Perry, will be called at ten o'clock tomorrow morning, it was announced today. City Judge Holmes Johnson, of Grays, will preside, Judge Will Gunn being disqualified by the fact that he is distantly related to Alexander.

Character Witnesses.

The defense today continued calling character witnesses in an effort to discredit state testimony.

John S. McHand, an automobile dealer, was the first witness called. He was asked about the closing of his place of business because of the death of a relative of his partner. He said it was on May 9, 1922, and that W. W. Arnold, then in his employ, was not at work on that day. A complaint by Arnold against Dr. Yarbrough alleges the flogging was on May 9 but Arnold testified it was May 8.

R. H. Hadaway, who R. H. Hartley yesterday charged on the witness stand was a member of a band that took him out and lectured him, was called.

"Did you go with Dr. Yarbrough and others to the home of R. A. Hartley on the night of July 26 last and take him out to the country," chief defense counsel John P. Ross asked.

"No" was the reply.

"Are you a member of any club?"

"Yes, I am a member of the Evangelistic club of Macon business men's branch and the Cross Keys Methodist church."

"Have you any definite knowledge of where you were on Thursday night July 26?"

At Prayer Meeting.

"I was at the Cross Keys church at prayer meeting.

"How do you know that?"

"I have been treasurer of the church for years and go to the church on Thursdays."

Mr. Hadaway said that he only knew that he was at the church that night because it was his custom. On cross examination he said he sometimes missed Thursday nights, but declared he did not know Hartley. He admitted that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Asked if he was a member of the vigilance committee of the klan, he said he did not know what it was. He denied ever having talked to Dr. Yarbrough about floggings.

A. F. McGinnis who Hartley yesterday testified came to his home on the night he was first taken out, told of going to Hartley's home to see C. E. Corley, a carpenter. He said Hartley told him some Jews had come there to "take him out." He said he laughed at him and told him to go to bed.

Admits He's Klansman.

Mr. McGinnis sought to evade a question as to whether or not he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. The state insisted that he answer and he said he was.

The cross examination testimony of Dr. J. H. Heard given in the trial of R. F. Mills was read to the jury. Both sides agreed to this owing to the fact that Dr. Heard had been called to Birmingham, Ala., because of the critical illness of a relative. Dr. Heard had testified regarding a visit Dr. Yarbrough and J. P. Durkee made to him in regard to an anonymous letter the Ku Klux Klan had received about a man named Fielder.

The defendant then took the stand to make his statement.

The defense rested its case at 9:50 o'clock immediately after Dr. Yarbrough completed his statement.

The state introduced one witness, Sheriff Hicks, in rebuttal and both sides announced they had closed at 9:55 o'clock.

9-27-23

Yarbrough Tells Life.

Dr. Yarbrough in his statement said he was born in Randolph county, Ala., June 15, 1880, on a farm 18 miles from Roanoke. His father is now 73 years old. He told of his early life, how he struggled for an education and of his marriage to a girl he had known all of his life at the age of 23.

He told how he came to Macon in 1912, "a stranger, broke and in debt," and how he had worked to build up his dental practice.

He then said he was a member of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and explained what he said were the principles of the klan, declaring the organization did not approve of floggings and that he personally did "not approve of it for any one or by any one."

"Teachers, doctors, lawyers, business men and men in other honorable walks of life" are members of the klan, he said.

"Whipping Boss."

Explaining a statement he made to Chief Deputy Sheriff Lane Mullally that he had expected arrest, Dr. Yarbrough said he referred to articles in the Macon newspapers and an address by Charles Hall before the Kiwanis club in which Mr. Hall said a prominent dentist was the "whipping boss." He said several friends told him these articles referred to him.

Referring to a conversation between himself, Rev. Hewlitt H. Connell and W. C. Quaterbaum, the defendant said the only mention of lawlessness was talk about liquor selling in the Belvue district. He said he told Quaterbaum he had friends in the sheriff's office and if he would telephone Rev. Connell, the minister would telephone him and he would have those things looked after by the sheriff's force.

Testimony of Dr. J. H. Heard regarding a visit of J. P. Durkee, Ku Klux Klan organizer, and himself to Dr. Heard's home was true, the dentist said. The matter mentioned in the anonymous letter was attended to through the courts, he said.

Denies Whipping Knowledge.

He denied any knowledge of the whippings of W. W. Arnold, W. O. Barnett and R. A. Hartley, asserting he had never seen the latter two until he saw them in court. He said Arnold was a former patient of his and that they always had been friendly.

"I am not guilty of taking part in any floggings that have been charged against me," he said in conclusion. "I could not afford to take the chance or risk of that kind of thing when I have a family consisting of my wife and five children to support. I am now 43 years of age. My oldest daughter is 18 and is now a student at Bessie Tift college, Forsyth. My second daughter is 16 and will finish at Lanier high school this year. The third child is a boy of 10 years, and there is a fourth, a girl of seven years. The youngest is our baby boy of eleven months.

"I Am Not Guilty."

"Gentlemen of the jury, I am not guilty, and I hope you will so find."

Wallace Miller, special prosecutor, opened the argument for the state.

Mr. Miller during his argument told of Hartley on the stand telling of talking to Deputy Sheriff Wilse Birdsong.

"He didn't talk to me," said a voice from the rear of the courtroom. Birdsong was standing in the aisle.

"Get out," cried Mr. Miller sharply.

Judge Gunn rapped for order and Sheriff Hicks rushed to the rear of the room and led the deputy out.

Mr. Miller concluded his argument at 11:10 o'clock and W. A. McClellan, associate defense counsel, opened for the defense.

Revokes Commission.

Sheriff J. R. Hicks, Jr., revoked the commission of Deputy Sheriff Birdsong immediately after his outbreak in court it was announced. Judge Gunn ordered him excluded from the court room with the injunction that if he returned he was to be arrested.

John P. Ross, chief defense counsel, opened the closing address for the defense at 12:25 o'clock. He concluded his argument at 1:25 o'clock, and court recessed until 3:30 o'clock.

IMPASSE CONTINUES IN YARBROUGH CASE

Atlanta Constitution

Macon, Ga., September 28.—(By The Associated Press.)—The jury in the Yarbrough flogging case went to their hotel for the third night since beginning consideration of the case, at 11 o'clock tonight, apparently as far from an agreement as when they reported to City Judge Will Gunn this afternoon that they stood 9 to 3 with apparently no hope of reaching an agreement. They had had the case more than 54 hours at that time, and there was no indication as to when the judge would release them.

9-29-23

The jury, during its long debate over the facts in the case, has sent for Judge Gunn only once. This afternoon they notified the judge that the jury appeared to be hopelessly deadlocked. The foreman, T. C. Drew, told Judge Gunn that the division was 9 to 3 but did not state whether for conviction or acquittal. The judge instructed them to return to the jury room and make an earnest effort to reach a verdict and they at once resumed their deliberations.

$114,000 USED BY KLAN IN CHICAGO ELECTION, CHARGE

Imperial Wizard Worked in City, Affidavit Says.

Chicago Herald Examiner

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 29.—Charges that Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, Paul S. Etheridge and F. L. Savage, klan officials, went to Chicago last spring to work in the city election and spent more than $114,000 of klan money for attorneys' fees and investigation, was made in an affidavit by E. J. Jones, former cashier of the klan, today.

The affidavit was introduced as evidence in the suit brought asking a receivership of the klan.

10-30-23

Election Expenses Barred.

Jones, in his affidavit, said that expenses for working in an election are barred under the constitution of the klan, but that there were items entered on the books totaling $77,000 for attorneys' fees and $40,000 for investigation.

Jones further charged that B. G. Christy, in charge of propagation work in Illinois, and Dr. Evans had split the fees received by Christy for new members in Illinois. He asserted that Dr. Evans had told him that he was getting half of Mr. Christy's fees.

Evans also was charged with having purchased fourteen carloads of one issue of a newspaper "published by Mayfield in Texas," and having copies mailed to klans throughout the United States. The issue contained a story complimentary to Dr. Evans and his photograph, Jones swore, and the total cost was $16,000.

Threatened to Secede.

Jones, in another affidavit, declared that the Oklahoma, Texas, Virginia, and New York klans had threatened to secede from the organization and that Dr. William J. Mahoney was sent to Oklahoma to quiet the unrest there. On his return, he said, Dr. Mahoney reported to Imperial Wizard Evans that Oklahoma was withholding $100,000 of funds due the imperial headquarters.

Mrs. Helen K. Steel, who recently filed a breach of promise suit against E. Y. Clarke, former head of the propagation department of the klan, in two affidavits told of alleged meetings with Tom Akers, formerly an employe of the publicity department of the klan, at which Akers urged her to file suit against Mr. Clarke.

Commission Takes Control of K. K. K. By Court's Order

Dr. Evans, Col. Simmons and Marshal George, of Municipal Court, Are Appointed by Judge.

COURT RULING PLEASES BOTH SIDES, THEY SAY

Calm Comes in Battle Until Hearing Is Held by Judge Bell on Original Injunction Petition.

After a week of legal maneuvering between supporters of William Joseph Simmons, emperor, and Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, a calm came in the battle for control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan Saturday when Judge E. D. Thomas, at the close of a four-hour hearing, placed the administration of the klan's affairs in the hands of a commission of three men pending further orders from Fulton superior court.

Colonel Simmons and Dr. Evans, the two contenders for the place of imperial wizard, and J. M. George municipal court marshal, were named to carry on operations of the klan. Dr. Evans and attaches under his regime took possession of the imperial palace at 2621 Peachtree road Saturday night, no objection being interposed by the Simmons faction.

Acquittal of N. N. Furney, cashier, and T. J. Kinnon, head of the bureau of investigation, on larceny after trust charges lodged by the Simmons faction, was another principal development in the controversy Saturday.

Hearing Before Bell.

The next legal development anticipated is the decree of Judge George L. Bell on the original injunction petition brought against Evans and his adherents by Simmons. The hearing will begin within ten days, attorneys predicted Saturday.

The charge against McKinnon was dismissed by Judge T. O. Hathcock, who held that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant a trial, and Furney was discharged after a trial during which he showed that the $80,000 in klan funds he was alleged to have taken has been in custody of Henry Kennedy, of the Fulton National bank, and that he withdrew them on instruction of F. L. Savage, vice president of the Evans regime, when the coup of Simmons was anticipated.

Both Factions Satisfied.

Both factions in the litigation expressed satisfaction over appointment of the commission, which will undertake to run the organization until the permanent injunction hearing before Judge Bell. By placing the head of each faction and one neutral party on the commission, Judge Thomas won the favor of all principals and their counsel.

Sheriff Lowry was relieved as custodian of the imperial palace when he turned it over to the committee named by the court. The sheriff was also directed to give all property of the order over to the committee after taking their receipt. Each member of the committee was required to furnish $5,000 bond, "for faithful performance of his duty while so in charge." In event of a disagreement under the temporary arrangement, the minority will have the right to appeal to the court for direction.

The temporary restraining order granted by Judge Thomas Monday night, which enjoined the Evans faction from interfering with the Simmons faction in its administration of klan affairs, was dissolved. The decree signed Saturday further ordered "that the defendants named in the original petition are restrained from withdrawing from any depositories any funds belonging to the klan except upon approval of Evans, Simmons and George."

The restraining order affecting the banks in which klan funds are deposited was dissolved, they being authorized to pay out funds on order or direction of the commission of three.

Simmons on Stand.

Appearance of Colonel Simmons on the witness stand in municipal court on subpoena of Furney, the klan cashier, charged with larceny after trust of $80,000 in klan funds, and testimony disclosing that Simmons had made known to Furney last Sunday that he would assume control of the klan within the following 48 hours, featured the hearing before Judge T. O. Hathcock.

In the trial it developed that the checks and money had been removed by the klan employees to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Simmons faction when they obtained possession of imperial headquarters.

Petition of Simmons

It now remains for Judge George L. Bell to act upon the original petition of Simmons for an injunction against H. W. Evans as imperial wizard, and other klan officers, restraining them from interfering with Simmons as emperor and imperial wizard of the order he founded.

There is also pending a petition for a receivership of the klan filed by Harry Terrell and other members of the so-called "insurgent" faction, hearing on which has been set for April 14.

The original ruling of Judge Thomas dissolved the temporary restraining order except in that Dr. Evans was restrained from interfering with Simmons as emperor. It meant that control was left in the hands of the Evans faction, and his adherents were jubilant.

As Judge Thomas prepared to affix his signature to the order which had been prepared, Attorneys J. V. Poole and Ben H. Sullivan, representing Simmons, offered an amendment making the Ku Klux Klan a defendant in the case. Over the strenuous objection of Paul S. Etheridge, Evans' attorney, the court accepted the amendment and announced his order giving temporary control to the three-man commission.

Trial of T. J. McKinnon, charged with larceny after trust of $20,000 in klan funds, was halted by Judge Hathcock after two witnesses had been introduced by Attorney Whitman, representing E. J. Jones, cashier appointed by Simmons, who took out the warrants.

Warrant is Dismissed.

Judge Hathcock stated that from evidence offered it seemed as if McKinnon came into possession of the funds, which consisted of checks, money order and cash, through the proper channels, and that nothing tending to show that they had been diverted to his own personal use had been offered. He ordered the warrants dismissed for insufficient evidence.

The two witnesses against McKinnon were W. L. Thurman, member of the klan extension department, and W. H. McElroy, a member of the klan "working under instructions."

Thurman identified the papers, checks, cash and money orders in the custody of the court, as being the funds which accompanied his weekly report for the week ending March 29, which he made to McKinnon, as his superior. Thurman said that McKinnon is supposed to turn the money over to F. L. Savage, head of the propaganda department.

Turned Over Keys.

McElroy testified that on the night of April 2, McKinnon "turned over to me the keys to his desk and the combination to his safe."

"Did you open the safe?" counsel for McKinnon asked.

"Yes, and the papers were not there."

"What would you do if you were in charge of approximately $60,000 and you heard that a raid was going to be made on your place of business?"

Jones' counsel objected to this question and was sustained by the court.

"Who instructed you to go to the palace that night?" counsel for McKinnon asked.

"H. J. Norton, king kleagle of Georgia, and Colonel Simmons' personal represenative that night."

It was here that Judge Hathcock dismissed the warrant against McKinnon, after ascertaining from the prosecution that no stronger evidence was forthcoming. Furney was then tried.

Colonel Simmons Examined.

On direct examination by Attorney Etheridge, Colonel Simmons testified that he visited Furney at his home on Howell Mill road last Sunday afternoon shortly before nightfall and talked with him for about an hour.

"Did you or not at that time tell him you were preparing to take over the imperial palace and the affairs of the klan?" he was asked.

Mr. Simmons: "I did not."

Q. "Did you say anything about his advancing you $9,000?"

A. "I did not."

Q. "Did you say anything about it?"

A. "I was speaking to him in a frank and confidential way on this visit about some heavy expenditures under which I was obligated and asked him if there was anything that would prevent him from making an advance of salary to me in order to meet them.

Q. "Is it not true that you told him the klan was going to come to trouble and what you wanted money for was to take care of your friends in the event anything happened?"

A. "I did not."

Asking for Salary.

Q. "Were you asking him to advance you this months' salary as emperor of this order?"

A. "I did not."

Q. "What did this $9,000 represent?"

A. "I inquired if there was anything to prevent him as cashier from advancing my salary."

Q. "As what?"

A. "As emperor, to meet certain obligations."

Q. "Did you or not tell him you were planning to take over this organization?"

A. "No, sir; I did not."

Q. "Didn't Mr. Furney plead with you not to take any such action as that, and state it would ruin the order?"

A. "That part of the conversation that it would ruin the organization was near the end of the interview."

Q. "Did Mr. Furney or not plead with you not to take certain contemplated action?"

A. "There was no question of any action contemplated on my part.

"Did He Offer Protest?"

Q "Did he offer any protest of any kind to anything you had proposed to do, suggested, or suggested you might propose to do?"

A. "I suggested nothing that I proposed to do."

Q. "You know what a protest is?"

A. "Yes, sir."

Q. "Was there a protest?"

A. "There was a protest, or a request, rather."

Q. "What was there in the conversation that Mr. Furney said about ruining the order?"

A. "Well, if he used such a statement I am not clear in my mind as to that."

At this point Attorney Whitman interposed an objection to the line of testimony on the ground of irrelavancy. Attorney Etheridge insisted on its admission, and the objection was overruled.

"I think it admissiable," Judge Hathcock said. "As I understand the evidence it is to show that there was some kind of contemplated legal action, which constituted the defense for drawing these checks or drafts." The examination proceeded.

Claims Discussion.

Mr. Simmons: "I acquainted Mr. Furney with certain facts that had come to me about a dissension; that I had been exerting every effort for some time to keep anything like this from happening but that it looked like I could not prevent it as I was helpless."

Q. "Is that all you told him?"

A. "In discussing that, I said 'I went out to the palance to see Dr. Evans and that a thing had happened that hurt me. Dr. Evans sent out a paper making it a criminal offense'—"

Here Attorney Etheridge objected, but the court held the testimony admissible. The witness proceeded.

"He said at the time he had never heard of it. Well, I made this statement: 'I have got to do something with this. I went out there to see him and he was gone and I have got to make a decision in the matter right away!' He showed a great deal of emotion and said, 'I feel the deepest sympathy for you. I don't know what to suggest.' And I remarked to him that I had rather be dead than that anything should happen of a radical nature, and I meant that, and I still mean it."

Q. "Did you say anything about your going to rule that thing or ruin it?"

A. "I did not."

Q. "Do you swear that you didn't?"

A. "Yes, I will swear that I did not to the best of my knowledge and belief."

Cross Examination Begins.

Attorney Whitman conducted the cross-examination.

Mr. Whitman: "What did you state to Furney verbally as to the cause of this dissension, which was apprehended?"

Mr. Simmons: "I told him it was because of the mismanagement of the affairs of the order and the perversion of the purposes of the order."

Q. "Was any conversation had between you and Mr. Furney about the proposed organization known as 'Kamelia?'"

A. "Yes, sir."

Q. "What was said about that?"

A. "That brought out this document I had referred to and we discussed 'Kamelia' and I remember this statement—because I had made it to others—that the 'Kamelia' had been a dream of mine from almost the beginning of the organization of the klan—as a woman's organization and not as an auxiliary of the klan."

Q. "Did you have a conversation with Mr. Furney relative to the attitude of Dr. Evans toward the 'Kamelia?'"

A. "Well, yes."

Q. "What was that?"

Attacks Evans' Stand.

A. "I said that Dr. Evans had no authority and no right in any way to interfere with me in this projection of this woman's organization and that it was unwise and unjust, an outrage, to try to intimidate the members of the klan in encouraging their wives and sweethearts not to affiliate themselves with 'Kamelia.'"

On re-direct examination of Mr. Etheridge the emperor testified that on Monday, the following day, he assumed charge of affairs.

Q. "Were you in supreme charge?"

A. "Yes, sir."

Q. "Did you direct the taking over of the funds, etc?"

A. "Yes, sir."

Q. "Did you direct taking out the warrants against Mr. McKinnon and Mr. Furney?"

A. "No, sir. I do not know who did."

Sheriff Takes Charge

Q. "Were you in supreme charge of all these matters until the sheriff took charge on the fourth day of April?"

A. "Yes, sir. I was in command until I was put out."

Q. "You never had anything to do with the taking out of the warrants?"

A. "No, but this action was agreeable to me after I found out what it was done for."

Q. "Did you counsel it to be done?"

A. "No, sir. I was consulted after they had been taken out. They tried to get in touch with me before that."

Q. "Then you were agreeable to it?"

A. "Yes, for a reason."

Q. "Why did you go to Mr. Furney about the money matters?"

A. "Because he is the cashier and I have been getting all my checks from him."

Question of Bond

Q. "Do you know whether he is under bond or not?"

A. "I presume he is under bond. He ought to be."

Q. "Is he custodian of the funds?"

A. "Not according to my way of looking at it."

Q. "They passed through his hands?"

A. "I don't know whether they do or not. The imperial treasurer is supposed to have the funds, but there is a certain fund set aside to meet current expenses."

Cross-examined by Attorney Whitman as to his reason for approving the warrants, Colonel Simmons said: "When I was informed that they were going to get Furney, I said, 'What has that boy done?' I was told, 'He has $80,000 of the klan's money and is getting away with it,' and I said, 'Go get him and bring him back and tell him to behave himself.'"

Yearwood on Stand.

After Colonel Simmons testified, Attorney Etheridge put F. C. Yearwood, who lives with Furney on Howell Mill road, on the stand. He said that he had overheard part of the conversation between Simmons and Furney.

"He told Furney that he was very much dissatisfied with the way things were going, and that he felt that he wasn't being treated right and it looked as if there would be a break. Yearwood swore. "He said the order belonged to him and he was going to have it or disband it." He said he heard the request for the salary advance but heard no reference to the Kamelia.

Before Furney made his statement the defense introduced Henry Kennedy, vice president of the Fulton National bank. The official swore that Furney presented two checks, one for $80,000 and one for $20,000, to him Monday morning and requested New York exchange for the amount, offering the explanation for withdrawing such large amounts the statement that litigation in the klan was anticipated.

Furney asked him to hold the New York checks for him, and Mr. Kennedy then gave Furney a receipt, he said. The checks were produced in court, Mr. Kennedy stating that they had never been out of his hands.

Furney on Stand.

Furney, in making his unsworn statement, told of the visit from Simmons. He said the emperor had told him that he felt as if the present officers of the klan had "frozen him out," and that so much pressure had been brought to bear against him by prominent klansmen that it looked as if he would have to take over the klan. He said he remonstrated with Simmons against taking such a step, pointing out that it would create a "national sensation."

Simmons replied, said the witness that he had rather see the klan ruined than to see it managed as it had been during the recent past.

Furney said that Simmons told him that two days previously he could have summoned 500 men "at the snap of his finger," to take charge of the palace, and that he expected to take it over within 48 hours. He also told of the request for the salary advance, and said that Simmons had followed his request with the explanation that he might use the money "to take care of his friends" in event the organization "blew up."

Said He Would Tell Evans.

After Simmons left, Furney said, Yearwood told him that he had overheard the conversation and that in the interest of the klan he had intended to inform Evans and Savage of Simmons' plans. Furney said that he presumed that Yearwood later informed Evans and Savage, who were then out of the city, for he, Furney, was instructed Monday morning by long distance telephone, by Savage, in Washington, to withdraw the funds. He told of the conversion of the funds into New York exchange and said the New York checks had never been in his hands. The receipt given him by Mr. Kennedy was tendered in evidence.

Judge Hathcock held that the evidence clearly demonstrated that Furney had merely held the funds in abeyance in anticipation of litigation, ordered him discharged, and said that he was glad to find the klan funds intact.

Atlanta Baptist Minister Dictates Scathing Reply From Sick Bed

4-9-23

ATLANTA, GA., April 8.—In a statement dictated from his sickbed, and read to his congregation in the Central Baptist Church here tonight by J. O. Wood, Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd (national chaplain) of the Ku Klux Klan denied that E. Y. Clarke, or Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, were in any way responsible for the movement to restore W. J. Simmons to the office of imperial wizard of the klan.

Dr. Ridley's statement was made in answer to a statement issued yesterday by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, who charged that Clarke and Mrs. Grow were responsible for the attempt of Simmons to displace Dr. Evans, and which attempt, through the courts, yesterday resulted in an order by Judge E. D. Thomas placing Simmons, Evans and J. M. George, municipal court marshal, in charge of the organization as a governing tribunal, until final settlement could be made.

Dr. Ridley, asserting his close friendship with Mrs. Grow and Clarke, who both were once connected with the propagation department of the klan, declared they neither "nearly or remotely" were implicated in the recent upheaval of the klan's affairs. He attacked the personal and professional record of Dr. Evans, and declared that after the election of Evans to imperial wizard, Evans went to Mrs. Grow, embraced her, and "baptized her with his tears of gratitude for contribution to his advancement and elevation in life."

Reciting the part Clarke played in asking the klonvocation to confer the imperial wizardship on Dr. Evans, refusing it himself, Dr. Ridley concluded by setting forth that "there is no darker page of perfidy in the record of human relations than the conspiracy of H. W. Evans to crush E. Y. Clarke and to drive him out of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and make him an exile and a wanderer on the face of the earth."

"The statement of H. W. Evans," Dr. Ridley set forth, "is a gratuitous fling at E. Y. Clarke, and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, and is a deliberate and malicious falsehood given to the public for the purpose of diverting the thought of the nation from the real issue. He evidently hopes to sustain himself in an untenable position by putting E. Y. Clarke in the attitude of traitor, and of seeking to destroy what he could not control. By bringing the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow into the controversy he made an assault upon a woman who is my friend, and whom I know to be absolutely

Klansmen Proud of Imperial Wizard, Says State Grand Dragon

4-10-23

ATLANTA, Ga., April 9.—The Texas klansmen are solidly behind Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, according to a statement issued today by H. C. McCall of Houston, grand dragon for the State of Texas, and head of the klans in that State. Mr. McCall is in Atlanta to support Imperial Wizard Evans.

"Texas has 140,000 klansmen," said Mr. McCall, "and all of the 275 klans in this State are solidly behind Dr. Evans and will vigorously contest any attempt to usurp his authority.

Recognizes Evans.

"The biggest realm of the invisible empire recognizes the fact that Dr. H. W. Evans was duly and legally elected imperial wizard at the November klonvokation. Texas delegates were there and voted for him and they are determined that their properly expressed opinion shall not be set aside.

"Our State opinion was expressed at a meeting of Texas klans held in Dallas last week to the effect that Texas klansmen were proud of Dr. Evans in his determination to safeguard the order from personal exploitation and Texans would have been ashamed of Dr. Evans had he chosen any other course of action."

Oregon Comes In.

Headquarters of Dr. Evans also announced receipt of a telegram from Portland, Ore., that the klans of the realm of Oregon are solidly supporting him. He also announced that a telegram from the grand dragon of Arkansas stated that the klans of that State held special meetings Friday and a State meeting of Arkansas klans had been held in Little Rock and that Arkansas "gave its full support to Imperial Wizard Dr. H. W. Evans and commended his administration of klan affairs."

Similar messages were declared to have been received by Dr. Evans from the heads of the klans in other States.

Skipwith Here To Give Support To Col. Simmons

The Atlanta Constitution

Brings Followers to Rally to to Standard of Klan Emperor.

Atlanta Ga.

Captain J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse Parish, La., Ku Klux Klan, arrived in Atlanta late Wednesday to rally to the standard of Emperor William J. Simmons, it was announced at Simmons' headquarters. The exalted cyclops was accompanied by a delegation of 32 klansmen from the Bastrop, La., section.

April 5, 1923.

Captain Skipwith was quoted as saying that "if there is to be a break between Colonel Simmons and Dr. Evans, then I will support Colonel Simmons 100 per cent and the klan in my section will stage a strong fight in his behalf in the controversy."

Captain Skipwith and his delegation were in conference with the emperor shortly after their arrival here, it was said.

Captain Skipwith figured prominently in the investigation conducted by the state of Louisiana into black-hooded bands' activities in Morehouse parish, which culminated in the deaths of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard last August. Two grand jury investigations have been held in the parish and no indictments were returned.

Captain Skipwith charged that the state's investigation was actuated by political motives. He and other members of the parish klan have maintained their innocence.

Imperial Palace of Ku Klux Klan in Hands of Sheriff While Heads Scrap

(Associated Press)

ATLANTA, GA., April 4.—While Imperial Emperor William J. Simmons and Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans started counter drives for control of the Ku Klux Klan through the courts, members of the order began reaching Atlanta today as a result of the fray. In the meantime Sheriff J. L. Lowry, of Fulton county, ruled over the imperial palace, general headquarters of the klan, and Judge E. D. Thomas will resume hearing in the case tomorrow afternoon.

Atlanta Constitution 4-5-23

Klansmen are reported arriving from all sections of the nation, some flocking to the standard of Emperor Simmons while others were rallying around the faction headed by the imperial wizard.

Montgomery Ala.

At the height of the arrival of the various delegations, Captain J. K. Skipwith, with thirty-three other Klansmen representing the Morehouse parish, Louisiana, Klan, stepped from the train and reported immediately to Emperor Simmons' headquarters, Klancrest.

Captain Skipwith, who admits he is exalted cyclops of the Morehouse klan, a short time later emerged from a conference with the emperor, cocked his pearl grey felt hat over his right eye, and exclaimed:

"If there is to be a break between Colonel Simmons and Dr. Evans then I will support Simmons 100 per cent and the klan in my section will stage a strong fight in his behalf."

The old war veteran figured prominently in the state of Louisiana's investigation into black hooded bands' activities in the Morehouse parish. Two grand juries have failed to return indictments, and the klan leader charged that the state's investigation was actuated by political motives.

Shortly after Judge Thomas ordered Sheriff Lowry to continue at his post at the imperial palace, two warrants were issued for N. N. Furney, cashier at the imperial palace, charging him with embezzlement of $80,000, and for T. J. McKinnon, chief of the investigation department, charging embezzlement of $20,000, according to the sheriff's office. The warrants were sworn to by E. J. Jones, an associate of Emperor Simmons.

Other warrants are expected, the emperor's headquarters announced. A statement was issued by Simmons leaders that the warrants followed a day of investigation at the imperial palace, while the emperor and his faction was temporarily in charge yesterday. This faction was ousted early today by a court order and the sheriff placed in charge.

According to the Simmons faction, the cashier and investigator, when the emperor's "coup d'etat" of yesterday became known, were instructed by major officials of the klan to leave town with all the available cash and important records to prevent them falling into the hands of the incoming faction. The sheriff's office tonight said neither Furney nor McKinnon could be located.

Early today Imperial Wizard Evans secured a modified court order dispossessing the Simmons faction from the imperial palace, the latter having gained control yesterday by securing a temporary injunction against Wizard Evans and his staff. At a scheduled hearing this afternoon Judge Thomas denied a motion by counsel for Emperor Simmons to throw the modified order out of court and recessed the hearing until tomorrow.

The emperor through his attorney said he was in possession of headquarters at the time his petition yesterday was presented, but this was disputed by council for the imperial wizard, who declared that Dr. Evans had custody of the building.

Court action resulted from a break with Simmons and Evans over the organization of a woman's body along the lines of the klan.

Ben H. Sullivan, counsel for Emperor Simmons, protested against proceeding with the hearing at the time because his client had not had the ten days notice provided for by law. The court held, however, he would hear the pleading in the case before deciding on the motion to postpone.

In the petition of Colonel Simmons it was set out among allegations that as Emperor of the Ku Klux Klan he was in "actual possession" of imperial headquarters and the books and other property of the organization at the time, and that he sought an order restraining Imperial Wizard Evans and his staff from interfering with the emperor in the exercise of his duties as the active head of the klan.

Paul Etheridge, imperial klonsel, represented the klan and read the answer to the emperor's petition. In denying the claim of Emperor Simmons that he was the executive head of the klan, Mr. Etheridge set forth the action of the klonvokation of the order held in Atlanta last November, when Mr. Simmons was elected emperor and H. W. Evans of Texas as imperial wizard. The duties of the respective offices were set forth, the answer declared, the emperor to have charge of the ritualistic and historical work of the klan, create all signs and ritualistic work, design all regalia, jewels, etc., used in the work of the organization and hold the office for life.

The imperial wizard, the answer said, was to have supreme power in all administration matters, specify the duties of other officers, issue charters to klans and revoke charters, for cause.

It was denied that Emperor Simmons was in charge of the imperial headquarters at the time he sought an injunction, the imperial wizard and other officials being in charge at the palace. It was charged that the temporary restraining order by the court April 2, was obtained under a misrepresentation of facts and that Emperor Simmons had violated the order of the court in taking possession of the klan property at the imperial palace.

After both sides had presented their pleadings Judge Thomas ruled that he would proceed with the hearing on the point of who was in possession of the klan headquarters at the time the restraining order was issued. Because of the late hour court was adjourned until 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

Dr. Evans arrived here late last night and held a conference with his staff.

He issued a statement today, saying the issue would be settled once and for all, as to whether the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is an institution to be conducted by one individual for private financial gain, or a great American fraternal order, the affairs of which are in the hands of its members.

Emperor Cites Huge Profits for Officers of Invisible Empire. Battle for the Treasure Chest Remains Undecided.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 5.—Taking of evidence in the hearing on the court order requiring Emperor Wm. J. Simmons, of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, to show cause why the injunction brought by him and his faction last Monday against H. W. Evans, imperial wizard and others, should not be dismissed, was concluded in the superior court late today. Judge E. W. Thomas adjourned court until tomorrow afternoon, when arguments will be made.

Commercial Appeal

4-6-23

Memphis, Tenn.

J. V. Poole, associate counsel for Emperor Simmons, introduced an amendment to the original petition, charging H. W. Evans, imperial wizard; Fred Savage, chief of staff, with appropriating funds of the Klan to their own use. It charged that last month Mr. Savage received $68,000 of Klan funds, which he deposited in his own name in a local bank, subject to his own check and for whatever purpose he desired. It also was charged that Dr. Evans as imperial wizard, received for his personal account $3 from the money paid in by each new member.

Two Released on Bond.

T. J. McKinnon, investigator, and N. M. Furney, cashier, charged with embezzlement of Klan funds, were released on bond of $1,000 each today. Their cases were set for hearing Saturday morning.

Affidavits intended to prove that Imperial Wizard Evans has been in actual possession of the imperial palace, headquarters of the Klan here, as well as all records, and other property of the order pertaining thereto, were presented by Paul Etheridge, imperial klonsel of the Klan, who contended that the Simmons faction had obtained the court order "fraudulently" by representing that Emperor Simmons was in control of the Klan. The affidavits were made by Imperial Wizard Evans, J. A. Comer, member of the Kloncilium; Paul Etheridge, imperial klonsel; Tom Akers, secretary to F. L. Savage, chief of staff; T. J. McKinnon, investigator for the Klan and N. M. Furney, cashier.

Counsel for Emperor Simmons filed objections to all evidence introduced tending to indicate that Mr. Evans had been regularly elected as head of the order at the klonvocation held last November, contending that as emperor, Col. Simmons remained the directing head of the Ku Klux Klan, which he founded. Copies of the old constitution and by-laws, as well as the new constitution adopted since the klonvocation also were introduced as evidence.

At the conclusion of the submission of evidence, Mr. Etheridge offered to submit the case without argument, but Judge Thomas informed the lawyers he desired to hear the arguments and set the time for tomorrow afternoon.

Seizure of Palace By Simmons Called 'Raid' by Etheridge

Arguments in Injunction Suit Hearing Completed, Judge Will Announce His Decision Today.

LEGALITY OF ELECTION OF EVANS QUESTIONED

Terrell Asks Receivership for Order—Hearing on Larceny After Trust Charge Set for Today.

Emperor William Joseph Simmons, founder of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and a contender for its control against Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans, today underwent a hot baptism of verbal fire when Paul S. Etheridge, representing Evans, charged in Fulton superior court that Simmons' assumption of authority over the imperial palace amounted to no more than a "raid" and that the emperor had deliberately concocted a scheme to deceive the court in carrying into effect his injunction coupe d'etat of Monday.

On the other hand, attorneys for Emperor Simmons contended with equal warmth that Evans is not and never has been legally chosen wizard inasmuch as his election last November did not conform to the constitution of the order. Stenographic reports of the proceedings of that occasion were produced as evidence of this contention. Simmons' counsel defended the course adopted by the emperor in the present controversy as legal in every way.

Assails Tactics.

Turning the full force of his legal batteries upon Simmons' position, counsel for Wizard Evans scathingly criticized tactics employed by the emperor's faction in the battle for supremacy, declaring that they had waited until Evans and his supporters were in New York to fraudulently seize the palace.

After hearing argument from attorneys for both factions, Judge E. D. Thomas at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon announced that he will render his decision today on his order that Simmons show cause why the injunction secured by his faction last Monday night against Evans and his faction should not be dismissed.

Attorney A. E. Etheridge made the opening argument for Evans and Attorney Paul S. Etheridge, member of the imperial kloncilium, made the closing speech for Evans. Simmons' position was stated by Attorneys Ben H. Sullivan and J. V. Poole.

Answers Illegality Charge.

Attorney Paul S. Etheridge, in replying to the contention of Attorneys Poole and Sullivan that the election of Evans to the office of imperial wizard last November was illegal, argued that Simmons should have contested the election if it was not in regular order.

In charging that Simmons had misrepresented the status of klan affairs to Judge Thomas, the attorney declared that "as an officer of this court and as a citizen I now declare that the court has been trifled with."

Attorneys Sullivan and Poole cited the constitution and by-laws which governed the procedure of the klonvocation last November and read the stenographic report of the proceedings to show that the election of Evans was not according to rules prescribed by the constitution and by-laws, which said that the imperial wizard must be elected by ballot and nominations can not be made. Counsel for Simmons showed by minutes that the election was by acclamation and that Evans was placed in nomination.

The klan controversy became three-sided Friday when Attorney W. H. Terrell, representing Harry B. Terrell and other leaders of the so-called "insurgent" faction, filed a petition seeking receivership for the klan.

Neither Simmons nor Evans are legally entitled to head the order, the petition alleges. Judge E. D. Thomas ordered Simmons and the other respondents named to show cause on April 14 why a receiver should not be appointed.

The plaintiffs, Harry B. Terrell, Z. R. Upchurch, Arthur E. Wooten and others, charge that the klonvocation last November at which Dr. Evans is said to have been chosen imperial wizard, was illegal inasmuch as it was held in violation of an injunction then in force which restrained the officers from transacting "even the ordinary business of the order, or from changing in any way its status."

Defendants Named.

The defendants named were William Joseph Simmons, H. W. Evans, F. L. Savage, Brown Harwood, Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, Nathan Bedford Forrest, Tom Akers, Fred B. Johnson, Paul F. Etheridge, T. J. McKinnon, N. N. Furney, W. J. Mahoney, J. K. Skipwith, H. C. Montgomery, H. K. Ramsey, E. J. Jones and James I. Lowry.

Next in interest to the decision of Judge Thomas will be the trial of T. J. McKinnon and N. N. Furney, officers of the Evans faction now under $1,000 bonds to answer charges of larceny after trust of klan funds aggregating $107,000. The case will be called by Judge T. O. Hathcock in municipal court at 9 o'clock.

Attorney Paul Etheridge claims that neither man is guilty of the larceny charge, and that he had advised the defendants to take possession of the money when he heard rumors that Simmons' faction would "raid" the imperial palace.

McKinnon is head of the department of investigation and Furney is cashier.

KLANSMEN HURRY TO AID OF WIZARD AND NEW LEADERS

Simmons Appoints San Antonio Man Chief Of Staff

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3.—Ku Klux Klansmen from all sections of the country were reported en route here tonight as William J. Simmons, founder of the order, exerted the temporary control over the organization given him by the Fulton superior court early today in appointing Dr. Fred B. Johnson of San Antonio, Texas, as chief of staff, and placing him in actual charge of the imperial palace.

The Atlanta Constitution will publish tomorrow that within the last 48 hours it has been reliably informed that approximately 6000 klansmen have gathered here to lend their influence and support to Simmons in his move against Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, and other imperial officers of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Johnson Appoints.

The break between Simmons, who holds the rank of imperial emperor in the klan, and the imperial wizard, occurred last week when Simmons announced that he would found and sponsor an organization for women whose policies and purposes would be along the same line as those of the klan. The imperial wizard issued a proclamation forbidding klansmen to espouse such an organization. The coup d' etat of Simmons, the Constitution, will publish, seemed complete today as chief of staff Johnson, his appointee, took charge of the imperial palace. Dr. Johnson commissioned several members of the order, who are known to be friendly with Simmons, to fill the various offices temporarily and to carry on the routine affairs at headquarters.

While the new officials commanded by the Simmons faction appears at the palace to assume charge, it is said, they were told by guards and other subordinate attaches that the imperial wizard and his associates were out of the city. Dr. Evans was reported to be in New York.

Dr. Evans has been imperial wizard since the klanvocation here last year. At that time it was announced that Simmons, who held that office, would become emperor and would be in charge of the ritualistic and philosophical affairs of the order.

Hearing Saturday.

The court petition in which Simmons secured temporary control over the organization's affairs, designated Simmons as "imperial wizard" and Dr. Evans as "acting imperial wizard." Simmons claimed that under the charter of the klan, he holds as its founder supreme authority in the administration of its affairs and interpretation of its policies.

"The trouble which culminated in the petition," said the founder of the organization, "has been brewing for about three months."

The official said when he first conceived the idea of the klan while a youth it was his purpose to some day found a similar organization for women. He said that the proposed "Kamelia," the women's organization, fostered by him, would have no official connection with the klan, except that he would be founder of them both.

"Under the edict issued by Dr. Evans, which imposed on klansmen aiding women's organizations the penalty of banishment, an individual klansman could not render assistance to a woman's missionary society without fear of forfeiting his membership in the klan," the founder said.

Hearing for permanent injunction will be held here Saturday.

In addition to Dr. Evans, the petition named as respondents several local banks and officials of the klan: F. L. Savage, chief of staff, and H. C. Montgomery, H. K. Ramsey, Brown Harwood, Tom Akers, T. J. McKinnon and N. N. Furney.

Members of the Ku Klux Klan were reported to be swarming into Atlanta from all over the United States Tuesday as Colonel William Jospeh Simmons, founder of the order, exerted the temporary control over the organization given him by Fulton superior court. He appointed Dr. Fred B. Johnson, prominent Texas surgeon, as chief of staff, and placed him in actual charge of the imperial palace on Peachtree road.

With the last 48 hours, The Constitution was informed, approximately 6,000 klansmen have gathered here to lend their influence and support to Colonel Simmons in his move against Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, and other imperial officers under the wizard.

The break between Colonel Simmons and Dr. Evans occurred last week when Simmons announced that he would found and sponsor an organization for women whose policies and purposes would be along the same line as those of the klan, and Evans, as imperial wizard, issued a proclamation forbidding klansmen to espouse such an organization.

Coup d'Etat Complete.

The coup d'etat of Colonel Simmons seemed complete Tuesday as Chief of Staff Johnson, his appointee, took charge of the imperial palace. Dr. Johnson commissioned several members of the order who are known to be friendly to Colonel Simmons to fill the various executive offices temporarily and to carry on the routine affairs at headquarters.

Several thousand dollars received at the palace daily must be properly acknowledged and deposited, and other routine at the palace made necessary the designation of temporary officers, it was stated.

When the new officials commissioned by the Simmons faction appeared at the palace to assume charge, it is said, they were told by guards and other subordinate attaches of the headquarters that Dr. Evans and his associates were out of the city, and probably would not return for eight or ten days. Dr. Evans was reported to be in New York.

Evans Is Notified.

Dr. Evans was informed by telegraph Tuesday of the order signed by Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, which gave Simmons control of the klan, including the handling of funds of the order.

Dr. Evans has been imperial wizard since the klavocation of the order in Atlanta last November. At that time it was announced that Colonel Simmons, who held that office, would become emperor and would have in charge the ritualistic and philosophical affairs of the order.

The petition to Judge Thomas was presented by Colonel Simmons as "imperial wizard" and designated Dr. Evans as "acting imperial wizard." The founder claimed that under the charter of the klan he possesses supreme authority in administration of its affairs and interpretation of its policies. Attorney Ben H. Sullivan represented Colonel Simmons.

A permanent order on the petition will be signed after a hearing before Judge George L Bell ir Fulton superior court next Saturday morning.

In addition to Dr. Evans, the petition named as respondents several local banks and the following officials of the klan: F. L. Savage, chief of staff, and H. C. Montgomery, H. K. Ramsey, Brown Harwood, Tom Akers, T. J. McKinnon and N. N. Furney.

Local banks which are restrained from paying out the klan's money, except on the order of Colonel Simmons, are the Lowry Bank and Trust Company of Georgia, the Citizens and Southern, the Atlanta Trust company and the Georgia Savings Bank and Trust company.

Simmons Talks Freely.

The trouble which culminated in the petition presented to Judge Thomas Monday night has been brewing for about three months. Colonel Simmons told a Constitution reporter who called to see him late Tuesday at "Klancrest," the Peachtree road home of the klan founder.

The official said that when he first conceived the idea of the klan while a youth it was his purpose to some day found a similar organization for women. He said that the proposed "Kamelia," the woman's organization, fostered by him, would have no official connection with the klan, except in that he would be founder of then both.

"Under the edict issued by Dr Evans, which imposed on klansmen aiding women's organizations the penalty of banishment, an individual klansman could not render assistance to a woman's missionary society without fear of forfeiting his membership in the klan," he said.

Dr. Johnson, the new chief of staff, is said to have a strong ollowing among klansmen in Texas. His home is in San Antonio, and he is reputed to be a millionaire.

SECRET SERVICE SYSTEM OF KLAN HIT BY SIMMONS

Atlanta Ga;

Imperial Emperor Says "Invisible Empire" Has Been Turned Into "Government by Blackmail."

Oct 6, 1923

FRAUD CHARGE MADE AGAINST COL. SIMMONS

The Atlanta Constitution

Etheridge Claims Injunction Order Was Obtained From Judge Through Misrepresentation.

Colonel William Joseph Simmons, founder and emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, again swept into the vantage ground Thursday in the hectic struggle for control of the organization being waged between himself and Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans, when Nathan Bedford Forrest klan No. 1, the great Atlanta unit of the organization, voted its determination to "stand by the emperor in his administering of affairs of the klan."

At the same time that the influential mother klan swore allegiance to Simmons, it was announced that the kloncilium, inner governing council of the order, had also swung into the emperor's forces.

These feature developments were concurrent with a sensational statement from Simmons in which he openly charged that under the Evans administration "the invisible empire has become a government by blackmail;" that waste was rampant and that a great spy system cast its shadows throughout the klan.

Vote to Aid Simmons.

It was understood that a majority of the members of the kloncilium were hastily summoned Monday night and voted support of Simmons. This, it appears, was done while Wizard Evans was engaged in a conference in New York where plans were being laid to defeat the revolution from within, and it is believed to be certain that Evans will bitterly fight all efforts to put the action of the incomplete kloncilium membership on official record.

Attorney J. V. Poole, representing Simmons, declared Thursday night that a quorum was present at the session and that the action taken was perfectly legal.

Thursday's formal statement by Simmons, was the first to be made by the emperor in the present klan contest, and it proved to be the most sensational ever presented against the present administration of the organization.

Hits Espionage System.

Without mincing words, Simmons declared that "Evans' forces had turned the invisible empire into a government by blackmail; that gross mismanagement and waste of funds had governed the order since Evans assumed the reins; that a gigantic system of espionage had been secretly built up and extended to the remotest klan in the order; that every constructive plan he had advocated had been deliberately scrapped and none adopted to take their places; that junketing parties, escorted by guards the free will, the free conscience and the free conduct of man."

While these events were transpiring, the court battle for control of the klan brought numerous new and important developments to light during the course of Thursday.

Day's Developments.

Chief among them were:

Introduction of evidence before Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, by counsel for Simmons, purporting to show that the election of Evans as imperial wizard at the klonvocation of the invisible empire last November was illegal because the procedure as prescribed in the constitution and by-laws of the order was not followed.

Presentation of affidavits at the hearing by Paul S. Etheridge, attorney for Evans and a member of the imperial kloncillium of the klan, in support of his charge that the temporary injunction signed by Judge Thomas Monday night was obtained by Simmons on fradulent representations.

Abuse of Authority.

Issuance of a statement by Colonel Simmons to the effect that he sought to resume active control of the Ku Klux Klan to correct "the gross mismanagement of affairs on the inside and to arrest the abuse of authority," and charging the Evans regime with creating out of the "invisible empire" a "government by blackmail," with paid spies on the inside of every klan in America.

Release of N. N. Furney, cashier, and T. J. McKinnon, chief of the klan department of investigation under the Evans regime, on bonds of $1,000 each until Friday morning at 9 o'clock when they will answer charges in municipal court of larceny after trust of klan funds aggregating $107,000.

Announcement by George W. Keeling, kleagle of Texas, that Ku Klux members in that state are supporting Evans in his controversy with Simmons; and the report that the Ku Klux Klan in Lafayette, La., has disbanded and will surrender its charter.

Hearing Is Recessed.

The hearing on Evans' motion to modify Judge Thomas' restraining order was recessed at 6 o'clock Thursday evening until 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon after all evidence had been submitted and opposing counsel announced readiness to begin arguments.

Attorney Etheridge, representing Evans and his supporters, charged while outlining his case that the restraining order was secured by Simmons on false representations as to who was in actual charge of the klan and its headquarters when the petition was presented to Judge Thomas. The restraining order enjoined Evans or his followers from interfering with Simmons in his possession of the imperial palace at 2621 Peachtree road and the exercise of the authority over klan affairs he claims to hold as imperial wizard and executive head.

To show that the election of Evans as imperial wizard after Simmons had resigned that office last November and had been designated emperor was null and void, Attorneys Ben H. Sullivan and J. V. Poole, representing Simmons, introduced in evidence, article eight of the original constitution and by-laws of the Ku Klux Klan which prescribed the method of electing the imperial wizard, and then read extracts from a stenographic report of the proceedings of the klonvocation to show that the procedure of that gathering was at variance with the designated manner.

Simmons' Contention.

Article eight, section one, stated that the imperial wizard shall be elected by ballot, and that no nominations for the place can be made. The transcript of the klonvocation, as quoted by Attorney Sullivan, showed that Evans was nominated for the office of imperial wizard and then elect- by acclamation. The minutes presented by Attorneys Sullivan and Poole showed that E. Y. Clarke, who was presiding at the klonvocation, announced from the chair that the convention was operating under the original constitution and by-laws, and further showed that the present constitution and by-laws were not adopted until the following day.

Even if the election had occurred under the new constitution and by-laws adopted the following day, counsel for Simmons contend, the election of Evans would have been illegal because under the new regulations the imperial wizard must be elected by the grand dragons from the various realms, and not by the klonvocation.

Simmons' Statement.

In commenting on his move against Evans and his officers, Colonel Simmons said Thursday that his motives "have been impugned by certain statements in the daily press."

"It has been alleged that I have asserted my rights to govern the organization because of a lust for power, or a lust for money or for both. There is nothing in the entire history of my connection with the order to justify such charges. It has been my proud distinction to remain much of the time in obscurity and all of the time in poverty, while others became conspicuous and rich.

"The impelling motives behind my action were to correct the gross mismanagement of affairs on the inside and to arrest the abuse of authority.

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan is an eleemosynary institution founded by myself for patriotic, fraternal and benevolent purposes. Every dollar coming into the treasury of the order is a trust fund. It was designed by me in the beginning to reinvest all funds that accumulated in the treasury of the order in a service of helpfulness to the American people. Every program that I have made for such service has been scrapped. No constructive plan has been inaugurated.

Waste Is Charged.

"The administration has been characterized by extravagance and waste. Money that should have been utilized for educational and benevolent purposes has been used to pay for junketing trips all over the country. Enormous sums have been expended in luxurious living in hotels in a number of cities, and the hotel expense accounts have been nearly or quite equalled by the expenditures for automobile service. These junkets have been organized usually with two or more imperial officers and a large company of attendants composed of clerks and body guards. They have traveled in royal splendor and have lived in royal luxury.

"An espionage system has been built up and extended until it ramifies every organization in the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Paid spies are on the inside of every organized klan in America to report on the conduct and utterances of klansmen within the klaverns. The Invisible Empire under the present administration became a government by blackmail. The cost of the system was appalling. During the month of March more than $68,000 was diverted from the treasury of the organization and went to this department. I am determined that the American citizens associated with this organization shall no longer be subjected to this system of espionage, and that the moneys coming into the treasury of the organization shall no longer be diverted to the purpose of blackmailing klansmen.

Thousand Are Used.

"The funds pouring into the Imperial Palace through regular channels have run into many hundreds of thousands of dollars. These moneys have not been placed into the treasury of the klan and made subject to the check of one responsible, bonded official, but the funds have been deposited to the credit of individual accounts in a number of banks and made subject to the personal checks of the depositors. In addition to all this, large sums of money have been stored in safety deposit vaults. Why the trust funds of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan were taken from the treasury of the organization and so distributed and so deposited and so used has not up to this time been explained to me.

"Recently a proclamation emanating from the Imperial Palace made it a capital crime, not exceeded in enormity by treason or murder, for a klansman to give aid or encouragement to any woman's organization. This was an attempted exercise of arbitrary authority without parallel. I speak reverently when I say that even Almighty God has never exercised such authority over the free will, the free conscience and the free conduct of man. Such misconception of the prerogatives of position and such abuse of authority cannot and shall not be tolerated by klansmen."

Charges Against Klansmen.

Charges that F. L. Savage and H. W. Evans had deposited large sums of klan funds to their own account, subject to check for whatever use they desired were made in an amendment filed to Simmons' original petition by Attorney J. V. Poole when the hearing before Judge Thomas was resumed at 2:30 o'clock.

During March, the amendment asserted, Savage received $68,000 as klan funds and deposited the money in his own name. Dr. Evans took for his own personal use $3 from every initiation fee collected throughout the country, it was alleged.

The amendment was filed after investigation of the fiscal affairs had been made at the palace by E. J. Jones, the new cashier appointel by Simmons, between the time Simmons took possession of headquarters and the time Sheriff Lowry and his deputies took custody, it was stated.

"When Dr. Evans took charge as imperial wizard," Jones told newspapermen, "there was upwards of $400,000 in the klan treasury, and when Colonel Simmons regained control there was less than $125,000 left.

"This is in addition to the funds that came in every week, the average weekly payments from klans over the country to the palace being about $30,000.

"Investigation revealed that Dr. Evans, F. L. Savage, his chief of staff, and H. C. Montgomery, treasurer, had individual accounts at Atlianta banks, and that funds of the klan were deposited subject to their personal checks.

"Most of the funds wasted were found to have gone for the establishment of an elaborate espionage system, inaugurated by Dr. Evans to spy upon officers and members of the klan to find out who were for him and who against him. Salaries paid members of the espionage system ranged from $17.50 a week for a telephone operator in a local hotel to $12,000 a year for an attorney.

"We found also that Dr. Evans charged up exorbitant amounts of money for expenses. On one occasion he turned in an expense account of $850 for a three-day visit to Chicago.

"On another occasion Dr. Evans, Mr. Etheridge and Mr. Savage made a five-day visit to New York and drew out of the bank in advance the following sums for expenses: Dr. Evans, $2,000; Mr. Savage, $1,200, and Mr. Etheridge, $700."

Attorney Etheridge stated to the court that he expected to show that in order to secure the restraining order Monday night Simmons had represented that he was in actual control of the organization and actual possession of the physical properties and that he anticipated interference from the Evans faction, and indicated that he would then show that Simmons had not been in charge since he was made emperor last fall. In substantiation of that he read a number of affidavits which described what he termed the "raid" on the palace by the Simmons leaders Monday night.

The first public statement from Evans since Simmons proclaimed himself supreme head of the Ku Klux Klan came Thursday afternoon in one of the affidavits introduced by Attorney Etheridge.

He described the proceedings at the klonvocation last November when he was elected imperial wizard. He said that when Simmons resigned as imperial wizard and proclaimed that office vacant and issued a proclamation creating the office of emperor, Simmons suggested to the klonvocation that "it would be a gracious thing on the part of the klonvocation if they would select himself as the emperor," and then said to the assemblage: "You may have a wizard to do the work and let your papa sit up in the corner and smoke and tell you about the war."

Under the arrangement outlined by Simmons, Evans declared, the emperor would hold no authority except over the kloranic work, or the ritualistic and philosophical work of the klan. He quoted Simmons as saying:

"I would have charge of rituals and robes and everything of that sort, and such work would be passed on when completed to the imperial wizard, who must be subservient in those matters to the emperor."

Evans Is Elected.

Evans said that after E. Y. Clarke had been elected imperial wizard and had immediately resigned, he was elected and was "anointed" imperial wizard with appropriate remarks by Simmons. After being installed, he said, he took possession of the klan's physical properties and remained in charge of them until April 2.

N. N. Furney, cashier under the Evans regime, was the author or one of the affidavits which, in substance, was as follows:

"During Monday rumors were heard at the palace that the palace would be raided and all the property seized. After I left the palace for the day and went to my home the night watchman at the palace telephoned me about 6:45 o'clock and informed me that a crowd had gathered at the palace.

"I immediately went to the palace and found what appeared to be 25 or 30 men assembled in the reception hall. Great excitement seemed to prevail. I walked back to my office and called in Rowland, the night watchman, and asked him what their business was. He stated that one Mr. Norton informed him that they had come out to take possession of the palace and had read him a paper signed by Colonel Simmons to that effect. He stated that he notified Mr. Norton that he had no authority to recognize a paper of that kind and therefore would not admit them further than the reception hall.

"I informed him, together with the rest of the employees of the palace, to let them remain in the reception hall until Colonel Simmons or some one officially connected with the organization arrived. This suggestion was followed out.

Meets Colonel Simmons.

"Shortly thereafter Colonel Simmons arrived, at which time I met him in the reception hall and asked him if he would talk with me. He informed he that he could not talk to me by myself. I told him that it was perfectly satisfactory for him to talk with me in the presence of any one he desired, and he then stated that he could not talk to me at all, and I returned to my private office.

"Then Attorney Sullivan came into my office and said that a court order was coming out that night ordering that the palace be turned over to Colonel Simmons. Later I was informed that the sheriff wanted to see me and the other agents and employees of the palace in the office of H. K. Ramsey, imperial kligrapp, and we assembled there, where Sheriff Lowry read to us what appeared to be the court paper."

Testimony of Tom Akers, private secretary to Chief of Staff Savage, offered in affidavit form, was to the effect that at no time prior to the occupancy of the palace by the sheriff's deputies had Simmons claimed possession.

Present Paper.

He said that about 7 o'clock Monday night Henry J. Norton, exalted cyclops of Nathan Bedford Forrest klan; W. J. Mahoney, Dr. Thomas E. Greene, Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, E. J. Jones and others entered the palace and Norton presented a paper to A. J. Grant, the nightwatchman. The document, signed by Simmons, was represented as authorizing Norton to take possession of the property. The nightwatchman refused to surrender custody of the palace, and was told that Simmons would arrive shortly with a court order.

Later, he said, Simmons and Attorney Sullivan, Dr. William E. Thompson and Dr. Johnson entered and demanded the use of a room for a meeting of the kloncilium. They were given the use of a room, he said. Participating in the conference were Mahoney, Dr. Greene, Dr. Ridley, T. J. Shirley and others.

Sheriff J. I. Lowry arrived during the conference and entered the meeting, Akers said.

When the sheriff entered, he said, Sullivan demanded that the court papers be read, whereupon Sheriff Lowry remarked that to him it "all seemed like a fool scheme," and recommended that nothing be done. Upon insistence of Colonel Simmons Sheriff Lowry read the prayers of Simmons' petition and the order which Judge Thomas had signed, Akers said, and advised him and the other attaches of the palace that the order gave Simmons control of the place, whereupon he and his associates withdrew.

FORREST KLAN BACKS SIMMONS.

The resolution introduced Thursday night at the meeting of the Nathan Bedford Forrest klan was adopted by a standing vote, it was announced by representatives of the local klan who furnished The Constitution with the text of the resolution. The meeting was held in the hall at 58 1-2 South Forsyth street. The text follows:

"Whereas, our emperor and imperial wizard, Colonel William Joseph Simmons, has by official proclamation assumed again the reins of authority and is actively functioning and performing his duties as imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan for the good or the order,

"And whereas, the imperial kloncilium has concurred in his decision and action,

"Therefore, be it resolved that the members of the Nathan Bedford Forrest klan No. 1, individually and collectively, hereby express their purpose and determination to stand by our emperor and imperial wizard, Colonel William Joseph Simmons, in his taking charge and administering of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and we pledge to him our loyal, unqualified and undivided allegiance and support.

"Be it further resolved, that we send a copy of this resolution to every klan in the United States and supply the newspapers with copies for publication."

Lowry Put On Stand.

Sheriff James I. Lowry was placed on the witness stand to swear to an affidavit which he had declined to sign for Attorney Etheridge early Thursday. The document, read to the court by Attorney Etheridge and sworn to by the sheriff, described the serving of the court order at the klan.

Attorney Etheridge said that Sheriff Lowry had declined to sign the affidavit because he did not wish to appear as volunteering information for either side in the controversy inasmuch as he is temporary custodian of the palace and grounds, but had agreed to swear to the statements it contained if forced to do so in court.

An affidavit was presented by Attorney Etheridge bearing his own signature. He said that he was a member of the kloncilium and as such was familiar with the proceedings at the klonocation last year. He corroborated the affidavit of Evans. He disclosed that at a meeting of the kloncilium in January a salary of $1,000 a month had been designated for Simmons as "The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has its enemies without, but for the purpose of standing by two with malice toward none and charity employes of that city who had been for all, I, together with my official suspended from duty on the grounds family, will lead the organization that they were klansmen. I took with along the lines laid out for it. These me members of my staff who could are the development of purer Americanism and a finer and deeper sense assist me in their defense.

"The books and accounts of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan are of citizenship. To any enemies that open to the proper klan officials for we may have within, all I can say inspection at any time, and a complete audit will be given to the klonkloncilium at its meeting in July. is that this organization will survive any attempt of traitors to scuttle the ship. All these will be dealt with under klan law and in klan spirit."

compensation for his ritualistic work.

Only Affidavits Admitted.

Attorneys Sullivan and Poole requested permission to place Simmons on the stand, but Judge Thomas held that only testimony in affidavit form was admissible. Simmon's counsel offered nothing in rebuttal except a copy of the original constitution and by-laws. Attorney Poole raised several objections to portions of the Evans' affidavits, but was overruled in almost every instance.

By this time darkness was approaching and Judge Thomas announced that inasmuch as he had foregone his lunch in order to expedite the hearing it was necessary to recess the hearing. Simmons' counsel insisted that the hearing be concluded and Attorney Etheridge offered to submit the matter without argument for the sake of time, but Judge Thomas announced adjournment for the day.

Colonel Simmons and a large delegation of his followers were present in court. Dr. Evans was not present and did not attend the Wednesday session. Attorney Etheridge told newspapermen that he did not care to "humiliate and embarras" Dr. Evans by having him present.

Many Women Present.

A number of women were among the spectators. Officials from practically every county department were present and took a keen interest in the proceedings. The jury box was filled with newspaper reporters and representatives of the local news associations. Colonel Simmons, upon his arrival, greeted them with the jocular remark, "Well, this is a pretty tough-looking jury."

T. J. McKinnon, head of the investigating department under Evans, and N. N. Furney, Evans' cashier, furnished $1,000 bond each when arraigned before Judge Hathcock Thursday afternoon on municipal court warrants sworn out by E. J. Jones, Simmons' cashier, charging larceny after trust of approximately $107,000 in klan funds.

At the hearing Saturday morning McKinnon and Furney will contend that they anticipated a "raid" on the palace by Simmons and his faction and withdrew the funds to prevent Simmons from getting them. Attorney Paul Etheridge told a Constitution reporter that Monday he had instructed the two officials by telegram from Washington to take such action and that the funds are still in possession of Furney and McKinnon.

TEXAS KLEAGLE SIDES WITH EVANS

San Antonio, Texas, April 5.—Texas is the bulwark of the Ku Klux Klan and Texas klansmen will support Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, in his fight against Colonel William J. Simmons, emperor, according to George W. Keeling, kleagle of the klan in Texas, who is in San Antonio. Mr. Keeling said that the constitution of the klan confers upon the wizard, Dr. Evans, of Dallas, Texas absolute executive authority while the emperor has no authority to administer affairs of the organization.

Mr. Keeling quoted from the constitution as follows:

"Being the supreme chief executive of this order, the imperial wizard shall have and hold supreme authority and power within this organization in all administrative matters and act in any and all matters not prescribed in this constitution when in his judgment the best interests of the order warrant."

Mr. Keeling said that it would not be practical for the klan to recognize any women's organization at this time as there were eight or ten in existence and to recognize any one of them would create friction.

He predicted that the courts would uphold Dr. Evan's contention and said that information received by him did not show that thousands of klansmen were flocking to Atlanta for a conference.

Gov. Hardwick Declares War on "Hooded Bands" and Places Anti-Klansmen in Office—Simmons-Evans Battle Reopens.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 14.—Peace reigns at the palace of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan here after one week of the supervision of the three-man commission appointed by the court to direct its affairs until the injunction proceedings brought by William Joseph Simmons, emperor, finally are settled. But the fight will be reopened this week when the hearing on the rule Nisi originally granted the Simmons faction, and later modified by the judge, comes up, and indications are it will be one of the bitterest ever staged in Fulton County courts.

The Commercial Appeal Memphis, Tenn. April 15, 1923

Meanwhile notices of numerous klans all over the country dropping out of the order because of the general row over the control of its treasury have been received in Atlanta. Local anti-klansmen point to these as the first rumblings of a general movement that will see the end of the order.

Evans Denies It.

Officials of the Evans regime who are directing plan activities pending final settlement of the litigation, under the supervision of the commission, deny that a single klan has cancelled its charter, but declare that new klans are being formed in various cities of the United States at the rate of eight a day.

However, anti-klansmen here point to the fact that the Norfolk, Va., klan said to be one of the largest in the United States, has announced that it has dropped its charter in the national organization, that the Atlanta chapter, the first ever formed, and the Marietta, Ga., chapter have announced that they will drop out of the order unless Col. Simmons is given control, as proof of their belief that the end of the Ku Klux Klan in the United States is in sight.

Both the Simmons and the Evans factions today exhibited numerous telegrams from klans in many parts of the United States pledging them support in their fight.

Gov. Hardwick's Stand.

Another feature of the past week was the appointment by Gov. Hardwick of a judge and general solicitor of the recently created Barrow County court at Winder, Ga., who have announced war on the klan. Winder recently was the sceen of several demonstrations by the members of the klan, leading up to an announcement by J. W. Woodruff, one of the most prominent and wealthiest manufacturers in the state, that he would shoot the next klansman who came by his house.

The governor, in making his appointments, declared that there was no room in Georgia for invisible government, and declared that all hooded and robed bands must get out of the state.

The hearing on the receivership petition for the klan asked by Harry B. Terrell of Atlanta and other members of the so-called insurgent faction which was to have been heard Saturday has been postponed until the Simmons-Evans row has been settled.

COUPLE KIDNAPPED; MAN GIVEN BEATING; WOMAN IS WITNESS

Unmasked Band of Macon Men Apply Lash; Victim Ordered to Leave

MACON, GA., April 4.—A band of eight unmasked men, believed by the police to be members of the Ku Klux Klan, kidnapped Mrs. Fredericka Pace, of New York and Lynwood L. Bright from the former's automobile, at Second and Arch streets at ten o'clock tonight, carried them to a lonely spot beyond Ocmulgee Park, a negro section, four miles from the city, and there beat Bright almost into insensibility. Mrs. Pace was not horse-whipped as at first reported, but was forced to look on.

Montgomery Advertiser 4-5-23

Bright was given twenty-four hours in which to leave the city, under penalty of death.

Sheriff's deputies and motorcycle police combed the highways around Macon for three hours before Deputies Hardison and Raley of the sheriff's force came upon the couple trudging along a country road, walking toward Macon. They had become lost on the lonely road and thought they were going toward Macon.

The couple were brought to police headquarters where Bright and Mrs. Pace gave their version of the affair.

According to the police Bright and Mrs. Pace were in an automobile on one of the main thoroughfares here when another automobile drove up and several men jumped on the running board of the Bright machine. A struggle is said to have taken place. When the police arrived the Bright machine was empty and eye witnesses said the other automobile made a dash for the city's outskirts.

Mrs. Pace said she was not beaten, that the men informed her that they were not going to harm her, but were going to kill Bright.

"They said they resented the testimony of a negress in Bright's suit for divorce Monday, in which charges were made that Mrs. Bright did not keep clean. The negress was a witness for Bright," said Mrs. Pace.

She begged that the affair be kept from the newspapers, saying that she was going to leave the city at once and did not want any further embarrassment.

"They tied my hands and they put a mask on my face," Mrs. Pace stated. "I tore the mask from my face and saw them drag Mr. Bright from the car and throw him down on the ground. They first tied his hands and put a gag in his mouth. Then they drew out a lash or a leather strap and beat him repeatedly over his body."

Bright confirmed the report as given by Mrs. Pace and said that the kidnapers also stated that they whipped him because he tried to take his property away from his children.

"I offered to give them the home on Second street and keep it in repair for my children for the rest of my life," said Bright, "provided it was not mortgaged or sold. They kept on beating me.

"I have done no wrong. Possibly I made a mistake by bringing the negro woman into the case. They told me that they were going from here to Montezuma and get the negro woman witness in the case tonight and kill her."

While the kidnaping and whipping scene was going on, Mrs. Lynwood L. Bright, who testified against her husband here on Monday in his suit for divorce, was in her room at a local hotel. When informed of the kidnaping, Mrs. Bright's only comment was "I am very glad to know that there are some men in the world any way."

At police headquarters after Bright and Mrs. Pace were brought in from the country road Bright appeared to be suffering from the lashes across the body. He asked that the sheriff's deputies examine his wounds. No examination was made, however, but it was understood that a doctor was called for Bright later.

Bright said that he told his kidnapers that he could not leave the city in 24 hours, as ordered to do. He asked for the rest of the week to close up his business affairs, he said. The request was refused, he declared, and the lash was again applied.

The kidnaping of Bright and Mrs. Pace occurred almost in front of the Tabernacle Baptist church on Second street, within a block from the scene of the kidnaping of Dr. Eugene Schreiber of Boston, Mass., several months ago.

Bright was given 24 hours in which to leave the city, under penalty of death.

Deputies Find Couple.

Sheriff's deputies and motorcycle police combed the highways around Macon for three hours before Deputies Hardison and Raley, of the sheriff's force, came upon the couple trudging along a country road, walking toward Atlanta. They had become lost on the lonely road and thought they were going toward Macan. April 5, 1923.

The couple were brought to police headquarters, where Bright and Mrs. Pace gave their version of the affair.

Mrs. Pace said she was not beaten, that the men informed her that they were not going to harm her, but were going to kill Bright. "They said they resented the testimony of a negress in Bright's suit for divorce Monday, in which charges were made that Mrs. Bright did not keep clean. The negress was a witness for Bright," said

Mrs. Pace.

Woman Badly Scared.

"They didn't harm me, but they scared me most to death," said Mrs. Pace. She begged that the affair be kept from the newspaper, saying that she was going to leave the city at once and did not want further embarrassment.

"They tied my hands and they put a mask on my face," said Mrs. Pace. "I tore the mask from my face and saw them drag Mr. Bright from the car and throw him down on the ground. They first tied his hands and put a gag in his mouth. Then they drew out a lash or a leather strap and beat him repeatedly over the body."

Bright confirmed the report as given by Mrs. Pace and said that the kidnapers also stated that they whipped him because he tried to take his property away from his children.

Bright's Story.

"I offered to give them the home on Second street and keep it in repair for my children for the rest of my life," said Bright, "provided it was not mortgaged or sold. They kept on beating me."

"I have done no wrong," insisted Bright. "Possibly I made a mistake by bringing the negro woman into the case. They told me that they were going from here to Montezuma and get the negro woman witness in the case tonight and kill her."

While the kidnaping and whipping scene was going on Mrs. Lynwood L. Bright, who testified against her husband here on Monday in his suit for divorce, was in her room at a local hotel.

She had occupied a seat in the lobby until 9:30 p. m. writing letters. Then she went to her room. At 1 o'clock this morning a Telegraph reporter informed her of the kidnaping.

Did Not Seem Surprised.

Mrs. Bright didn't appear to be surprised. But her only comment was, "I am very glad to know that there are some men in the world anyway."

At police headquarters, after Bright and Mrs. Pace were brought in from the country road, Bright appeared to be suffering from the lashes across the body. He asked that the sheriff's deputies examine his wounds. No examination was made, however, but it was understood that a doctor was called for Bright later.

Bright said that he told his kidnapers that he couldn't leave the city in twenty-four hours, as ordered to do. He asked for the rest of the week to close up his business affairs, he said. The request was refused, he declared, and the lash was again applied.

Chases Mrs. Pace

Late this afternoon, according to R. Douglas Feagin, attorney for Bright, Mrs. Pace was sitting in her automobile on the principal business street of Macon when Mrs. Bright, walking down the street, noticed her. Mrs. Pace told Mr. Feagin, he said, that Mrs. Bright made a face at her and then reached for her bag as if to get something. Mrs. Pace did not wait, however, she is quoted as saying, and immediately jumped from the automobile and started across the street in a run, followed by Mrs. Bright.

Mrs. Pace was only a short distance from her hotel, but before she reached the hotel, she said, Mrs. Bright stopped and spoke to a tall man, who looked at Mrs. Pace and then went across the street to a Cadillac automobile.

Mrs. Bright gave up the chase, so Mrs. Pace told, and turned from her course as if to go into a motion picture theatre. A few minutes later Bright returned to the automobile Mrs. Pace had left at the curbing, and joined Mrs. Pace.

Later in the afternoon Bright and Mrs. Pace were out riding, it was related and they noticed an automobile following closely behind them. Every turn Bright and Mrs. Pace would make, the car still followed, she told Mr. Feagin. Bright managed to get the license number of the automobile. Mr. Feagin said, but could not identify any of the occupants of the machine.

Mr. Feagin said Bright and Mrs Pace came to his home in a fashionable suburb of Macon late this afternoon and appeared to be in great distress over the incident. Mrs. Pace was in tears he said as she related the episode.

Bright Given Divorce

Mrs. Pace, accompanied by her mother, came here last week from West Palm Beach, Fla., and they were here on Monday when Bright's suit for divorce from his wife was tried in superior court. On Tuesday he was granted a first decree divorce without the privilege of remarrying.

Settlement "Satisfactory."

In a suit for damages begun by Mrs. Bright in New York, against Mrs. Pace, a settlement was made recently which Mrs. Bright said was "satisfactory." Mrs. Bright had charged Mrs. Pace with winning the affection of her husband.

The two women met on the street here last Saturday, but there was no scene. Mrs. Pace did not testify at the divorce trial.

Mrs. Bright was at her room in a downtown hotel at a late hour tonight. Apparently she had no knowledge of the reported kidnaping of her husband.

Mrs. Pace's mother left her hotel here this morning. Mrs. Pace left the hotel early in the evening and had not been seen since.

Indicted in Atlanta.

Lynwood Bright and Mrs. Frederica Pace were indicted by the Fulton grand jury on a statutory charge on complaint of Mrs. Bright, but before the cases ever came to trial Mrs. Bright, as the principal prosecuting witness, requested that the indictments be nol prossed, and in view of the fact that Mrs. Bright was the only person who had pushed the charge the true bills were nol prossed by Solicitor Boykin.

The indictments alleged that Bright and Mrs. Pace committed a statutory offense while stopping at a local hotel. Evidence on which the true bills were found was secured by Mrs. Bright, it is said.

KLAN RULE PLACED IN HANDS OF BODY CHOSEN BY COURT

Simmons, Evans and Court Marshal Named To Reign Temporarily

DISMISS CHARGES AGAINST LEADERS

Associated Press Report.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 7.—After a week of legal bickerings between supporters of William Joseph Simmons, emperor and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan today were placed in the hands of a commission of three men to be administered by them pending further orders from the court.

Superior Judge E. D. Thomas in announcing his decision today named Mr. Simmons, Mr. Evans and J. M. George, marshal of the municipal court, as the committee to carry on the operations of the klan. Sheriff James I. Lowry, who has been custodian under previous court orders for the past four days, is relieved when he receives the receipt of the commission for the headquarters of the klan, its monies, records and other properties.

Following the action in Judge Thomas' court, T. J. McKinnon, chief investigator for the klan, and N. N. Furney, cashier for the order, were placed on trial in Municipal Judge T. O. Hathcock's court on charges of larceny after trust. Both were dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence. McKinnon was alleged to have removed checks for approximately $20,000 belonging to the klan, while Furney was charged with removing $100,000 of the organization's money.

Hearing April 14.

It now remains for the courts to act upon the original petition of the Simmons faction for a temporary injunction directed against H. E. Evans as imperial wizard, and other officers of the klan, restraining them from interfering with Colonel Simmons as emperor and imperial wizard of the order he founded. This case is expected to reach a hearing within the next ten days, attorneys stated today. There is also pending a petition for a receivership for the Ku Klux Klan, filed by attorneys for Mr. Terrell, and others of what is known as the "insurgent faction," hearing on which has been set for April 14.

Judge Thomas' final ruling was the second he made today in the case. The original order he made dissolved the temporary restraining order except in that Dr. Evans was restrained from interfering with Colonel Simmons as emperor of the klan. It meant that the imperial palace or national headquarters were restored to Dr. Evans and his adherents were jubilant. It was issued by Judge Thomas after he had declined to entertain an amendment to the original petition by counsel for the emperor making the Ku Klux Klan as a corporation a plaintiff in the litigation.

Commission in Charge.

Just as the judge was preparing to sign his order, J. V. Poole, as counsel for Colonel Simmons, offered another amendment to the original petition proposing to make the Ku Klux Klan a defendant in the case. Over the strenuous objection of Paul Etheridge, imperial klonsel of the klan, representing the Evans faction, the court accepted the amendment and announced his order placing the affairs of the klan in the hands of a three-man commission.

To prevent any change in the affairs of the organization until it is decided who is actually the legal imperial wizard, the court's order provided that the commission should "take charge of all affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, monies, properties and records whatsoever, with full and complete authority to operate the affairs of the corporation as they were being operated and the corporation conducted immediately prior to April 2, 1923." Each member of the commission was instructed to give bond of $5000.

Recover Valuables.

In the trial of McKinnon and Furney for alleged larceny after trust of funds belonging to the klan, it developed that the checks and money had been removed by the klan officials to prevent its falling into the hands of Emperor Simmons and his adherents when they obtained control of imperial headquarters early in the week. The money and papers now are in the custody of the court, it was brought out.

Details of the visit to the palace were given by E. H. McElry, a member of the klan and one of the Simmons adherents. He testified that "working under instructions" on the night of April 2, he obtained the keys to McKinnon's desk and the combination to the safe. He said the papers were missing when he opened the safe. He said his instructions were obtained from H. J. Norton, king kleagle of Georgia, and Colonel Simmons' personal representative that night.

A question by counsel for McKinnon as to what he would do if he were in charge of approximately $60,000 and "you heard that a raid was going to be made on your place of business" was ruled out on objection of opposing counsel.

Simmons Testifies.

Emperor Simmons was placed on the stand in the Furney hearing and testified that on the night of April 1 he called on Mr. Furney to advance him a total of $9000, which was his salary as emperor, in order to meet personal obligations, and that Furney refused to give it to him. On cross-examination he could not recall that he had told Furney he was going to "rule the Ku Klux Klan or ruin it." He declared he had not outlined to Furney his plans for taking over the klan.

Furney, in an unsworn statement, stated that Colonel Simmons came to him the night preceding the issuance of the temporary injunction placing the Simmons faction in control of headquarters and said he had to have $9000, and "if it wasn't coming to him immediately he would get 500 men if necessary and raid the palace."

Colonel Simmons was the only one of the leading officials of the klan present throughout the various court proceedings. He appeared satisfied with the court order placing the affairs of the organization temporarily in the hands of a commission, but his

KLANSMEN SHOULD WITHHOLD JUDGMENT

Atlanta, Ga.—Another charge has been laid against Edward Young Clarke and a bench warrant has been issued for his arrest by Federal District Attorney Clint Hager, in which the former Klan official is accused of using the mails to defraud.

The issuing of the warrant followed Clarke's failure to appear in court to answer the charge and his bail of $500 was declared forfeited.

This is the fourth time that charges have been made against Clarke and his friends lay it at the door of persecution. Whatever the cause, Klansmen in recognition of his efforts in organizing the Klan should withhold judgment until he is tried. The making of charges does not convict a man, as witness the Mer Rouge example.

Clarke's counsel in explaining his absence declared that a physician's certificate stated that Clarke's health would not permit his appearance at the present time.

The case is the outcome of Clarke's work while in the Klan and is centered about the bonding of officials. It is charged that Clarke sent out circulars to subordinate officers telling them that they would have to be bonded in the sum of $1,000 for which bond the premium would be $5 and that the $5 should be sent to him. It is further charged that several officers sent in their $5 but were not bonded.

The outcome of the trial will be awaited with interest, but his friends declare that the country will again be shown the difference between a charge and the proving of the charge.

Ku Klux Klan-1923 I General

The Kool Koin.

Klonciliums, kleegles, klommanders and merely klansmen together with Kamelias and all other ko-ordinated bodies need not fear the warmth being produced by the friction between Emperor Simmons and Imperial Wizard Evans. Under the fiery cross the fire of words rages over things that have passed out of the hands of the mere klansmen. The latter once held a proprietary interest in the subject matter of the dispute but that interest seems to have been surrendered to the higher ups, together with the right of kontinuous kontest koncerning it. For any disregard of or disrespect to the law and the machinery of the law that may have been shown in the past it is now evident that in the future kourt defendants and kourt attorneys will be more than amply kompensated.

If Emperor Simmons speaks the truth koncerning Wizard Evans, and if Wizard Evans speaks the truth koncerning Emperior Simmons, then is it beyond preadventure that both are pretty fat Turkeys financially.

But even fat Turkeys still krave provender. The wizard says that the emperor is trying to organize an auxiliary for no other purpose than his own financial profits and the emperor responds with the allegation that this organization of the auxiliary has angered the wizard because it beat the latter to it by some 24 hours. When and where the fields are ripe for the reaper he has to work fast in making hay while the sun shines.
